I left Niagara for a steamboat ride across Lake Ontario, for the meeting of the National Educational Association at Toronto, Canada. After hearing the various speakers advance methods of teaching which were of great value to me as a principal of schools, I again boarded the train for Chicago. After a short stay in Chicago, I started for my old home, Lanark, Ill. I had not been there for ten years, but the places of childhood were familiar, and the old haunts were the first to be visited, where I roamed when a youth of thirteen summers. I well remembered the old Brethren's church where I used to attend Sabbath-school, and hear the Brethren proclaim the riches of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. I also noticed that the old brick printing office, formerly occupied by the Brethren at Work, is still there and in a good state of preservation.

I have no space to say anything of the kind greetings received from dear old schoolmates, friends and teachers. I preached but once for the Brethren at Lanark, but, should time be spared me, at another time, I want to make a longer stay with the dear old church of Lanark. I next went to Marshalltown, Iowa, near which city in the Brethren's church I spoke a short time to the children, a children's meeting having been previously arranged. The church at this place is progressing nicely. They have services every Sunday at the church, besides other appointments. The ministers here are F. Hall, L. Hall, J. H. Cakerice, Levi Saylor, and F. Wheeler. They have a large field of labor, and seem to be working harmoniously for Jesus' sake. The next ride was to Bird City, where I arrived safely, after an absence of over two months, spent in various parts of the United States and Canada. I earnestly thank God for my safe return, and am determined to forward the work of the church in North-western Kansas more in the future than I have in the past. Our portion of the Great West is reaping a wonderful harvest of all material things, and I trust that in the desire for worldly gain, men will not forget their souls' salvation. May the missionaries gather in a wonderful harvest this winter, not only here, but throughout the Brotherhood!

More Preaching Wanted.

IN company with Eld. J. W. Eller we started on Saturday morning, Aug. 15, for the Piedmont section, Montgomery Co., Va., to visit some members, and have a few meetings with them. At 4:30 the same evening, after having traveled in a buggy about thirty miles, we met at the old log church-house for preaching. It is a fair-sized building for that section, located among the mountains, and well filled with eager listeners. The next day (Sunday) we met at the same place at 11 A. M. and 4 P. M., for preaching. At the morning service the house was filled, as also in the evening. The Brethren have been unable to supply the necessary preaching at this point, and the attention showed how hungry they were for the Bread of Life. Our elder,—Bro. Eller,—desires, if arrangements can be made, to give them, in the near future, a series of meetings, at which time there can be, no doubt, much accomplished for good. The faithful few at this place have hardly had any preaching from the Brethren for two years. At our parting, we heard very many say, "Come again soon."

As we read the MESSENGER from week to week, and learn what efforts are being made by our church to have the Gospel preached, and still find so many calls unfilled, the question naturally arises in our mind, How can we do more, and accomplish the greatest amount of good? If all our able-bodied ministers, and every other member would do a little more, it would undoubtedly result in something being done, and be much to our credit in the sight of God! P. S. MILLER.

A Trip to Michigan.

AUG. 1 I left my home in Ashland, Ohio, for a visit with my parents and friends in the Woodland church, Barry Co., Mich. While there we were permitted to meet with the congregation four times in public worship. We found a band of earnest and faithful workers. The Woodland church has great reason to be thankful to God for her prosperity. The church is under the care of Eld. Isaac Miller, ably assisted by Eld. Isaiah Rairigh, and brethren John Smith and David Flory. Bro. Rairigh was a member of the Standing Committee at Hagerstown, and does active evangelistic work. "Grandpa Miller," as he is familiarly called, is particularly worthy of notice. He has long been one of the pillars of the church. Formerly from Virginia, he located in Michigan and took charge of the Woodland church, eighteen years ago. He is now in his eighty-first year, and while I was there he walked three miles to church, and refused to ride when about one mile from the meeting-house, saying, "No, brother, I would prefer to walk this evening." He frequently discourses to the people of the good things of God. He has never had any use for spectacles, and his hearing is very good. Truly, here is a man of God, whom he daily blesses.

Living very near to the house is a sister who is, perhaps, the oldest member in our Brotherhood. Old sister De Mond is 103 years old. She has not been able to attend public worship for several years, but the Brethren look after her spiritual wants, and hold private love-feasts with her. I neglected to learn how long she had been a member of our church. The Woodland church has a real live Sunday-school, superintended by Bro. David Landis. The Brethren's Quarterlies are used. They expect Eld. Lemuel Hillery to assist them in holding a protracted meeting this fall. May the Lord bless all their efforts for good! W. F. ENGLAND.

Harvest Meeting at Cherry Grove, Ill.

OUR harvest meeting was not so largely attended owing to it being held in the midst of the threshing season, but we had a good meeting. Brethren from Hickory Grove, Arnold's Grove, Mt. Carroll, and Shannon, came out to offer praise and thanksgiving. Yes, Brethren, come often! We need encouragement on our earthly pilgrimage. The words used on the occasion by the brethren, were quite impressive: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits." Ps. 103: 2.

The benefits that God bestows are daily renewed and should be acknowledged with daily thanksgiving. Should the Lord deal with us according to our sins, and reward us according to our iniquities, all our blessings would be taken from us and our souls be visited with indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish, forever. The uncertainty and brevity of human life should lead us to place our affections on things above, to seek the durable riches and righteousness which shall never pass away! JAS. H. LARKINS.

Life and Sermons of Elder James Quinter.

"QUINTER'S Life and Sermons" has been received and examined with much interest. My personal acquaintance with Bro. Quinter for about twenty years made it especially interesting.

I feel safe in saying, that the book would be a valuable accession to any library. The "forty discourses" furnish quite a variety of spiritual food, such as the passing events of life demand. Those discourses being headed by appropriate subjects, deduced from the texts used as bases, affords a convenience to choose at once the discourse wanted.

It would be quite a help to ministers of all grades to read carefully those discourses.

From Woolwine, Va.

A PLEASANT meeting was enjoyed by the members of the Smith River congregation, in the new church building July 25.

One interesting feature of the meeting was that the services were conducted partly by a brother who is totally blind. He was for several years a member and exhorter in the Methodist church, but became dissatisfied with their doctrine, and a short time ago united with the Brethren church. If this man, who has never been permitted to see, can be useful to the church, surely we, who are blessed with eye-sight, and can read and study the Bible, ought to be more useful than many of us are. This blind brother does not complain of his affliction, but seems perfectly resigned to the will of God and says that, although he is not permitted to view the things of this world, he thanks God that he can, through an eye of faith, see things of far more beauty.

On Sunday morning, Aug. 26, we again met for worship. At the close of the meeting we were made to rejoice to see one dear old sister come forward, desiring to unite with the church. She is the second member of the family who has united with the church. The other, her son, a minister in the church, seemed to experience a joy almost unspeakable at seeing his mother acknowledge, before the world, her willingness to forsake sin, and live according to the commandments of Christ. MOLLIE B. HOOKER.

From the Paradise Prairie Church, Oklahoma Territory.

BRO. JACOB APPLEMAN, of Crawford County, Kans, came to us on Saturday, Aug. 1, and commenced a series of meetings on the following Lord's Day, and continued the meetings until Aug. 13.

According to previous arrangements, the Brethren met on Saturday, Aug. 8, and organized a church at this place, Bro. Appleman officiating. The writer was chosen secretary pro tem. After the letters were read, the church proceeded to elect officers, the writer being chosen Secretary. Seventeen united with the church by letter. Two were baptized here last winter, and on Sunday one was received by baptism, making a total of twenty members now enrolled. There are nine more members living near by, who are expected to hand in their letters in the near future. As Bro. Appleman has bought a farm here, we include him and his family into our little band, which will make a total of about thirty-two members.

There are two ministers here and two deacons, and when Bro. Appleman, who is an elder, and a very diligent and able man, is once with us, we shall feel that the Lord has blessed us by sending one of his ministering servants this way, to labor with us in bringing souls to Christ. This congregation will be known as the "Paradise Prairie church," Oklahoma Territory.

Brethren, we ask an interest in your prayers for the little vine that is planted here.

District Meeting of Texas, Oklahoma and Indian Territory.

THE first District Meeting was held Aug. 6, with the Brethren and sisters of the Nocona church, Montague Co., Texas.

After the usual devotional exercises, the delegates withdrew, and organized by electing Eld. A. Molsbee, Moderator; Bro. A. W. Austin, Reading Clerk, and Bro. M. M. Ennis, Writing Clerk.

Six churches were represented by delegates, and one by letter.

The first business before the Meeting was regarding the Mission Work of the District. The following-named brethren constitute the Mission Board: D. G. Berkman, Chairman; A. W. Austin, Secretary; Joseph Brubaker, Treasurer.

Eld. A. Molsbee and H. Brubaker were chosen as missionaries to hold themselves in readiness to go at any time wherever the Board may direct. Eld. Henry Brubaker was elected to represent the District on Standing Committee at Annual Meeting of 1892.

The next District Meeting will be held on Friday before the second Sunday in August, 1892, in the William's Creek church, Cooke Co., Tex. After devotional exercises the meetings closed. All felt that a very important work has been begun, the fruit of which will be reaped in eternity.

The Ministerial Meeting was held on Friday, Aug. 9, at 3:30 P. M., Eld. H. Brubaker being Chairman. Bro. Joseph Brubaker was chosen as Reading Clerk, and M. M. Ennis, Writing Clerk.

The following topics were discussed:

1. What can we do to Increase the Ministerial Force of the District, both in Numbers and Efficiency?

2. How to Study the Bible to the Best Advantage.

3. Habits to be Cultivated and Habits to be Avoided by Ministers.

On motion elders A. Molsbee, D. G. Berkman and M. M. Ennis were appointed a committee on programme for 1892. The following subjects were presented:

1. How may Prayer-meetings be Conducted that the Greatest Good may be Accomplished?

2. When several Ministers are at one Meeting what is the best Plan to Pursue to make the Meeting most Interesting?

3. The Best Method of Conducting Series of Meetings.

4. What is the Best Method of doing Mission Work and of Obtaining Funds?

After this the meeting adjourned to meet on Saturday after next District Meeting. On Saturday, Aug. 8, at 4 P. M., we met for examination services, after which fifty-five brethren and sisters surrounded the tables of the Lord.

There was public preaching on Friday at 10 A. M., Saturday at 10 A. M., Sunday at 11 A. M., and on Sunday night, after which the meetings closed. They will long be remembered by those present. A. J. WINE.

Nocona, Tex., Aug. 17.

From Hill Top, Boone Co., Ark.

THERE are about sixteen members of the Brethren's church scattered around in Boone and Carroll Counties. With some of them I have not met. Bro. M. V. Price is our minister, and is doing all he can to take care of the little flock and to gain more precious souls for the cause of our Blessed Master. Aug. 16 and 17 he preached four sermons at Coaker school-house. The result was, one applicant for baptism, which will be attended to on the third Sunday in October if the Lord will.

We are much in need of ministerial help. The harvest, truly, is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Bro. Price has appointments at the following places: On the First Lord's Day at Cave Hall, if other denominations have no appointment; at Hill Top on the second Sunday and Saturday evening preceding; at the Coaker school-house on the third Sunday; at the Nixon school-house, near the edge of Newton County, on the fourth Sunday. Bro. Price will also preach at Pleasant Ridge on the fifth Saturday and Sunday of this month.

At our last council, Aug. 1, we decided to hold our love-feast Oct. 17, near Mountain Springs, Boone Co., Ark., at 3 P. M. We would be glad if brethren and sisters from a distance could meet with us then. We ask the prayers of all the people of God in our behalf, to the saving of many souls. SAMUEL P. ANDERSON.

An Answer to Many Inquiries.

As we are living in this part of the State of Georgia, where there are no members, and very few who know anything about the Brethren, I thought of taking this plan of answering the many inquiries.

In order to describe a locality we must first become acquainted with it. We have now been here since Nov. 20, 1890, hence have had some opportunity to become acquainted with the nature of the country. We can say that the climate is splendid. Up to the present writing the heat has not been as great as we have experienced in Ohio, while the nights are always pleasant. As for health, this is certainly a healthy locality, lying 1,200 feet above the level of the sea. There is no stagnant water, and therefore no malaria.

This city is principally made up of northern citizens,—the majority from the New England States. This, perhaps, is the reason that so few have ever heard anything about the Brethren, and those few that are acquainted with any of the Brethren's principles are from Ohio, Illinois, and Virginia. In the religious circles there appears to be a spirit of jealousy, and hardly any one is permitted to preach in any of the houses of worship. I have made an effort to get an opportunity to preach here in the city, but could not get the use of a house to preach in, so I went to the country, and I now have a regular appointment every third Sunday at a place called Pleasant Hill, about four and one-half miles from town. I expect to make use of a school-house that is now being built, as soon as it is completed. There we can have meeting every Sunday, only about one and one-half miles from home.

Our doctrine appears to be new to the people here, but some good impressions have been made, both by preaching and by the distribution of tracts, and I shall be disappointed if the time is not close at hand, when there will be applicants for baptism. One of the great things in the way here is, that nearly every male belongs to some secret organization, but there are some who are standing high in office in those orders, that are willing to drop them for Christ's sake.

Taking all things into consideration, we have no reason to feel discouraged in the cause of Christ. It is true we feel lonesome, but we realize that our prayers are not in vain, and we have often wondered if those who are living in large churches, where they are surrounded by a number of members, are realizing the good they might do by getting out into the field where there are no members. We would feel glad to have a few zealous workers to settle at this place, and I feel satisfied that, with a start of a few members here,—such as are not ashamed of the order of the church, and willing to let the proper light shine,—there might be a good work done here.

As to agricultural pursuits, I can say very little at present. It is true that the growing crops look very favorable, but as the farmers here are all natives, their methods of farming are very deficient. They depend principally on cotton and corn. Their way of cultivation would not produce anything in the North. They do not plough their ground, simply stir it with a narrow single shovel-plow, and after planting, the growing crop receives very little attention. LUTHER PETRY.

Tallapoosa, Ga., Aug. 24.

From Pleasant Home, Oregon.

SUNDAY, Aug. 16 was the appointed time for our monthly service at Damascus. Our dear young minister could not be with us, owing to sickness and other hindrances. Our home minister, Bro. Royer, broke the Bread of Life to the little band of believers, and we felt as though it was good to be there, and we were encouraged to go onward.

Bro. Harry Trice, of Ohio, is sojourning with us for a short time. We welcome him as one of like precious faith. How our hearts are made to rejoice to meet with young members who have of late turned their faces Zionward and proved the better part! To all such we would say, Stand fast in the bonds of the Gospel! Jesus is your Captain; be good soldiers of the cross; lay hold on eternal life.

We are often made to inquire, "What are the Brethren doing as a church? Are we using our time, talent, and means to reach fallen humanity? Are we going every-where, telling sinners that Jesus died to save them? If we are doing this, many will come into the church of Christ. Why should we fear to start the work in every city where sin and iniquity abound? If we have the truth on our side, we need not hesitate to proclaim the glad tidings of salvation. Truly the harvest is great but the laborers are few. Well might we heed the Savior's words, "Work while it is called to-day; the night cometh when no man can work."

How many young brethren in the ministry to-day are burdened with the cares of life, thus letting souls go into eternity without giving a hand, to save them from woe? If they would devote their time to the cause, and trust to the Lord to provide, he will do so. Why not trust him fully and take no thought for the morrow? Look at the reward in the end! Is it not worth all else in the world to labor for? "He that converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death and shall hide a multitude of sins."

WE would like all to send in their quoto for the Poor Fund, as there are calls being made for help out of that Fund. DANIEL R. PRICE, Treasurer.

From Weyer's Cave, Va.

ON Saturday, Aug. 15, we had our quarterly council, at which two members were received by letter. Brethren Henry Early, M. Long, Jacob Thomas, and S. Click (the latter from Missouri), were with us, and gave words of admonition. On Sunday Bro. Click preached two sermons for us, and also gave us a short talk at Sunday-school. We enjoyed his short stay among us. He expects soon to start for his western home and prepare for a journey to England. His purpose is to work for the Lord. May he be a power for good wherever he may go! We are glad that some of our brethren are eager to "go and teach all nations." May we help them by uniting our prayers in their behalf! God has blessed us with bountiful crops. Can we not show our appreciation by laboring more earnestly in his vineyard? There is enough for all to do. "If we cannot be reapers, we can bear the sheaves away." Let us think of it! Our love-feast, at the Summit church, will occur Oct. 15 and 16. MARTHA CLICK.

Harvest Meeting.

ON Saturday, Aug. 22, pursuant to appointment our congregation, of Botetourt, Va., met at the Valley meeting-house, the central portion of our congregation, to attend the thanksgiving service. A fairly good congregation was present. An address was delivered by Bro. I. N. H. Beahm, from Ps. 116: 12-14. He presented the idea of duty to God for the blessings received from his hand, both material and also spiritual, in the "cup of salvation," which we take from his hand. He proposed that we pay our vows to the Lord in the presence of all his people. This was explained to mean that we make a practical demonstration of our gratitude and our concern for the people, by reaching out our hand, to provide for, and offer "the cup of salvation" to others. He closed with the suggestion and the heading of a subscription by their humble servant, which resulted in a contribution of a fraction less than $50 for missionary purposes.

After the closing of the meeting, the ministers of the congregation held a conference, to arrange for more effectual ministerial work by providing that each take his turn to fill the appointment at the ten regular monthly meetings, and in this way give opportunity to respond to outside calls

Our meeting was in every way a pleasant and an enjoyable one, as such meetings generally are, and have been for a number of years, because of the union and brotherly love existing among us. This, together with the educational advantages, now in prospect, indicates a prosperous future for the Botetourt church. Bro. I. N. H. Beahm is now building a large school-house near the center of our church at his own expense, to be ready for use early in October. He will be the principal of the school, and will have associated with him three model brethren as teachers. This, with the excellent ability of Bro. Beahm as a teacher, and his high standard of morality and Christian character, will be an attraction to parents and children who are looking for higher educational advantages, as well as future usefulness and success in life, and happiness in the world above.

From the Mingo Church, Pa.

The Brethren of the Mingo church, Pa., held their harvest-meeting on Saturday, Aug. 22. Eld. Henry Price delivered a very practical sermon in German from Ps. 103, followed by Eld. J. P. Hetrick from Ps. 116: 12–14. After the services a collection for the cause was taken.

Without a collection a thanksgiving meeting has but little meaning. When the Lord has blest us, we should be only too thankful to have the opportunity of showing our gratitude.

Our hearts were made to rejoice greatly when we extended the right hand of church fellowship to a dear brother and sister. We pray that they may walk in newness of life and enjoy the fullness of God's love.

A few weeks before they lost a dear little girl by drowning. Thus we see how sometimes "a little child shall lead them." May the good work go on! Emma Kulp.

Grater's Ford, Pa., Aug. 24, 1891.

From Cerro Gordo, Ill.

Our church meeting to-day passed off quite pleasantly. We felt the spirit of the Lord was with us. This church has lost some members by emigration to Lordsburg, Cal., and others were unwilling to walk with Jesus. The church feels still encouraged, however, as some that had moved away have already come back and quite a number more intend to return. We were glad to welcome brother and sister Wrightsman among us, and are anxiously waiting the return of others.

From the report of the Southern Californian in its issue of the 13th inst., one would think nearly all of the membership of Cerro Gordo were at Lordsburg, but of the number, now at that place, there were only two from Cerro Gordo.

We are still here, praying and working for the Master. We have called Bro. Lewis W. Teeter, of Indiana, to our assistance. Bro. Teeter will commence a series of meetings in Cerro Gordo Sept. 10. May the Lord bless all the dear children of God! Geo. W. Cripe.

Aug. 25.

From Elkhart, Ind.

According to previous arrangements the members of the Elkhart Valley church met Aug 13 for a harvest or thanksgiving meeting. We had expected brethren Lemuel Hillery from the Solomon's Creek, and Isaac Berkey, from the Rock Run district, to be with us, but for some cause we were disappointed. We were agreeably surprised, however, by the presence of brethren A. A. Wise and C. Shrock, of the Pleasant Valley and Bro. Geo. Swihart, of the Elkhart church.

We were very ably addressed by Bro. Swihart, and, while listening to the remarks of our dear brother, Eld. David Brower, from Oregon, made us an unexpected call while on his return from Annual Meeting.

After partaking of some refreshments, we met again at 2 P. M., at which time we were again called to order, to hear a discourse on the missionary cause, which was delivered by Bro. Brower. He gave us quite an interesting talk upon the subject, and at the close of the exercises we held a collection. The sum of $11.24 was collected for the cause. We do hope and pray that the missionary spirit may grow until all Christians become earnest laborers in the good cause.

Our Sunday-school is still moving along steadily. We think it is growing in zeal, and we are now considering the propriety of continuing our Bible class during the winter. Although our school is small, we hope it may grow numerically until the whole community will become interested in the work. Brethren, pray for us!

The Love-feast in Hancock County, Iowa.

Our feast will long be remembered by those that participated in it. It was the first one ever held in this County. Brethren J. F. Ikenberry from the Greene church, Butler County; Wm. Ikenberry, from the South Waterloo church, also W. Ikenberry, from the Franklin County church, all of Iowa, were with us and labored for us.

In the morning, prior to our feast we were organized into a church. Brethren J. F. Ikenberry and Wm. Ikenberry were the elders who officiated in the organization. Our church is known as the Coon River church, and it extends over Hancock and Wright Counties. We are within the bounds of the District of Northern Iowa, Minnesota and South Dakota.

Bro. Wm. Ikenberry, of the South Waterloo church, has the oversight over our church. Bro. Geo. Aschenbrenner is our minister. The following officers were elected: Deacons, brethren Elias Long and Daniel Aschenbrenner. The writer was also chosen permanent secretary and corresponding secretary. Our treasurer is Bro. Elias Long. Our membership numbers eighteen at present. Brother and sister Hixson, from the Garrison church, will make this their home as soon as they can get moved. This will swell our number to twenty.

We would be glad to have those who are seeking homes, to come and view the land in this County before purchasing. Especially would we desire laborers in God's vineyard for we have but one minister, and while the harvest is great the laborers are few. Any coming by rail will please give me notice a few days before they come and I will see that they are taken wherever desired. We desire an interest in the prayers of all.

Daniel Aschenbrenner.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

Proposed Meetings.—We have had no preaching at this place for some time, as our church-house has been undergoing some repairing. It has been replastered, papered, painted and otherwise repaired. Our social meetings were held at private houses. The Sunday-school had to be closed, but has been opened again with a very good attendance. Bro. Flory is to come to us Aug. 30, to hold a week's meetings, during which time our love-feast takes place. It will be held Sept. 4, instead of Sept. 18, as announced in the Messenger. —Hannah Garrett, Litohfield, Ill., Aug. 26.

A Glorious Meeting.—I have just returned from Morrisonville, Ill., where I went to attend the love-feast. We had a glorious meeting. Bro. Flory did most of the preaching. Brethren McClure and Isaac Neff were also present. The Word was preached so plainly that any one could understand it.—B. F. Overton, Aug. 17.

Two Baptized.—The members of the Red Bank church, Pa., are still alive to the work. During the last eight months we have baptized two young brethren,—one in January and one in August. The last one is now in the last stage of consumption. His desire is to enjoy with us a feast of love, which, I pray, the Lord will grant him. Our feast will be in October, at which time Bro. J. C. Johnson will be here.—Jos. A. Hedrick, Oakland, Armstrong Co., Pa.

Delegates Elected.—The council-meeting of the Bear Creek church, Ill., passed off very pleasantly. Bro. M. J. McClure is our delegate to District Meeting. We made arrangements for our Communion meeting, which convened at our home, under a tent, Aug. 14. While a rain-storm interfered with the solemnity of the meeting to a great extent, yet we had much to be thankful for. Bro. M. Flora, of Girard, Ill., preached the Word with power on Saturday and Sunday.—Sallie E. Cart, Aug. 25.

District Meeting of Middle Iowa. — The District Meeting for the Middle District of Iowa will convene at the Panther Creek meeting-house, Dallas Co., Iowa, on Thursday, Sept. 24, and the Brethren have also appointed their love-feast for Friday, Sept. 25, in connection with District Meeting. Meetings are to continue over Sunday. All persons desiring to attend these meetings will be met at the Railroad at Dallas Center, on Wednesday, Sept. 23, and conveyed to the place of meeting.—T. J. Beaver, Panther, Iowa, Aug. 25.

Sunday-school Organized.— The Wyandot church met in council Aug. 1. Bro. S. M. Loose and wife, and Bro. S. A. Walker were with us. Everything that came before the meeting was disposed of in a Christian manner. It was decided to organize a Sunday-school, which was done Aug. 9, by electing Bro. Amrine, Superintendent, and sister Delilah Fritz, Assistant. The school has largely increased since the first Sunday, and I hope it will continue to do so, that we may grow better from time to time.—Alverty Buxton, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

Interesting Meetings.—The Brethren held a very interesting meeting north of Winamac on Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 21 and 22. The following ministers and brethren were present: William Toney (Secretary Home Mission Board), Abram Rinehart, Joseph Shefler, Oliver Capron, J. J. Frederick, Peter Hanance, J. F. Fredenburg, Isaac Key and many others. They were also looking after the interests of the new church, which is being built six miles north of Winamac, and made arrangements for some meetings as soon as the church is completed.—M. A. Dilts, Winamac, Pulaski Co., Ind., Aug. 27.

Three Added to the Fold.—Last Sunday was the regular day for meeting at the Fairview church, George's Creek congregation, Pa. We were made to feel that the good Spirit of the Lord was present with us. Three made application for membership and were baptized in the Monongahela River, professing faith in Christ. May the good work of the Lord go on! There are more to follow. We will hold our Communion services in the Uniontown church-house on Saturday evening, Sept. 26. We will have a week's meeting previous to the love-feast, beginning on Sunday evening, Sept. 20.—John C. Johnson.

Harmonious Council.—The members of the Beech Grove church, Madison Co., Ind., met in council Aug. 16. Eld. D. R. Richard presided over the meeting, assisted by Bro. Harvey Haskel. Everything passed off harmoniously, and the church is in peace.—Luther Bedel.

Six Baptized.—Aug. 14 I went to the Heartman school-house where I met the brethren in church council. We had a pleasant council, and a large attendance. One precious soul was reclaimed, and six dear ones were buried with Christ in baptism. Pray for these young soldiers in Christ's kingdom.—Joseph Guthrie, Hazleton, W. Va.

Pleasant Harvest Meeting.—The Yellow Creek church, Elkhart Co., Ind., held a harvest-meeting Aug. 8. It was a pleasant meeting indeed for all those that hunger and thirst for the Bread of Life. Bro. L. Hillery preached in the forenoon. Our elder, J. H. Miller and G. W. Sala, from Blackford County this State, preached for us in the afternoon. At the close of the meeting we held a collection for the mission cause, resulting in $20.25. May it do much good! Our quarterly meeting was held Aug. 22. Peace and union was the expression of the members. Our Communion will be Oct. 16. We have agreed to hold a series of meetings, for which the time has not yet been set.—John Overholser, Goshen, Elkhart Co., Ind.

Sad Affliction.—We had the great misfortune to lose our residence, and the greater part of the things in it, by fire, last Sunday, Aug. 16. The fire is supposed to have caught in the roof of the main building, by a spark from the kitchen flue. As it had been very dry for sometime, and the wind was blowing quite strong, in the direction of the main building, it was hard work to keep the lumber shed from burning. Wife and I had gone to prayer-meeting at Bro. Rufus Gish's and staid there for dinner, as we now hold our meetings at 10 A. M. From there we went to visit Bro. and sister Wareham's, at which place we saw smoke in the vicinity of our house, and immediately started home, but when we got there, the building was falling in. The most of the things on the first floor were saved by kind neighbors, but not much else. The fire company came out, but did not have enough hose to reach the building. Arrangements had been made to hold the love-feast at our house Sept. 15, as it was the only house large enough for that purpose in the city, occupied by any of the members. Where it will be held now, we do not know, but where there is a will, the Lord will prepare the way. We expect to organize a church here at Fort Scott on the day of the love-feast, Sept. 26, and extend a cordial invitation to all that can to be with us then.—A. B. Fisher, Fort Scott, Kans., Aug. 19.

Two Added to the Fold. — Last Saturday Bro. S. M. Goughnour came to our little flock and preached an interesting discourse, mostly for the benefit of our membership. Yesterday we held services again, after which we repaired to the waters of South River where two precious souls were baptized in cheerful obedience to our Lord's command. As they met with considerable opposition in uniting with the Lord's people, we fondly hope they may enjoy our united prayers. We have much to be thankful for.—W. W. Folger, Osceola, Iowa, Aug. 24.

Let us Move Onward! — I notice in No. 30 of GOSPEL MESSENGER that Bro. S. Z. Sharp calls our attention to a very important subject. Certainly, no one who has the worth of souls at heart can pass this subject thoughtlessly. If the church has done so nobly in feeding the body, why not do equally as much to feed and save those souls, which our Master would have us know are of much more worth? I, for one, am ready to contribute my mite in a special effort of this kind, and I second Bro. Sharp's motion. The church is doing a commendable work in the mission field, but not what she could do, or ought to do. —E. J. Neher, Keuka, Fla., Aug. 20.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

KESLER.—In the Mohican church, Wayne Co., Ohio, June 8, 1891, sister Idella Kesler, aged 34 years, 2 months and 18 days.

June 10, 1891, the members of the Mohican church, and others, were called together to pay the last tribute of respect to our departed sister,—one much respected and loved by all who knew her. She was the wife of John Kesler, and born April 2c, 1857. She leaves a husband and five children to mourn their loss. Her children can know and feel what it is to lose a loving mother whose sympathizing heart always reached out to encourage and comfort those who needed help. After doing all that she could do for her soul, by obeying the Truth while in the vigor of womanhood, she was still faithful upon a dying bed and called for the elders, and was anointed in the name of her Lord.

Shortly before passing the portals of death, she, full of confidence and trusting in Jesus as her Savior, calmly but earnestly exhorted her husband, children and friends to meet her in heaven. She assured them that their loss would be her eternal gain.

Thus passed away a faithful sister of the Mohican church.

She was a member of the Methodist church for about three years previous to joining the Brethren, and has lived as a worthy sister among us for about twelve years. Before leaving this world she requested that her husband should have the GOSPEL MESSENGER sent to each of her brothers and sisters for one year at her expense, which request he complied with.

The funeral was conducted by Eld. Frederic Weimer, assisted by the writer.

He was very warm when he reached the water, and, upon plunging into seven feet of water, was seized with cramps and sank. LIFE AND SERMONS

—: OF :—

ELD. JAMES QUINTER.

The biographical part will be found quite interesting, instructive and impressive. No one can read an account of Bro. Quinter's life without feeling deeply and favorably impressed. The work shows how a poor orphan boy, by hard work, and faithfulness to his religious convictions, rose step by step, until he reached a field of usefulness and honor as broad as the Nation itself. Though dead, his good deeds and the impressive examples in piety, learning and simplicity will follow him for generations to come.

The Sermon Department contains many of his choice sermons, which will prove exceedingly interesting and profitable reading to all, and especially to our ministers and isolated members. We feel that this book will fill a long-felt want in our Brotherhood. Price, post-paid, $1 25.

ELD. G. W. BRUMBAUGH, of Clover Creek, Pa., has been spending some time with the Brethren on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. Report says that he was looking out for himself a home there. Bro. George is needed where he is, and we would be sorry to have him leave.

BRO. SWIGART is spending a few days with his many friends in Mifflin Co. This is his old home place, and of course it is a pleasant place to be. There is no place, after all, like home, and though we may leave it and form other homes, yet our love for the old place can never be forgotten.

OUR surrounding churches have appointed the time of holding their fall love-feasts, and, as usual, a number of them will occur at the same time. This conflict of appointments is avoided as much as possible, but on account of holding them in the latter part of the week, and on moonlight evenings, they cannot do otherwise than hold some of the meetings on the same date.

AT our last prayer-meeting we had for a subject, "Saul's Engagement with the Amalekites." The subject was one of more than ordinary interest, containing several practical lessons that we can all learn to our profit. When Saul was small in his own eyes he was blessed with success. But, like thousands of others, he forgot the source from which his success came, and commenced leaning on his own judgment. In other words, he felt that he knew better than God, and forgot that obedience is better than sacrifice. We often try to do as Saul did, and we must expect the same results.

THE Old Order Brethren of Eastern Pennsylvania and Maryland have called for their next Annual Meeting. It is thought the Meeting will be held near Mt. Alto, Pa.

ELD. P. S. MYERS is east on a visit to his aged mother and calling on his many friends, prior to moving to California, where he expects to make his future home for a season. Peter seems to be full of his old-time zeal for the Master's cause, and is always ready to labor in the vineyard of the Lord. We were glad to meet him.

PROF. G. W. SNAVELY, his wife and family, of Urbana, Ohio, have located among us. He takes charge of the "Juniata Business College," and is busy getting things in shape for the opening on September 14. The prospects are good and a large attendance is expected. We gladly welcome the family among us, and hope that our gain may be mutual. Sister Snavely is a zealous worker for the good cause, and she will enjoy opportunities here that were not afforded at her former stopping place, as there was no Brethren church there.

SOME envious souls seem to take great delight in trying to magnify some, of what they call, the inconsistencies of a few of our congregations. The trouble with them is that these churches prefer to remain with the General Brotherhood rather than do as they did—cast their lot with the Progressive Brethren. This way of doing does not show a proper spirit. Those who feel it their conscientious duty to leave the church should do it in a Christian spirit, and then so live that their lives will show that their motives were pure, and that they had but one object in view,—to live closer to the Truth. Such a course would have, at least, a showing of consistency.

THE Reformatory on the west side of town, though in operation only a little over three years, already contains 534 inmates, ranging in age from sixteen years to twenty. All this is the result of crime. This shows the terrible neglect of the children on the part of the parents, as the cause of these young men being there, can, in almost every case, be traced back to their home training. This showing represents a part of the crimes of the youth of one State. Add to the number that of all the other States in the Union, and we have an array of boys and young men who are reaping their first fruits of sin behind prison doors. The mothers of our land are to-day nursing the boys who will take the places of those who are now disgraced by wrong home training. Parents, a grave responsibility is resting on you. Discharge it faithfully and save your sons from the servitude of sin.

THE OTHER SIDE.

FOR the few last years considerable has been said about our "Great Brotherhood;" our large Annual Meetings and the many accessions we have been having to our membership, as results of continued meetings being held and our missionary efforts. These things, of course, are very pleasant to those who are interested in the church and her work, and we wish they were really so in fact. But are they? To look at the other side is not nearly so encouraging, but perhaps it will be more profitable, and stir us up to such efforts as will make successes out of what are now, comparatively speaking, failures. Our present organization will soon be two centuries old, and in 1872 was tabulated at 100,000. This, no doubt, was an over-estimate, but for us to now come down to 60,000, surely does not give us much grounds to feel that we have accomplished very great things. It is true, the branches that have separated from us have decreased our number. But accepting this fact we still must feel that we have accomplished very little, indeed, towards saving the world for Christ.

If we have, what we profess and believe, the best church doctrine in the world, we ought to feel very much humbled in the fact that we have done so little in presenting it to the world. We feel that we are justified in believing and saying that the Doctrine, as we believe and practice is nearer the Gospel as revealed, than that of any other religious denomination. But are we justified in what we have done? The salvation of the world is dependent upon the church, as the Lord has so decreed, and if so, do we see the wonderful responsibility that is resting upon us? "Go preach my Gospel to every creature," is as binding on us as it was on the apostles in their day. It is the intention of the Lord that the great salvation shall be offered to every soul. This is our part of the work and God will do the balance.

At our Annual Meetings, when four or five thousand of our membership congregate, it does look a little like a great Brotherhood, but when we look around us and think of this great world of ours with her millions that never even heard one of our ministers preach, we are led to larger definition of a great Brotherhood, and ourselves but as a drop in the great ocean of humanity. Is the salt sufficient? Is the leaven enough to leaven the lump? These are thoughts that we should earnestly study. And the more we study them, the less we will think of ourselves and the work we have done. It cannot be otherwise. We do not see how we can feel satisfied with ourselves, and the work we have been doing. The Gospel, to us, needs larger definitions, and we must get larger views of the work that is to be done.

We present these few thoughts on the other side, not to discourage, but to have us see ourselves as God sees us, and to stir us up to a greater earnestness in the performance of the great work which he has given us. We have the means and the ability, and whatever else we need, God will supply. Earnestness, consecration and a willingness to labor and sacrifice will do what the Lord demands of us. Are we willing to be good soldiers in the Master's service?

ESSAYS.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

THE RIVER'S CROSSING.

One by one they are gathering there—
There at the River's Crossing;
The weary of life, its turmoil and care,
Down by the River's Crossing.
Thousands have gone to that River's side
Thousands have plunged in its chilling tide,
There—at the River's Crossing.

There waits a ferryman, pale and grim,
Down by the River's Crossing;
He silently, solemnly gathers them in
There—at the River's Crossing.
There our sisters, so gentle, and brothers brave,
The beautiful children must pass the wave
There—at the River's Crossing

Death is the name of that ferryman pale,
Down by the River's Crossing;
He lists not the dying suppliant's wail
When at the River's Crossing.
He heeds not the sinner's despairing cry
His power is crushed when the righteous die,
He hurries them all to the shore that is nigh,
Over the River's Crossing.

We, too, shall stand on that beaten strand,
Down by the River's Crossing;
And pray for a home in that "better land,"
Beyond the River's Crossing.
The friends of years, the true and tried,
Who lov'd and sustained, when our hope had died
We must part from them at the water's side,
Down by the River's Crossing.

The loved ones of "the long ago," too, are gone
Down to that River's Crossing.
They have pass'd the way. Each passeth alone,
Down to that River's Crossing.
Faces beautiful—hands most fair—
Little feet that have climbed the "Golden Stair"—
Tresses of gold and gray are there—
Over the River's Crossing.

Methinks "voices" come back, when the wind is fair—
Back from the River's Crossing—
Singing: "Jesus of Nazareth waiteth there,"
Close by the River's Crossing
The "City Celestial" is seen from afar,
With its "Beautiful Mansion" and "Gates Ajar."
The rest for God's people remaineth there—
Over the River's Crossing.

Brothers, and sisters, and friends shall meet
Over the River's Crossing;
With parents and children at Jesus' feet,
Over the River's Crossing.
Oh! that "Home of the Soul," in our visions and dreams,
Which tells of its beauty, how peaceful it seems.
Oh! to wander for aye by its murmuring streams—
Over the River's Crossing.

BAPTISM.

BY CHAS. M. YEAROUT.

1. What is Christian baptism?
2. What is it for?
3. Is it necessary in order to an acceptance with God?
4. What is the action in Christian baptism?

Where shall we go to get these important questions answered? Much depends upon the proper understanding and observance of this command. If we go to modern Christendom for an answer, we find a Babel of mysteries and uncertainties; one saying this and another that, until we are lost in the great confusion of the opinions of men.

Many, in viewing this confusion among professed Christians, have made shipwreck of their faith, and gone into the gloom of infidelity. Let us lay this Babel of opinions aside,—cast them to the four winds of the earth, for they originated about six feet above earth, and will never rise higher than that. The stream cannot rise above its fountain. Let us prayerfully, patiently and honestly search the Word of God for an answer to these important questions.

1. What is Christian baptism, — immersion, sprinkling, or pouring?

"Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him. But John forbade him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness. Then he suffered him. And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: And lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Matt. 3: 13–17. "And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan. And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him." Mark 1: 9, 10. Thus it is evident that Jesus Christ, our Leader and Example, was baptized in the river Jordan, and came up out of the water. And God approved the act, proclaiming him, for the first time, his beloved Son in whom he was well pleased.

"Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same Scripture, and preached unto him Jesus. And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him. And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, that the eunuch saw him no more: and he went on his way rejoicing." Acts 8: 35–39.

Paul, in addressing the brethren at Rome, says, "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." Romans 6: 3, 4. To be buried, a thing must be covered up, hidden from sight. "Burial, the act of placing anything under earth or water; as to bury seed in the earth."—Webster.

Hence Christ and the eunuch went down into the water, and were buried under the water. Then truly they came out of the water. Noted scholars tell us that if we cannot substitute a word and make good sense it will not admit of that rendering. I will now substitute the words sprinkled and poured for baptized. "Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were sprinkled of him in Jordan, confessing their sins." Matt. 3: 5, 6. "Sprinkle, to perform the act of scattering a liquid or any fine substance, so that it may fall in small particles." The people were sprinkled by John in the Jordan, not the Jordan in the people. Were they sprinkled?

"Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were poured of him in Jordan." "Pour, to throw, as a fluid, in a stream, either out of a vessel or into it; as, to pour water from a pail, or out of a pail." The people were poured of John in the Jordan, not the Jordan in the people.

O, what nonsense professed followers of Christ make out of his Sacred Word! Neither of these words can be used where baptize, baptizing, or baptized occurs, without destroying the sense and making nonsense out of the Holy Oracles of God.

"Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were dipped, immersed, or buried by John in the Jordan, not the Jordan in the people."

In Lev. 14: 15, 16, we have these three words used, all referring to different actions: "And the priest shall take some of the log of oil, and pour (cheo) it into the palm of his own left hand: and the priest shall dip (bapto) his right finger in the oil that is in his left hand, and shall sprinkle (raino) of the oil with his finger seven times before the Lord." Bapto occurs twice in the New Testament, Luke 16: 24; John 13: 26, and is translated "dip" in both places. "Baptizo occurs seventy-nine times; of these, seventy-seven times it is not translated at all, but transferred from the Greek to the English." "Baptism, baptisma, from baptizo, from bapto, to dip in water."—Webster.

2. What is baptism for? On the day of Pentecost when the people were pricked to the heart, and cried out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" the Holy Ghost, fresh from heaven, through the apostle Peter said unto them: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the REMISSION OF SINS, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Acts 2: 37, 38. "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." Acts 22: 16.

3. Is baptism necessary in order to an acceptance with God? We will let the Word of God answer this question: "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark 16: 15, 16; John 12: 48, 49.

Jesus said to Nicodemus: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." Nicodemus could not understand this, having in his mind the natural birth. Then Jesus explained to him: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." John 3: 3, 5.

Eight souls of the antediluvian world were saved by water. "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us, (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ." 1 Pet. 3: 20, 21; Eph. 5: 26. "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost." Titus 3: 5. They that are born of the water and of the Spirit shall enter into the kingdom of God; they that believe and are baptized shall be saved. Baptism is for (in order to) the remission of sins, and no one can be accepted of God unless his sins are remitted.

4. What is the action in Christian baptism? Is it single or trine immersion? We have learned from the Word of God that baptism is performed in the water, by burying or dipping the person under water, for the remission of sins. Now the query arises, Is it trine or single immersion? The Savior, in giving his last and great commission, says: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them into (eis) the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Matt. 28: 19. This is the formula given by the Lord Jesus Christ, telling us how to baptize, and it requires three actions to satisfy the language of the Blessed Master.

I will illustrate this by three fields, named A, B, and C. I heard of a certain minister who was called from home on a long journey, but before he left home he employed a man (a farmer) to see after his farm, and put in his crop. He said to the man: "I have three fields, viz., A, B, and C, and I want you to sow wheat in the field of A, and of B, and of C." So he took his journey, returning about harvest time. On his return he goes out to his fields to see his wheat; he goes into the field of A; he is astonished, for there is no wheat there; he goes into the field of B, and there is no wheat there; he goes into the field of C, and he is more astonished than ever,—behold, he finds wheat there! He calls his hired hand: "Did I not command you to sow wheat in the field of A? Why did you not do it?" And he was speechless. Christ positively commands us to baptize in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, and this can no more be done at one action than the man could sow wheat in the field of A, and of B, and of C, at one action.

"Pilate wrote a title, and put it on the cross. And the writing was, Jesus of Nazareth the king of the Jews. . . And it was written in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin." John 19: 19, 20. How many times was it written? Evidently three times,—once in each language, and it could not be done at one action

"Wherefore laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings." 1 Pet. 2: 1. Laying aside, like baptizing, is used but once. Is it not understood, but not expressed, that all guile, hypocrisies, envies, and all evil speakings, shall be laid aside? All so understand it. Is it not understood but not expressed, that we are to baptize in the name of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost? Suppose the commission read: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of Matthew, and of Mark, and of Luke." How many actions would it require? Just as many as the present commission,—once into the name of each person.

But Paul says, Eph. 4: 5, there is but one baptism. That is what we contend for. The apostle does not say one dip, but "en baptisma," one dipping. We do not contend for three baptisms, but for one baptism or dipping, composed of three actions or baptizings,—into the name of the Father, the Father's name, and of the Son, the Son's, and of the Holy Ghost, the Holy Ghost's name.

But Paul says we are buried with him by baptism, and we do not bury our dead three times. That is very true, but I never saw a Christian burial where there were not three distinct actions. First, the deceased is placed in the coffin and covered with the lid; hence buried to all intents and purposes, so far as the definition of the word is concerned. But we are not satisfied. Secondly, the coffin is lowered into the vault, and again covered with boards. A second burial to all intents and purposes, so far as the meaning of the word goes. Still we are not satisfied, and now fill the cavity with earth. Thus we have three distinct actions in one Christian burial, as we have three distinct actions in one Christian baptism.

1 Pet. 3: 20 represents the saving of Noah and family by water as a figure of Christian baptism, but they did not go into the ark three times. Yes, and a beautiful figure it is. Let us notice the construction of the ark for a moment. "Make thee an ark of gopher wood; rooms shalt thou make in the ark, and shalt pitch it within and without with pitch. A window shalt thou make to the ark, and in a cubit shalt thou finish it above; and the door of the ark shalt thou set in the side thereof; with lower, second and third stories shalt thou make it." Gen. 6: 14, 16. Noah and family entered in at the door (face forward)—one action; they now ascend a flight of stairs into the second story,—two actions; they now ascend a second flight of stairs into the third story or room, where they remain during the deluge. Thus we have three actions before they arrive at their proper place. This beautifully represents the Trinity. The lower story or foundation represents God, the Father, the original cause of all things; the middle story represents Christ, the Son, the Mediator between God and man (see 1 Tim. 2: 5); the third story represents the Holy Spirit, the light and guide of the Christian. Noah and family went into the first room, the Father; and into the second room, the Son; and into the third room, the Holy Spirit. All our fathers were under the cloud; all passed through the sea, and all were baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea. Ex. 13: 21, 22; 1 Cor. 10: 1, 2.

They did not go through the sea three times. No; neither did they stand on the bank and jump across; but they went face forward. How many actions did it require to cross the Red Sea? Every step was an action, so there must have been many actions before they reached the opposite shore. Man and wife are represented as one: notwithstanding this, presenting the husband with a suit of clothes does not clothe the wife; feeding the wife on the best of food does not satisfy the hunger of the husband; baptizing into the name of the Father is not baptizing into the name of the Son; baptizing into the name of the Holy Ghost is not baptizing into the name of the Father.

But are we not commanded to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ? Yes; that is by the authority of Jesus Christ, as in the case of the lame man. Acts 3: 6, 7. "Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I to thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." By the authority of Jesus Christ I command thee to rise up and walk; by the authority of Jesus Christ I command you to be baptized. All the apostles taught and commanded was in the name of Jesus Christ, because they were authorized by him to thus teach and command; hence in his name.

Admitting that Peter's "Be baptized every one of you in (epi) the name of Jesus Christ," Acts 2: 38, means into (eis) the name of Jesus Christ, there is not a single immersionist known to me that baptizes into his name; not even the language of the Apostle Peter is used in the act of baptizing, but something like this is used: "I baptize thee in the name of the Father (but don't do it), and of the Son (but don't do it) and of the Holy Spirit. Amen." The applicant is dipped, generally into the Amen.

Christ's baptism of suffering in the garden of Gethsemane was composed of three actions. "And he went a little further, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt." And he bowed his face to the ground and prayed three times, using the same words each time. Matt. 26: 39, 42, 44; Mark 14: 35–41. In his mental sufferings and agony of soul, the sins of the world resting upon him, he prayed unto the Father until his "sweat became as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground." Luke 22: 44. Why did Christ go and fall face-forward to the ground three times, and pray the same words every time? Because it was necessary that every figure of baptism agree with the great commission of our Lord. How beautifully does every figure of baptism harmonize with the formula given by Christ!

5. Is Christian baptism performed by a forward or a backward action? The Apostle Paul says: "So many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death. . . For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." Rom. 6: 3, 4, 5. The apostle does not intimate that we are baptized in the likeness of his burial, but "in the likeness of his death;" and his death did not occur in the tomb, or sepulchre, but on the cross. How did he die? "When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished: and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost." John 19: 30. People do not bow their heads backwards. We cannot be baptized in the likeness of Christ's death by being plunged backward There is not an intimation in all the Bible of doing a righteous act backward, but the invariable command is to go forward. Every figure of baptism is represented by a forward action, such as Noah and family entering the ark, Gen. 7: 7; 1 Peter 3: 20, 21; the Israelites crossing the Red Sea; Ex. 14: 15, 22; 1 Cor. 10: 1, 2; Christ's overwhelming suffering in the Garden, Matt. 26: 39; Luke 22: 41.

"But do you not go face-forward into the water, and come up into the kingdom backward?" No; for the applicant puts on Christ in the act of baptism. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." Gal. 3: 27; Rom. 13: 14. Baptism is performed by the act of going into, and not coming out of. By the act of baptism the old man is buried, and we want him to stay buried and never be resurrected in time or eternity. The new man in Christ Jesus arises to walk in newness of life. The coming out of the water is a natural consequence of having been in the water. We haven't an intimation of coming up into the kingdom, or into Christ; but we are baptized, dipped, into Christ.

Trine immersion is recognized by all denominations as valid Christian baptism. It is good the world over, and, best of all, it has the divine approval of Christ, for he is its author. It is the only baptism that has the sanction of Christ, the apostles, and the early Christians who succeeded the apostles. "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Thus we get into God the Father, and into Christ the Son, and into the Spirit, the Holy Ghost.

THE UNPARDONABLE SIN,—WHAT IS IT?

BY A. HUTCHISON.

An exegesis, of this question is so frequently called for, that a short article upon the subject may be of some interest to the readers of the Messenger. The sin for which there is no pardon, or forgiveness, may be committed either by speaking irreverently of the work of the Holy Spirit, which is blasphemy, or by renouncing in whole or in part, the doctrine of Christ. Blaspheming, which is done by speaking, may be the work of the regenerate or unregenerate alike. But sinning against the Holy Ghost, in the shape of renouncing the doctrine of Christ, can be the act of the regenerate only. We will now call in the witnesses:

1. We will hear what Peter has to say: "But these, as natural brute beasts made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not; and shall utterly perish in their own corruption." 2 Pet. 2: 12. Here a class is referred to, who, it seems, are made to be taken and destroyed, and shall utterly perish in their own corruption. Now, we certainly want to know what they had done, and the first that we shall notice, is the fact that they had been guilty of speaking evil of the things that they understood not. Then they have been speaking blasphemously, because they were speaking evil. They were therefore speaking irreverently of what they were ignorant. Here the inquring mind may wish to know, whether they did nothing more than to speak evil of those things? We answer, Yes, they did more. We next read the fifteenth verse of the same chapter as above cited. It says, "which have forsaken the right way, and are gone astray."

Now, all thinking people know that no one can forsake the right way, until he is first in it. Then these people had not only spoken evil of the right way, but had also forsaken it, and they are guilty of both speaking blasphemously of, and renouncing, the doctrine of Christ. Therefore we cannot wonder that Peter says they are made to be taken and destroyed. Jude 12 very strongly confirms the above, when he says, "Trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots."

We all know that the fruit of a tree cannot wither until it first bears fruit. Jesus says, "The branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye except ye abide in me." John 15: 4. Hence you will discover that we must be in Christ, before we can be fruit-bearing trees. Then the tree whose fruit withereth, is no longer in Christ. He has done just what Peter said,—he has forsaken the right way, and gone astray.

Now we will hear what Jesus has to say about such cases. Here it is! "If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered." John 15: 6. Here you can see under what circumstances the fruit will wither,—not until man forsakes the right way, and therefore ceases to abide in Christ. Jesus further says of the unfruitful branches, "And men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned."

We have additional testimony, bearing upon the the same phase of things and will call Peter to the stand again. He says, "For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them." 2 Pet. 2: 21. Here, you will again notice, that, when they turn from the commandment, they renounce the doctrine of Christ, and therefore renounce Christ as well. Next, we notice the manner in which this must be done. For this we will call on Paul. He says, "For if we sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins." Heb. 10: 26. Here we are informed that this thing must be done willfully, and we can only do anything willfully, when we propose in our mind, beforehand, that we are going to do that thing. It is not an act that is performed upon the spur of the moment. It must be a deliberate act, before it can be a willful act. Then, if it is performed after the above-named manner, we are informed that there is no more sacrifice, and if no sacrifice, then no forgiveness, for as long as there is any sacrifice, there is pardon, but when there is no more sacrifice, then no pardon, because it is unpardonable.

Now we wish to know why Jude says, "Twice dead,"—dead, first, in trespass and sin, because they have forsaken the right way. This is certainly a great sin, to forsake the way of the Lord, for in doing so, that individual crucifies Christ afresh, and not only crucifies him, but crucifies Christ unto him or herself,—for he is put to an open shame, and the blood of the covenant is, by that individual, counted as an unholy thing. O think of this, ye who may feel like forsaking the Lord, and renouncing his doctrine,—such are twice dead. The second death is a death unto repentance, for we further notice that Paul says, "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good works of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance." Heb. 6: 4 6. Here it is said, "If they shall fall away." This declares the possibility of falling away. And falling away is one and the same with "forsaking the right way." Then having thus, willfully, abandoned the faith, there is therefore no repentance for such a one; and he is not only twice dead, but plucked up by the roots. There is no chance for such a tree to grow any more,—a dark-looking picture; but do not the Scriptures sustain it?

Blasphemy, as previously noticed, is speaking irreverently, and if this is done by speaking against Christ personally, there is a possibility of forgiveness. But if it is committed by speaking against the Holy Ghost, then there is no promise of pardon. Here we call in the witness. Jesus speaks: "Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come." Matt. 12: 31, 32. This the regenerate man may do; and the unregenerate man may also speak irreverently of the Holy Ghost and its work, and may therefore commit the unpardonable sin, in that sense. It is clear that Jesus was speaking to the unconverted, at least in part, when he used the language which is here referred to. The converted adds only another sin when he renounces the doctrine of Christ, because he breaks a covenant which he had made with Christ. And he does not need to renounce the whole of the doctrine; one point, willfully renounced, is enough. Jas. 2: 10 says, "Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all."

THE STORY OF RUTH.

BY W. H. PRICE.

One of the most important and prominent characters, pointed out in Bible history, is a Moabitish woman by the name of Ruth. Among her descendants the Savior of the world was found.

During the rule of the judges, at the time of Eli's administration, God sent a famine into the land of Israel, so that most of the people were obliged to go elsewhere. The Bible mentions only one particular family, of Bethlehem, which consisted of a man by the name of Elimelech, his wife Naomi, and his two sons, Mahlon and Chilion, that went into the land of Moab, there to remain until there would be plenty again in Israel.

The Bible tells us that Elimelech became a very prosperous man financially, and we have reason to believe that he served the Living God.

As time rolls on, Elimelech dies, leaving a wife and two sons. The two young men obtain for themselves Moabitish women for wives, but after a time the two sons are taken away by the icy hand of death, leaving the mother without any family.

Why was this affliction brought upon Naomi? The Bible is silent. It is true the two sons violated one of the commandments of the Lord in taking heathen women for wives, but still we see the workings of the Lord in bringing good even out of apparent evil.

Ten years had now passed and Naomi, hearing of the prosperity in Israel, resolved to stay no longer, but to return to her own country and kindred.

The two daughters-in-law besought her that they might go along. Having gone on their way some distance, Naomi blesses both of them and bids them return. This seemed impossible to them; they did not feel like deserting one whom they had learned to love and respect,—one who had been to them as only a mother could be, but after insisting upon their return, it is said they all wept. We need not think the good old mother would rather see them serving their false gods. She would gladly have them to forsake those images and turn to the True Light.

The decisive moment had now come. The decision was to be made. Orpah goes back to her own kindred and to serving idolatry, but Ruth chooses that good part that could not be taken from her.

Naomi and Ruth return to Bethlehem at the beginning of the barley harvest. Many things had changed; her family was dead and she was left to support herself. She had gone away with an abundance, but had returned empty.

As harvest had just begun, she sent Ruth into the fields to glean, for poor people were permitted to gather the grain that was left lie on the ground. She had been gleaning for some time after the reapers, when Boaz, the owner of the field, who had come out to see after his men, espied her at a distance, gathering the few straws that remained. After Boaz was informed who the woman was, he told her not to go into any other field, but continue gathering with his reapers.

At the close of the day she returned to Bethlehem with the grain she had gathered during the day. Thus she continued until after the harvest, taking home each day all the grain she could carry. Then, after the harvest was over and threshing had come, Naomi gives Ruth instruction what to do, telling her, on a certain night, to go up to the threshing floor where Boaz would be, and to uncover his feet and lie down. Naomi's instruction was obeyed. When, at midnight, Boaz awoke and beheld some one lying at his feet, he was somewhat alarmed. Ruth told him she meant no harm, but her mother-in-law sent her there, and it should be told her what to do. Boaz then tells her to return home again until he would ascertain as to whether Elimelech's nearest friends were willing to redeem his land.

Having called the kinsman, he asks him whether he would redeem the land, and if not, he would, in his stead. Upon the kinsman's refusal, Boaz buys the land and takes the Moabitish woman to be his wife.

After a time a son is born unto them by the name of Obed who was the grandfather of David. Here again we see the workings of prophecy. Here we have the foreshadowing of a new dispensation, when God would send a Redeemer to deliver his people from their enemies and make an atonement for the sins of the whole world. Then all those who washed themselves in the blood of the Lamb will be permitted to reign with Christ throughout eternity.

THE HAIR.—ITS USE AND ABUSE.

BY DANIEL HAYS.

The hair is the natural covering for the head. Nothing so well serves to adorn and protect the head as the hair. It is a non-conductor of heat and cold, and thus serves to equalize the temperature of the brain. By its peculiar texture and arrangement it serves to protect the head from external injury.

The hair is abused by neglect. The hair should be kept clean and neatly arranged. Disheveled hair is an indication of slovenliness.

The hair is abused by fashion. When Paul said, "It is a shame for a man to wear long hair," he evidently means that a man should not wear his hair in its full length as it becomes a woman. Many taking advantage of Paul's language, claim the right to cut it off altogether short, just because fashion has it so. In the voice of fashion, human hair is a nuisance, and the nearer we can get rid of it the better. No wonder sun-strokes are a common calamity; and the delicate nerves of the head suffer from the abuse of nature's own protection.

Any perversion of the order of nature is an abuse of the hair. From the shaved heads of the Asiatics to the shingled heads of Americans, there is an abuse of the hair. All may not be able to wear the hair exactly alike, however. Certain climatic conditions and physical defects give exceptions to the order of nature. These exceptions have been regarded by the church. In 1886, Annual Meeting laid down an order for wearing the hair. This order has given rise to much comment, and unfavorable criticism. There were wise heads concerned in that decision, all admit. But seemingly it is inconsistent to lay down three ways instead of one. Was it because three ways of wearing the hair were already in the church at that time, or did Annual Meeting intend the first way named as the rule, and the other two the exceptions? Evidently the latter.

Open your illustrated Bibles. Look at the plates representing the person of our Savior. There you will see the order of the church in wearing the hair. It is the production of the great masters in painting, and has come down from time immemorial. Christ is the perfect model for man. In him our manhood is restored —in him "who is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature." Are we created in the image of God? Are we men of God? A brother remarked when beholding a minister, dressed in the style of the day, "Does he look like a man of God?"

HER SOUL NOT FIRMLY ANCHORED.

BY C. C. ROOT.

To a Seeker after the Truth:—

My last talk with you, on religion, has caused me to think seri ly, especially your remarks, stating that you f . that your hopes spiritually, are not so bright now as at former times, or that your zeal is not so fervent, and that you cannot so fully rely on your present relation to Christ, nor repose in his promises as formerly.

You tried to give me supposed reasons for your position, but I would (were I left to guess reasons) give such as would seem to me more satisfactory. You have knowledge, acquired by extensive reading and research, but of late your vast reading has been less disturbed by domestic cares, etc. Moreover, the character of your reading matter has materially changed. You are now entertaining views that more or less militate against your formerly-accepted rules of faith and practice. Some of the ordinances of the New Testament, which you formerly believed to be obsolete in this age of the world, are of the things to which Paul refers, saying, "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip."

This is more particularly so since you can well remember that we are losing hold of many things in this age of the world. This naturally causes one to question, more than ever, whether those things, which he yet holds, were ever presented to him just in the manner in which the apostles delivered them to the ancient churches; and hence, whether, what we hold, is held in a valid way.

Again, you say to me, if you were an immersionist you would surely be a trine-immersionist. Now the very Scripture that proves to your conviction the propriety of trine-immersion insists upon your consent, first, to immersion, and also clearly and fairly insists upon triune action, otherwise trine immersion could not be entertained for a moment.

Such convictions do inevitably undermine and finally shelter our former basis of faith and hope. Only those who escape from a sinking barge, may reach a safe landing.

There is another ordinance in the Gospel, ordained of God, prepared and sanctified to the use of the church, and nobly adapted to the benefit of saints in your mood of mind, in case there were no other causes of despondency than that which you attribute to your case. I would have proposed it to you, but then I remembered that your church has not observed the ordinance for a period exceeding your life-time, and hence you could not obtain it there, however much you might believe in and desire it. Then, too, we could not administer the ordinance to any but those baptized in the manner which we hold to be right.

The ordinance referred to is found in James 5: 14, 15, with a special aim at the promise in the latter clause of verse 15: "Is any sick among you?" How sick? It does not say, "Sick unto death," or less sick, nor whether the sickness must be physical or spiritual. "The prayer of faith shall save the sick." What from? Possibly from either of the above sicknesses, but if it be not his will that the body be saved any longer from dissolution, then, surely, if all sins are forgiven as a result of faith, trust and obedience, the soul shall be saved, though the applicant die.

"And the Lord shall raise him up." Raise him up where? Possibly here, and also in the resurrection. But if not his will that we be raised up here another time, then surely if, from faith, trust and this obedience, committed sins be forgiven him, he shall be raised up at the last day. "For," said Jesus, "this is the will of him that sent me, that every one that believeth on the Son may have everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day." John 6: 39, 40, 44, 54.

We hold that each ordinance of God has its own specific remedial effect upon its faithful recipient, for its own respective malady. The brazen serpent was for the bite of the fiery, flying serpent. Num. 21: 8. The process for the cure of leprosy is given in Lev. 13.

We have the washing in the pool of Siloam for the completion of the cure, begun by the application of spittle and clay. John 9: 6. We have the laying on of hands with prayer after baptism that the Holy Ghost might be received. Acts 8: 12, 17; 19: 6. We have the sainted widow who must first have washed the saints' feet, in order to be admitted into the number of the worthy. 1 Tim. 10. Eating that bread and drinking the cup, emblematic of Christ's flesh and blood, we may have life in us. Mark 14: 22, 23; John 6: 53. Being anointed with oil in the name of the Lord, our sins may be forgiven, and we be saved and raised up. James 5: 14, 15.

From this stand-point we test the spiritual basis of our faith and hope, our moral basis of faith and hope being tested by the moral precepts of the Gospel. Then, likewise, do we test the causes of lack of hope and trust in him, and a positive security of a home beyond the stars.

Surely the Lord has provided us with means of grace sufficient to qualify us for a full triumph of faith and hope both in old age and in youth. "But he that lacketh these things . . . hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins."

We will now notice a few Scriptural cases where improvements were made on hopes, and more positive approbation of God obtained. In Acts 19: 1 to 7 we find that certain souls were baptized in good faith, and yet, soon afterwards, they were commanded of Paul to be baptized again. In Acts 18: 26 we have an account of Apollos, an eloquent man, one mighty in the Scripture, and, so far as he understood the Gospel, a faithful Christian minister. Notwithstanding all that, he had to have "the way of God expounded unto him more perfectly." Simon of Samaria, heard the preaching of Philip and believed and was baptized. But when Peter and John were sent unto them at Samaria, they found Simon still behind in some things, pertaining to a full surrender of self, and acceptance of the terms of salvation, and the apostles declared him as having neither part nor lot in the matter, his heart not being right in the sight of God. Acts 8: 21. Even the rest of those whom Philip had baptized there, must yet receive the laying on of hands of the apostles with prayer, that they might receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. Acts 2: 38. I said erroneous devoutness because, in verse 5, it is stated, "Devout men out of every nation under heaven were present," and Peter said to them, "Repent, every one of you and be baptized," etc.

PRIDE.

BY J. L. SWITZER.

A new religious society called the church of God has been organized at Topeka, by Mrs. Woodworth, with a membership of 140. There are a good many different kinds of religion in Topeka. There are even a few people in the possession of practical Christianity.

THE above is taken from a Topeka paper. The following extract is from the same journal:

The Epworth league is an organization of young people in the Methodist church, and has a large membership in Kansas. Epworth was the home of John Wesley, and that fact is thus commemorated. But the founder of Methodism, who was adverse to "gold and costly apparel," would rest uneasy in his grave if he could hear the rustle of silk, and see the flash of jewelry in the early morning prayer service at the Salina camp-meeting.

There must be something in it when a secular paper notices so much disparagement between the faith and practice of a Christian denomination,—enough to make Wesley "rest uneasy in his grave."

But let me tell you there is more subtility than candor and truth in the above extract. A secular paper can be critically doctrinal in matters of religion to create a false impression for political purposes.

The parties that run that paper are not among the "few" in Topeka that "are in possession of practical Christianity." No doubt there are superfluities, upon the person of many of those who assemble at the early morning prayer service at the Salina camp-meeting, not allowed by the Methodist Discipline, and that would not have met the approbation of John Wesley; but I venture that this display at Salina would fall into very diminutive proportions if compared with the similar exhibitions, in the same denominations, in the large eastern cities.

In fact the Salina camp-meeting is a rustic affair in comparison with the monstrous aristocracy that vaults over the heads of its fellow-men, and offers its pharisaical prayers from the hill top of pride.

As a citizen of Kansas I rejoice that the commonwealth still regards the voice of the most humble in the land, and repels the subtile encroachments of those who would deliver us, bound hand and foot, to the great red dragon.

As a member of the Christian church I rejoice that the church still bears unwavering testimony against the encroachments of pride, and admonishes her members to carefully leave off its habiliments and walk in humility before the world.

Finally I would say that in Kansas, when at all jewels flash and silks rustle, they generally appear in the afternoon and evening, and are not often seen at "the early morning prayer service."

"WE ARE OF GOD."—1 John 4: 6.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

My Dear Sister:—

Yours of the 23rd inst. came to-day. I have for some time been wishing to hear from you. "We are one in Christ Jesus," and all that concerns you concerns me. Gal. 3: 28; 1 Cor. 12: 25-27. Church membership alone does not constitute our ground of citizenship in the kingdom of God. The real organic unity of the body of Christ is spiritual, and precedes external and visible fellowship. The life that holds the Eternal Trinity in absolute unity, also binds all the individual units of the redeemed into one family. "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." 1 John 5: 12. Christ's death was so complete a satisfaction for all that sin had incurred, that he needed to die but once; and His resurrection was so perfect a vindication of His life and claims, that it entitled Him to a seat at the right hand of God forever. By faith we participate in all that Jesus had done and is, and by baptism we represent all that faith includes. Rom. 6: 9, 10, 11; Gal. 3: 26, 27. It is a fatal delusion to rest in anything short of the very righteousness and life which characterized the Son of God in the flesh.

The imitation of Jesus is not salvation. We must be more than disciples, we must be children, as really begotten of God, as by our natural parents. To learn of Jesus by contemplation of His Person and attributes, would never beget us in His image. We can awaken and develop our best qualities by studying some great model, but we cannot make the life of that model our own. Christianity is something far higher than this. It is not copying but living the life of God.

An adopted child can render perfect obedience to its foster-parent, but it cannot live the life of any but its real father or mother. In Christ Jesus we are both adopted and begotten, so that we not only do as Jesus does by way of imitation, but we have His life as our impulse as well as our object.

There is hardly anything of which I have a greater horror than that of being buried alive. The sepulcher is only for the dead. I once heard a distinguished physician say to his family, "I care not how soon you bury me after I expire, only be sure that I am dead." Searching the Scriptures and self-examination, and careful and extensive observation, have thoroughly convinced me that one of the greatest perils of the church is burying applicants before they are dead. How many have I met who have been years in the church and then awakened to the conviction of premature induction. What then? Rebaptize? By no means. Circumcision and baptism adumbrate the same fact. Whether it be antecedent or subsequent to the symbol, it is the Life of God in the soul that is the absolutely essential thing. No person can represent the death and resurrection of Jesus and the saint better than God has done by trine immersion; and it cannot symbolize these great verities better by being administered twice. But the solemn, responsible mission of ministers is to handle the material thoroughly, which they build into the spiritual architecture. "Living stones," "built together for a habitation of God through the Spirit." 1 Pet. 2: 5; Eph. 2: 22.

There is a great deal of tinkering done in the world ostensibly in the Name of Jesus. People cannot get rid of the idea of working out their salvation by simply doing such external things as the Gospel requires, and following Jesus by voluntary endeavor. All this has its basis, not in the provision made in the incarnation, but in the inherent capacities and energies of our moral nature stimulated by the Perfect Ideal of Humanity in Christ and the promise of salvation. This turns out fine moralists, but sets us not in that relation to God which the cross effects, and imparts not that character and peace which are the prerogative of those whose "life is hid with Christ in God." Christ is the Son of Man, and stands for the race as Righteousness, as truly as the first Adam does for sin. Rom. 5: 12-18. When He died, all died. This is the true Greek idea. 2 Cor. 5: 14. When He rose we rose with Him, and in His session at the right hand of the Majesty in the Heavens, there is not a soul on earth which He does not represent. This is the sole ground and possibility of salvation. To be saved is to have all this wealth of grace and fulness of life imputed to faith, and inwrought by the Holy Ghost, and wrought out in our daily, hourly life in all the minutiæ of our history.

The faith that claims less than a whole Christ will not have the righteousness of God imputed; and any claim of justification that does not make us holy and obedient, is a delusion.

A genuine faith in God has placed to its account personally all there is in Jesus, and permeates every element and fiber of soul and body with what is thus transferred; and illumines, and beautifies and transfigures every expression of life from baptism down to threading a needle or darning a stocking or scouring a knife. As God is God absolutely, and Jesus is all through Christ, and we are by blood, all through human and sinful, so must we be by contact with God through faith, wholly impregnated with His Divinity. Not a nervelet is free from the taint of sin by natural generation, so, neither, can an atom be missed by the life of God in the generation of the Holy Spirit. What an awful truth this is for those to ponder who defile themselves all the year round with carnal indulgences, some of them to gross to name. "This is Eternal Life, that they might KNOW THEE, THE ONLY TRUE GOD, AND JESUS CHRIST." John 17: 3. This is not scholastic knowledge, not an intellectual acquisition, not gained by heredity, or study, or volition, but the knowledge of consciousness by faith which knows no more of doubt, than we do in relation to our personal identity.

No person can be persuaded by argument into the conviction of acceptance with God. No one can persuade himself by the contemplation of his obedience. Only One Person's Righteousness can bridge the chasm between God and the sinner, and sinners we are all. The whole question of salvation as to radically essential elements must be settled before obedience can be acceptable. All obedience offered to God as a ground of the Divine favor, detracts from the righteousness prepared by the obedience of Jesus Christ. Obey we must, but let our loyalty be the fruit, and not the basis of reconciliation. The faith that accepts Christ's righteousness does so not merely as a covert from condemnation, but as a standard of life; rejoicing not only in deliverance from merited penalty, but committing itself unreservedly to the Pattern of obedience, which makes salvation by grace a possibility.

The salvation of sinners is the masterwork of Jehovah, so grand, so stupendous, so wonderful, that the angels are glad to be our ministering spirits, so that they may study in our experience "the manifold wisdom of God." Heb. 1: 14; 1 Pet. 1: 12; Eph. 3: 10. To believe is to live, to believe is to obey, to believe is to have Jesus, who is both the Alpha and Omega.

All this will show you without further exposition how to deal with those who trespass against us. A dead person we can kick ad libitum, he will neither wince nor groan, nor retaliate. If we are "crucified with Christ," "dead indeed unto sin," we are "not easily provoked," but will go after the wrongdoer as Christ after the stray sheep, not to bring to judgment and castigation, but to win to self-knowledge, holiness, and love. I have met with few persons who know how to deal with transgressors, simply because they know not how to deal with themselves. If we are not master of our own spirit, we cannot fulfill Matt. 18: 15. Several years ago I had correspondence with one of the most distinguished holiness leaders in this country. I interrogated him very keenly, perhaps with unnecessary severity, to which he responded promptly, and as I thought, somewhat tartly. I expressed my regret for having hurt his feelings. With the utmost dispatch he replied in these pregnant words: "What is this you say? Hurt my feelings? Dear brother, I had no feelings to be hurt: I am a dead man, CRUCIFIED WITH CHRIST. A DEAD MAN YOU CANNOT HURT."

This is exactly what our faith in Christ means, and what our baptism signifies. If we go after the trespasser, crucified and risen with Christ, we are infinitely more burdened for his sin than for ourselves as the object of his wrong. Should we fail to win, we must re-inforce ourselves with one or two saints, who are living embodiments of 1 Cor. 13: 4-7, and compass him about with the awful charms of the Cross. If that will prove abortive, commit it to the whole body of saints.

The object all along must be to gain, not to condemn, belittle, crush. If all proves ineffective, love him as Jesus loved His murderers. Hold him as an alien, but love him as one your whole soul yearns to save. Oh, how little we have yet learned of the reality, and power, and glory of 1 John 4: 7-16. This, and only this, will give us boldness in the day of Judgment. 1 John 4: 17. We need more Holy Ghost preaching, more Holy Ghost experience, more Holy Ghost living. "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

Union Deposit, Pa.

"THERE is a vast amount of reveling in sin through the imagination, which stops there. It stops not for want of depravity, nor for want of opportunity, but because there is so much exposure, inconvenience, disadvantage, and personal self-injury in outward commission. The open sinner may seem more daring and reckless, but perhaps he who sins only in thought is the more reprehensible in God's sight. So far he handles his sinful desire with studious skill and purpose. He more fully realizes the nature of his sin, because he willingly indulges himself in it so far as it can be indulged in secret, and without that personal disadvantage which he knows would attend the open commission. Can he check himself right there? The more is it his duty to check himself before the indulgence begins."

"THIS traffic in intoxicating drinks, as at present carried on, constitutes one of the greatest perils of the nation, not only because it is an open violation of the law of God, but because it saps the very foundation of all good government by demoralizing and corrupting the citizens that exercise through their votes the controlling power in the nation. Bad men are elevated to places of power by its patrons, causing the nation to mourn on account of their misrule, whilst good men are proscribed and persecuted on account of their known opposition to the nefarious business."

"Do not be in haste with your denials. Affirmations are better. The things you do not believe, you may as well in most cases, be silent about. 'I believed, and therefore have I spoken,' Paul said. Too many men in these days open their mouths to speak only what they do not believe."

OUR GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

BY MARY EMMERT.

TO-DAY we stand on the threshhold of an era our fathers never saw. Everything for our comfort temporally, and advancement in educational and social lines, has been provided, and, more, we have learned to know and love the Bible, and have realized its attendant blessings.

We were selfish should we keep those blessings in our own land, depriving others of the religious improvement we enjoy. Some noble-hearted Christian workers have gone into heathen lands there to teach the people of Christ. Mission stations now form a chain around the globe. Brave, loyal, noble men and women are leaving homes, friends, and native land to spend their lives at the call of duty.

Not so was it when the present century dawned. Many were the obstructions in the path of the missionary. The Great Wall had been built around China. Japan's ports were closed to American commerce. Africa was impenetrable, and the islands of the sea were crowded with cannibals, more to be dreaded than the angry ocean which must be subdued before reaching them.

Even when these outer barriers were passed, others, even more serious, remained to be overcome. With slow means of traveling, and languages strange and hard to master, much valuable time passed unimproved. Woman was a degraded being, remaining in ignorance throughout life, denied all rights, and even a soul.

Such are a few of the barriers which then existed. To-day they have fallen! God has been working. Still he works. How remarkable the means and the rapidity with which he has prepared the way! God speaks, "I am the Lord," and the sound of his voice is being echoed and re-echoed throughout the world.

With one wave of divine power God might have brought heathen nations upon a level with our own. But no! God works wisely. Had he given at once all the people a knowledge of himself, we never should have had the privilege of going into all the world and showing the people a way to become better, as he has given permission.

When we see barriers, that can be compared only to mountains, removed as completely as though they had been cast into the sea, when we see avenues opened by divine power, giving to missionaries access to the very heart of heathendom, it seems as though the miracle, wrought in Jerusalem when the large iron gate of the city opened of its own accord, allowing Peter to pass out, no longer causes us to wonder. The work is the Lord's. And more is his. He puts it into the hearts of his children, when they study his wonders, to love mission work, and to move to action on this great, grand question.

What is it that induces men and women to face without fear, pestilence, famine, exposure, persecution, death? It is love; a wonderful love, which takes by the hand courage, forming a united strength sufficient to bear trials of the severest kind.

Now is our time to work. The power that saved the three Hebrew children, protected Daniel in the lion's den, threw down Jericho's walls, has gathered the stones from the missionaries' paths, and now it remains for the hosts of God to march forward, follow their great Captain, and take the forts of the enemy.

A whole generation is passing away, and ourselves with it. Delay means death. What is to be done, we must do while the fellow-men of our generation remain to be reached, and we remain to reach them. Do we appreciate the privilege of being partners with God? He who gives his time, his money or himself to the forwarding of God's truth is God's co-worker. With investments such as these, reasonably may we expect the gain to be great, trustingly may we pray, "Thy kingdom come."

Do we, in possession of the Truth that gives freedom, realize our obligation toward those who are bound by the heavy chains of idolatry, superstition and degradation? There is an average of one missionary in the field to one hundred thousand souls who are not in possession of the Gospel. Is each missionary responsible if a great majority of his one hundred thousand are lost because he cannot tell them all of Christ? Who shall share the responsibility with these isolated workers?

A certain traveler visited the Ganges River. He looked long upon its dark, flowing waters, thinking of the untold number of crimes that are continually committed by devoted heathen mothers casting their little children, each a living sacrifice, to die beneath its waters. Then he said, "O Ganges, how guilty you must be, carrying all this burden of evil within yourself!" The Ganges answered, "Ah, no, not so, for I cast my waters into the ocean and at the same time all my sin." Then he turned to the ocean and said, "Oh, ocean, how guilty you must be, carrying all this burden of evil within yourself!" But the ocean said, "Ah, no, not so, for I yield my waters to the clouds, and at the same time all my sin." Then he turned to the clouds and said, "Oh, clouds, how guilty you must be, carrying all this burden of evil within yourselves!" But the clouds replied, "Ah, no, for we pour our waters down upon the heads of men, and at the same time all their sins!"

Upon whom can rest the responsibility other than ourselves? We are responsible, not for the conversion of souls, but for their contact with the Truth. Life is passing; the end will come. These millions of untaught, unsaved souls we must meet at the throne of God. What can we do to save them, and save ourselves, for God will judge us for neglect of duty, if we fulfill not our Lord's command, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature."

We stand now in the gateway of a new era. Opportunity's broad plains are spread before our vision. "Lift up your eyes, and look upon the fields, for they are white already to harvest.

Mt. Carroll, Illinois.

WORK TILL JESUS COMES.

BY A. A. THRONE.

WE may draw a line of demarcation between the works of Jesus and the works of Satan. There is a work for you, my brother and sister, till Jesus comes, for the harvest is great, but the laborers are few. There is room for others, also, to come into the vineyard and work, for in looking over this broad land of ours we can all see where the works of Jesus are much neglected. Even professors of Christianity are patronizing pleasure resorts and excursions on the Sabbath Day.

Is that working for Jesus? Certainly not. We must take up the cross of Christ and follow wherever he may lead. Let us follow him till he comes to gather his jewels home. Let us persevere, though Satan, with all his pernicious ways and enticing forms, tries to draw us from the path of rectitude and right. An evil spirit may insist that it is not necessary to attend Sunday-school or suggest to the young men and ladies that they go to some pleasure resort on the Sabbath. Satan may even say to the members, "You would better remain at home to-day," and he may, perhaps, induce you to do a piece of work on the Sabbath.

I ask, "What are Satan's wages?" Simply death. Then look at the gift of God. That is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. May we, therefore, have our feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel, and be armed not only with the breast plate of righteousness, but also with the armor of God. That will enable us to stand the wiles of the adversary of our souls.

We may think, if we cannot do some great thing that we will do nothing. That is not the way Jesus conducts his work. He says, "Except we become as little children, we can in no wise enter into the kingdom of God." Work for Jesus, if ever so little.

May the Lord help us to work with a will, whatever he gives us to do; if it is only to give a cup of cold water in his name! Then, when we are done with his work on earth, we may be gathered home where we can enjoy the society of angels, and all the saved that have gone before.

Pomeroy, Ohio.

"WE depend a good deal, in our life-rulings, upon the names by which we call things. If we do not class a temptation among our temptations, we are very apt to be entangled in its folds before we know it. Indeed, it is a part of the Tempter's art to prevent our seeing the temptation in temptations. We are often restrained from wrong doing by the fact that we feel ourselves being tempted. We shun deceit, lying, theft, and a score of well-recognized sins, because we realize in them the power of the Tempter. But these temptations that more nearly affect our outward conduct among our fellows are in no wise so subtile and so dangerous as those which are more essentially personal and spiritual. The temptations to doubt, distrust, and reject God steal over us before we are aware that we are in the Tempter's hands. We are tempted to think of God's mercy as unfairness or injustice, of his love as wrath, and to set ourselves up as judges of what God has or has not a right to do. Every occasion of suffering, loss, or sorrow, ought to be regarded as the peculiar opportunity of the Tempter. But such temptations are correspondingly to be regarded as divine opportunities given to us to witness for Christ."

The Gospel Messenger

Is the recognized organ of the German Baptist or Brethren's church, and advocates the form of doctrine taught in the New Testament and pleads for a return to apostolic and primitive Christianity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and maintains that Faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration of the heart and mind, baptism by Trine Immersion for remission of sins unto the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, are the means of adoption into the household of God,—the church militant.

It also maintains that Feet-washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and as universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians, is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, as taught in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ.

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, James 5: 14, is binding upon all Christians.

It also advocates the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, thus giving to the Lord for the spread of the Gospel and for the conversion of sinners.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

BRO. J. M. REPLOGLE reports one addition to the Mexico church, Ind.

BRO. I. GIBBLE, of Sangamon County, Ill., is preparing to move to California.

CONGREGATIONS sometimes complain because the preacher is dull. By the way, congregations sometimes get dull too.

ON page 542, speaking of the Loramie's church, Ohio, it should have read that four letters were given, instead of four were added by letter.

OUR Sunday-school in Mt. Morris was re-organized Sept. 6, with an enrollment of 284 pupils in class work. This is quite an increase over the attendance for last year. The outlook for our Sunday-school is good, and we trust that it will not only prepare many for special work in other fields, but pray that it may be the means of bringing many into the kingdom of Christ.

WE are now printing a number of tracts and leaflets for the Brethren's Tract Work, Dayton, Ohio. They seem to have quite a demand for tracts.

BRO. WM. WORKMAN, of Loudonville, Ohio, spent several days with us. He seemed to enjoy himself very much. He also preached once while with us.

WE are gratified to learn that Bro. S. S. Mohler is slowly improving in health. He has now moved to Warrensburgh, Mo., where he may be addressed.

BRO. S. H. BECHTELHEIMER, of Lower Deer Creek, Ind., writes that Aug. 20 two more young lambs made the good confession and united with the church at that place.

SEND us your name and address, and we will send you free a copy of our large, twenty-page Illustrated Bible Catalogue, showing contents and price of our large list of Family Bibles.

SEVENTEEN have lately united with the church, by confession and baptism, in North Carolina, with prospects of still more. It seems to us that would be a good field for missionary work.

BRO. D. E. PRICE, of this place, spent a few days with the Brethren in Fulton County, Ill., the last week in August. For the present he has oversight of one of the congregations in that County.

THE true believer, like the man on shipboard, may stumble and fall many times, but he will not fall overboard. As long as he is on board the ship, there is a chance for him, but when once overboard there is little hope.

THIS is the week for Bro. Andrew Hutchison at Sabetha, Kans. In a private note he says, "Yes, I am sure to find the Bible where I find the MESSENGER. And where they read the GOSPEL MESSENGER, they read the Bible too."

AT the Ministerial Meeting to be held in the Walnut church, Northern Indiana, Sept. 30, Bro. W. R. Deeter is to deliver an address on "Church Government." This subject ought to be ably treated at all of our ministerial meetings.

BRO. D. M. MILLER, of Milledgeville, Ill., is now preaching for the Brethren at Rock Falls, Wis. He expects to remain a few weeks. We are glad to find him in the field again, for he seems to have an adaptation to that kind of work.

BRO. J. C. MURRAY, of Nappanee, Ind., is engaged in a series of meetings at Lanark, Ill. The meetings are well attended and the interest good. On last report, Sept. 6, the services were growing in interest, with encouraging prospects, and were to be continued another week.

MORMON settlers are making great progress in the States of Sonora and Chihuahua, Mexico. Hundreds have located in the Corralitos Valley, and as the soil is a remarkably fertile alluvial deposit, it is predicted that it will shortly become a veritable Paradise. Numerous colonies are invading the district, and it is not improbable that they and their problem will soon in great part be transferred to the care of the Mexican Government. If they must keep up their immoral system of religion that is perhaps the best place for them to settle. And by the way, this reminds us of the fact that Mexico has so long been under the dominion of the Roman Catholic priests that there is little show of true reform among the natives. With the addition of the Mormons yet, the Mexican Government will certainly have a state of affairs not to be envied.

IT was generally believed that Charles H. Spurgeon, of London, would soon recover sufficiently to resume his place in the pulpit, but he now seems to be making little, if any, progress towards recovery. His condition is by no means encouraging.

ON account of Bro. Galen B. Royer spending a few weeks among the churches in Iowa, that part of his correspondence which does not need immediate attention, will not be answered before Sept. 28. All requiring attention before that time is forwarded to him.

THE new meeting-house, just west of North Manchester, Ind., was dedicated the last Sunday in August. The house was completely packed. About 1,200 persons attended the services. Bro. Lewis W. Teeter did the preaching. His labors were greatly appreciated.

"WHAT Shall the Harvest be?" was the subject of our last prayer-meeting. It was indeed an interesting meeting. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," seemed to be the leading thought of those who spoke. Many good impressions were made in addition to a number of excellent ideas that were advanced. There were over two hundred present.

ORDERS for our Sunday-school Quarterlies, for the fourth quarter, may be sent in at any time now, as they are ready for mailing. For prices see notices on the advertising pages of this issue. We think it hardly necessary to close Sunday-school work during the winter months, for that is really the best time to do good work. Even if the number in attendance should be small, that is no reason for discouragement.

So far as received at this office, the following is a list of the feasts to be held in Northern Illinois this fall:

Sept. 15 and 16, 10 A. M.,	West Branch
Sept. 15 and 16, 1 P. M.,	Shannon
Sept. 19 and 20, 1 P. M.,	Arnold's Grove
Oct. 10, 2 P. M.,	Naperville
Oct. 14 and 15, 1 P. M.,	Waddam's Grove
Oct. 16 and 17, 2 P. M.,	Rock River
Oct. 17 and 18, 10 A. M.,	Pine Creek

WHILE the grapes are ripe is a good time to call attention to the propriety of preparing unfermented wine for use in our Communion services. The method is very simple. Press the juice from good ripe grapes, strain it well and sweeten a little. Then heat and can the same as fruit. In this manner the pure juice of the grape may be preserved in an unfermented state for years. Another way is to can the grapes, as you would other fruit, and press out the juice when it is desired for Communion services. In this way the pure, unfermented juice of the grape may be had at any time, and it is far better and more appropriate for these services than the best of wine usually sold in the market.

WE were recently told of a very active, working sister who is really doing a good work, "but," says our informant, "she makes so much trouble in the church,—more than all the rest of the sisters put together. It seems that nothing can please her." It put us to thinking. We wonder whether real useful persons ought to make trouble. Certainly they ought not. If they do, they surely are not as useful as they might otherwise be. People who make much trouble in the church may rest assured that something is not just right. We would advise them to pause and think seriously. May be they will be able to locate the cause in themselves. If they do, then they should make an effort to remove it. A real useful member makes but little trouble among the saints.

In the 6,000,000 letters that reached the dead-letter office last year there was money amounting to $28,642 and checks and notes of the value of $1,471,871. All, or nearly all of this was the result of not addressing letters properly, or not stamping them.

In his communication this week Bro. F. W. Dove speaks of a hard-working minister, who has much ministerial work to do, and yet has not even a horse to ride to his many appointments. May the Good Lord put it into the hearts of some earnest ones to help this poor brother preach, and then share in his reward!

The mobbing of Christian missionaries in China may possibly lead to some serious difficulties between China and some of the leading powers. It is said that representatives of European Governments have already laid in claims for damages to the amount of nearly nine million dollars. The Chinese seem greatly enraged against the missionaries, and mobbing still continues.

The Baptists have had quite a revival in India. Recently two native preachers immersed 1,671 persons in three hours and five minutes. This is the shortest time for the immersion of so many known in history. At the same rate the twelve apostles could have baptized the 3,000, on the day of Pentecost, in less than one hour. Trine immersion would require more time, perhaps two hours to baptize the 3,000. Single immersion had not yet been introduced, and of course was not used on that occasion.

To the thief on the cross Jesus said:

"Verily I say unto thee, To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise."—Luke 23: 43.

One of our readers writes us that the verse should be punctuated thus:

"Verily I say unto thee to-day, Shalt thou be with me in paradise?"

. He would change the comma so as to make a question of the last clause of the verse, and thus make it appear that the thief did not go to Paradise. Well, we have our grave doubts about keeping the penitent thief out of Paradise with a comma. By the way, there is no comma in the original Greek, but the sense is the same as given in King James' translation. It will require more than the shifting of a comma to convince us that the thief did not go with Jesus to Paradise, that very day. That is the plain meaning of the language, without one particle of punctuation. By the term Paradise, the abode of the spirits is certainly meant.

The Chicago Evening Journal says: "The gigantic skeleton of a man, measuring eight feet six inches in height, was found near the Jordan river, just outside Salt Lake City, Utah, last week. The find was made by a workman who was digging an irrigating ditch. The skull was uncovered at a depth of eight feet from the surface of the ground, and the skeleton was standing bolt upright. The workman had to dig down nine feet in order to exhume it. The bones were much decayed and crumbled at the slightest touch. They were got together with great care, and the skeleton was found to measure eight feet six inches in height; the skull measured eleven inches in diameter, and the feet nineteen inches in length. The size of an ordinary head is seven and one-fourth inches in diameter. A copper chain, to which were attached three medallions covered with curious hieroglyphics, was around the neck of the skeleton, and near it were found a stone hammer, some pieces of pottery, an arrowhead and some copper medals. Archæologists believe that the original owner of the skeleton belonged to the race of mound-builders."

In some localities the Brethren have already commenced their series of meetings. It is good to commence gathering in the sheaves early. We hope to see a large ingathering of souls this season.

One year ago every leading newspaper in the land had something to say concerning Dr. Koch's theory for the cure of consumption, but it was finally regarded as a failure. Its reputation seems to be reviving, for it is reported that Dr. Thamm, of Düsseldorf, has been treating a large number of patients by the Koch system, and reports that he has cured forty per cent of the cases. Decidedly beneficial results were reached in a majority of other cases. If it shall turn out that consumption can be cured by this method only in the early stages, it will prove an inestimable boon, for the progress of the disease is so slow that ample time is afforded for treatment. Meanwhile other preparations are being discovered, and the right thing may be found at last.

THE LENGTH OF SERMONS.

We are requested to say how long a sermon should be. That is a hard question to answer. No one rule will fit every preacher. Now and then a man can preach a long sermon, and then at other times the same man would better cut his discourse short. Very much depends upon the man, the audience, the subject and the surroundings. A very able minister, with other things favorable, may preach an hour to good advantage, but the generality of ministers would better close at the end of forty minutes. Every minister should make it a rule to close when he is through with his subject, and he ought not to be too long about getting through. The object of preaching is to benefit the people and not the minister, hence the good of the congregation should always be kept in view. Some audiences require longer sermons than others. Occasionally there are subjects, as well as circumstances, that require discourses of more than ordinary length, but they are rare. The minister who can make his discourse interesting for forty minutes, will rarely lose anything by stopping then.

Our advice to all ministers, especially young ministers, is to make their discourses no longer than they can make them interesting. When they cease to be interesting, then stop, even if you have spoken only ten minutes. A man of good judgment, who will keep his eye on his congregation, can usually tell when the main part of the assembly ceases to be interested. As long as the people will listen to you, you may be doing some good, but do not run too great a risk. In ten minutes you may lose all the ground you had gained in the forty minutes' talk before.

Ministers often make serious mistakes by attempting to prolong the meeting after a discourse of sufficient length has been delivered. Scores of otherwise good meetings are marred in this manner. A minister who will promptly close the meeting as soon as the first minister is through with his forty minutes' discourse, will hardly be censured for it.

One hour, or one hour and ten minutes, from the time services are opened until they are closed, will be found quite agreeable. The ministers who do not exceed this time, will not be very far out of the way. This we say after years of experience and much careful observation. Let every minister remember that he is working for the Lord, and that it is his duty to work in a manner that will accomplish the most good. J. H. M.

EDITORIAL WANDERINGS.

Number Three.

Our last letter was closed before we reached Southampton, England. At ten o'clock on Saturday night, Aug. 8, we caught sight of the lights on the Scilly Island off the coast of Great Britain, and we knew that land was not far away. The night was dark, and the clouds covered the sky. The wind had abated, and the evening was not unpleasant. Wife and I stood together on deck and watched the flashing gleams from the light-house on the shore. To us it was a most welcome sight, for we knew that our sea voyage would soon be over, and that we should again set our feet upon the solid earth. As we watched the lights, we thought of the beautiful song, "Let the Lower Lights be Burning," and we sung as much of it as we could remember. There are some hymns that we never forget. Years ago, we sang together, as we climbed Mount Zion, in Jerusalem, "We're marching upward to Zion" and it still lingers in the memory. And now to the many other beautiful songs of Zion that we shall not soon forget, are added, "Nearer, my God, to Thee," and the one first referred to.

On Sunday morning, Aug. 9, the sun broke through the dense clouds and we had the first sunshine for six days. It was a gladsome morning. Land was in full sight, and we felt to thank God for his goodness to us. At nine A. M., we stop and take on board the trusty pilot, who is to steer the ship clear of the rocky reefs that lie hidden just beneath the surface of the water at the Needles, the entrance to the English Channel. We have alternate clouds and sunshine during the forenoon, as we coast along the shores of England. The fields of grain, white for the harvest, the green meadows coming down to the very verge of the sea, and the village and farm houses, half hidden by the foliage of beautiful forest trees, make a beautiful picture that might well baffle the skill of the best artist to transfer to canvas.

At 1 P. M., we cast anchor off Southampton. A large steamer came alongside our ship, took off the mail, and about forty passengers who are to go direct to London. We watched them disembark and then we were driven below by a heavy rain. The fog came down and shut off all sight of land. We catch a glimpse of Dover and Calais, and we see no more of either France or England. Monday forenoon we enter the Weser, and at 5: 30 P. M., cast anchor at Bremerhaven. We had been on board the ship ten days and six hours, and were glad to leave her, and tread upon something firm and stable again. In the harbor we saw the good ship Werra upon which we crossed and recrossed the ocean in 1883–84. An hour is spent in passing through the custom-house. Gentlemanly officials these Germans are. We opened our trunks and satchels, and without even turning anything out, they put the official stamp upon them, showing that we carried nothing contraband. We then took the train for Bremen in a pouring rain and reached that city at 8 P. M. We were met at the depot by Bro. Plate's sister, and were made welcome to Germany.

THE ALLER.

While on board the "Aller," we formed the acquaintance of Captain Christoffers, the first officer of the ship. He is one among the most careful and experienced navigators on the high sea. He is constantly on the alert, and appreciates fully the responsibility of his position. He is a well-formed, fine-looking man, of about forty-five years and the lines in his bronzed face denote executive ability and strength of character. He is a typical sailor, but has all the culture of a gentleman. He very kindly sent an officer with us, who took us into the lower depths of the vessel and who gave us some information concerning the "Aller," which may not be uninteresting to our readers.

The "Aller" is 490 feet long, 48 feet wide and measures about 40 feet from the keel to the upper deck. She is registered to carry 4,964 tons of freight, and 1,000 passengers,—150 first cabin, 96 second, and the rest steerage. The Old Sandstone at Mt. Morris, is 120 feet long, 42 feet wide, and 40 feet high, to the eaves of the roof. The Aller is more than four times as long, and in the center, considerably wider. By crowding her carrying capacity to its utmost, the inhabitants of Mt. Morris (1,200) might all be carried across the sea at one trip, and thus our town might become a counterpart of Goldsmith's "Deserted Village." These facts will give some idea of the great size of the "Aller."

IN THE DEPTHS OF THE SHIP.

After obtaining the above figures and going through the steerage apartments, and taking a look at the ice-house in which is placed twelve tons of ice for each trip, and the cold storage where all perishable food is kept, we go to the center of the ship where the great triple engines are stationed. These register 8,000 horse power. Going down narrow, steep, iron stairways, amidst a great confusion of machinery, we stand, at length on the bottom of the vessel. We were never so strongly impressed with the meaning of the word power as applied to machinery as when we stand looking at the ponderous engines, every stroke of which represents a power equal to that of eight thousand horses. We crept through a narrow gallery, with the machinery in motion all around us, to where the great shaft running from the center to the stern of the ship, and to which the propeller is attached, is rotating with great rapidity, and with the regularity of clock work. The shaft is nearly two feet in diameter, and is made of the best steel. It is a difficult matter to manufacture a steel shaft of such great dimensions without a flaw, and the greatest skill is required to produce the best results in shaft casting. We notice that all the bearings of the shaft, and of the heavy machinery in addition to being well oiled have a constant stream of cold water pouring upon them. This serves to keep the machinery from heating. A number of assistant engineers are constantly looking at the machinery, all parts of which undergo frequent and careful inspection.

From the engine room we enter the boiler rooms where thirty-six fierce fires render the air stifling hot, and it seems almost unendurable, but by standing by the great ventilating pipe we are enabled to examine the place. Six immense double end boilers made of one and one-eighth inch steel, each with a capacity of nearly 2,000 horse power, and heated by thirty-six furnaces, supply the motive power to the engines. Here are men black and grimy, shoveling coal into the furnaces. One hundred and sixty tons are used each day when the vessel is under full steam. A full supply of coal for a voyage is taken on board at New York, and this, with a surplus of 300 tons in case of necessity, makes the total coal supply for a passage across the Atlantic, nearly two thousand tons, enough to supply an ordinary-sized village with fuel for one entire year. A look into the partly empty coal-room gave us a very good idea of the great width and depth of the ship. A coal bin for two thousand tons,—just think of it! Allowing twenty tons to a car load it would take four trains of twenty-five cars each to move the coal supply of the "Aller" for one trip.

Coming up from the depths of the ship we were glad to breathe the fresh, pure sea air again. But we were impressed with the thought that in the very heart of the ship was hidden away from the eyes of the casual observer a force great enough to encompass the almost immediate destruction of the vessel. The explosion of a boiler in mid-ocean would result in a lost ship, and no one would be left to tell the story. The thought is not a pleasant one, and we will not pursue it further, but it is certainly one of the weak points in naval architecture.

The state rooms and second class cabins of the "Aller" are fitted up in the best possible manner. The comfort and convenience of the passengers are provided for, and in this respect nothing more could be desired The large dining halls are elegantly furnished, and the tables are served equal to the best first-class hotels. If the Lloyd Company could furnish the passengers with appetites equal to the bill of fare, they would be compelled to construct many new vessels to carry passengers, but seasickness will come, and then the best of food is not relished.

The German Lloyd Company has gained an excellent reputation, for the safety and reliability of their steamers. Their entire fleet consists of 136 vessels, and they sail to all parts of the world. The Company insures its own vessels and a considerable portion of the goods shipped by their steamers, and they are thus financially interested in the safety of their ships, as any loss would come out of their own pockets, instead of being paid by a foreign insurance company.

The officers of the Company are selected with great care, for upon their trustworthiness and ability as navigators depends the safety of the ship and her passengers. The following rule is in force: "Only such men can obtain an appointment as Captains who during many years' service as officers on the steamers of the Company have proved that they have the full qualifications for that responsible position. Before the officers enter the service of the Company as fourth officers, they have almost all acquired their captain's commission and in part even had the command of a sailing vessel as captains. During the advancement to the rank of the first officer, those of the officers who do not prove capable, are discharged, and once dismissed, on account of incapacity or breach of duty, have no prospect of re-installment."

At this writing we are stopping with our brother, Elder John Olsson, of Wanneberga, Wimslöf, Sweden. We have held a number of meetings already at Copenhagen, Denmark, at Limhamn, and this place in Sweden. We found it a little difficult at first to speak to the people through an interpreter, but we are getting along fairly well, and in the meantime are learning something of the language. Bro. Hope preaches and interprets for us in Denmark, while Bro. Olsson speaks for us in Sweden. In our next letter we shall have something more to say about our meetings, and the churches in Denmark and Sweden.

We continue our journey northward, distributing tracts and speaking to the people as opportunity offers. Bro. Hope will remain for some time at Trondhjem while we continue our journey to Hammerfest. We are all enjoying excellent health, and the Lord abundantly blesses us.

THE "HOLY COAT."

WEEK before last we stated that the so-called "Holy Coat" was to be placed on exhibition in Germany. One would hardly think that an intelligent and educated people could be induced to spend money and months of time to follow up such superstitious notions, but it seems that there are those who verily do believe that the coat now on exhibition is the seamless coat worn by the Savior, for which the soldiers cast lots and is in possession of the Cathedral of Treves, and at irregular intervals it is exhibited to the faithful, who make pilgrimages from all parts of the world. Within a few weeks large numbers have sailed from New York to behold the precious relic. It does not diminish their faith that the history of the "Holy Coat" cannot be traced back within three centuries of the time of the Savior, nor that several other "Holy Coats" are in existence, for which similar claims are made. Indeed, one other, of Argenteuil in France, claims to have an unbroken history since it was purchased of the soldiers who drew the prize immediately after the crucifixion. The history of the coat is written by St. Gregory, of Tours, who states that it was taken to Galatia, where it was preserved in a wooden box. During the Persian war, in 590, the coat was removed for safety to Jaffa, and four years later to Jerusalem. After being transferred back to Persia, the relic found its way to Constantinople, whence the Empress Irene sent it as a gift to Charlemagne, who presented it to his daughter, Theodrada, Abbess of Argenteuil, A. D. 800. Besides these two famous coats, there are others, all claimed to be the veritable coat worn by the Savior immediately before being crucified. The best known of these are the Holy Robe of Moscow, that of Rome, and those deposited at St. Roch, Maggiore, and Venice. Of course all are vouched for by the priestly custodians as the identical garment of Calvary.

A textile manufacturer who was summoned to examine the garment says, that when the wrappers were removed the vesture was found to be in such a tattered condition that it could not be placed on exhibition. Bishop Korum, he adds, then consulted some experts, and finally the Coat was given to an aged and experienced nun, who gummed the fragments of the garment together, as the material was too much worn to stand the strain of needle and thread.

The Holy Coat is now partially overlaid with layers of materials with which it has been wrapped up, and these wrappers having become decayed cannot be separated from the coat.

Dr. Bock, of Aix-La-Chappelle, declares that he has examined the reverse side of the holy coat, and that he found it was mounted on byssus silk, which was used in the first century, which was never manufactured after the sixth century, and which was almost extremely costly. Catholic circles consider this to be proof that the Holy Coat is a genuine garment worn by Jesus Christ.

The coat was probably made about the third century, and has no value whatever save that it is a relic of that period, yet a hundred thousand dollars or more may be spent to see it, some people being foolish enough to imagine that it possesses supernatural healing or cleansing power. If they were as zealous about the Written Word they might be benefitted, but superstition tends to degrade on every hand.

A RELIGIOUS VICE.

MODERN church fairs and semi-religious gambling, and lottery entertainments are perhaps the darkest blots upon the churches of modern times. The Dark Ages obscured the Christian light, and rendered it possible for designing men to sell indulgences under the excuse of raising money to carry on the Lord's work. For a little money they sold the right to commit a great crime, and thus placed a premium upon vice. The tendency was to corrupt the people, from the king on his throne to the beggar in the street.

Modern church entertainments are having a similar tendency. We denounce lotteries, in the world, on every hand, and yet there are churches all over this civilized land, that will encourage their members in setting up lotteries in their houses of worship just for the purpose of raising money to pay their preachers. Out in the world such things are considered all wrong, but in the church they are all right. What better is this than the selling of indulgences! Young people, in the sacred enclosure, learn to spend their money at a game of chance, and then go out into the world and practice in a secular way, what they have learned under the guise of religion. The tendency is a lamentable one, for which churches must be held responsible. The New York Independent, — one of the most scholarly religious journals in the world,—thus speaks of the special committee of the United Original Secession Church in England, respecting the late gambling charges against the Prince of Wales:

"In a calm, dignified way it surveys the situation, indulges in no attacks upon individuals, though it expresses deep regret that the Prince of Wales and his associates should have been so deeply involved. It shows how the vice has permeated every grade of society, not even excepting the church, with its fairs, etc., until it is spoken of as the 'national vice;' and vividly portrays the evils resulting. It then lifts the whole discussion into the highest possible plane, by its claim that 'the wanton creation of an element of chance in any game or other transaction is morally wrong, and when this is done—whether on the stock exchange, on the turf, or in the church bazaar,—in order to take advantage of it for the purpose of enriching one's self at the expense of others,—the offense is greatly increased.'

"It looks upon it, first, as a profanation of the sacred ordinance of the lot, an unintentional appeal to God, since there is no such thing as chance, and thus a direct contravention of the first and second tables of the law; then, as having its roots in covetousness and selfishness, and these contrary to the whole spirit of the Gospel. Then, with a brief statement of the views of prominent men of all ages —Chrysostom, Cyprian, Charles Kingsley, John Ruskin—it closes with an earnest appeal to the pulpit and the press to be outspoken in their condemnation of betting and gambling; to the church to clear itself of all stain from complicity with the evil; to parents, by example and precept to save their children; and to the State to enact laws for those who are not amenable to influence or good motives. We wish that every Christian man and woman in the land could hear the appeal. The evil is only less serious here than in England and it seems as if it were constantly on the increase. It will need the united effort of all to prevent its becoming a universal disease."

Gleanings.

OUR brother, David Brower, stopped with us again on his return from the East and preached five soul-reviving sermons at the church east of South English; also one sermon in the Christian church in town. On Sunday he gave a short address to the children at our Sunday-school, which was very impressive. Bro. David is willing to do all the good he can, and "work till Jesus comes." Although there were no immediate additions, we hope that the good seed sown will be gathered not many days hence.

Aug. 29 was our harvest or thanksgiving meeting, which was well attended. The good Lord has sent us refreshing showers, and life-giving sunshine, and abundance has crowned the labors of the husbandman, but how slow we are to realize his goodness and use all for the Master's use! "O! that men would praise the Lord for his goodness!"

We are glad to note the interest and zeal that is manifested in missionary work throughout the Brotherhood. We humbly pray that there will be a general awakening to a sense of our duty, so that many may forsake the error of their way, and obtain a home with the redeemed.

Youth and old age are two very important periods of life. We have both among our membership here. How the angels rejoice when the youths, who are preparing for the stern realities of life, give their hearts to God, so that they may take the place of those who are taken away by the hand of death,—ripe in years and experience.

PETER BROWER.

From the Sugar Creek Church, Ill.

ON Saturday, Aug. 22, in company with Bro. B. F. Masterson, wife, daughter Maggie, and sister Lizzie Beckner, we started to Cass County, where our isolated members live. We had a very pleasant drive, a distance of about forty miles. We reached our destination in time for the council-meeting, held at the house of sister Nancy Masters. Arrangements had been previously made by our elder, and other brethren, for said meeting. The business was disposed of in a Christian-like manner. In the evening, at the same house, we surrounded the Lord's table, to observe the ordinances of God's house.

It seemed a little odd to me to see so small a number of communicants on a love-feast occasion, it being my first time to commune in a private house. Only four brethren and eleven sisters composed the number present. It is a comforting thought, however, to know that Christ has promised where two or three are gathered together in his name there will he be in the midst of them. Those who communed for the first time, expressed themselves as being much built up in the cause of the Blessed Master. The next day, Sunday, two meetings were held in the Circleville schoolhouse, with good attendance and interest. Bro. I. M. Gibble preached in the forenoon. In the afternoon Bro. B. F. Masterson preached his farewell sermon, as he expects to move west soon, with his family. All seemed sad to give the parting hand. The Mission Board will furnish them preaching, as heretofore, once a month. During the eighteen months, in which the brethren have been preaching for them, six sisters have been baptized, and if you wish to know how zealous in the cause and how anxious they are for spiritual food, just go and pay them a visit. I am convinced from past experience it does any one good to get away from home sometimes.

MARY FLORA.

Echoes from the Highway.

OUR regular, quarterly council took place Aug. 16, at Tropico, at which time and place a new congregation was organized, taking in the territory in Los Angeles County, lying mostly west of the San Gabriel River, embracing Los Angeles City, Pasadena, Tropico Glendale, Burbank and the Tuhunga neighborhood. Over sixty members are living within the new organization, including four ministers and three deacons. One elder is now a resident in the territory, and there are prospects of another,—Eld. P. S. Myers,—who will move here in the near future. Eld. J. W. Metzger and Eld. Peter Overholser were present and assisted in the organization. There are now four organized congregations in Southern California, and we trust prosperity in numbers and in spiritual growth will be the lot of all. Bro. Metzger, on Sunday after the council, preached a very satisfactory sermon in the Brethren's church-house at Tropico. The writer took the train early on Sunday morning for Covina, to fill the appointment at said place. From there he went to Lordsburg, where he found the members seemingly alive in the work of the Master. All about the College grounds there seems to be bustle and activity, in getting things in shape for the opening of the school:

Aug. 28 the funeral services of sister Myers, companion of Bro. Frank Myers, formerly of St. Louis, took place at Glendora, Eld. J. W. Metzger officiating, assisted by the brethren. She now lies at rest in the Oak Grove cemetery. One by one the reaper "Death" cuts down our friends, but it is the blessed Lord that gathers into his garner his own dear children. J. S. FLORY.

On the Way.

AUG. 30 I met with the Brethren of Berrien, Mich., at their regular appointments. I was well pleased with the work of the church. About four years ago the Berrien church met with some difficulty. A committee was sent there from Annual Meeting, but about one-half rejected the committee's report. Among that number were the trustees, secretary and sexton, so our people did not have the use of the house for four years. Of late the Progressive Brethren proposed to either buy, sell, or use the house jointly. They, however, preferred to sell, whereupon our people bought their interest in the house, and now we can have services there. I am well pleased with the spirit that the people concerned in this matter, manifested. May God ever help us to work with a spirit of peace. Such work has a salutary effect upon a community.

Berrien and Cass Counties, Mich., have been annexed to the Northern Indiana State District. Those two Counties have only two congregations, and only three ministers. Berrien County has only one minister. A large field is open here for missionary work. Already one point is being filled by the Home Mission Board, and about three or four more are opening up for active work.

I feel happy that our ministerial meeting is so near at hand. One of the topics for the occasion is: "How can we, as ministers, more fully carry out the missionary work in the Northern District of Indiana, considering that our local churches know of many places where the Gospel has not been preached." Some of the local churches have from two to six active ministers living in them, and often only one appointment every two weeks. Why not have from two to four appointments at the same hour, when there are so many who would gladly hear the Gospel preached?

Good News from the Sunny South.

AUG. 14, Bro. A. J. Vines and I left our home to do some church and mission work in North Carolina. We boarded the train at Jonesborough, Tenn., to Morristown on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia R. R. There I changed cars, taking the Richmond and Danville R. R., by way of Warm Springs, up the French Broad River to Alexander. Here we stopped off and went out into the country about five miles to Bro. A. N. Rogers'. His wife and daughter are also members. We had six meetings at Slate school-house.

From here we went, by way of Ashville, N. C., to Hendersonville, on the top of the Blue Ridge. Here we stopped off, and went five miles out to Cross Roads, Henderson Co., N. C., where there is a small church of the Brethren, that was organized about ten years ago, and is now under the care of Eld. George A. Branscom, who lives at a distance of thirty miles. There are two ministers in the second degree, brethren Eli Bradley and Samuel Jones, who reside near this place, and assist him in the ministry. They also have four deacons. This little church has had dark clouds over it for several years. A committee had to be called from District Meeting, to look into their trouble. We, as the committee, called the church together, heard their grievances, and settled the trouble to the satisfaction of all. We hope that the sunshine of peace may crown all their efforts in the future. We had twelve meetings with this little band of brethren. Three members were restored, and one received by letter.

From this place we continued our journey eastward, crossing the Blue Ridge on the Spartanburgh and Ashville R. R. Down the mountain we went, wending our way like some huge serpent over hill and dale. Onward we went, at a slow rate, till we got off the mountain. This is a very steep grade, so much so that it takes two large engines to pull the train up the mountain.

These mountains are a great place as summer resorts and for pleasure seekers. The lowlanders from South Carolina and Florida come here in summer.

Continuing our journey, we finally arrived at Landram's Station in South Carolina, where we were met by Bro. Caga Horn, who is a deacon in the Mill Creek church. He conveyed us to his home, a distance of ten miles. We commenced meetings the same evening at their new meeting-house and continued for six days. We had twelve meetings and a love-feast. During that time, fifteen precious souls came out on the Lord's side. Two brethren were restored to fellowship who were once disowned. Bro. George A. Branscom is the elder of this church. He has the oversight of three churches in this part of the South. They have something like ninety- five members in this congregation, a commodious house; also a Sunday-school. We left those brethren and sisters during the latter part of August.

Much preaching is needed here in the South, and much good could be accomplished if there were more help. Bro. Branscom has a hard time of it. He is in limited circumstances, has no horse to ride, though he has calls as far as thirty miles away. He spends much of his time in preaching, is a good speaker, a model Christian, and needs help. I do hope that the dear brethren and sisters that see this will pity him enough to buy him a horse and saddle. Cast your bread upon the waters and it will be gathered after many days.

F. W. DOVE.

A Word of Caution.

SINCE our last Annual Meeting, there seems to be a disposition on the part of some to regard that the fitness of divorced persons for membership, for whatever cause, is left with the local churches to determine. This impression is erroneous from the ground up. Persons living in adultery cannot be held as members, nor received as members into the church. This is a standing decision of the church since 1862, as it was before. The only matter touching the question submitted to the churches was where persons were divorced for the cause of fornication, and even then the churches were advised "to proceed cautiously when they have cases of this character to act upon." (A. M. 1880; Art. 2.)

It is only these exceptional cases of fornication that become a matter for consideration and cautious decision by the local churches. These cases, when properly considered, will be found to be comparatively of rare occurrence. For many years Annual Meeting has labored to guard the Brotherhood from moral corruption and the great sins that invade the purity of the married relation; and any course pursued by the local churches, not in harmony with this, would result disastrously to the high moral charcter and purity of the church.

DANIEL HAYS.

Notes by the Way.

THE work in the Smith Fork church, Clinton Co., Mo., closed Aug. 28. The attendance was not very large, but those in attendance seemed to enjoy the meetings, and not a few expressed their conviction that these things (the commandments and ordinances) are so, and all to be found in the Book.

The question naturally arises,—if it be true as they admit, that these things are all there,—what will be the condition of those persons, if they do not accept them? "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations." Matt. 24: 14. Then the witness will testify against all such as hear it and refuse to obey it. If the words that come from heaven condemn, it will be a dark period for all against whom they may testify. The judgment of every one says, it is good to obey the Lord, and if the judgment indicates that it is safe to obey, and dangerous to neglect it,—why not obey, and be safe?

Perhaps some say, "Well, if we were to obey the Gospel, people would laugh at us." And what of it, if they should laugh? Would you not better have the world laugh at you, than to have God laugh at you? When the people of this world laugh at you, then you can do as Jesus says,—[illegible] may "rejoice in that day, and leap for joy: for, behold, your reward is great in heaven: for in the like manner did their fathers unto the prophets." Luke 6: 23. Jesus well knew that the people who were proud would not accept his words, and he also so knew that they would laugh at all such as would accept his humble ways. Hence we see that he says, "Woe unto you that laugh now! for ye shall mourn and weep." Luke 6: 25.

Now we can easily determine why people laugh at the followers of Jesus,—simply because such scoffers are under the control of the carnal mind, which is enmity against God. Let us take a view of the other side of the picture, and see what is to befall those who laugh now. "But ye have set at naught all my counsel, and would none of my reproof: I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh." Prov. 1: 25, 26. The twenty-eighth verse says, "Then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me."

It is claimed that a Being who is infinite in mercy can not treat a poor suppliant in that manner, but we must not lose sight of the fact that God is just, as well as merciful, and the case we have under consideration, is a person who has been called upon by the Lord, and refused. He says, "I have called, and ye have refused; I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded." To-day there are thousands of persons who are standing precisely in that condition. They are putting off the Lord, and saying, "Wait till we have a convenient season." To all such we would say, "You will never find a convenient season." The enemy will always make you a great deal of trouble, before he will give you up. After all, are you not keeping yourselves out of the service of the Lord, just because you are wedded to some trifling something, which only gives pleasure to your lower nature? You might just as well think of flying to heaven now, as to think that you can serve sin all your life here and then go to rest in the next world. The judgments of God must fall upon his enemies.

But perhaps you are ready to say that you are not the enemy of God. Let us see what the apostle has to say about this matter. "Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." James 4: 4. When we fall in line with any enterprise, it is to be understood that we are its friends, and especially so, if we give it our voluntary support. If you are not a friend of this world, I would advise you to take down the sign. The most difficult task that a minister has to perform, is to prevail upon people to do what they know to be not only their duty, but their present and their eternal interest to do. The more determined you are, to do your whole duty when you do begin the work, the more the enemy will resist you in your efforts. If you only mean to make a profession of Christ, and allow the enemy to control your life, then he (the evil one) is satisfied. Why not say to him, "Get behind me, Satan"?

This communication leaves the writer at work in the Falls City church, Richardson Co., Neb. The next place will be Sabetha, Kans.

Western Sufferers' Fund.

AT the last meeting of the Committee, in charge of the above fund, several urgent requests were considered, insisting on the publication of a full report of all the money, as distributed among the various recipients.

Upon considering the matter, the Committee determined to publish, in pamphlet form, the names and addresses of all recipients, together with the amount that each one received.

In order to know how many copies to print, we hereby notify the elders of all congregations, where donations were made, to ascertain at once how many copies will be needed in their respective localities. We must know this on or before Oct. 25, at which time we expect to go to press. Orders received after that date cannot be filled, as no more copies will be printed than are called for by the orders, previous to the above date. For each pamphlet ordered, enclose a two-cent stamp for postage. Address all communications and orders to the Secretary. L. A. PLATE.

Our Visit to Camden County, Mo.

IN company with Eld. Baer, Bro. Rust, Bro. Campbell and wife, Bro. Gadbury, husband and I started to Camden County, Aug. 14, a distance of twenty-five miles. The next day we met with the dear brethren and sisters in a council-meeting at the school-house. All the business before the meeting passed off in Christian-like spirit. Bro. Rust preached that night to a fair congregation. Next morning we met at the school-house again for Sunday-school. We had an interesting session and rejoiced to be with them. Bro. Rust gave an address to the school. Eld. Baer then preached to a crowded house. After preaching we started for home, where we arrived the next day, and found all well, for which we thank God.

CHARLOTTE MASTERS.

Mount View, Mo.

From the Bush Creek Congregation, Md.

BRO. GEORGE GIDDEONS, one of our deacon brethren, accompanied me on a missionary tour to a new point in Montgomery County, Md., where the Brethren never had preached before,—about ten miles from the Capital of the United States. We had meetings at this place at 10 A. M. and 3 P. M. on Sunday. After the first meeting, many gave us a hearty greeting, and one soul expressed himself as being willing to obey the savior in baptism. Next morning, Aug 31, we went to the north-west stream for baptism, where I baptized the applicant in the presence of many witnesses. We then bade farewell to each other, and started for our homes, rejoicing on our way. I believe that there are several more for the kingdom.

On the same day Bro. A. H. Reinhart and I had two appointments in our territory, and we filled them all the same day. I was made to think how much good could be done if we had more force and zeal in the church. May God bless our laborers and keep Bro. Kemp faithful to the end, is my prayer! S. H. UTZ.

New Market, Md., Aug. 31.

From Wallace, Nebr.

BRO. SHOEMAKER, daughter Mary and I started to Sunshine Precinct, a distance of nearly twenty-five miles, on Saturday morning. We arrived at Bro. C. H. Johnson's in the afternoon. In the evening we had a meeting at the Excelsior school-house, where quite a congregation had assembled. On Sunday morning, at eleven A. M., I preached the funeral of the little daughter of friend Wm. and Lilly Ervin. In the afternoon, at three P. M., we were called upon to conduct the funeral of the little daughter and only child of friend F. and Ivy Bobbits. Thus the little ones are called home one by one, and this should be a warning to all to be ready to obey the solemn call.

At 7:30 P. M. we again preached at the Muer school-house to a crowded house. Here we had the best of order. We believe, that if our appointments were not so far apart, much good might be accomplished. Six or eight weeks from one appointment to the next, is scattering our work too much to insure the best of success. The M. E. minister has failed to go to that neighborhood all winter and all summer, because no one had anything to pay him for his preaching. We tell them we do not preach for their money, while others do seem to be working for the fleece, and not for the flock. We returned home at noon and found all reasonably well, for which we feel to thank the Lord. J. K. SHIVELY.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

Three Baptized.—We had our love-feast Aug. 29 and 30. It was truly a feast of love. We rejoiced to see three dear ones unite with us by baptism. One, who had wandered away, came back to the fold of Christ. May they hold out faithful until the end! Bro. John Shank has been elected to the ministry. May the Lord help him to labor in the cause!—Clara J. Eikenberry, Greene, Iowa.

A Trip to Indian Territory.—Last Saturday I went twelve miles south of Ft. Smith to Genson Station. Thence I went four miles west into the Territory where there are ten or twelve members living, to hold a few meetings for them. I found them still strong in the faith, though it had been a year since I was there, and since then they have had no meeting. I held three meetings for them with very good interest and good attendance. I think that good could be done there if they could have meetings more frequently. Those members belong to the District of Texas, but they would like to be attached to the Southern District of Missouri for convenience, as ministerial help from that point is closer. — Samuel Weimer, Wyman, Ark., Sept. 3.

District Meeting of Northern Indiana.—The Meeting will be held with the brethren and sisters of the Walnut church, Marshall Co., Ind., Oct. 1. The ministerial meeting will be held at the same place the day previous, Sept. 30. Those coming from the North and West should stop at Argos. Trains on the L. E. & Western R. R. arrive at 10:06 A. M. and 7 P. M.; on the Nickel Plate R. R. at 11:20 A. M. Those coming from the East over the Nickel Plate R. R., should stop at Ilion; the train arrives there at 4:03 P. M. Changes are to be made from the C. W. & M. R. R. to the Nickel Plate at Claypool. Conveyances will be at the trains noted above on Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 29 and 30. It is hoped there will be a full attendance through the entire Meeting.—A. H. Puterbaugh.

On the Pacific Slope. — In company with sister Nannie Markey, her son and daughter, I left our home in Missouri Aug. 28, for Lordsburg, Cal. We landed at Glendora at 2 P. M., Aug. 31, and were met by Bro. D. Houser, who took us to his place near Covina. We had quite a pleasant journey all the way through. The Protecting Hand of God has safely watched over us and guarded us through our journey, for which we praise his holy name. We see his power and glory in many things. The hills, valleys, deserts, and the high and lofty mountains, high up, one above the other, show unto us the grandeur and beauty of all that the Great Architect is able to construct. As we passed along and saw one mountain after another, we were made to exclaim, "How wonderful are thy works, oh, Lord."—Amanda Wilmore, Covina, Cal., Sept. 1.

Rejoice With Us.—Aug. 16 Bro. George Shamberger preached his farewell discourse to a large and attentive audience, after which, on the same night, we repaired to the water, where three precious souls were buried with Christ in baptism. We trust they have risen to walk in newness of life.—M. M. Ennis, Marlow, Ind. Ter.

Correction.—I see a notice in the MESSENGER of Sept. 1, 1891, announcing a love-feast for Sept. 19, 1891, in the Russel church, one and one-half miles south-east of Walker. That is a mistake. The love-feast is at Bro. G. W. Crissman's, one and one-half miles south-east of Walker. Trains stop here from the east at 7:20 A. M., from the west at 9:29 P. M.—E. W. Blauch, Walker, Kans.

Three Applicants for Baptism.—The Mountville congregation, Pa., at its late council restored to membership Bro. Henry Kurtz, of Mt. Joy, who had left the fold about thirty years ago. It caused all to rejoice. May he be faithful to the end, is our prayer. We also received by baptism two (a husband and wife) last Sunday. One old mother came since and made application for baptism. She will be baptized at their next meeting.—H. S. Light.

Quarterly Council.—The members of the Sugar Creek church held their quarterly council on Saturday, Aug. 29. Considerable business came before the meeting, but all seemed to pass off pleasantly. One sister, living in Cass County was expelled and letters were granted to four members who intend to make California their future home. Bro. I. M. Gibbel resigned his office as elder here, and Bro. M. J. McClure was elected in his place. Bro. Gibbel contemplates moving to California in the near future.—Martha R. Harnly, Chatham, Ill., Sept. 2.

Change of Post-office.—The special object of these lines is, to say that my post-office address is changed from Cornelia to Warrensburgh, Mo., having moved to this place in July. My health is feeble but of late I am improving, though but very slowly, so that, by the tender mercies of our Heavenly Father, I, at times, have hopes of recovery, and by his healing blessings I may yet "praise him for the health of my countenance." Ps. 43: 5. I desire the prayers of the brethren and sisters for entire submission to the Lord's will, to live or die as seemeth good in his sight.—S. S. Mohler.

What to Do With Old "Messengers." — After the MESSENGER is read by the subscriber, it should be handed to others to read. You may do this by handing the paper to the ministers who hold meetings in isolated places, to distribute among the congregation after service. Another way is to put up a paper rack in the railroad depot waiting room (by consent of the railroad agent) with this motto underneath: "Take One." Then, after you have read your paper, always put it in this rack. In this way we may distribute a good many papers and tracts. We have tried it and know whereof we speak. Perhaps the paper will fall into the hands of some who have never heard of the Brethren before, and this may lead to further inquiry as to our faith and practice. We have learned by experience that it is quite an advantage, in holding meetings in isolated places, to have a lot of the Brethren's Missionary Hymn Books to distribute among the congregation during the services. Then sing without lining. We recommend that the deacons of each church, or some member, interested in the missionary cause, see that their ministers, who need these books, are supplied with them. This is one way to encourage missionary work.—D. M. Mohler, Warrensburgh, Mo.

Dedication.—The Brethren of the Lost Creek church, Juniata Co., Pa., will dedicate their church at Goodville, the Lord willing, Oct. 10, and continue the meetings until Oct. 12, when they will have their love-feast. The usual invitation is extended, especially to ministering brethren.—John Hart, Swales, Pa., Aug. 31.

Notice.— Those coming to the La Porte love-feast from the East over the Lake Shore R. R., must come on accommodation train, due at La Porte at 8:50 A. M. From the South over the Lake Erie R. R., they should come on the train, due here at 1: 23 P. M., in order to have conveyance to place of meeting. Come the same day of feast. —Thurston Miller, La Porte, Ind., Aug. 31.

One Soul for the Lord. — The Allegheny congregation is moving onward harmoniously. Recently an old man, in his seventies, asked for admission and was received into the fold, to the joy of all present. When offered conveyance to the water, he said, "The Lord will take me there and back." Oh, for more Abrahamic faith! At our last regular meeting, one who had left us, returned. May we all live that our light may draw many more into the fold!—Raphael Baker, Mount Storm, Md., Aug. 31.

Special Notice.—We wish to inform the scattered members of Southwestern Kansas and South-eastern Colorado that the Missionary Committee of South-western Kansas has agreed to send Eld. Enoch Eby to Progress, Baca Co., Colo., Sept. 14, 1891, to hold some meetings and, perhaps, a Communion meeting, with the little band of members at that place. We hereby invite all members interested to attend said meetings. The writer is now on his way to Progress, Colo, and expects to remain there until after Bro. Eby's visit.—D. M. Mohler, Hutchinson, Kans., Aug. 31.

Confess Christ.—When Christ said, "But whom say ye that I am?" Luke 9: 20, his disciples answered according to the various reports that had gone out. Peter could not withhold the convictions of his heart, and he answered, "The Christ of God." This name, applied to the Son of God, indicates his being anointed as Savior and Mediator between God and men. We should also confess the Son of God, as did Peter, by word of mouth. "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Rom. 10: 10. We can confess the name of Jesus by faith, repentance, baptism, prayer, the salutation of the kiss, and all that is enjoined upon the believers in Christ. We can also confess Christ by submitting to the will of the Lord, in love, in chastity, purity of conduct, and a chaste conversation. "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."—M. Myers, Creston, Iowa.

Council-Meeting.—The Brethren of the Peabody church, Kans., met in quarterly council, Aug. 29 The business of the meeting passed off pleasantly. One young sister was added to the fold by baptism, which made us feel to rejoice. Our prayer is that she may prove faithful to her calling, and that many more may soon follow her example. We appointed our love-feast for Oct. 17, commencing at 2 P. M., at which time all are invited to be with us. —Katie Yost, Peabody, Kans., Aug. 29.

Enjoyable Love-feast.— We had a very enjoyable love-feast in the northern part of our congregation, Aug. 22. The meeting was held in a grove, one mile south of Cedar Lake, Stark Co., Ind. Brethren Abram Rinehart, Joseph Shepler, Wm. Toney, and others labored acceptably, after which we went to the lake and baptized one brother in its quiet waters. We have added five members to our number since Oct. 18, 1890,—four by baptism and one reclaimed. The prospects for doing good here, are encouraging. Our love-feast, in the South-western part of Pulaski County on Beaver Creek will occur in the Winamac church, Pulaski Co., Nov. 7, commencing at four P. M. Those coming by rail will stop at Winamac the day before, at which place they will be cared for by the writer.—Oliver Capron.

Harvest Meeting.—The members of the Tippecanoe church, Kosciusko Co., Ind., held their harvest-meeting Aug. 2. It was a good meeting, well attended and much enjoyed by all. The missionary cause was remembered, and a liberal donation received for that purpose. We have had a bountiful harvest. Our health is good, and we have many things to be thankful for. July 19 one was received by letter and Aug. 16, one was received by confession and baptism. Aug. 30 one more was received by baptism,—an invalid sister, who is well advanced in years. For years she felt this her duty but, like many others, she put off the all-important work until a late hour. Some thought she was too weak to stand it, but after she returned home she expressed herself as feeling strong, and well able to go to work. Our love-feast will occur Sept. 18.—Daniel Rothenberger, North Webster Ind., Aug. 31.

Three Baptized. — The members of the George's Creek church, Fayette County, Pa., were made to rejoice last Sunday, Aug. 23, when three persons made application for baptism. A large crowd went with us to the Monongahela River, where the applicants were buried beneath the liquid wave, we trust to live faithful until death. These are all worthy people and, we trust, will be a great help to the church. On the evening of the same day our worthy brother, S. C. Cover, was installed into the first degree of the ministry, having been elected sometime before. This gives us four ministers, including our elder, — one in the first and two in the second degree of the ministry. Our church seems to be laboring earnestly for the advancement of Christ's kingdom and the saving of souls.—Alpheus Debolt, Masontown, Pa., Aug. 23.

D. S. Howe: the Philanthropist. By F. B. Sanborn. Cloth, 370 pp, with Portrait; $1.50. Funk & Wagnalls, New York.

Among the great motive powers of the world are enthusiasm and courage; and the world has produced few men in whom the union of these was more strikingly exemplified than in Dr. S. G. Howe, the American philanthropist—few, indeed, in which these qualities were so happily blended with a broad humanitarianism and a clear intellectual insight.

Dr. Howe's political career is a part of one of the most eventful chapters of American History. In the man himself, at every period of his life, we have a citizen of whom America may be justly proud, and in this biography we have a volume of interest, information, and inspiration.

Mrs. Fahy's maiden name was Girl, daughter of Bro. George and sister Girl, who reside in Illinois, opposite to Muscatine, Iowa. Deceased called for the undersigned, about thirty miles distant, to receive her into the church, but before we could reach her home, she had passed over the Jordan of death. In her last moments she made peace with all, called on the name of the Lord and sang a few stanzas of that good, old hymn, "On Jordan's stormy banks I stand, and cast a wishful eye." After bidding a last farewell and urging all to meet her on the other shore, she passed peacefully away. LIFE AND SERMONS

ELD. JAMES QUINTER.

This is a neatly-printed and well-bound volume of 426 pages, containing a well-written biographical sketch of Eld. James Quinter and forty of his sermons.

The biographical part will be found quite interesting, instructive and impressive. No one can read an account of Bro. Quinter's life without feeling deeply and favorably impressed. The work shows how a poor orphan boy, by hard work, and faithfulness to his religious convictions, rose step by step, until he reached a field of usefulness and honor as broad as the Nation itself. Though dead, his good deeds and the impressive examples in piety, learning and simplicity will follow him for generations to come.

The Sermon Department contains many of his choice sermons, which will prove exceedingly interesting and profitable reading to all, and especially to our ministers and isolated members. We feel that this book will fill a long-felt want in our Brotherhood. Price, post-paid, $1.25.

DAVID AND GOLIATH.

DAVID and Goliath are both prominent men in Bible history and were both representatives in their standing, and from the narrative a number of interesting lessons may be drawn.

The first thought is the difference between the men that the world sets forth as its representatives and those whom the Lord calls.

Physically Goliath was a model man, and as a leader the Philistine army could well be proud of him, and, no doubt, they were. From human appearance they could well afford to accept the issues of the challenge which he made, for who, in the Israelite army could meet and overcome so great an enemy? Not only did the Philistines recognize the greatness of their champion, but Israel, when they saw him, were made to fear and tremble.

Just what Israel would have done finally, we do not know, but at the time they were outwitted and refused to accept the challenge. The foe was not only a mighty man physically, but he was a tried and trained warrior. His armor was suited to his size and strength and he was an expert in the use of it. In a hand-to-hand contest little David would have been as a grasshopper in his sight. More than this,—he had implicit faith in his fighting ability, so that the challenge was fairly made, and he felt entirely safe in making it and had there been no David, Israel would either have backed down or been defeated, because, in all their great men they did not have one that would have the courage to come out and meet him.

From a worldly stand-point they had the champion [illegible] and Israel was ready to [illegible] periority. In short, he was the kind of a man the world accepts most willingly as a representative man.

But David was a man of another stamp. He was small of stature, and though physically strong, in comparison to his size, yet alongside of this great giant, he would be as a mere boy and there is no wonder that he was laughed to scorn on his acceptance of the challenge. But David knew wherein his strength laid and, after all, the contest, physically, was not an uneven one, as many would have it be.

David, while he trusted in the Living God, was as confident in his physical strength as was Goliath. He, too, was a representative man, but not quite after the world's ideal. Yet he had just what the world wanted in a representative man. He was God's ideal man and his power could only be known in actual contest.

Some say it was David's faith in the Lord's strength. Yes, David had faith in his God, but in this contest he had special faith in the sling and pebble from the brook, just as Goliath had faith in his sword and spear.

The lesson in this contest is not so much in the exercise of the Lord's strength as it was in the skill with which he could handle the sling and fling the stone. The Lord doesn't want us always to search after miracles. He employs human agencies, and he wants them to be skilled too.

This is what David was. While out in the fields tending the sheep he employed part of his time in using the sling. No doubt many hours of his time were spent in this kind of practice until he became skilled in the use of a sling. Continued practice gives efficiency. Whether David ever killed birds and squirrels and game of this kind with his sling, we do not learn, but it is more than probable that he had made use of a sling in protecting his flock from the wild animals that were ever on the alert to destroy, and that he could sling a stone to a hair's breadth.

When he saw this giant defying the army of Israel and the God in whom he trusted, his skill in the use of the sling came to mind and how easy it would be for him to cast a stone into the forehead of this man and fell him like an ox. You may ask, Could he do so without God's help? No, perhaps not, but God would not have wanted him to do it, had he not had the necessary skill to do it of himself. He was the Lord's representative man, and he was chosen because he had the necessary qualifications, – he had prepared himself to do the very thing that the Lord wanted him to do.

Why could not some other man in the great army of Israel go out and meet this giant? Simply because no one else could use the sling with the precision that David could. If the Lord had used any other man to do what David did, he would have been necessitated to perform a miracle, and while the giant, in this way could have been slain, the lesson to the world would have been lost.

And, pray, what is the lesson? It is this: The Lord wants skilled laborers to do his work and to fight his battles. David's weapon of warfare was the sling and the stone,—and we can almost hear the thud of that stone as it imbedded itself into the skull of Israel's foe,—ours is the Word of the Lord which is as deadly to the giants of sin as was David's sling. But suppose the champion of infidelity, of intemperance, or of any other Philistine powers in the world challenge the Christian church and we had no one skilled in the use of the weapon which the Lord has given us, how could we meet the foe? The weapon of our warfare is not carnal, but spiritual, the Word of the Lord, which, if skillfully used, is mighty to the overcoming of the strongholds of sin. But what good can this weapon do us if we do not understand it and have not become skilled in its use? It is true, we have the giants to meet and it is just as true that we need skilled marksmen to knock them down and behead them.

As David, while doing his work and feeding his sheep, practiced with the sling and the pebbles, so we should, while pursuing our vocations, practice with the Word, the Sword of the Spirit, until we become as skillful in its use as was he with the sling. Do not do less praying but do more practicing and the skill will come.

While David had faith in God, he also had faith in his own skill. God helped David because he was prepared to help himself. He will help us in the same way,—not by performing miracles through us, but because of our developing that which he has placed in our hands.

Dear reader, are you a skilled workman for the Lord? If not, for what can he use you?

WHAT TO LIVE FOR.

BY SADIE BRALLIER NOFFSINGER.

Live to work; for feet are straying
In the winding paths of sin.
Sheep there are that must be sheltered;
Lambs that must be gathered in.
Hasten! westward speeds the sun,
Leave not thou thy work undone!

Live to bless; for there are moments
When the way seems dark and drear,
And the soul is well-nigh famished
For the kindly words of cheer.
Speak them; they shall one day be
Jewels in a crown for thee.

Live to love. Ah! there are treasures
Lying deep within thee Know
All around thee hearts are pining
For the love thou could'st bestow.
Open, then, thy boundless store;
Make them rich forevermore.

RETURN OF THE PRODIGAL.

BY PERRY B. FITZWATER.

There once was a family living in the suburbs of a city. Father, mother and daughter composed the little family. The daughter, while in her youth, was the idol of her parents, and their earthly hopes were centered upon her. Each evening, during these many pleasant days, they surrounded the family altar and commended their souls to God. But finally there came a change. The daughter became tired of home, and surrendered herself to recklessness and dissolution. She left her parents and wandered away to the city, and there indulged in the evils incident to city life. This almost broke her parents' hearts. They could hardly believe that, after a morning of sunshine, their idol was to sink down into the darkness of wretchedness. They prayed more earnestly than before, that she might return. They even left the door open at night, that she might enter whenever she would happen to come.

Thus time sped on, until at last her mother became overwhelmed with grief, and resolved at once to go in search of her daughter. She went to the city, and entering a bar-room, made inquiry for her daughter (giving descriptions). The proprietor said that he had seen her. She next requested a favor of him, which he kindly consented to do. She took a photograph from her bosom and wrote on the margin these words: "Come home." She handed it to the saloon-keeper, and told him to give it to her daughter.

On the morrow, the young lady came in, the bar-keeper handed her the picture without speaking a word. She, seeing the face of her own dear mother, and the kindly invitation, she fell to weeping, and resolved to go home. Suiting the action to the resolution, she started for home. She arrived at midnight. The door was open. She entered, and there was joy in that house, "for the one that was lost was found, and she that was dead was alive again." "Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." Luke 15: 7.

All who are going on, according to the course of nature, are like this wayward woman. They have left their homes (the church of God), and are roaming over the city (the world), indulging in recklessness and dissolution. The Savior, like this faithful mother, left his quiet home, the peaceable realms of immortal glory, and came to this world where he was exposed to the ravages of sin, to invite us home. He left his portrait engraved on the inner sensibility of man, by his deeds of love and kindness, and on the margin of this he has written the blessed consolation: "Come unto me, and I will give you rest." Oh, fellow-wanderer! hearken unto his call, for he has borne the burden for us. He has gone before, and removed all obstructions. So all we need to do, is to follow in his footsteps. Be not slow to action, for "Procrastination is the thief of time." To-day may be your last opportunity, for "the Son of man cometh as a thief in the night." "To-day if you will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." Do not scorn the message, for he will not always wait. The door may be closed, and we be cast into "outer darkness," where there will be "wailing and gnashing of teeth."

"Watch, therefore, for in a time when ye think not, the Son of man cometh; and what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch."

Mathias, W. Va.

"TROUBLE."

BY FANNY MORROW.

The general scope of ideas advanced, when the word trouble is used, embraces afflictions from disease or accident, as when we say, "Such an one is troubled with rheumatism, dyspepsia, or lameness; or another is in misery from a raging fever, sorrow caused by the death of loved ones, calamity caused by fire, wind, or water, misfortune, the loss of money or the comforts of life, which money can procure." All these and many more words we use when we refer to our troubles, or the troubles of others. Sometimes we say, in a general way, that a certain man has a great deal of trouble; or that another don't know what trouble means. Again we speak of labor, financial, and political troubles, which affect the community at large.

When we think of the trouble that intemperance brings upon men, women and children, we see that all the above is included, and so much more the words utterly fail to express it. The blackness of darkness settles down upon the tongue or pen that tries to delineate the horrid picture of misery.

Sometimes it is said that children have no troubles. This is certainly a mistake. A cherished doll or toy is lost or broken,—the tearful eyes, the grieved, hopeless expression of countenance often tell of a heartache as painful and real as any ever experienced by grown-up children when a "shattered idol" lies buried before them. The Bible tells us that, "Man that is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble," and that "man is born unto trouble as the sparks fly upward." We quote from good authority the following:

"In the Bible there are more than twenty different Hebrew words and a dozen additional Greek ones, all translated 'trouble.' In our English version these words include the idea of labor, pressure, agitation, weariness, fear, sorrow, wickedness, and various kindred expressions. The root idea of the English word which comprehends them all is, a whirling disturbance, that state of being which makes one whirl round and round, instead of standing quietly, or going straight ahead. That is trouble,—to be in such a whirl that you can neither rest composedly nor move forward unwaveringly.

"Trouble, then, is an effect, and not a cause; it is the inside result rather than the outside pressure."

The conclusion of the whole subject, then, may be, we are taking our journey through this world from the cradle to the grave; and in every stage of life, from infancy to old age, we meet with various causes that produce an effect upon us which drives peace and happiness from our hearts for a time. For even the saintly apostle Paul wrote about his "trouble" and of being troubled, and Jesus said in the dark hour of his betrayal: "Now is my soul troubled."

It is useless for one person to try to measure the depth of another's troubles. "Each heart knoweth its own bitterness." We may not understand the extent or cause of the whirl in another's heart which makes them feel that "the billows have gone over them," and that they are fed with the bread of tears alone. Neither can they understand the extent and degree of our troubles.

We can help one another much by mutual sympathy, and we may all be comforted by the knowledge of the fact that there is one who fully knows our trouble and sympathizes most tenderly.

"God is our refuge and strength,
A very present help in trouble.
Therefore will not we fear though the earth be removed,
And though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea:
Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled,
Though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof,
The Lord of hosts is with us.
The God of Jacob is our refuge.
Lord give us help from trouble;
For vain is the help of man."

WHO ARE PROPER PERSONS TO ANOINT THE SICK?

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER.

The above question has been agitating our Brotherhood for some years. It was before last Annual Meeting, was placed in the hands of a committee, and hence comes up for the action of next Annual Meeting.

It has been the order and usage of the church for brethren in the first and second degrees of the ministry to assist in the anointing, and, if necessary, anoint the sick; even deacons, in special cases, are authorized to assist in anointing.

As we are accustomed to call only those who are ordained elders, those who hold the highest office in the church, and as James says: "Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord," for the church to call upon those to assist in this holy ordinance, whom the church does not call elders, would seem a subject of criticism. As we have given the subject some attention, we have taken up our pen to show that the practice of the church is correct; and thus, if possible, to clear away the mist, the cloud that darkens some minds.

First, the meaning of the term elder is "older;" hence it is always applied to those of age and experience. In a Scriptural sense, under the Old Testament dispensation, elder was applied to managers, heads of families or rulers of the people.

In the New Testament it comprehends under it all such as hold any ecclesiastical functions, as pastors, apostles, teachers, or church officers.—Cruden. It is also worthy of notice, that the Presbyterians, the German Reformed church, the Disciple church, and a number of other religious bodies of learning, have those among them whom they term elders, but who are not preachers. They rank about with our deacons or visiting brethren.

We also see that the view these religious bodies take of the application of the term elder, is sustained by standard lexicons. Hence the practice of the church, in calling on ministers in the first and second degree, and even upon deacons to aid in the anointing of the sick, is correct; for, as seen, they are all elders according to the meaning of the term elder. To apply the term elder to our highest grade of church officers, seems suited to our convenience. The four grades, then, stand thus: Elders, pastors, teachers and deacons, and in a correct, literal sense are all elders.

As elder means older, the elders anciently were men of some age. So should they be to-day. On this point Paul's instruction is, "not a novice," also "let these first be proven." Even our Constitution makes age a qualification for official position in our Government. While some young brethren have filled offices in the church with credit and profit, yet we look upon them as exceptions to the rule. The great want to-day is in the government of the church. For this work, as fathers and shepherds, we want age and experience. The facts of the Gospel are easy to present. Practical religion is plain to those who are hungering and thirsting. The executing of church discipline, so as to keep the great machine of the church running harmoniously, and to make the scene inviting to those without, is a matter of the greatest concern to-day; for this we must have the experience of those who are elders in age and wisdom.

ALL ONE IN CHRIST JESUS.—Gal. 3: 28.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To Eld. David Long and Family, of the Manor Church, Md.,

Well Beloved in the Best Beloved:—

It has been in my heart ever since Annual Conference to write to you. But I am a busy man, "in labors more abundant," although not a little of my work is done lying on my bed. I have only "tasted that the Lord is gracious," but God's crumb is infinitely larger and sweeter than all the loaves of earth piled together. My shallow sip out of Christ's cup has put me deep enough in love with the Eternal Father, and the Elder Brother, and all the younger members of the white-robed family, to glory in being reckoned a fool for Christ's sake.

When the martyrs of the early centuries were led to the stake to offer their lives in the flames of persecution, they astounded their cruel tormentors with such demonstrations of holy affection, that in amazement and awe they cried out, "Behold, how these Christians love one another!" When "the love of Christ constrains us," and we "know no man after the flesh," and heart clasps heart like commingling flames, I am not at all surprised that the world thinks we are full of new wine, and act as if we were beside ourselves; our only answer is that "it is unto God." 2 Cor. 5: 13. This is "the secret of the Lord," the "White Stone with a New Name," known only to the Bridegroom and the bride.

When I met with you "in the great congregation," and one after the other of your family, I repeated silently what I could hardly refrain from uttering verbally, Oh, how I love you! The dear, hallowed past rushed into my soul and flooded me with memories almost like heaven. Time, instead of diminishing, only fans the ethereal flame. Some of the most fragrant oases of my pilgrimage I found in your midst far back near the Red Sea. Ill-coveted flesh has come out of my nostrils since then, and I have been glad for the serpent lifted up in the wilderness to save me from the fatal bites of the fiery serpents. Num. 11: 20.

Drooping, if not murmuring, have we lingered round the bitter fount of Marah, and with joy have we reposed under the palms of Elim, and "drew water out of the wells of salvation." Ex. 15: 27; Isa. 12: 3. Death has moved his swaths all around, coming so near as to run his fatal blade through our very souls, cutting through our very heartstrings and draining our very life's blood into the coffin of our loved ones. But because it was all "for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness," we will look up meekly and trustingly and say, "Even so Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight." Heb. 12: 10; Matt. 11: 26.

How gladly would I have enjoyed a longer interview, but I had to insist on a rigid economy of my vital resources. It was like a kiss from Heaven to salute you again in the Lord, and look into faces radiant with the "love that passeth knowledge." All the dear daughters who used to sing my soul into transport a score and a half years ago with the songs of Zion, and the noble sons who were then mere lads or children, now laboring faithfully in the ministry of Jesus, for the gathering of jewels for his crown—all but the first-born son had assembled in that solemn convocation, and oh, how my sorrow-mellowed heart laughed and wept together to greet them again this side the boundless beyond! And the many other dear blood-kin with whom my soul has been intwisted so many years in the sweet bonds of natural affinity, and the sweeter ties of the cross and the crown of Emmanuel - it was like an antepart of upper-world fellowship.

Not again this side the mystic river will we meet, not again till we all stand before the great, white tribunal of our Judge and Father. Often did I look over that vast congregation, and with unutterable pathos put to myself the thrilling interrogation, Where will this great concourse of immortal beings spend their eternity?

On many foreheads the name of Jehovah shone in letters of light. With the unmistakable witness of the Spirit many confessed with eyes and lips that their "anchor both sure and steadfast," lies "within the veil." Others, probably, looked into the great hereafter, seeing nothing but an indefinable mist of vacuity, or a far more exceeding and eternal weight of damnation. How is it with us, beloved? "Our hope of you is steadfast, knowing that as ye are partakers of the sufferings, so shall ye be also of the consolation." 2 Cor. 1: 7. "Everlasting consolation and good hope THROUGH GRACE," seemed to be the testimony of you all. 2 Thess. 2: 16.

I was particularly struck with a remark by one of your daughters, over whose head the billows of manifold sorrows clapped their hands: "My experience has convinced me that no sorrow, however agonizing, can kill if the Lord sustains." Blessed assurance! The Bible and Providence offer a thousand confirmations. The dear, tender, furnace-purified Julia, whom God has kept to minister to you in place of the beloved consort whom he has lately gathered into his fellowship and glory, would long since have sunk beneath the surges of tribulation, were it not for the strong arm of the Beloved on whom she is ever leaning. Solomon's Song 8: 5.

"Beloved, let us love one another, for love is of God." This is the great commandment, infolding all others. Not to love is to be "anathema maranatha." Love and sacrifice and God and heaven are synonyms. So are selfishness and Satan and hell. The blending of souls in Christ is the vestibule of heaven in the dreariest wilderness. The "life hid with Christ in God," is the life of God hid in us. "I in them, thou in me, they in us." John 17: 21, 22, 23. We are gods in embryo, divine Incarnations as truly as Emmanuel. His office is not ours, but we share his nature. We are indeed a peculiar people, the gazingstock of the world, the scorn and envy of devils, and the wonder of angels.

Our peculiarity is not in the hair and beard and hat and coat and bonnet and cap,—although all these come under the regnancy of the cross,—but we are CHRISTED, and this gives us the quality and tone and manner of celestial citizenship. We are pilgrims, strangers, and foreigners on this sin-blighted planet. "The world knoweth us not, because it knew him not." There never yet was a soul begotten of God, that did not get homesick for the Father's presence and his home of many mansions. "I have a desire to depart and be with Christ, which is far better." "Surely I come quickly, Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus." This is the family feeling and the family prayer of the elect. To stay and work and suffer and hope is our duty; to go and behold and adore and enjoy is our preference.

"The glorious Gospel of the Blessed God" needs to be re-emphasized among us, and the reality of "God manifest in the flesh," stringently enforced, being so many "have a form of Godliness, while they deny the power thereof." "Not meat and drink," not sacraments and conventions and ecclesiasticism, but "righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost," distinguished preeminently the seed royal of the King of kings. God has his "back parts," and they are glorious. Ex. 33: 23. But it is "his glory in the face of Jesus Christ," and "Christ in us the hope of glory," and the divine intempling as the crowning fact of our being, that constitutes our affiliation and heirship.

How delusive, how detestable, what a mockery of Jesus, to see self and the devil leer out of the plain habiliments and solemn engagements which characterize us as a people! What a treat for the denizens of the pit to discover pride, and envy, and jealousy, and alienation, and sullenness, and back-biting, and bitterness, and the love of filthy lucre, among those who practice immersion, and wash feet, and kiss one another, and eat the flesh and drink the blood of Jesus in silent, solemn symbol! "How dwelleth the love of God in them?" The God-born are heaven's advertisements, written all over with 1 Cor. 13: 4–7 and Eph. 4: 31, 32 and 2 Cor. 12: 15. Their phylactery is broad enough to cover them from crown to heel and toe. John 13: 35.

How my heart yearned for time and strength to learn from each one of you the details of the divine dealings, and the enlargements and enrichments of soul through all the trials and failings and fallings and disappointments and sore bereavements along your heavenward journey. I listened to some wonderful life-histories from the lips of God's holy ones while I was lying on my couch on the edge of the Meeting Grounds. The mighty God and faithful Father of Jesus of Nazareth is still among his people. He is still "able to save to the uttermost all that come to him" through the Crucified. Neither sparrow nor pin falls to the ground without his presence and direction.

He denies in many things, so as to put us on a deeper study of motives, and widen our vision of his ultimate ends. Fiery trials and humbling, desolating providences are his methods of educating us into the knowledge and enjoyment of the sublime mysteries of his grace. Some of the best answers to prayer are refusals, because the beginning and end were not accordant with God's eternal purpose for us. Not in a day, not in a year do we learn to pray only what is wrought into our wishes and petitions by the Holy Spirit. God does not mean to discourage prayer, or weaken faith by denying our request; but to lead us to distrust our own desires and judgment in shaping our supplications, and lift us into range with his ends, and sympathy with his means of reaching them. Ah, beloved, few of us know what it is to let God have his own way and pleasure in us.

Let us give ourselves to his allwise, omnipotent manipulation as clay in the hands of the potter.

If Joseph goes, and Simeon follows, and Benjamin is torn away, and "all these things seem against us," let us cling confidently and joyfully to the immutable veracity of Rom. 8: 28. It cannot fail. God has promised, and his throne will crumble before one jot or tittle of his Blessed Evangel will miss fulfillment. We are the children of God, de jure, de facto, and it is our precious privilege to live hour by hour in all the peace and security of Eph. 1: 12, 13, 14. Yet a little while, and then Col. 3, 4, and 1 Pet. 5: 4.

SELF-DENIAL.

BY B. C. MOOMAW.

SELF-DENIAL is recognized on all sides as an important principle of the Gospel. Like every other principle it is variously, and sometimes grotesquely interpreted by this or that division of the nominally Christian world. The Catholic, Episcopalian, and high church Lutheran, have their season of Lent, in which, for forty days, they crucify the flesh, after a fashion, and then plunge again into the gaities and pleasures of the world. The Catholic abstains from meat on Friday of each week, in addition to the forty days of Lent; however he will eat and drink to the full, all the other good things of the land.

But it is not our particular calling to criticise these people, as none of them will ever know what we have said about them, and there is no danger of our own people falling into this error through the same door. But we may fall into it through some other door; that is, we may substitute the appearance of self-denial instead of the real article, and thereby deceive ourselves into a disobedience of the Savior's injunction. An analysis of self-denial brings out several principles which are of every plain application. Self is the Ego, that in us, or that Us, which thinks, desires, determines, loves, hates, etc. One of the strongest characteristics of that self is the almost irresistible impulse to have its own way, to follow its own will, to find its own pleasure. Now this is the self which must be denied. A stronger and a higher will coming into the soul, must impose its restraints and its authority over the natural will, forbidding it to think wrong thoughts, to desire improper objects, or to determine unlawful and injurious actions.

In a great many things where the natural inclination pleads for indulgence, the higher will, or rather the sanctified will, must exercise its wholesome and necessary restraints. A great deal of trouble may come in at the point where innumerable questions arise concerning the duty of self-denial in particular cases. Often a very narrow line divides things lawful from things unlawful, and another very narrow line sometimes divides things lawful on the ground of expediency. At all these points the devil is fond of throwing dust into people's eyes, giving honest souls an endless amount of concern and confusion, and leading millions astray. For instance, if he can get a soul concerned about eating meat on Friday, or about keeping Lent, or about any "voluntary humility," or false self-denial, while at the same time, and by this very means, he keeps it at ease in the indulgence of sin, a great point is gained. That soul is in danger of being lost.

Any one who knows the power of education is aware of the fact that by a long process of special training, beginning with the first dawn of juvenile intelligence, it is not at all difficult to warp the judgment entirely, and seriously impair its power to properly discriminate between truth and error. Put any child where it will be constantly and seriously taught that it is a sin to eat meat on Friday, and it will grow that notion into its very being; while, at the same time, it may learn to become indifferent about many forms of real sin. Long training and constant teaching, in any one direction, will often create a kind of hyper-sensitive and hypercritical mental condition in reference to that one thing, out of all proportion to its real importance; while matters of far greater importance are regarded with indifference, or neglected altogether.

It was so with the Jews in our Savior's time, who strained out the gnat, and swallowed the camel, who paid tithes of mint, anise, and cumin, and neglected the weightier matters of the law. When we apply this common and universal tendency of human nature to the subject of self-denial, we can see how readily a false self-denial, which is no denial at all, can be substituted for the real article.

True self-denial touches the man more closely than any other Christian duty. It is likely to be more distasteful and disagreeable than any other. It is a real cross, a real source of pain to the carnal nature. It prescribes rigid bounds to natural desire, and puts a bit in the mouth of propensity. For this reason it is exceedingly easy for human nature to adopt a substitute church form, or will-service, or voluntary humility, manifesting, throughout, that self-satisfaction which always marks the counterfeit self-denial.

If we care enough about the subject to inquire more particularly for the marks of true self-denial in the personal experience, we would say that it consists in all such actions as resist and reject the natural inclination, or rather the unsanctified inclination, for the time being.

For instance, to day I may be so stingy that it gives me positive pain, and requires a severe struggle, to perform some very necessary charity to some one in need. Now to crush that stingy spirit, and open my hand liberally in spite of it, would be an act of self-denial.

A good story in point is told of a certain close-fisted farmer who had been recently converted. The deacon came around one day with his wagon to collect from the members some provisions for the needy pastor. Knowing that our well-to-do farmer had a smoke-house full of good bacon, he asked him for a ham. Unlocking the door, he brought one out, and proceeded toward the wagon. When about half way, he was seen to stop, commune with himself a moment, lay the ham down, and go back to the smoke-house. Pretty soon he reappeared with another ham, which he brought out and laid down alongside of the first. Hesitating a few moments, apparently troubled about something, he went back to the smoke-house again, and brought out another ham, larger than the others. Coming up, he threw it down with the other two, and said to himself aloud, "You old stingy soul, if you don't quit grumbling about giving this meat, I will bring every piece out of the smoke-house."

This was heroic treatment, and it is needless to say that his stingy soul quit grumbling at once. When, however, the parsimonious spirit has become, by constant repression, so dead, that, instead of being difficult and painful, it becomes a pleasure to do our reasonable duty in the matter of giving, it is no longer an act of self-denial. Just so with plain dressing. As long as we feel that we are checking and painfully crossing our natural inclinations by dressing plainly, it is a self-denial to do so. But when this feeling is absent, it is no longer a self-denial. The self has become changed. Sometimes we hear members say that they never feel a temptation to wear anything but the plainest apparel; which is just as much as saying that to wear their plain apparel is no self-denial to them. But at the same time we have sometimes seen plain people display conspicuous weaknesses and natural propensities in some other direction, holding their money tight when the Lord is calling for it, through the church, or in the person of some poor person, or orphan, or one that is distressed; or perhaps harshly and uncharitably judging others (which is getting to be a grievous evil), or indulging unreasoning prejudice, or self-will, or intolerance. Our Savior said, "Judge not by appearance, but judge righteous judgment." John 7: 24. It is not the "appearance" of self-denial which will answer with him, but the real thing itself, such as every Christian is conscious of in his inner experience when he daily denies, as often as otherwise for the good of others, the ever-importunate and unceasing impulses of self-indulgence, and self-assertion.

These impulses are ever asserting themselves in some form in every life, and can easily be detected if the moral and spiritual vision is not blinded by the illusion of a false self-denial. To check them at every point where they infringe the laws of purity, faith, charity, brotherly-kindness, and every other Gospel law, is self-denial. And it must be instant, disputing on the spot the wrong thought, word, or action, and substituting the right thought, word, and action. It is the school-master of the soul, constantly watching over its wayward pupil with a rod, and sparing not its wholesome stripes and admonitions.

WHY HALT YE BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS?

1 Kings 18: 21.

BY S. Z. SHARP.

IT was in the days of Israel's wicked King Ahab, and of his still more wicked Queen Jezebel, whose very name had become a synonym for impurity and idolatry. Rev. 2: 20. It was at a time when the judges conspired with the king and queen to put an innocent citizen to death and seize upon his property; when the prophets of God were slaughtered like beasts, and the gods of the Sidonians were set up in the groves on the hill-tops in Israel. Four hundred idol priests ministered in the groves, and four hundred and fifty in the temples.

Idolatry and all its demoralizing attendants had settled upon the land of Israel like a pall, or like the darkness of midnight which was pierced by one brilliant star,—all the more glorious in the darkness of idolatry—the prophet Elijah, the Tishbite. His very name struck terror into the heart of Ahab, who attempted in vain to put every prophet of God to death.

On account of Ahab's and the queen's wickedness, the Lord sent a terrible famine into the land which lasted three years and six months. At the end of it, the prophet boldly presented himself to the king. The latter said, "Art thou he that troubleth Israel?" From this language of Ahab we draw the first lesson. This wicked king could not see that his own evil deeds were instrumental in bringing about the calamity upon the land. He could even see a relation between the famine and Elijah, and the prophet alone responsible for all this trouble.

In this respect all wicked men are like Ahab. They are blind to their own errors, and imagine they see the cause of every calamity in others, and especially in the innocent and the good. It is this fault-finding spirit that crucified the Son of God, drove the Christians from Rome, beheaded the Apostle Paul, and burned the early saints at the stake.

There are times, however, when God manifests his power, and protects the right, as he did to Pharaoh, and now again to Ahab and all Israel.

Although Ahab attempted to slay Elijah, and searched for him in every nation, taking an oath from each nation and king that they knew nothing of this prophet, - now he appears boldly before the king, in the strength of his integrity, and commands the king to assemble all Israel at the foot of Mt. Carmel, also the four hundred and fifty prophets of Baal and the four hundred of the grove. All assembled as requested, and the prophet approaches and presents this challenge: "How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God follow him, but if Baal, then follow him."

From this we draw our second lesson. The people were God's chosen nation, Israel; the seed of Abraham, and the children of promise. To them were given the oracles of God, but step by step they had descended to the level of heathenism. This second lesson is for our church members. They are also the "children of promise," "a royal priesthood, a holy nation." Like the Israel of old, we may fall into many divers temptations. The first step is like the first step of the Israelites who made a golden calf, which they did not profess to worship. It was only to remind them of the Giver of all good. Then Jeroboam followed the example of Aaron, and from that step the descent was easy, and there was no stopping until the lowest bottom was reached.

The making of an image, to worship it, was a revelation of the Decalogue. The wearing of gold is as much a violation of God's law in the New Testament, as the worship of an idol was condemned in the Old. It makes no difference how that gold is worn, whether in the form of bracelets on the arm, of rings on the fingers, or the ears, of spectacles on the nose, or a chain dangling on the breast. We cannot find that the Bible makes any exceptions, and no one can say that the laying aside of all gold ornaments is not absolutely safe, neither can any one say that because the article was a gift, it must therefore be worn. The Savior expressly states that he "who loves father, mother, brother or sister more than me is not worthy of me," hence if we wear gold because it is the gift of a friend, and desire to please him, where do we put our Savior?

The second great mistake the Israelites made, was in desiring a king that they might be like other nations or people. Finally they became idolaters like other people. Here is where the followers of Christ may make a great mistake. We may desire to be like other people, in appearance, then in action, and finally in character, whereas we should be "living epistles, known and read of all men." How can all men know that a wordly-attired person is a living epistle of Jesus Christ?

The language of the prophet is applicable to us as well as to the Israelites. "If the Lord Jesus be God, follow him, if Baal, or the world, follow them." What would we think in time of war with England if some of our soldiers were to wear their uniform half blue and half red? What respect would have been shown during our late civil war if a soldier on either side had worn both the blue and the grey? What respect can even the world have for us if we are unfaithful to the vow we have made before God and many witnesses? Why should any brother or sister halt between two opinions? If the religion of Jesus Christ is true, then let us adopt it and adorn it before men and angels.

Another lesson, we may gather from this text, is for those outside of Christ and salvation. There are those who believe the Bible to be true, who believe there is no salvation out of Christ, although they are themselves without. They are good moral men and women and, in regard to charity, they excel many within the pale of the church. They can even point to many professed Christians that are making mistakes which they themselves avoid. They are desirous of obtaining the blessings of the Gospel, but have not yet obeyed it or taken advantage of its visions. They are halting between two opinions. To them the text comes with special force. If Jesus is the Lord of salvation, serve him; if the world, then serve it and abandon all hopes of salvation in Jesus. Settle the question at once and forever. Be not driven about by "every wind of doctrine." Finally, let us be what we profess, and stand in the front rank of our profession.

PATIENCE.

BY J. H. MILLER.

No person can pass his time aright without this noble trait of character. In a busy world like ours, with its prosperity and adversity, we must cultivate patience. In married life, many have their pathway strewn with earthly blessings, while others have their losses and trials. Many might have great reasons to complain, and exercise a very impatient spirit, which will make them unhappy, and annoy those around them.

Afflictions supported by patience, and surmounted by fortitude give us much strength in all of life's work. Sometimes the tears shed by the bedside of the sick and dying, with much patience, will only prepare us to better meet life's stormy sea, as to guide our frail bark to the haven at rest.

Moral grandeur, like the sun, is brighter after a great storm has passed over. Many people have passed through this world without much trouble, and little sickness or disappointments, while others, like Job of old, have many trials in life to endure.

"Patience produces unity in the church, loyalty in the State, harmony in families and societies. She comforts the poor and moderates the rich, she makes us humble in prosperity, cheerful in adversity, unmoved by calumny and reproach. She teaches us to forgive those who have injured us, and to be the first in asking the forgiveness of those whom we have injured. She delights the faithful and invites the unbelieving, she adorns the woman and approves the man. She is beautiful in either sex and every age."

I have seen persons who had become so habituated to worrying and fault-finding, that, if asked about their health, they nearly always would reply, "Oh my body is so badly afflicted." To such persons the weather is either too cold or too warm. They often forget that in everything they should give thanks.

If we could only learn a lesson from the little honey bees. They will fly from one flower to the other, and spend hours in gathering a little honey, which they so carefully take home and deposit in the cell. The whole colony works faithfully all summer to prepare food for the winter. There is no quarreling, no trouble, all work harmoniously. The drone, however, is a lazy bee. It does a great deal of buzzing around the hive, but never gets far away. It collects no honey, and does not seem to be a help to the colony. The working bee has finally to destroy these lazy intruders.

We have some people in the world who do a great deal of buzzing in society, yet we must have patience with them. We find them in almost every neighborhood. They are too busy buzzing to work. Of such people Paul would say, "Neither should they eat."

Patience in the church! How much we must endure for Christ's sake!

The minister must have patience during the summer months, when his congregations are small, because of so many who work so hard, they tell us, that they do not feel like attending church. Then some minister will give these brethren a good lecturing, and whip them over some good and faithful brother's shoulder. Is this the better way? No! The Savior would have us go and tell our brother his fault. Matt. 18. If a brother or sister should be like the drone, which never gets away from home, never attends Sabbath-school, yet we must have patience with such, and try, by Scriptural reasoning, to bring them out into work.

Early training in life will have much to do with our church work, hence we should not be so radical as to condemn those who do not see with us in these points. I know brethren who were strictly opposed to Sunday-school work, missionary work, social or Bible meetings, ministerial meetings, etc., who, after being taught in the ways of the Lord more perfectly, became our best workers.

"Let patience have her perfect work." If the church has a few members, who, like the drone, fly about the church buzzing, do not do like the working bee, - sting them till they will die,—but have patience with them, entreat them kindly, show them their errors by the Bible and by your chaste conversation. Thus we may win them over to help us in the work. A soul thus saved is great gain, and of much service to the church. Always have a good stock of patience on hand, and be sure to have it in readiness when needed. It is a splendid weapon to fight an enemy. A certain writer says we can carry water in a sieve if we only wait until it freezes over. If our angry passions should rise, only let patience have her perfect work.

Goshen, Ind., July 27, '91.

"The lines of suffering on almost every human countenance have been deepened, if not traced there, by unfaithfulness to conscience, by departure from duty. To do wrong is the surest way to bring suffering; no wrong deed ever failed to bring it. Those sins which are followed by no palpable pain are yet terribly avenged, even in this life. They abridge our capacity of happiness, impair our relish for innocent pleasure, and increase our sensibility to suffering. They spoil us of the armor of a pure conscience, and of trust in God, without which we are naked amid hosts of foes and are vulnerable by all the changes of life. Thus, to do wrong is to inflict the surest injury on our own peace. No enemy can do us equal harm with what we do ourselves whenever and however we violate any moral or religious obligation."

"Why should the Christian rule, to do to others as you would have others do to you, be limited to deeds? Words are as potent for good or evil as actions. Yet who speaks of others in the same spirit in which he would be spoken of? Looks, manners, dress, conversation, and surroundings are as savagely dissected and commented upon, as if existence depended upon a critical analysis of our neighbor. It is often entirely thoughtless and seems to be practiced by those who are devotedly attached to one another. If duty requires us to communicate to others some failing which we know to exist in another, let it be done in a spirit of tenderness which will rob it of any bitter taste, so that we should not fear to have our words repeated to the one of whom they are spoken."

"Words are little things, but they strike hard. We wield them so easily that we are apt to forget their hidden power. Fitly spoken, they fall like sunshine, the dew, and soft summer rain; but when unfitly, like the frost, the hail and the desolate tempest."

"THE UNITY OF THE SPIRIT."

BY JESSE CROSSWHITE.

"Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace."—Eph. 4: 3

In the intercessory prayer of Jesus on the night of his betrayal, as recorded by St. John, Jesus says, "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word, that they all may be one," etc. Paul says, "That ye all speak the same things, * * and that there be no divisions among you," and again, "They shall all be taught of God * * * and he that is taught of God, speaketh the things of God."

Now there is one of two things that is self-evident, either that the prayer of Jesus for the oneness of his disciples was a vain prayer, and consequently unanswered by the Father, or, that all true disciples who believe on Jesus through the apostles' word will all speak the same things, and be of the same mind and of the same judgment, and that there will be no divisions among them.

"But," some one will ask, "How is it possible for any two persons to understand anything just precisely alike? I answer, "It is just as natural for any two persons to understand just alike as it is for them to understand at all. Indeed, it would be quite unnatural should they not understand just alike, when they are taught all that they know by the same teacher.

The text says, "They shall be all taught of God," and "they that are taught of God speak the things of God." None, I presume, will deny the fact, that, if a class in music has been taught exclusively by one teacher, they will all perform in perfect harmony. Just so it is with all the students, trained in our common or even higher schools. All are taught by the same teacher, and will understand and practice precisely alike. If this be so with reference to temporal or worldly things, why do we find such vast difference of opinion, and lack of agreement in understanding when we come to the consideration of Scriptural or spiritual things? The answer must be obvious to every candid, thinking man and woman who may read this article. There can be but one true answer, "We have been studying under different teachers." Not only so, but we have been trying to construe or interpret our teacher.

I think I can more forcibly impress my idea by narrating a circumstance which occurred in my presence some years ago. I was attending a conference meeting of a certain denomination of Christians which was held near my home. One of their ablest preachers preached on Sunday. His text was, "The Bible." He asked the question, "What is the Bible?" Ans.—"The Old and the New Testament." "What is a Testament?" Ans.—"A testament is a will." "Hence the Bible is the Old Will and the New Will. The Old Will contains God's bequests to those living under the Jewish dispensation, the New Will contains God's bequests to those living under the Gospel dispensation."

He then proceeded to show that both these wills or testaments were conditional, that there were certain obligations on the part of those to whom these bequests were made, in order to become beneficiaries. He remarked that the Old Will ended with the last chapter of Malachi, and that the New Will began with the first chapter of Matthew. He showed the sacredness of a will, that no man after the "death of the testator" dare add to or take from, "though it be but a man's testament," neither could any one alter, change or modify one word, one syllable, one letter, or even one comma or punctuation point. Neither could any court on earth set aside or change any part of these without first impeaching the testator and sustaining the impeachment. In short, the preacher made a most excellent sermon and one which I did then, and do yet, most heartily endorse.

At the close of the services it was announced that the same preacher would preach next day on the subject of "Christian Union." I was strongly importuned to go and hear the sermon. The preacher made a very able plea for the union of all Christians on the basis of the "Bible and the Bible alone" as a rule of our faith.

At the close of the sermon all who were willing were invited to take the "Bible alone for their rule of faith and practice." Quite a number went forward and united with that body of believers. After meeting was dismissed, one of my neighbors, who was a preacher in that denomination, approached me while yet the congregation were looking on and asked me why I was not willing to unite on the Bible. I replied that I was willing to unite with any and everybody on the Bible as we had heard it preached on Sunday. He then asked me if I was willing to unite with him on the Bible. I asked if he was willing to unite with me on the Bible. After a moment's reflection he said that he was, and gave me his hand. I then asked him who was going to construe the meaning of the Bible,—he or I? He said, "Neither of us; we just take it as it is." I replied, "That is just what I want." I then asked him if he was willing to accept the whole of this New Will, obey all its precepts and commandments, enforce all its laws in every particular. He replied that he was, beginning from the day of Pentecost, where the Gospel dispensation proper began.

I told him his preacher had made a mistake then, the day before, in the division of the two wills. According to his view he ought to have placed the four evangelists and the first chapter of the Acts of the Apostles in the Old Will, but as I do not so understand it, I must insist on taking the whole of the New Testament as our only rule of faith and practice. Everything that is enjoined in the New Testament by either command or precept, we are bound to accept, and all that is forbidden, we must forbid in the church.

Of course, our views not being in harmony on these points we could not unite on the Bible. The reason must be quite plain to all. The fault was not in the Bible, but in the peculiar systems of teaching we had embraced. His was that of A. Campbell, while mine was that of some one else. In other words, we had not both been "taught of God." It is a self-evident fact that the "creeds," "confessions of faith," and "man-made disciplines" are keeping the Christian world apart today. They are working effectually against the realization of the prayer of Jesus, "That they all may be one in us, that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

Brethren, let us ponder a moment, "Are we doing anything to hinder the realization of that "high-priestly prayer?" Are we formulating a church discipline and giving it the same prominence and authority that we do the Written Word of God? I have rejoiced in the fact that I could hold up the Bible, and tell the world, "We have no human creed, we have no man-made discipline, we have no rule of faith, we have nothing to bind upon our members but the plain, simple teachings of God's Word. These are so plain that the "wayfaring man though a fool may not err therein."

I am free to admit that there are certain things in the Scriptures which are not very clearly expressed, or as Peter says, "hard to be understood," but these are only of secondary importance. But in all matters of faith and practice, I think—and the Brethren have always so held until quite recently,—they ought to be considered as matters of advice only, and not as binding commands. It must be apparent to all, that where there are just grounds for a difference of sentiment among the members, and that difference assuming the proportions that some questions do which come up at our Annual Conferences, there might be danger in pushing the matter too far, and produce evil instead of good. It must be apparent to all, that, where the matter is "so plain that a wayfaring man though a fool cannot err therein," it is something strange that all those who are "taught of God" do not understand it alike. Where, then, does this difference of understanding come in? Probably from each one wanting to put his own construction on the teacher. If so, the dominant party is unwise to force its views on the weaker, to the extent of making it obligatory. Better leave the matter as advice until we can have a greater unanimity of sentiment upon it.

"The fireside is a seminary of infinite importance. It is important because it is universal, and because the education it bestows being woven in with the woof of childhood gives form and color to the whole texture of life. There are few who can receive the honors of a college, but all are graduates of the hearth. The learning of the university may fade from the recollection, its classic lore may moulder in the halls of memory; but the simple lessons of home, enamelled upon the heart of childhood, defy the rust of years, and outline the more mature but less vivid picture of after years. So deep, so lasting, indeed, are the impressions of early life, that you often see a man in the imbecility of age holding fresh in his recollection the events of childhood, while all the wide space between that and the present hour is a blasted and forgotten waste. You have, perchance, seen an old and half-obliterated portrait, and in the attempt to have it cleaned and restored you may have seen it fade away, while a brighter and more perfect picture, painted beneath, is revealed, This portrait first drawn upon the canvas is no inapt illustration of youth; and though it may be concealed by some after design, still the original traits will shine through the outward picture, giving it tone while fresh, and surviving it in decay. Such is the fireside—the great institution of Providence for the education of man."

"Being blessed with a healthy bodily frame as a case for holding whatever brains he may happen to possess, the writer has often been asked by simple souls, as they sat, sallow and lank, sipping their varicolored liquors, how it comes that he is so strong, since he is never seen to taste strong drink. He has long been accustomed to formulate his reply, for the convenience of weak memories, thus: Strong drink makes the drinker weak; weak drink makes the drinker strong."

"It is a mark of a chaste and truthful mind, not to use startling and glowing words except where the thought sustains and demands them. On the other hand, it is the mark of an ambitious or immature mind to adorn its utterance on every opportunity with fulsome and gorgeous speech. If we cultivate purity and truthfulness of thought, we shall treasure our most precious gems of expression too highly to display them on any ordinary occasion."

"We ought not to look back, unless it is to derive useful lessons from past errors and for the purpose of profiting by dear-bought experience."

THE WATCH TOWER.

BY GALEN B. ROYER.

JUST lately a letter was received which read something like this: — "Enclosed find $——for preaching the Gospel in the West. This is twice what I gave for the sufferers last year. I hope the Brethren will give as freely to save souls now as they did bodies last year." A few are working up to the motion made by Bro. Sharp several weeks ago, but the prospects for the amount being raised are not flattering. The only reason that can be assigned for it not being raised is simply "We will not." I know we can easier this year than last, but many who lent a helping hand last year have determined not to do so this year. But how will God receive this? In times past when Israel failed in doing her duty God punished her by drought, famine, pestilence, or as he saw fit. Can we under the light and blessings of the Gospel expect more leniency? Nay, verily, my brethren.

During the last part of August we labored for the Brethren in Cedar County, Iowa. The meetings were as well attended as circumstances would permit, and a very good interest was manifested. Though there are a goodly number of members in the congregation, they are much scattered, and only about six living in the immediate neighborhood of the church. These conditions could easily be changed if only those living there who expect to embrace the faith as followed by the Brethren, would do so now. But they are putting it off as the young too often are doing to-day. If they delay in coming, thus failing to do the good they might do, will not God hold them responsible? At this place the Brethren have a good church-house and here is an excellent place to do missionary work. If brethren locate near the church they not only find a good farming land, but strengthen the influence for the church. It is not true economy to leave the churches already organized go down and settle elsewhere where houses must be built.

Several years ago a certain congregation decided to build a meeting-house. When the time came to prepare to dedicate it a certain brother of the congregation learned that a debt of $180 would hang upon it. He said that should not be and paid it himself, stating that if, in the future the church felt like doing so, they could pay him back. Time wore on and the church came to him to arrange to pay him back his money. He said, "Just let it alone. I am fully as well off today as I would have been had I not paid the debt, and who knows if not better." That illustrates clearly the result of giving to the Lord. He never fails to stand by and bless those who give and labor for him.

Yes, the Gospel is free to every one. Whoever paid for it before he received it? Whoever paid for it after he received it? But that does not remove the obligation which the Bible places on every one who has received it, to give of his means and labor, to give it free to those who have not heard it.

WHAT CAN THE SISTERS DO?

BY ELLA RAFFENSPERGER.

THIS is a question that should come to each sister's mind. Remember that in Christ Jesus there is neither male nor female, but we are all one. There are some noble brethren that have the promise of receiving an hundredfold in this world, and in the world to come eternal life. That promise is also offered to the sisters who will forsake all for Christ's sake.

The question may be asked, Where can we be most useful? Wherever God has placed us. Some he calls to foreign lands, some he wants to work among the poor and needy in the cities, others must stay at home Some because of their influence in the world or their talents, are called to special places. Remember that the sister or brother that has but one talent and improves it till the Master comes, will receive the same reward as the one who has five and improves them. I am glad to know that God is no respecter of persons. We have the promise that as our days so shall our strength be. If we have but one talent, let us say that in the strength of the Lord we will go forth as he leads us.

We, as sisters may be of more use in the future than we have been in the past, if we put ourselves under the direction of Jesus as our guide. Everything will be possible to us, and we will have no time for idleness, but will be ready for every good work, doing willingly whatsoever our hands find to do, knowing that we can do all things through Christ who strengthens us. If God is for us, who can be against us?

We must not always expect that we can do exactly like some one else. Each has a work, and while God calls some to be missionaries in foreign lands he calls others to stay at home to prepare temporal food for the bodies.

In offering a poor colored family some tracts, while distributing them on some of the back streets of Lancaster City, the landlord happened to be there and said I had better brought them some bread. I told him that was just what I had done, and if they ate of it, they shall never hunger. Yes, this heavenly food is offered without price, still many will refuse it.

Some sisters have told me lately that we are commanded to earn our bread by the sweat of our brow. Yes, I am only beginning to learn what that means since I have given my whole life to Christ. Dear sisters, though we walk through the valley of the shadow of death, we should fear no evil, for Jesus will be with us. His rod and his staff will comfort us. He has said that we can work and no man can hinder. Let us nobly say, "The Lord is our helper, and we will not fear what man can do unto us." "Fear not man that can destroy the body, but fear God who is able to destroy both soul and body."

Perhaps some sisters have a voice to sing. Is there not some place to use it in his name? Perhaps some have a soothing voice to read and speak with the poor and suffering ones. There are places enough, and opportunities enough, if we are only willing to sacrifice a little of this world's goods.

Sisters should make special efforts to assist in the Sunday-school room, where their help is always needed. We should never be ashamed to speak for Jesus. Remember, sisters, that those who are ashamed of his words, of those will Jesus be ashamed.

May God grant that we may all become sunny, useful sisters. Then we will surely be what we all long to be,—noble, useful and happy.

A CO-OPERATIVE WORK.

BY DANIEL HAYS.

THE Missionary, and the Book and Tract Work are essentially one, or the two are, at least co-operative. The Book and Tract Work prepares the way for missionary work. The most judicious and efficient means of disseminating the doctrine of the church would be by the colporteur system. This plan is nothing new. It is traceable in some form to the Waldenses, and was used very successfully by the Baptists, years ago, in disseminating their doctrine. In some respects it is similar to the book agency of our great Publishing Houses, but it has a wider scope, and a higher range of usefulness. The colporteur sells Biblee, books, etc., sufficient to cover all expenses incident to his work, and in addition distributes tracts from house to house, just what, in his judgment, is needed. At the same time he talks up the work he is engaged in, explains the doctrine of the church when needed, and as territory is assigned to each, in all cases, every house can be reached and every case met in this way.

Then again the colporteur becomes an efficient, practical worker, the harbinger of the missionary, or minister. In fact, it is within itself an excellent training for missionary work. It would afford an excellent training in many respects for young brethren, adapting them to missionary work later on. Besides, it educates them on the self-supporting plan. It teaches them to do something for their maintenance. This was Paul's way as tent-maker in the mission field when occasion served. We want a self-supporting co-operative system in our missionary work. This will insure the continuance of our present system of a free Gospel ministry, and also secure a proper support to the missionary work.

Is it not apparent to all that a judicious system of tract distribution is needed? And is it not equally apparent that men inured to the hardships of a pioneer itineracy are needed in the missionary field? Then does not the one prepare the way for the other? And should not the two whose objects and interests are so inter-related, be one?

It is to be deplored that many of our tracts are trampled under foot, or find their way to the waste box with other worthless paper. A system that will place a tract in the hand of an inquirer with a word of friendly solicitude, with the request that it be read with care, calling attention to special points in it, to be compared with the Bible,—such a system makes it personal, rivets the attention, wins the heart, and binds the reader to the tract, and the truth it contains, with the magic touch of a friendly appeal and lasting recollections.

The Gospel Messenger

In the records left by the early German Baptist or Brethren's church, and by those who have studied to learn the New Testament and practice for return to apostolic and primitive Christianity,

The Gospel of the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, with the Faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration, the Death, Burial and Resurrection of Christ, with the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands are the means of admission into the household of God,—the church militant.

The ordinances that feet washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and by command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and as universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians as a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Spirit and the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon all Believers in Christ.

That War and Revolutionary acts contrary to the spirit and self-denying precepts of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, found in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ.

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil in the Name of the Lord, James 5, is binding upon all Christians.

That it is the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, according to the Lord in the spread of the Gospel and for the unevangelized nations.

That the Ministry of all that Christ and the apostles have ordained, and that the conflicting themes and disorders of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must come to be in full unity.

WE learn that Bro. Paul Wetzel is preparing to move to McPherson, Kans.

BRO. J. S. FLORY wishes us to announce that his address for the present is Lordsburg, Cal.

THE address of Jasper N. Perry, of Quinter, Kans., is now changed to Seward, same State.

WE would like a report from all the love-feasts in the Brotherhood this fall, but make them short and to the point.

BRO. JACOB WITMORE, of Centre View, Mo., we learn, is preparing to spend the coming winter in the mission field.

WE will soon have printed a second edition of "Selections from the Hymnal." The first edition has already been exhausted. The new edition will be ready for mailing by the time this reaches most of our readers. Price, ten cents per copy, or one dollar per dozen.

THE love-feast for this place will be held at the Silver Creek meeting-house Oct. 9 and 10, commencing at 2 P. M.

BRO. ENOCH EBY is now in Colorado, aiding Bro. D. M. Mohler in some church work. He reports good health and much to do.

BRO. GEO. W. CRIPE, of Cerro Gordo, Ill., writes that Bro. Lewis W. Teeter is now engaged in an interesting meeting at that place.

BRO. JOSEPH HOLDER, of Deweyville, Ohio, may, for the present, be addressed at Robins, Linn Co., Iowa, in care of Thomas Snyder.

BRO. SAMUEL CLICK, who has been spending some months among the churches in Virginia, has returned to his home at Nevada, Mo., where he may now be addressed.

BRO. I. J. ROSENBERGER, when last heard from, was preaching in the Dry Creek church, Linn Co., Iowa. He also expects to attend the District Meeting in Dallas Co., Sept. 24.

WE are now out of the Classified Minutes. There is not likely to be another edition printed soon. It would be well, however, if the late Minutes could be collected and placed in proper form for use.

BRO. JOHN DIEHL died at his home in the West Branch congregation last week. He has been a great sufferer for two years on account of a broken leg. He was known far and wide as one of the old settlers of this country.

WHEN Bro. Miller started on his trip he thought of writing only every other week, but he now finds so much to write about that he has concluded to send us a letter for each issue. Our readers will certainly appreciate this, for his letters are exceedingly interesting and will prove a treat to all of us.

YEARS ago two of our ministers, on the mission field, went into a village to hold some meetings. The hall in which the services were to be held, happened not to be seated. They were not the kind of men to be discouraged by a thing of that nature. Noticing a pile of beer kegs at the side of the building, they got the use of them, procured a few boards and soon had the hall seated. They reported an interesting meeting. One of the ministers afterwards remarked that for one time beer kegs were put to a good use.

THE feast at West Branch last week was a very pleasant affair, and was very largely attended by many from adjoining churches. Quite a number of ministers were present, and labored for the interest and edification of the congregation. We were glad to see so many out, especially from the neighboring churches. It reminded us of olden times to see so many from other congregations. The evening services were very impressive, and the order excellent. During the day a sister was restored to fellowship, much to the joy of the congregation.

THE Brethren's Quarterlies, for the fourth quarter, extending from the first Sunday in October to the end of the year, embraces an interesting line of study. The lessons start with the Raising of Lazarus and follow closely the history of Jesus until after his resurrection from the dead. Sunday-schools will send in their orders as early as possible. Price of Brethren's Quarterly for advanced scholars, 3 copies, per quarter, 25 cents; 8 copies, 40 cents; 20 copies or more, 4 cents each. Juvenile Quarterly, for boys and girls, 3 copies, per quarter, 20 cents; 6 copies, 25 cents; 10 copies or more, 3 cents each.

THE Brethren of the Kaskaskia church, Fayette Co., Ill., are preparing to build a meeting-house. The members seem to be in good spirits, with encouraging prospects before them.

RUSSIAN Jews are said to be pouring into Baltimore in great numbers. It is also reported that the attempt to colonize several thousands of them in South America is likely to prove unsuccessful.

AT their council-meeting in the Pine Creek congregation, Sept. 12, Bro. Callo Fahrney was advanced to the second degree of the ministry, and Bro. Frank Miller elected to the deacon's office.

BRO. J. M. MOHLER writes that he has just held a meeting near Bellefonte, Pa., with three additions and fair prospects for a number more. He is now at Williamsport, engaged in mission work.

BRO. D. M. MILLER writes that he is preaching in the Chippewa Valley church, and may possibly remain there four weeks. His address is Rock Falls. He has three different places for preaching and thinks that a good work might be done there, and a large and promising field is open for the Brethren. The church is small and earnest. Bro. Baker is their only preacher, and the field is larger than it is possible for him to occupy.

CLERKS of the District Meetings will please bear in mind that the last Annual Meeting decided that the Annual Meeting Clerk should collect and publish all the matter, intended for next Annual Meeting, in time so that copies of the same may be on the ground, ready for use during the Annual Meeting. In the absence of the Clerk (D. L. Miller) this duty devolves upon your Office Editor, hence the clerks will please favor us with not less than two copies of the Minutes of all District Meetings.

WHEN Bro. J. G. Royer was in Chicago last week, he was told that an aged sister lived at No. 192 North Ashley Avenue. Calling at the place, in company with Bro. W. R. Miller, he found an aged sister who was baptized at Pine Creek over fifty years ago. The sister enjoyed the call and season of devotion very much. Bro. Royer says he wishes he could spend all his time among the members in Chicago, as there are probably many other members in the City who have not yet been found. He speaks very favorably of their pleasant meetings.

EDITORIAL WANDERINGS IN THE OLD WORLD.

ON our arrival at Copenhagen, where, as before noted, we were welcomed by a number of our members, we were taken to the home of our brother, Eld. Christian Hansen, who is permanently located here as missionary, and where we were made welcome by brother and sister Hansen. There has been but little apparent change in the Capital of Denmark since our visit here in 1884, with the exception of the burning of the King's palace, which occurred soon after we were here. The ruins are still standing as they were left by the fire. The people up to this time have refused to raise the money necessary to rebuild and restore the palace. As the King has a number of fine palaces located at other points in and around the City, he is not suffering for lack of proper shelter. He fares a thousand times better every day than many of his poor subjects who are taxed heavily to keep up the show of royalty, and are glad if they can provide their families with black bread baked from unbolted rye flour with lard to spread on it.

The brethren and sisters here show many signs of joy on account of our coming to them. Bro. Hope is so well known to them that he seems like a father returning to his children after many years of absence, and there is a general rejoicing. We also meet some whom we learned to know when we were here before. We are hopeful that our visit to the churches here may, by God's blessing, be helpful to them. There is much work needed, both in and out of the church, and it will require continued effort and zeal to hold what has already been gained and to carry the work on to further success.

The first night after our arrival in Copenhagen a meeting was held in the hall which is rented by the year for that purpose. We spoke at some length, Bro. Hope acting as interpreter. At first we found this method of speaking to the people rather trying. To speak a single sentence in such words as may be easily understood and interpreted and then stop until the interpretation is given, then give another sentence and halt again and so on for forty minutes is not so easy as at first it might seem to be. It requires a constant effort of the memory to hold on to the line of thought and to fully complete the arguments you may be using. A little practice, however, renders it comparatively easy. Bro. Hope has been in America so long that he sometimes forgets himself. Once or twice, during our dual speaking, he fell into repeating our words in English, but these little difficulties soon passed away and we got along very well.

A great help to our work is the intense interest manifested by our audiences. The people appear to be wholly absorbed in the subjects considered and wait intently for the words to come from the interpreter's mouth. Such intense interest one scarcely ever sees equaled at home. Take an audience cold and indifferent, some of them composedly arranging themselves, not to enjoy the sermon, but a quiet nap, and you will freeze the life out of the best minister that ever lived. If church members could only fully realize how much good preaching depends upon their own spiritual condition, there would be many more good preachers in the world to-day than there are. The best food that can be served, if set before people who are dyspeptic and are without healthy appetites, will be uninviting to them. So many Christians are troubled with spiritual dyspepsia. They never do find a real good sermon, and the worst part of the difficulty lies in the fact that they never realize that the trouble is entirely in their own unhealthy spiritual condition, and not in the sermons.

We find no lack of interest in our meetings here. Brethren Hope, Olsson, Hansen all spoke at our first meeting, and although it continued two hours and a half the people did not seem tired but remained in the hall at least one half hour longer to talk with each other.

The second evening we held a members' meeting at Bro. Hansen's home. The time was spent in singing and prayer and in answering and discussing questions asked by those present. The evening passed quickly away and it was midnight before the meeting closed. Many were the questions asked as to our church and her work in America, and all were glad to hear from us most of the things we had to tell of the church at home.

One of the questions discussed was the use of tobacco. Hitherto no member of the church in Denmark or Sweden has been allowed to use this narcotic. They reason that it is unclean and filthy and that the followers of Christ should be free from such a habit. Many regrets were expressed when we reluctantly told them that many of our brethren in America had not been able to rid themselves of the tobacco habit. We encouraged them to keep it out of the church since they had started out so well and had been so successful up to this time. We wish our brethren who use tobacco could have been present at our meeting here. We feel sure many of them would have said: "We will give up the habit, and show to all around us that we are not slaves to a habit that is causing great offense to our members in Sweden and Denmark. Perhaps some, after reading this, will feel to make an effort to sacrifice tobacco on the altar of self-denial. We can assure all such that God's blessing will follow the effort and that they will in time be happier without tobacco than they are now with it.

After spending two days in Copenhagen we started on our northern trip, stopping in Sweden on the way. From Copenhagen we take a steamer for Malmo, Sweden, and thence by rail to Limhamn, where the Brethren have a very comfortable meeting-house. Bro. Anderson is the elder in charge of the church at this place. He is a sailor, having charge of a coasting boat. This enables him to be at his home on the Lord's Day. As the time of our coming was not definitely known Bro. Anderson was not at home and we did not get to see him. Brethren Hope, Hansen and Olsson accompanied us and after reaching the town Bro. Olsson started out and called from place to place, notifying the people of the meeting and inviting them to be present. The result was that the meeting-house was well filled. At this place Bro. Olsson acted as our interpreter, as he did at other places in Sweden, and he did quite well. We were surprised and glad to find that he could speak English quite fluently.

While at Malmo we called on sister Hans Olsson. Her husband, who is an ordained elder, and who has heretofore assisted Bro. Anderson in the work at Malmo and Limhamn, left the day we reached Copenhagen for the northern part of Sweden. We met him at the depot only to say farewell. He is employed by the Railroad Company, and has been transferred to a point eleven hundred miles north-west of Malmo. He will distribute tracts, and preach the Word at his new home and hopes to be able to start the good work in Northern Sweden. His wife and children will follow him in a few days. Bro. H. Olsson especially requests the prayers of the church that God may use him as an instrument to build up a congregation in his new field of labor.

From Malmo we travel by rail to Winslöf, and then in a wagon to Wanneberger, the home of Bro. John Olsson, who, with his wife, sister Olsson, made us welcome. Bro. Olsson has a pleasant home with about forty acres of moderately good land. He took much pleasure in showing us over his farm, and altogether we felt quite at home as we have at all the places at which we stopped. In the evening, beginning at 7: 30, we had meeting in Bro. Olsson's house, but the large room did not hold all the people. The meeting was kept up until after ten, and midnight found us ready for bed. Our members here are not satisfied unless the meetings continue at least two hours. Thirty minute sermons are not satisfying to them. The next morning, Sunday, Aug. 16, we had a very solemn meeting with a few of the members, when two sisters, by special request, were anointed with oil in the name of the Lord. We never witnessed an anointing that was more solemn. We then drove six miles to Bro. Peter Neilsson's home at Buckberge, where a meeting was held at 1 P. M. Bro. Neilsson has a large farm and a comfortable house. He fits up a large room in his house where meetings are held, and, when the meeting is over, feeds the people. From Bro. Neilsson's we go to Winslöf and take the train for Elmhult, thirty miles away, and are driven two miles to the home of Bro. John Swenson, reaching the place in time for meeting at 7: 30 P. M. The meeting was well attended and full of interest, and was kept up the usual length of time. At midnight we were shown to bed, and were called at four next morning, to go to Wislunda by rail where a meeting had been appointed at 10 A. M. A merchant at this place, Mr. S. A. Johnson, with whom Bro. Olsson was acquainted, kindly received us into his home and entertained us. The meeting was held in the free mission house and was quite well attended.

Since coming to Denmark we have learned the full particulars as to the imprisonment of the brethren for not serving in the army. Bro. Chr. Hansen is the only one who, up to this time, has had to suffer in that way. When Bro. Westergren wrote to us we understood from his use of the English that he was writing from prison. What he intended to say was that he should be imprisoned if he remained here, and refused to go into the Army. As he has now gone to America, he is free from this kind of persecution. The Swedish laws are now much more lenient than they were and we hope our brethren here will not have to suffer on account of their peace principles, but it is better to suffer wrong than to do wrong.

At Wislanda we leave Bro. Olsson to continue the meetings, and we journey on to Christiana, the capital of Norway. Here Bro. Hansen remains and will hold meetings. Our next stopping place is Trondhjem where we take leave of Bro. Hope, and wife and self take the Norwegian steamer "Kong Halfdan" for Bodö, Tormsö, Hammerfest and the North Cape regions. Bro. Hope will distribute tracts and preach the Word in Trondhjem as opportunity may offer. On our return from the North, if the Lord so direct, we will assist brethren Hope and Hansen, and then go South to Gottaberg, thence by steamer across the Categart to Frederickshaven and thence southward through Denmark, visiting all the churches, and if possible all the members in the country. Then we go again to Sweden and spend some time with the members there. We shall have something more to say of the work in Scandinavia after visiting all the churches.

At this writing, Aug. 21st, 11 P. M., we are on board the steamer, coasting along the rock-bound shores of Old Norway toward the "Land of the Midnight Sun." We have daylight at 9: 30 P. M., and we have not as yet crossed the Arctic Circle. We have just come below from the deck of the ship where it is almost light enough to read large print. The weather is delightfully clear and pleasant. Our next letter shall be descriptive of our trip to the Arctic ocean; the region of continuous daylight in summer, and of unbroken darkness in midwinter. We are both quite well and are enjoying our two weeks' cruise very much indeed. God's blessings are attending us and we realize that it is a good thing to trust in the Lord.

QUERIST'S DEPARTMENT.

A BUSINESS DEAL.

What should be done in the following: If two brethren, in making a deal in any form, and the one brother knowingly tells the untruth, and afterward the other brother tells him that he is not satisfied, that he has been wronged by the first brother telling the untruth,—can the two brethren settle the matter, or will the offender have to come before the church in council? JASPER BARNTHOUSE.

THE two brethren may settle their own personal difficulty, concerning the deal, among themselves, but if it is a clear case, that the first brother did knowingly tell the untruth he ought to come before the church, make his humble confession, and ask pardon. If he denies telling the untruth, and the second brother is not satisfied, he would better proceed according to Matt. 18. A matter of this kind, that can be satisfactorily settled between the parties, ought not to come before the church unless it is a very clear case of willful misrepresentation.

ANOINTING.

It is claimed that when a member gets sick we have a great privilege given by James, that we may call in the elders and be anointed, and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up. The sick person believes that the Lord will raise him up from his bed of sickness, and if he has committed sins that they will also be forgiven him. Now what is to be done when the elder claims that he will be raised up in the last day, and does not believe that he is to be raised up from his sickness, believing that the power of healing is gone by. The sick man believes that the anointing has nothing to do in resurrecting the body; for both good and bad are to be raised. If none but those who are anointed could be raised up—resurrected, why then did James apply this anointing to the sick only? Why not anoint those who are well? We want them all raised up as the Scripture teaches. We repeat, What is the sick to do when he knows his elder differs from him as I have shown? JOS. FAHNESTOCK.
Covington, Ohio.

Our brethren have generally accorded both elder and the sick the liberty of their respective private views concerning the design of anointing. Hence those who do not believe that anointing is for the present healing of the body are at liberty to perform the anointing services as well as others. If the sick member holds views different from the elder whom he calls, he may be comforted with the thought that the virtue is in the Lord, and that his own faith is the important consideration. As long as members hold different views on this subject they must bear with each other. There are elders who will not anoint unless the sick believe that the service is for the healing of the body. Then there are others who will not submit to the anointing unless the elder holds certain views. While we may accord the right of private opinion, on this question, we doubt the propriety of being so strenuous as to render the service perplexing. Let the elders anoint in full faith in God's Word, and both parties leave the result with the Lord. Were we to call for the elders to perform the anointing services, we should not permit their private views to have any bearing in making the selection. We would, if possible, select godly men, full of the Holy Ghost, and leave the result with God. Our advice is, when you are sick, call for the elders and have them do as the Book reads.

BAPTISM OF PAUL.

I have been asked recently, by some of my friends, where Paul was baptized. By referring to the narrative it gives a very meager account of it. They claim he was baptized in the house. If you can tell where, and in what water Paul was baptized we would be glad to know. JOHN BURNER.

Damascus, in the times of the apostles was, and is yet, a city of much water. It is abundantly watered by two rivers, Pharpar and Abana, which flow the year round. Bro. D. L. Miller, who spent several days in the city during his travels in Palestine says, concerning the conversion of Paul, "here he was baptized, no doubt in one of the beautiful streams for which the city is noted." (Bible Lands, page 431.) There was no trouble about finding plenty of water. In Rome 6: 3, 4 Paul tells how he was baptized. He says: "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death. Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death."

The term "us" and "we" include Paul, hence we understand that he was buried by baptism. His baptism was a burial, which could not have been accomplished short of immersion. This must have taken place in one of the beautiful streams near at hand. Ananias said to him, "Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins." He arose, went to where there was sufficient water and was buried with Christ by baptism.

DISEMBODIED SPIRITS

Will you please explain the meaning of "The abode of disembodied spirits?" Also give Scriptural passages bearing on the subject. J. B. ASPER.

When the body dies the spirit takes its departure. It is then a disembodied spirit. When Lazarus died he was carried by the angels to Abraham's bosom. Luke 16: 23. That is, his spirit was taken to where Abraham's spirit was. This is the abode of disembodied spirits. To this place the Savior doubtless referred when he said to the thief on the cross, 'Verily, I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise." Luke 23: 43. Both of their spirits went to Paradise that day. The term Paradise in this case must refer to the abode of the spirits. In three days Christ's spirit returned to his body again. To this Peter refers in his quotation when he says concerning Jesus, "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell (Hades) neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption." Acts 2: 27. The term hell in this verse is Hades in the original, and refers to the state of the dead in this instance. From the above we may learn that there is a place for the spirits after the death of the body, and that these spirits are conscious between death and the resurrection. J. H. M.

THE CHURCH.—ITS GOVERNMENT.

BY J. G. ROYER.

Chapter One.

ACCORDING to divine revelation the following relations exist between the kingdom of Christ and the kingdom of God. Before the fall, man was in the kingdom of God. When he fell he was not only expelled from Paradise, but he was also excluded from the kingdom of God. His restoration to the kingdom of God, was the sole purpose of all God's subsequent dispensations. It was to be effected through a mediatorial kingdom, with Christ as King.

"When the fullness of time was come," the King appeared, and, after a life of extreme humiliation, a death most ignominious, and a resurrection and ascension most glorious, he was enthroned, "At God's own right hand in heavenly places, far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion." Eph. 1: 20–21.

He reigns now, and will continue to reign as Mediatorial King, "Head over all things," until the final glorification of the saints, when "He shall deliver up the kingdom (of Christ) to God even the Father, and the Son also himself be subject unto him (the Father) that God may be all in all." 1 Cor. 15: 24–28. Then all the redeemed will be in the kingdom of God.

Christ's reign and kingdom appear in Scripture under several aspects. As to territory it is divided; a part (his church) being on the earth, and a part in heaven. As Mediatorial King he sways the sceptre of universal dominion over the material world, over angels, over demons, and over his own people. He reigns as the supreme object of love in the souls of the redeemed in heaven, and his faithful upon earth. He reigns in his visible church as its sole Law-giver.

THE WORD CHURCH

is used in the New Testament Scriptures, First, to designate a local congregation of believers united in the order of the Gospel, as, "Unto the church which is at Corinth." 1 Cor. 1: 2. "He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." Rev. 2: 7. Secondly, it denotes all the elect of God, from the beginning to the end of time. "And he is the head of the body, the church." Col. 1: 18. "Husbands love your wives even as Christ also loved the church and gave himself for it, that he might present it to himself, a glorious church not having spot or wrinkle" Eph. 5: 25, 27.

Third, to designate the visible part of Christ's kingdom. "I am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God." 1 Cor. 15: 9. In this case the term "church" is applied to the whole body of believers on earth.* "Then had the churches rest throughout all Judea, and Galilee, and Samaria, and were edified." Acts 9: 31. The Revision gives the above, "So the church throughout all Judea, and Galilee, and Samaria had peace, being edified." Hence we learn that the use of the word is not confined to represent a local congregation and "The Bride the Lamb's Wife," but the visible, earthly part of Christ's kingdom, or Brotherhood, as well. In the present discussion we confine ourself to the first and third uses of the word.

CHRIST HIMSELF INSTITUTED THE CHURCH.

Among the directions given to discipline an offender, we have "Tell it unto the church." Matt. 18: 18. The church is here spoken of as an existing institution, or one clearly defined and understood by the apostles. He also appointed the ordinances, giving them their form. By the word employed to designate it, and by the language indicating the manner of its performance he gave us the ordinance of baptism; and by his personal administration he gave us feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, and the Communion, adding, "Happy are ye if ye do them." John 13: 17. The ordinances thus appointed by Christ were established by the apostles, according to the form prescribed. Acts 19: 1–5; Rom. 6: 3–5; 1 Cor. 11: 2, 23; 1 Tim. 5: 10.

Their example has, therefore, for us all the binding authority of divine law; and we are infallibly safe in taking the New Testament as an all-sufficient guide and authority for the outward institutions of the church and its government.

ITS MEMBERSHIP.

As the unit one is the basis of numbers in mathematics, so the regenerate soul is the basis of the church; and the new birth is made the fundamental condition of membership for all time. "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God;" and "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." John 3: 3, 5.

The apostolic injunction to "withdraw from every brother that walketh disorderly," and the relations church members sustain to God and the church, as "children of God," "heirs of God," "the light of the world," and the "salt of the earth" show, that fidelity to Christ would make it wrong for the church to admit those who apply, without ascertaining in some way their faith as to the doctrines of the Gospel.

It is, likewise the duty of the church to see that the initiatory ordinance be administered according to the Gospel. If left to the choice of the candidate, some entirely different rite might be substituted, and the Gospel ordinance set aside.

To the Middle District of Iowa.

I FEEL to report the work of the mission entrusted to my care, known as the Soldier River Mission. I am glad to-day that the cause is moving onward gradually and surely, and will say to the cheerful givers of the District, that their money is not spent in vain, but is doing a good work for the Lord and humanity. The people fully appreciate the kindness of the Board in sending them help in a spiritual way. The prospects, at present, to build up a church that will soon be able to care for itself, is encouraging.

Bro. McCune and I held a series of meetings prior to their feast. Two were received by baptism, and one more made the good confession at the close of the last service. They now number sixteen members.

At the present writing I am laboring at the Oak Grove church near Iowa City, which was a mission post a short time ago, but, by the efforts of our faithful Board and workers, a membership of thirty-eight has been established. Bro. J. C. Seibert has moved among them and is caring for them, thus relieving the District of any further expense, which is conclusive evidence that, if the work is properly managed, the results will be grand, God glorified and souls edified. I expect to remain here up to Sept. 14, at which time I expect to commence a series of meetings at the Iowa River church, to continue up to the time of District Meeting at Dallas Center, Sept. 24. May God help us to faithfully discharge our duties! MOSES DEARDORFF.

Wayside Gleanings.

SINCE our last "Gleanings" Bro. Robert Wilkison, formerly of Pennsylvania, has been placed in the silent city of the dead. He passed away June 18, aged eighty-three years, four months and seven days. Peace to his memory!

Not long since we held a special council-meeting, in order to select a suitable site for a church house. The location decided upon is on Bro. M. W. Claytor's land, and seems to be to the apparent satisfaction of all present. Work will begin, if the Lord will, about Oct. 1, as we have nearly funds enough subscribed to enclose the house.

We are happy to state that Bro. Allen Taylor, an able minister of the Mulberry Grove church (Bond Co., Ill.,) will permanently locate among us in the near future. Ever since the organization of this (the Kaskaskia) church, about five years ago, it fell to my lot to do the preaching, and during the last four years I have served as best I could as elder. Now, as the Lord has prospered us sufficiently to be on the eve of building, to receive help and council from Bro. Taylor, we feel like Paul when he said, "The Lord refreshed me by the coming of Titus."

Shortly after it was published I procured a copy of the "Miller & Sommer Debate," and after reading it, with both pleasure and profit, I loaned it out to brethren and friends. The work has given the best of satisfaction, so much so that had I another copy it would be kept busy. A would-be Universalist, after reading the "Debate," said, "If ever there was a Christian in the world, Eld. Miller is one of them, or he would never have taken the abuse that was heaped upon him." Mr. Sommer's friends claim that he was too SMALL a man for the discussion.

We do not aim to have our love-feast until after our church-house is ready for use. Then a notice will be given in the MESSENGER.

Bro. Jas. Simpkins and the writer were elected delegates to District Meeting.

Bro. J. W. Keiser gives us a pointed interrogation when he asks: "Why is it that some Brethren claim they are too poor to take our church paper, and when you visit them at their homes, you find two or three secular papers lying on the stand?" I feel it my duty to urge our members at all times to take the MESSENGER. We have been constant readers of the Brethren at Work and GOSPEL MESSENGER for fourteen years. We need its visits as much as ever.

Quinter's Biography.

WHEN I ordered the "Life and Sermons of Elder James Quinter," I expected a good and valuable book, but after reading it I found that it by far exceeded my expectations, and I think it a matter of regret that the life-work of so good and great a man is not given to us more fully.

I also believe that I am voicing the sentiments of thousands when I say that the author of the book, as we now have it, would be quite justifiable in enlarging upon the biographical part of the work. Extracts from correspondence with prominent brethren in the church, advice given at councils under trying circumstances would, in my judgment, greatly add to the interest and profitableness of the book. I would not be understood as discouraging the sermons, they are all of the best. We do not want the book for ourselves only, but for our children, and generations yet unborn may read it and receive an inspiration to a higher and better life.

This work leads us to a better appreciation of the Bible by showing what a study and practice of its precepts will do for the ennobling and elevation of the soul, and for the moral condition of the world. P. S. GARMAN.

From the State Center Church, Marshall Co., Iowa.

AUG. 15, Bro. I. J. Rosenberger commenced a series of meetings in the State Center congregation, which continued until Sept. 1. Aug. 29 and 30 we held our Communion meeting, which was certainly a feast to the soul, and, we think, enjoyed by all present, as the indications were plainly shown by the goodly number that assembled around the Lord's table in the evening, to commemorate the sufferings and death of our Lord and Master, and also the quietness and sobriety that prevailed among the general assembly, while the brethren and sisters were engaged in the solemn ordinances.

Oh, what means of spiritual strength and grace these yearly reunions afford the children of God! It carries our minds to the future, when the faithful shall partake of that marriage supper of the Lamb, which will be fulfilled in the kingdom of God.

Bro. Rosenberger's labors, while among us were full of earnestness and zeal. He wielded the spiritual weapon with power. The brethren and sisters were strengthened and built up in the good cause, and the unconverted were earnestly admonished. While there were no additions to the church, the good seed sown will be reaped in the future. We ask an interest in the prayers of all in our behalf, that we may hold out faithful. Let us all labor together for good, as one great family in the vineyard of the Lord, and let all be done to the glory and honor of God. LAURA A. FOFT.

St. Anthony, Iowa.

From the Mount Hope Church, Oklahoma, I. T.

THE brethren and sisters of the above-named church are at work for the Good Lord. We have regular preaching about every Sunday, and Sunday-school every Sunday. We are using the Young Disciple, also the Brethren's cards and the Juvenile Quarterly, all of which are greatly appreciated by the school. One of our ministers, G. W. Landis, was recently called by a dispatch to Persell, about sixty-five miles south of this place. He found a sick man, who requested to be baptized. It was attended to last Sunday morning, and in the evening of the same day he died.

JOHN H. NEHER.

Crescent City, Oklahoma.

From the Greene Church, Butler Co., Iowa.

OUR love-feast of Aug. 29 and 30 was truly a feast of love. We had a large attendance of brethren and sisters from abroad, and all seemed to be in love and union. There were eight ministers with us from abroad, namely, brethren Wm. Ikenberry, Samuel H. Miller and Samuel M. Miller, of Waterloo; brethren Marcus Fowler and O. Beaver, of Fredericksburg; brethren Joseph Hanawalt and Wm. H. Ikenberry, of Franklin County, and also Bro. Emmanuel Hoff, of Waterloo.

They held forth the Word with power, and as a result, there were three applicants for baptism on Sunday.

We held an election for a minister on Saturday. Bro. J. B. Shank was the one chosen. Our little church at Greene seems to be in a flourishing condition.

Brethren and sisters, pray for us that we may all labor for the advancement of the cause of Christ! J. D. SHOOK.

At Home Again.

BY experience I am firmly convinced that Sunday-school workers should correspond together more freely. I think the MESSENGER should ever be open to the workers in that department. In traveling through the Valley of Virginia, I still find some opponents to Sunday-schools. In order to obtain the best results, there must be a hearty co-operation of the whole working force of the church, and that force should consist of superintendent, teachers and students. The ministers, deacons and every member of the body ought to help. Then the Sunday-school will become the nursery of the church, and the whole body will be built up.

The minds of both old and young should be filled with good thoughts, good words and good purposes. Then Satan cannot make a success of sowing tares. If all the minds contain good seed, and cultivate it properly, as may be done in a well-organized Sunday-school, the enemy will have but little chance to get in his work. I never could see how any one could get the consent of his mind to throw his influence against the Sunday-school, and I am glad to know that such work is growing less every year.

There is work in the church for every member, old and young. Unless we labor in the vineyard of the Lord, we cannot expect a reward. The minds of the young are active and want something to do, and if we do not furnish them work, they will attend other schools, and thus are often led astray by bad influences being thrown around them.

Let each one ask himself the question, "What am I doing to help the good cause along?" We are glad to know, however, that there are some good Sunday-school workers among our ministers and deacons, who join in the work of the Bible class. Then it is that the glorious treasures of the Word are brought out, and the minds of the Bible students are well cultivated.

I was much encouraged in our religious experience, while visiting in the above locality, by beholding the transforming power and influence of the Word and Spirit of God upon the believers, when properly directed. The sisters nearly all removed their bonnets and properly appeared in their prayer-coverings. This, when viewed in the light of the Gospel, is pleasing. In some parts of the Brotherhood many are ashamed of this part of the Gospel. Jesus says of those who are ashamed of him and his Word, that he will be ashamed of them when he comes in the glory of his Father with the holy angels.

The Brethren in the Valley are generally in the order, and as for true Christian courtesy and genuine benevolence, they are not excelled by any people on earth. I attended a number of council and harvest meetings, as well as many regular meetings, and they were all well attended. I would suggest the following in regard to harvest or thanksgiving meetings: Inasmuch as we are instructed by the Apostle Paul to obey the powers that be, would it not be better for all the churches to wait until all the grain and fruits of the earth are gathered in, and then observe Thanksgiving Day, as set apart by the Chief Magistrate of the nation? Let us all reflect upon this. We profess to be subject to our rulers, in so far as they do not impose measures upon us that are contrary to the Gospel.

I left Nevada for our Annual Meeting May 23 and arrived home Sept. 3. I enjoyed most excellent health all the time, and was not detained an hour through accident or delay of trains. Thanks to our Heavenly Father for his abounding mercy! I feel truly thankful to all the dear brethren, sisters and friends, whose hospitality I had the pleasure of enjoying. I shall ever remember my late visit to Virginia as one of the green oases of my pilgrimage on earth. SAMUEL CLICK.

Here am I, Send Me.

THIS thought has been thrown out publicly of late since the different Boards of Brethren have been appointed by the church to push forward the work of the Lord with more vigor. Now this means something. When I say, "Here am I, send me," I ought to mean, "Here am I, look and see if I will suit." No Board, in my opinion, ought to send out a brother to do public work, without having some knowledge of the man, either personally or otherwise. Then, when you want a history of me, do not get it from my relations, neither from my enemies, but from true Brethren. This sending out men to do church work is a very responsible work in my opinion, when money is thrown together to do the Lord's work and placed in my hands to use! Oh how responsible I become! How responsible to God and to the church! Surely I dare not look for special favorites, but the best men for the work,—men who represent the church in faith and practice. True, we are often deceived in Brethren, but that we cannot help. The brother who represents the church at home will very likely do it away from home, but a brother that does not prove to be sound in the faith at home will never represent the church aright in the field. I say, "Send only those sound in the faith for good work in the Lord's vineyard." ARCHIE VAN DYKE.

From Fannettsburg, Pa.

THE last report given from the mission work at this place, was at the close of Bro. Sell's meetings in November of last year. We then expected the work to be carried on as usual, organized our Sunday-school, and felt greatly encouraged. Winter set in, which was severe here, and, owing to sickness, death, bad roads, etc., we had no preaching until in May of this year. Bro. Seth F. Myers, of Shirleysburgh, has filled two appointments this summer, our own brethren, of the Back Creek church, came once during the past year, and Bro. Bock, of Indiana, was with us and preached one sermon.

April 1, Bro. C. C. Ellis, one of Bro. Quinlan's scholars, came and taught a select school and greatly assisted us in our Sunday-school work. We feel that he did good service for the church while here. When he left, the last of June, we were obliged to close our Sunday-school, owing to sickness among our teachers. Our school was well attended, considering our small membership. Twenty copies of Young Disciple were distributed.

Our little band has been greatly afflicted during this year. Having been compelled to stay by the bedsides of our sick, church work must lag, and we did not arrange for appointments of late. We hope for a brighter day to dawn, and for the present, I feel to be submissive to our lot, for the Bible teaches us "that all things work together for good to them that love the Lord.

We have had a bountiful season. Crops were good, fruit is abundant and much is wasting.

D. C. BURKHOLDER.

The Aged Persons, Infirm and Orphans' Home of the State of Kansas.

I WISH to call the attention of the churches of South-eastern Kansas to the fact that the Trustees of the "Aged Persons, Infirm and Orphans' Home," at their last meeting, decided to again solicit all the churches in Kansas, in order to raise the necessary funds to build suitable buildings for the Home.

As I reside in the South-eastern District, it becomes my duty to inform the several churches in this District, that they may look for one of the brethren appointed for that purpose, namely, Chas. M. Yearout and John H. Neher to call on them. They will kindly ask you to help in this good work and will give all a chance to help. We know there are many good brethren and sisters who only wait for an opportunity to use their means to help poor fathers and mothers in Israel to a home which they may call their own, and a place where they may reap a spiritual benefit to the good of their souls.

We would advise our members to be ready, when the brethren come to you. Receive them kindly and give them as the Lord has prospered you, and we know you will receive your reward. It is a free-will offering, and no one is compelled to do anything.

You will see in a former article by Bro. Enoch Eby, that we have not the means to go ahead with the building. We have the land paid for and some money ahead, but as the Trustees are forbidden to go in debt, you see at once that we cannot commence to build until we have sufficient means ahead to complete the building.

Now you can see the situation. The Lord has blessed you with good crops. Let us, in return, bless the Lord by giving a part of this to the Lord's poor. J. B. WOLFE.

From the Aughwick Church, Pa.

WE were made to feel glad quite recently upon learning that Eld. Peter S. Myers, of Cerro Gordo, Ill., would preach for us on Sunday morning and evening, Sept. 6, also the following Tuesday evening. On Sunday morning, Bro. Myers gave us an able and interesting discourse from Matt. 11: 28. His sermon in the evening, from Isa. 35: 11, was doubly interesting, tracing as he did, the genealogy of many different denominations, from their earliest historical date, down to the present time. By referring to his well-designed chart, which he placed in full view of his audience, we were able to gather much information. We regard this chart as an excellent work, in explanation of history.

We were loath to have Bro. Myers leave us so soon. We wish him success in his field of labor.

Harvest-Meeting.

THE members of the Bethel church, of Kosciusko Co., Ind., held their harvest-meeting, on Sunday, Sept. 6. They held services both in the forenoon and afternoon. Everything seemed to combine to make the meeting a success. First was the children's meeting at 9: 30, conducted by Bro. A. H. Puterbaugh, who presented many hopeful thoughts that, we hope, will be treasured up. Then came the sermon on thanksgiving by Bro. L. Hillery, who did his work well and made us all feel that it was good to be there. He continued the subject in the afternoon. Practical thanksgiving, —or "giving in thanks," as Bro. Hillery put it,—is right. We were made to reflect, and to see whether our thanksgiving would tell in our favor in the end.

A collection was taken at the close of the meeting for mission work, which resulted in a donation of eighteen dollars, which we dedicated to the service of the Lord, hoping that it will result in gathering in some poor wanderer. The weather was pleasant and the crowd quite large. More anon. W. R. DEETER.

JULY 2, I left my home for Bloomsburg, Columbia Co., Pa. I passed through Huntingdon, and McVeytown, where last winter I had a very enjoyable visit with my relatives and friends; also Altoona, where many dear friends reside. I could not stop with any of them. I was called rather hastily to the bedside of my sick sister. This was the third time I had been to Bloomsburg within four years. None of our brethren and sisters reside there. I met a dear sister of Lewisburg, Pa., on my trip to Bloomsburg, and one on my return.

I very much wished, while at Bloomsburg, that the Brethren could preach there. I know full well that there are some souls there that would listen to the Word preached, with gladness. My sister recovered. She, husband and son, with myself bade adieu to Bloomsburg on Monday, August 3. I was glad to meet my dear father again, after an absence of two months.

To-day we were agreeably, but pleasantly surprised with a visit by Bro. John B. Brumbaugh, of Huntingdon. After dinner we had a season of devotion together, when our dear brother bade us adieu, and journeyed homeward. We wondered, when he started, if on earth we might meet again. Many times we separate from kind friends nevermore to meet here.

Our dear sister, Elizabeth Clapper, has passed away and was buried last week.

May the good Lord be with our dear brethren Miller and Hope in their mission. May he also be with Bro. Hope's family during his absence.

EMILY R. STIFLER.

Notes of Travel.

ON Saturday morning, Sept. 5, wife and I attended the feast in the Dorrance church. At 2:30 P. M., we met at the Dorrance school-house for worship. Bro. David Brower, of Oregon, led by using the first part of John 15, showing us the relation that each member sustains to the True Vine,—Christ Jesus. He was followed by Bro. John Ikenberry, of Quinter, Kans., Bro. John Hollinger, of Russel, and Bro. Michael Keller, of Great Bend, Kans. The writer and three of the home ministers composed the ministerial force. We had a feast of love indeed; at least we felt that way. Such meetings seem to be a foretaste of the great reunion in the sweet by and by.

Bro. Jacob Harnish, one of the ministers of that church, was not permitted to enjoy the meeting, on account of the affliction of his son Frank, who has been suffering almost a year with bone cancer, and who had almost despaired of ever recovering. The physicians met on Friday, Sept. 4, and amputated the limb near the body, and now some hopes are entertained of his recovery. Remember the family at a Throne of Grace!

A Pleasant Visit.

ELD. P. S. MYERS, late of California, gave us quite an unexpected call on the evening of Sept. 1, and, after a day's visiting and rest with us, at Grafton, we started for the James Creek meeting-house. In the evening we had quite a respectable little congregation, when Bro. Myers gave us an interesting discourse from Is. 50: 11, "Behold, all ye that kindle a fire, that compass yourselves about with sparks: walk in the light of your fire, and in the sparks that ye have kindled." He showed the disposition on the part of humanity to establish and maintain some form of religion, and to throw around it a power and influence that will make it prominent and attractive to others, as a fire is made attractive by the sparks that encompass it. This discourse was followed by an explanation of the character and origin of the different denominations now in existence.

GEO. BRUMBAUGH.

From the Jonathan's Creek Church, Perry Co., Ohio.

A WEEK'S meeting of unusual interest closed Aug. 31 with a Communion service, six additions by baptism and one reclaimed. Bro. Quincy Leckrone, a young man of promise, was chosen to the ministry, and brethren M. Dupler and Emmanuel Hulser were elected deacons. The meeting was well attended, notwithstanding the busy season, and many were loath to have it close. Bro. Isaac Frantz, of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, did the preaching. His soul-reviving sermons were not only well received, but will prove a great auxiliary to the future work of the church. May the Lord ever bless our dear brother as a faithful laborer in the vineyard.

Having had the oversight of the church for some time, we went to the assistance of Bro. Frantz Aug. 26, and observed with pleasure the cheering prospects for brighter days to come. Since Bro. Bowman's death, the church has lacked in ministerial help, but is still "contending for the faith." May she move forward in the line of Gospel Truth, being found, when Jesus comes, as a "bride adorned for her husband."

I. D. PARKER.

From the Lower Cumberland Church, Pa.

THE Brethren of the Lower Cumberland church held their council-meeting Sept. 3, at Mohler's meeting-house. The exercises passed off pleasantly, and one was reclaimed.

The love-feast of the Lower Cumberland church will be held at Mohler's meeting-house, Oct. 20 and 21.

Sept. 6, Bro. David Neisley preached at Newport, Perry County, and after services one precious soul was baptized.

Bro. William Howe, of Lewistown, visited his brother and friends in Mechanicsburgh, and preached for the Brethren Sept. 6, at the above place.

July 12, a Sunday-school was organized by the Brethren of the Lower Cumberland church, at Baker's meeting-house. It has been quite interesting, and we hope that, by the prayers of the faithful, it may continue to prove a success.

JESSE B. ASPER.

"A RELIGION that does not exalt and ennoble life, in every attitude and aspect, is a dead religion, and the sooner it is relinquished, the better. Our religion must glorify our work. We do not need to go apart from our work to get at our religion. Wherever the post of duty is, there should our religion keep us company; showing itself in fidelity, trustworthiness, courage, patience and generous kindness. And there will it find all true Christian soldiers, fighting a good fight.

'Content like men of arms to fight,
Each with a fronting foe.'"

"RELIGION is soul-health. It is the very climate of the soul. It is the atmosphere in which the soul lives. The humblest ones of earth may forever rejoice in the fact, that the first homage paid to the Incarnate Son of God came from the humble watchers on Bethlehem's plains, and whoever makes it the supreme business of life to help the poor and needy in the destitute places—the mangers of this world—will surely find Christ in the manger, 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.'"

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

Pleasant Love-feast.—The members of the Rockton congregation, Pa., held their love-feast Aug. 21, which was a feast of love indeed. About forty-two members partook of the sacred, life-giving emblems. One was made willing to renounce the world and its sinful ways. Bro. J. M. Mohler was with us at our feast. We were sorry that he had to leave us so soon.—John A. Brilhart.

Two Collections.—The Salamony church, Middle Indiana, held their harvest-meeting Aug. 29. We had a good meeting, and raised $20 for the missionary cause. Sept. 5 was our quarterly church council. Everything passed off pleasantly. We again took up a missionary collection and raised $8.60. We also set the time for our feast, Oct. 14, commencing at 10 A. M., ten miles south of Huntington. My health is poor; wife is quite well.—Samuel Murray.

Special Notice.—The District Meeting of Southern Illinois is located on the line of the Peoria, Decatur and Evansville R. R., and said road will sell round-trip tickets to those attending the Meeting, for one and one-third fare. Tickets will be on sale Oct. 11 and 12, good to return up to and including Oct. 15. Tickets can be purchased at any of the Company's offices.—M. J. McClure.

Deacon Elected.—Aug. 28 the members of the eastern part of the Belleville church met to transact church work. Bro. Eli Renner, of Burr Oak, was with us. He has the oversight of this church. We decided to elect one brother to the deacon's office. The lot fell on Bro. Whitney. He was duly installed into office. May the Lord bless him and his companion in their important work! —Wm. Lugenbeel, Ida, Kans.

Deacons Elected.—The church at this place is in peace and union. We held our quarterly council Sept. 5. Everything passed off smoothly. Elders L. H. Dickey and S. M. Loose were with us. We held a choice for three deacons. The lot fell on J. L. Yoder, B. F. Snyder and Jacob Swank. May they magnify their calling to the glory of Christ Jesus, is the prayer of all. Our Communion will occur Oct. 10, at 10 A. M.—Jno. R. Snyder, Gretna, Ohio, Sept. 9.

Harmonious Council.—The members of the Cedar Lake congregation, DeKalb Co., Ind., met at the church-house in quarterly council Aug. 22, 1891, and transacted quite an amount of business. The report of the annual visit showed that the members are all in love and union with but one exception. We also appointed delegates to the District Meeting. The Lord willing, we purpose holding our Communion meeting Oct. 15. Services are to commence at 4 P. M.—G. I. Patterson, Clerk.

Interesting Meetings.—Bro. Abraham Wolf, of Libertyville, Jefferson Co., Iowa, came to us Aug. 29, and remained with us over Sunday. He preached three practical sermons for us, which were much appreciated by all. We had a well-filled house, and good order and interest. Brethren John Fesler and David Rittenhouse were also with us. They live in the bounds of the Crooked Creek church, Washington Co., Iowa. Brethren, remember us in your prayers!—Rebecca E. Hannan, Elrick, Iowa.

Delegates Elected.—The Okaw church, Ill., met in quarterly council Sept 3. A spirit of love prevailed. We granted five letters of membership. Some of our dear members have gone to the Far West for the benefit of their health. We hope they may soon be with us again. The church elected Jacob Ulery, Daniel Mohler and John Arnold, delegates to District Meeting. We decided to have a Communion Oct. 17, in connection with our series of meetings. Since my last report we have been sorely afflicted. Storms of sorrow and waves of trouble came, but the Lord has restored the dear ones again!—E. F. Wolf, La Place, Ill., Sept. 11.

Harvest-Meeting.—Our harvest-meeting, which occurred July 25, passed off pleasantly. The congregation was not large, yet we felt that it was good for us to be there. The services were conducted by the home ministry. All should truly feel thankful for the abundant harvest which has just been gathered! The council-meeting of Sept. 5 passed off pleasantly, and to the satisfaction of all present. Eld. George Barnhart was with us and gave us some good counsel, which we will not soon forget. He spoke on the day following at the Big Spring school-house to a fair congregation, on the subject, "What is Man?" Our love-feast was appointed for Oct. 22.—Matilda Holderread, Ergo, Mo., Sept. 8.

Minister Elected. — The Mahoning church, Ohio, had a church council Aug. 22. Elders Samuel Sprankle and Noah Longanecker were present. The business before the meeting passed off in harmony. There was a choice held for a minister which resulted in the election of Albert Harold.

Harvest Meeting.—Sunday, Aug. 30, the Brethren at New Enterprise, Pa., held their harvest thanksgiving services, and also had a children's meeting the same day. Eld. W. J. Swigart, of Huntingdon, conducted these services. At the close of the exercises a collection was taken, and $14.17 was raised for missionary purposes.—Rosie S. Myers.

Council and Thanksgiving Meeting,—The Brethren of Naperville, Ill., met in council Sept. 5 at 9 A. M., to arrange for a Communion and to attend to other needful work. Considerable business came before the meeting, but was adjusted, we believe, to the satisfaction of those present. At 2 P. M. the Brethren convened for a thanksgiving service. The Lord blessed the Brethren with a good meeting.—S. B. Kuhn.

A Missionary Number of "Messenger." —If I am permitted to express a desire, which is, no doubt, shared by many, I would like to see another missionary number of the MESSENGER printed during the latter part of the year. In regard to the contents I would like to see it similar to the one we had a few years ago. What say you, frontier brethren and others?—Jasper N. Perry, Seward, Kans., Aug. 28.

The Field Opening.—It seems to me that there is a large field open here in Washington, in which churches of the Brethren should be established. There is no church anywhere near Tacoma, and I would be glad if some good ministering brother would emigrate to this country. I am sure there would be no trouble in finding plenty of good material to work on, as the truth must prevail and there are good, honest people in Washington as well as in other States.—F. H. Calvert, Tacoma, Pierce Co., Wash., Sept. 2.

Six Additions by Baptism. — Bro. Frantz, of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, commenced a series of meetings Aug. 22, in the Jonathan Creek church, Ohio, and continued for over two Sundays. Aug. 27 a Communion was held. This church is under the eldership of Bro. I. D. Parker, of Ashland, who was also present. The Communion was largely attended. A choice for a minister and two deacons was held. The lot for minister fell on Bro. Quincy Leckrone; for deacons on Emmanuel Helser and M. Duple. The church was very much revived, and a deep interest seemed to prevail. We had six additions by baptism. One applicant is to be reclaimed.—Benjamin Leckrone, Aug. 3.

Quarterly Council.—The New Haven church, Mich., met in quarterly council last Saturday. The meeting was fairly well attended. We decided to hold a Communion some time in the future. We regret that often some of our members seem too busy to attend council. May we not hope in the future all will be so deeply engaged in the Master's work, as to be present in every assembly of the saints? Let us not forget to pray God for his spirit upon each one of us before we engage in the work of the Lord's house!—Levi. D. Bosserman, Sept. 7.

Bro. Widder was a minister of the Brethren church. Not quite three weeks before he died he was anointed, and in his suffering expressed a desire to go to his long home. His disease was consumption of a lingering nature. He, with his family, moved to Kansas about seven years ago. He lived near Wichita for about three years, then returned to his native home suffering from ill health, which continued till it ended in death.

Deceased leaves a sister, a wife and six children. His remains were laid to rest in the Upton graveyard. Services were conducted by brethren Daniel Miller, John Myers, Geo. Hage and the writer.

HESP.—In the Cedar Creek church, Anderson Co., Kans., Aug. 14, 1891, Bro. George Hesp, aged 73 years, 8 months and 26 days.

The subject of our notice was born in Pickering, Yorkshire, England. His death was caused by a complication of diseases peculiar to old age. His sufferings were great during the last few days, but he bore all with Christian fortitude. His prayer was that he might be permitted to reach that land where sorrow, pain and death are felt and known no more. He was a kind husband, a loving father and a devoted Christian. He leaves eight children to mourn their loss,—four sons and four daughters. Only two of them are members of the Brethren's church. May the others also enter the fold! The large attendance at the funeral bore testimony to the Christian worth of the departed one.

Wilma was the only child of the above parents. Funeral services by Eld. Jesse Studebaker to a large and sympathizing congregation.

She, with her husband, was baptized into the German Baptist Brethren church, Oct. 5, 1842, and was faithful to her calling as a Christian mother and a faithful companion in helping and assisting her husband in his calling in the ministry, ready to encourage him at all times. She leaves four children, a dear old husband and many friends to mourn their loss, which we trust, is her eternal gain.

LIFE AND SERMONS

— OF —

ELD. JAMES QUINTER.

The biographical part will be found quite interesting, instructive and impressive. No one can read an account of Bro. Quinter's life without feeling deeply and favorably impressed. The work shows how a poor orphan boy, by hard work, and faithfulness to his religious convictions, rose step by step, until he reached a field of usefulness and honor as broad as the Nation itself. Though dead, his good deeds and the impressive examples in piety, learning and simplicity will follow him for generations to come.

The Sermon Department contains many of his choice sermons, which will prove exceedingly interesting and profitable reading to all, and especially to our ministers and isolated members. We feel that this book will fill a long-felt want in our Brotherhood. Price, post-paid, $1.25.

WE hope to be able to attend a number of love-feasts to be held in our surrounding churches. We much enjoy these meetings but our time has been so fully taken up heretofore that we could not attend them as we wished to do.

WE had a pleasant visit from sister Alice A. Mumaw, of Sharpsburg, Md. She brought two of her sister's children with her, as students for the Normal and expresses herself as being much pleased with the appearance of things here.

THE Normal Fall Term opened with an attendance of almost fifty per cent over that of last fall, and they seem to be an excellent class of students, —largely members and members' children. Brethren, pray for our schools that they may prove a power for good to the church and the world.

HOME ATTRACTIONS.

As the days shorten, the evenings grow longer and more time is had for reading, writing, and literary and religious improvement. This is true especially of our laboring men and farmers.

The long evenings afford many opportunities for home improvement and home enjoyments. It is always with interest and pleasure that our mind reverts to the fall and winter evenings, and there was no season in the year that we, in our boyhood days enjoyed more. After the day's work was done, followed the evening social meal, after which the different features of the day's work were discussed. Then, around the table, were seated the different members of the family, some reading, others studying over the pages of Rose or Greenleaf and still others chatting about things that were wise and otherwise, but all as happy as a family circle could be. Such are scenes in boy-life that stamp home recollections on the mind, that they will always be remembered with pleasure.

It is true that there is no place like home when home is made what it should be. And the long fall and winter evenings afford excellent opportunities of making them enjoyable and desirable. It is sad to know how few real homes we have where husband, wife and children spend the evenings together as all families should. In such homes children are not only fed and clothed, but they are trained in the way they should go, in such a way that they have no desire to depart either from the "way" or the home. There are a great many houses in which families board and sleep, and that is about all they can be properly called. The husband, after he eats, resorts to the nearest lounging-place and passes the evening in gossipping about the weather or his next door neighbor, if nothing worse. The boys are out in the streets or ranging through the neighborhood, seeking whom they may devour, while the poor wife and mother sits, forsaken, in the place called home, wondering why John is not as loving and obliging as he was during their courtship days.

Destroy the happiness of our American homes and in a few years our boasted flag will trail in the dust and mud. Yes, it pays to make home a most desirable place. It pays in the homes, in the neighborhood, in our nation, and, above all, it pays the children. It is here they get their life-training,—that which starts them in the way to success in this life and eternal enjoyment in the world to come.

Parents, make your homes attractive,—a delightsome place for your children to be. They are safer and better under the parental roof after nightfall than they can possibly be anywhere else, and you can have them there by making the house in which you eat and sleep a true home. If homes have no attractions for the husband and wife, it cannot be expected that the children will be satisfied to remain there. And if they do not find enjoyment at home, they will go out after it, with the risk of falling into bad associations and bad habits. There is no money better invested than that which is spent in making our homes attractive and a safe place for our children to be. Throw around them safe and proper influences here and you have hedged them about with a bulwark of strength that will be hard to overcome by the votaries of sin. Home becomes a refuge of strength to which children can and do resort with pleasure and confidence in times of danger and the hour of temptation, even after such homes have ceased to be. The recollection of what they were is a continued source of pleasure and safety to them.

We have been in homes that were so homeless in attractions that we did not wonder when the father told us, weeping: "The boys have all left us." Who would not leave a place where there is nothing but work and a daily scramble for money, without love and sunshine? We were as anxious to get away from such homes as were the boys, and the girls had but one purpose in view, and that was either to get married, or get away from home in some other way.

It is all right to bring children up in habits of industry and to teach them how to make money and make a living. But in connection with this teaching they should be taught the true object of labor and what money is for. These parents had succeeded in making money but when it was made, to them it had lost its use and power. Their children, in the getting, had been driven from home, and in so doing carried with them the possibilities of the home enjoyment which the money made was intended to give.

It may be asked, How can homes be made attractive and what should they be?

First of all, the religion of Christ must be there. This means much, and is much, as it is the basis upon which all true homes are founded. It gives love between husband and wife, and this becomes the legacy of the children,—and a rich one it is. It means the family altar and a consecration of the children. This begets a healthy and safe concern for their training and future welfare, which means, How shall we make the home and the home attractions such as to lead the children in the way they should go? In this way the home, labor and money made becomes consecrated to a purpose, and that purpose is to throw around the children such influences and attractions as will lead them to Christ and to a proper success in life.

The religion of Christ gives a faith in God that is followed by peace and happiness, and where this is, there are attractions, no matter how homely the place called home may be,—because it brings with it everything that is essential to happiness. It is to the home what the Ark of the Lord was to the house of Obed-Edom,—a blessing.

As far as your means will admit, make your homes attractive by keeping your buildings, yards and surroundings in good trim. Neat fences, lawns, and flowers are all cheap home ornaments and yet they add much to the attractions of a home. Then the home furnishing must not be overlooked. An air of comfort should be felt within, and this can be done with but little expense where there are loving hearts and willing hands. Good books, music and the church paper must not be left out.

To raise a family and keep the boys and girls at home is a study, and one, too, that should not be neglected on the part of parents if they would have homes that will be enjoyed by the children while there and looked back to with pleasure after they have left the parental roof.

ESSAYS

"Study to shew thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

THE CROSS.

The cross is needful to sustain,
A pure and holy life;
Our carnal loss is precious gain,
To help us live for Christ.

While painful is the cross we bear,
To free ourselves from sin;
'Tis sweet to feel that God is near,
To help us come to him.

Each one must bear the cross below,
Besetting sin to slay;
Yet, each may help his brother on,
The straight and narrow way.

The cross will slay the root of pride,
That monster fiend within,
And cleanse the heart, and make us white,
From guilty stains of sin.

The cross removes the drunkard's doom,
Gives life, and health, and peace;
And in his heart Christ finds a home
To dwell in heavenly grace.

The cross refines the miser's heart,
Its hardness all removes;
And gives him grace to kindly part
With means, in deeds of love.

The cross will purify the soul,
From lusts that dwell within;
And aids us all our life control,
And keeps us pure and clean.

In Christ we glory through the cross,
To overcome our sin;
All carnal things we count but dross,
To help us Christ to win.

THE GOSPEL FISHERMAN.

"ARE you a drummer?"

He was a drummer himself. It was in a railway car. I occupied the seat his feet would have had. We had been talking gayly, and several neighbors were honorary members of the conversation.

"Yes," I replied. "All rights reserved."

"What's your line?" asked he.

I grasped my satchel of sermons desperately. A sympathetic thrill came up through the handle, and last Sunday's sermon, nestling there next to my apparel, telegraphed an answer.

"I am interested in fishing and in fisherman's supplies," said I.

"Isn't it rather out of season—fishing in February?"

"That doesn't make any difference," said I. "I'm at it 'in and out of season.' I was at it yesterday; do most of my fishing Sundays; and then I'm on the road looking up the matter of supplies during the week."

"How can you fish with the temperature at zero?"

"I'm used to it. I fish through the ice every Sunday, and after I get a place broken through, it isn't so bad. The hard part is breaking the ice. I've spent a good hour and a half many a time in getting through, and then I wouldn't any more than get my line in before it would commence to glaze over again. The thicker the ice the poorer the fish, too; but they're all worth trying for."

"I thought that the fish were all fished out."

"No; they simply won't bite. They had rather watch a man through the ice."

"Do the fish seem to know what a fisherman is about?"

"I have seen fish that will almost as much as tell a man that he doesn't know how to fish. They are the ones under the ice. The thicker the ice is the more they do it. The average fish nature is a good deal like human nature. They don't want to be caught, and yet they'll seem to find fault with you for not catching them."

"How do fish act when they are caught?"

"I am so anxious to catch the next one that I do not stop to sit down musingly on the bank and study the subjective condition of the last and write a book on it. I once knew two preachers. One preached twelve sermons on the subject, 'What is conversion?' telling his audience what conversion was. The other wasn't very good at definitions, and he preached twelve sermons, telling his audience to come to Christ and be converted and find out for themselves. The result was that in one church they had one hundred definitions of conversion, and in the other, one hundred and twenty converts. Words! Souls! It's just so in fishing. A good fisherman is more interested in catching the fish than he is in hookology or fishology. Those who can't fish can develop those sciences."

"Isn't it valuable to know the names of fish?"

"I never bother about the name of a fish until I have caught him. A fish won't jump enthusiastically on to your hook because he sees his name catalogued on a paper in your pocket. A name isn't a fish any more than a definition is a convert, or a dogma a preacher. Two men sit down to a meal One spends the time in thinking why he is hungry, and getting the names of the dishes into his mind; the other is getting rid of his hunger, and getting the dishes themselves where his hunger came from. The second man can fish. The first—well, he's no fisherman; perhaps he might do for a preacher. It's the fish that has the name, and not the name that has the fish. Fishology is all very well, but it's better to learn the names by catching the fish than it is to try to catch the fish by learning the names."

"What kinds of hooks do you use?"

"All kinds. I know one of these sticklers for a particular hook who is so interested in defending his hook that he won't even put it into the water, but stands there arguing with it in his hand that it's the only hook to use, while I'm busily casting my different hooks in and pulling my different fish out. There's one thing about it—he can't argue a point on to his hook, and he can't argue my fish back into the water. I had rather have my fish than his arguments, but he wouldn't. Such a man never gives in, and, when he can't deny the fish, he would say that fish caught with that kind of a hook couldn't be worth very much, or that from 'a philosophical point of view' a fish was not 'essentially caught unless it had wended its way to a hook such as his, and deliberately hung itself in a subdued and becoming manner upon the point thereof, and by gently pulling the line signifying that it wished to be drawn out of the water.'"

"Do hooks differ very much?"

"Not so much as is supposed. There are hooks that have fine points and catch easily but do not hold, and hooks that have fine barbs and hold well, but do not catch. A good fish-hook—I was thinking the other day—is like a good sermon or a good theology. It has two points. One that catches hold and the other that won't let go, and neither is worth very much without the other. Some preachers, you know, have a theology that's all barb, and they never catch; and others have a theology that's all point, and they never hold what they do catch. It's just so with fish-hooks. If I couldn't have a hook with both points, sometimes I have thought that of the two I would rather have a hook that would catch and lose its hold rather than one that would hold, but never get a chance to; and then, again, I would think that the hook that held without catching, though not quite so interesting for the fisherman, was a great deal better for the fish. A half-caught fish is half spoiled for himself, and all spoiled for the next fisherman. The point of a hook that suits the fisherman is not always the point that suits the fish. There are men who had rather hold a bent pin that they are fond of admiringly dropping into the water to no purpose, while the fish swim smilingly by, than to draw the fish out almost constantly with a hook that they did not quite like the color of. The simple question is, 'Is the hook for the fisherman or for the fish?' It is interesting to see a fisherman caught by his own hook, but that isn't fishing; it is theology. A hook is not an ideal. It is a tool. The ideal tool is a a tool that works, and the ideal fisherman is the fisherman that gets the hook that works, and then gets the work out of it."

"You seem to do all your fishing on Sundays, and yet you talk about preachers as if you had been to church."

"If good preachers illustrate their sermons from life, the way Christ did, it's no more than fair that I should illustrate my life from the preachers. But, as a matter of fact, I don't suppose that I have been to church to hear anyone preach for ten years."

Here the car door swung open.

"Wait-Forever Junction! Change cars for Fishkill!" shouted the brakeman.

"I change here," said I. "Come up to Fishkill some Sunday and go fishing with me."

"Thanks. I return this way the 17th, but I'm not much of a fisherman."

"Never mind," said I. 'Good many amateurs up our way, and I could give you something small at first, you know—something in the 'minny' line perhaps, one of the infant classes in our Sunday-school."

"Sunday-school!"

"Yes, I'm a fisher of men."

The look on that man's face was worth a whole library of mileage books, and as interesting as a whole set of the ante-Nicene fathers. He put it on in no time, but it would not come off as easily; and before he could get it off I was on the platform.

As the train whirled away, a voice out of the window followed: "Parson! Parson! Expect me just the same the 17th!"

The 17th came in due time. I expected that, but the drummer came too, and that I did not expect; but it seems a joke will sometimes turn solemn on Sunday. He has kept coming. He says he likes to "nibble at my hook."—Sel.

BY J. G. ROYER.

Chapter Two.

THE POWERS OF THE CHURCH.

ALL the powers of the church are derived from Christ, for "when he ascended on high he gave gifts unto men; some, apostles; some, prophets; some, evangelists; some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ." Eph. 4: 8, 11, 12.

The local church, by the action of its membership has a right to elect its own officers. Acts 6: 1–6 shows that the election of the seven was by the action of the membership; the ordination or choosing of bishops or elders (Acts 14: 23) is an election in which apostolic superintendence is made more prominent; and in the election of delegates (1 Cor. 16: 3) to represent the church among the suffering brotherhood, the action of the church as a body, also stands out prominently. The local church also has power to discipline and exclude members, and restore them again to her fellowship. In the treatment of private offenses the final step is "Tell it unto the church." "If he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican," Matt. 18: 17, 18, and Paul directs the church to "put away that wicked person." 1 Cor. 5: 1-5; and afterwards says of the one thus put away, "If any have caused grief, he hath not grieved me but in part. . . . Sufficient to such a man is this punishment which was inflicted of many. . . . So that ye ought rather to forgive him and comfort him." 2 Cor. 2: 4-6. He means that the expression of the evil of the offense and the readiness of the church to preserve itself pure, was sufficient punishment. It was sufficiently long to bring him to repentance and hence right, and even the duty of the church to restore him to the privileges of the church.

Hence both the duty and the right of the church to discipline, disown, and restore members is clearly taught in the Scriptures.

THE RELATIONS OF THE LOCAL CHURCH TO ITS MEMBERS are solemn, tender and vital. They involve on the part of both the church and the membership most serious responsibilities. Christ having instituted the church as "the pillar and ground (stay) of the truth," it becomes the imperative duty of all professing faith in Christ to unite with the church. Neglect to do so is to dishonor Christ. The church is entitled to the prayers, sympathy, and good will of every member, and to such a portion of his time and means as the Lord may enable him to use for its advancement.

Every member is a soul entrusted by Christ to the church to protect and develop for heaven. The church is therefore under obligations to furnish the best possible public Gospel instruction, exercise a loving watchcare over the members, and employ the utmost diligence to present them at last "perfect in Christ Jesus."

Every member in good standing is entitled to all the privileges afforded by the church, including an equal voice on all questions that may come before the church. He is required to fulfill to the extent of his ability the vows and obligations assumed on uniting with the church; and should he neglect or violate covenant obligations, or depart from the faith of the Gospel, it is the duty of the church to bring him under discipline with a view of restoring him. While every member has the right of private judgment, the church holds certain articles of faith and practice, a professed belief and acceptance of which are necessary to membership. Whenever a member materially dissents from these, it is evident he has no right to continue his membership to the subversion of the doctrine and practice of the church.

includes all the means employed by which the church trains and educates its members for heaven. Among the means employed are Gospel instruction, both public and private; a healthful tone of religious life in the church, and a spirit of loyalty to Christ and the church. These are most effective means to secure a pure life in the individual members.

In a more restricted sense "discipline" denotes the action of the church in reference to offenses committed by members against the law of Christ. It includes first, the mutual watchcare of members one for another. This is done privately or in the form of "members' meetings" and is a preventive of offense. Were this done in the tender, loving spirit of Christ, further discipline would seldom be necessary. True, Christian helpfulness among the members is church-life in its highest form of development. "Let the righteous smite me; it shall be a kindness." Ps. 141: 5. "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness." Gal. 6: 1, 2. "Put on as the elect of God bowels of mercies, kindness, longsuffering, forbearing one another, forgiving one another." Col. 3: 12, 13. Whenever the conduct of church members approximates this holy ideal, the spiritual atmosphere is such as will inspire every soul to a higher and holier life. In the adjustment of the rule is given by the Master in Matt. 18: 10-22. The aggrieved is to go. He takes the introductory step. He goes alone to seek an interview with a view of gaining an erring brother. If a wrong has been committed he is not at liberty to treat it indifferently. He is under obligation to go, and becomes an offender if he does not go. He goes alone (a) that the erring may have an opportunity to explain his conduct,* (b) that he may acknowledge the wrong if one has been committed, (c) that where no wrong has been committed the aggrieved may have an opportunity to ask pardon for taking offense without a cause. "If he shall hear thee thou hast gained thy brother." Thou hast restored or preserved him—hast rescued an erring one. If he will not be entreated by you when alone, "take with thee one or two more." These should be personal friends of his,—persons in whom he confides. The design of taking them is (a) that he might be entreated by them (verse 7) and (b) that they might be witnesses before the church of the conduct both of the erring one and of the aggrieved one.

The final step is to "tell it unto the church" that all possible means may be employed to reform him. Does the erring see his mistake, we are to "forgive him,"—treat him as though the offense had not been committed. "If he will not hear the church, let him be to thee as an heathen man." Expulsion should contain two elements; first, the purity of the church, and secondly, the repentance and restoration of the offender. It is the duty of the church to employ every effort to restore those who have been expelled. This is too often neglected. The offender, whom persistent love and kindness might have reclaimed, is left by neglect to perish in his sins.

DIFFERENCES AFFECTING WORLDLY MATTERS

are to be decided according to the spirit of the Gospel, and not upon legal technicalities. Hence Paul enjoins (1 Cor. 6: 1-8) that they be not carried before worldly tribunals. The appearance of church members as litigants before a worldly court, is not only inconsistent with their profession, but in itself unseemly. The welfare of the church makes it her duty to see that these Scriptural rules of discipline are properly administered. Perhaps no other cause results in so much evil in the church as the neglect of proper discipline.

*In many cases where one supposes he has been injured, a little friendly conversation would bring about a proper understanding and set the matter right.

"SUFFER LITTLE CHILDREN, AND FORBID THEM NOT."

BY NANCY D. UNDERHILL.

INSTEAD of keeping back the children in any way, rather encourage them to come to Jesus. It is the opinion of some that little children are incapable of understanding the principles of religion, hence cannot become disciples of Christ until they are large children, or men and women. Christ taught us that they were both capable of obedience and welcome as disciples, for, besides telling his apostles to let them come, not forbidding them, he said, "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of heaven as a little child, shall in no wise enter therein."

We must, therefore, all become like little children, ere we can be saved. There are many little innocent children in heaven. Those who are not little children, when called to that blissful home, are to be humble, obedient, trustful, loving, pure in heart, just as the innocent little ones are of whom Jesus said, "Such is the kingdom of heaven." Children, only six years of age have been known to come to the Savior, have been baptized and remained faithful all their lives. The writer came to Jesus at the age of ten, and has never ceased to love the Savior. She had a cousin who was converted and baptized at nine, and ever since has been a sweet, gentle, Christian woman until the present time,—about twenty years. I am personally acquainted with a young woman who was converted at eight, and a young man who became a member of the fold at seven, both of whom still love and worship Jesus, though surrounded by ungodly men and women, who sneer at religion. All these, except one, were the children of worldly parents, and all were possessed of only ordinary intelligence. If they, surrounded by obstacles, could become servants of Christ while little, could not the children of Christian parents, who have Christian teachers and companions, privileges of meeting often with God's people for worship and encouragement, become his disciples as well?

We are told to "train up a child in the way it should go," with the promise that when he is old, he will not depart from it. As soon as a child can talk, we tell it of its good old grandparents back east, or of its dear father in the Far West, or its sweet angel brother who died before it could remember. The baby learns to lisp the name of these dear ones, it longs to see them, it talks of them to its playmates and thinks of them as altogether good, pure, and lovely.

Why could not we, just as easily, tell them of their Kind Father in heaven, who gave them all things, as to tell them of their earthly parent, or any one else who gave them a little cart, chair or doll? Why not as well tell them of our Dear Elder Brother who did so many good, kind things while here on earth, who loved and still loves them, who suffered for our sakes, and is patiently waiting in that beautiful home for us to come and live with him? Why is it not as easy to teach the trustful, believing little souls to love and honor the name of Jesus, as that of Charlie, Fanny or Papa? In the evening show them the pretty stars and tell the little ones who made them. In the morning tell your children who made the bright, warm sun. When it rains tell them who made it rain, and what a blessing the rain is; also tell them about the beauties and uses of the snow, the flowers, fruits, trees and everything else, and who made them all for us. Thus the children will soon learn of God's power and goodness, and will never forget these early lessons. At Christmas, and other suitable times, tell them of the little baby in the manger, who grew up an obedient boy, a good man, and finally became a great and good king. Tell them to sing "Jesus loves me," "Two little hands to work for Jesus," and other songs which they can learn and understand.

A lady, who afterward became and remained a good Christian, learned the whole tune (not the words) of the old hymn, "When I set out for glory," when but eight months old; she heard it sung so often. Gather the precious little ones about you every day and read a small portion of the Scripture aloud, (not a whole chapter to tire them), talk to them of the characters you have just read about, kneel with them and offer a short simple prayer. They won't understand a long, eloquent prayer, which would tire and discourage them, but can learn to pray by repeating with an older person, a few easy words of thanks and supplication. It would be much easier for grown folks to pray, if they learned it as little children.

When children are old enough to read give them a Bible or Testament, and encourage them to say a verse out of it every morning. If they need encouragement, give them pretty little cards, bearing texts of Scripture, which you may teach them to find in their own little Bibles. When they are grown it is not unlikely they will wish to make use of the knowledge thus acquired, in practical church work, but whatever be their lot, they will surely love the Bible. Don't wait till your children are as big as yourself, before you begin teaching them the "way of life." Begin now! No matter how small they are; they can learn to wag their heads and shake their fists before they can talk. They can just as readily learn to bend the knee. Sensible parents expect their children to obey them from the cradle up. Why are children not just as capable of obedience to the Heavenly Parent?

You may say, "I know so little myself." Never mind, dear sister, teach them the little you do know, and when they can read the Bible, having been taught that it is good and true, they will learn the rest themselves. The youngest converts we ever knew, were those who read the Word of God for themselves. The most faithful old ones we ever knew, were those who loved and searched the Scriptures. The greatest reformers, and the most successful missionaries the world has ever known, are those who came early to Christ. The most valiant soldiers of Christ, the most useful laborers in his vineyard, like all other accomplished and successful workmen, entered the service as little children.

If we want our children to understand music, we put them under instruction while they are small. If we wish them to understand language, we secure suitable instruction while they are little. In Germany, and other countries where soldiery is compulsory, they are taught the principles of warfare while yet little children. A Catholic priest has wisely said, "Give me a child the first seven years of its life and you may have it ever after; it will always be a Catholic." An old person entering the service of Christ at the eleventh hour, will be blessed, but a little child who enters the service has so many more years in which to labor for the good Master, besides the possibility of becoming so much more efficient than one who enters late in life. Besides, we are so much surer of the salvation of those who come, while yet innocent little children, than if they wait till grown. They will be learning more and more of the good way all the time, while, if they remain during all their childhood in the world, they will be learning worldly ways and not the better way. The younger they are, the tenderer, purer, and more trustful are their hearts. They are much more easily won, much more easily taught, and much more easily kept pure and faithful than the old, tough, hard, skeptical heart which has been impervious to all good influences for a long time. Children, in their purity and innocence have less to repent of, turn away from, or give up, than older ones. They also have a greater influence over the hearts of ungodly men and women than older people, though they be ever so religious. Oh, ye that love the Lord, feed his lambs!

Canon City, Colo.

"WHEN there is darkness before and around us, there is light above us. In the deepest gloom of earth's shadows it is possible for us to have light for our cheer and guidance if we will look upward. And here is one of the gains of dark hours, in their prompting to the upward look."

REMARKS ON PSALM 133.

BY NOAH LONGANECKER.

"Behold, how good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity! It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard: that went down to the skirts of his garments; as the dew of Hermon, and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion: for there the Lord commanded the blessings, even life for evermore."

WHETHER among members of the same family, of the same church, of the same nation, unity is both good and pleasant. The civil war between the house of Saul and David was both long and severe. Well might David exclaim at the close of this severe conflict, having learned from experience how evil, destructive, and unpleasant it was, "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"

While unity is from heaven, and is both good and pleasant, disunion is from hell, and is both evil and hateful. The Psalmist uses two similitudes to show how good and pleasant unity is among brethren. The first similitude is the anointing oil, which shows how pleasant unity is.

This "holy anointing oil" was composed of "pure myrrh, sweet cinnamon, sweet calamus, cassia, and oil olive." In short, the odor of this holy anointing oil was most pleasing.

This anointing was an emblem of the holy unction from above, from the Holy One. What is more exhilarating, pleasing, and admirable than the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit! What would this world be without "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance," and like Christian graces? Where these graces do not abound, unity cannot prevail. When it can be said, "See how these Christians love!"—then, and not till then, can we exclaim in holy admiration, "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"

The second similitude that the Psalmist uses to show the necessity of unity among brethren is, "The dew of Hermon." Maundrel says, that "with this dew, even in dry weather, their tents were as wet as if it had rained the whole night." How enriching and fructifying such dews must be!

Without the Bread of Life, and the water of life from above, without God's grace and power from on high, what "wretched, miserable, poor, blind, and naked" creatures we are! Such are all souls and organizations where unity is wanting. How sterile, barren, unfruitful, and "good for nothing," all such must be! How apt the motto of Kentucky and Missouri, "United we stand, divided we fall!" "E pluribus unum,"—"one composed of many," is a motto that others besides the United States and Wisconsin should inscribe on their banners.

"The welfare of any kingdom, city, or family, depends on its concord and unanimity." "Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand." So declared the Savior, and he knew all things. Since he loved his people to that extent that he died for them, need we wonder why he prayed so ardently in his high-priestly prayer for the unity of his people? What will bring about this Christian unity? We have briefly referred to some of the things, but will now more definitely itemize.

1. Love, affection, charity. On these Christian graces hinge all things else. Abounding in these, we will patiently bear with one another's infirmities, we will study and labor to promote one another's happiness; we will faithfully administer to one another's wants, temporal and spiritual; we will zealously watch over one another's interests, both temporal and spiritual.

2. This would naturally lead all to a sameness of design. It would lead us all to the design of glorifying God, doing good to all, and saving all. This sameness of motive or design would bring about unity of action, but without unity of sentiment, principle, truth, or law, there would still be a Babylon, a confusion of tongues and actions.

The Bible contains the only principles or truths on which a true and lasting union can be formed. In the same high-priestly prayer where Christ prayed so ardently for the unity of his people, he also prayed the Father to sanctify them through his truth. The Bible is the perfect "law of liberty," and is so "broad" that it has rules that will meet all cases that may ever be presented.

While the Bible is very explicit in things that we are to do, it is no less so in things that we must avoid, to have peace in our own hearts as well as peace and union with one another. "Charity thinketh no evil." Evil surmising must be avoided. If we cannot have love enough for one another to place the most charitable construction on the motives, words, and actions, of others, union cannot prevail. Evil surmising has kept many hearts distant from one another. Evil surmising in our own hearts does more to destroy trust and confidence in others than their actions. All evil speaking and detraction must be avoided. Detraction, or "the act of taking away from the reputation or worth of another," seems to be one of the prevailing sins of all ages. Well may James say, "For in many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body."

Detraction and evil speaking have been the cause of more fire and confusion in the camp than almost any other evil, and as there is so much of it, need we wonder that unity is so much wanting?

Another very prominent cause of confusion and disunion is sectionalism. We use the term in the senses in which both the English and Americans use it. Washington saw the danger of disunion through this evil, hence, in his farewell address he warned the people of drawing sectional lines in the Union. A sectional line was drawn between the North and the South, and we all know the result. All churches that meddled with politics were affected by this sectional line. If you doubt it, ask the M. E. church. We know of some local churches that suffered wonderfully from this source. Even to-day there is a wonderful dissatisfaction in the United States between the East and the West. Washington's farewell address and our late troubles should be a strong warning. We, as a church, should profit by this example and never draw any sectional lines between East and West, North and South. We know of a local church that has been affected seriously by drawing a line between "the east end and the west end." Draw any sectional line and the glorious principle of "unity" is lost.

Some one may say, "There is more danger in our church of drawing sectional lines between individual persons, than between local sections of territory." Such may be the case, but the principle is all the same. I was but a boy, but I remember well of a local church that had a good membership with two efficient ministers. But love between a few was wanting; evil speaking and detraction were engaged in, till a sectional line was drawn between the ministers. Those leaders were carnal,—and Paul says, "The carnal mind is not subject to the law of God neither indeed can be," and they soon had their followers, one being for Paul, the other for Apollos, and, hence, "envying, strife, and division." Love, peace and unity were lost, council after council was held. Committee after committee were called,—the two ministers with their leaders moved off, and the church was disorganized and added to the adjoining churches to save the few faithful members. "If ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors." Paul says, "For while one saith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?" These are some of the sand bars on which many an individual soul and local church have stranded. Others should profit by such ensamples and place their feet on the "Rock of Ages."

Let us all "walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." Let us all follow after unity, "for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life for evermore." The father that brought the bundle of seven sticks tied together, to his seven sons who were always quarreling, and offered one hundred dollars to the one who would break the bundle, acted wisely. He taught them the lesson that, as with the sticks, so with them. As long as they were united they would prosper, and none could injure them. Destroy the bond of union between them, and their ruin would be sure.

"Home, city, country, all are prosperous found,
When by the powerful link of union bound."

GOD'S WAY OF RECONCILIATION.

BY ROSIE S. MYERS.

VERY early in the history of time the friendship that existed between our Creator and his creatures was severed. But God is good and kind, and he devised, and executed a way of reconciling the world unto himself again. Who can describe the love of the Eternal Father in doing this? No wonder the beloved apostle, John, breaks out with this joyful exclamation, "Behold what manner of love the Father has bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God."

No greater honor could possibly be bestowed upon any one. This appellation is not attainable by a few only. God is ready to confer the title upon all who are willing to accept his terms of reconciliation.

By the offering of his only Son upon the cross, the original sin was atoned for, and the way is now open for divine acceptance with the Father, by making an application of the blood of his Dear Son. Then, why not accept the offers of mercy at once? God is reasonable as well as wise, and never asked anything of his people that they could not perform. No matter how far we may have strayed away from him, if we retrace our steps, like the prodigal son, the arms of the Father will be open to receive us.

Let it be remembered that man had no part in formulating the way of reconciliation. It is God's way of re-instating us into his favor again, and he will not be satisfied with anything that is not strictly in accordance with the directions revealed unto us in his Holy Word. If we follow in his appointed way, he will not "impute our trespasses unto us," or, in other words, he will forgive and forget our former transgressions. On the other hand, if we fail to accept him on his own terms, we must forever remain his enemies.

How many of us are in possession of that blessed hope to which the Apostle Paul and his brethren claimed a legal title, when he said, "All things are of God, who hath reconciled us unto himself by Jesus Christ?" "And hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation."

These brethren, who once were the enemies of God, were selected as "ambassadors for Christ," "in Christ's stead." They dealt out the word of reconciliation to their fellow-men, who were yet at variance with their God.

Can you, my brethren, who also are representatives of that noble calling, read the history of the lives of these holy men, how earnest and zealous they were in prosecuting the work of saving souls, —without becoming infused with the same spirit? Your mission, too, is to stand "in Christ's stead," to plead and pray with the sinner to become reconciled to God. Are you armed to go forth to meet the trials of life, and encounter the difficulties that may obstruct your path, as bravely as these brethren did? Could you, like Paul and Silas, sing praises to God at midnight, with your feet in the stocks in an inner prison? These are some of the necessary equipments to fight the battles of the Lord successfully.

Again, we, as Sunday-school teachers, have we any lot in dealing out "the Word of reconciliation?" Are we not helpers in teaching the way of eternal life to those under our instruction? This, too, is a responsible position, and we will be held accountable for neglect of duty. We cannot stay away from the Sunday-school for a trivial cause and expect God to smile upon us for the act.

Let us not forget that he who fails not to notice a sparrow when it falls to the ground, will in no wise neglect to give us our reward. And should we, in our weak efforts, be instrumental in pointing out to but one soul the way to heaven, our crown will not be without a star.

Yes, we all have a mission in this life and we should not live for ourselves alone. There is always an opportunity to help and encourage some one that needs sympathy. Let us all so live that when we are called to exchange time for eternity, the world will be better for our having lived in it.

A DEBATE.

BY C. W. DAVIS.

I HAD the pleasure of attending a Debate at Huntingdon, the County-seat of this County (Carroll). The question at issue was this: "Do the Scriptures teach that in conversion the Holy Spirit comes into immediate contact with the sinner's heart?" Mr. Hall, a Missionary Baptist affirms; Mr. Harding, a Campbellite, denies. They were both intelligent men and ably defended both sides. Mr. Hall claimed that the Holy Spirit accompanies the Word, and that he is a conviceter, coming into immediate contact with the sinner's heart, and when the seeker after truth gets far enough along, by making use of the means given us, he then receives the Holy Spirit as a comforter.

Mr. Harding claimed that the Holy Spirit was present with the Word, but never went into the sinner's heart. He said, if he wanted to convince a man, he did it by outside work,—by talking to him; he never went into a man. He quoted John 14: 17 time after time. In his last speech he said he would have gained the point if he had thundered nothing else.

I have given you a small outline of the discussion and send the subject as a query, desiring your views on it.

REMARKS.

In conversion, we understand that the Spirit always works in connection with the Word, never independent of it. The Word is the Sword of the Spirit—the instrument with which the Spirit works. The Spirit is also in the Word as much so as it was in Christ, who possessed the Spirit without measure. This Word is deposited in the heart in some manner. The influence of the Spirit goes with that Word, and in that limited sense may come in contact with the sinner's mind, but does not come in contact with the sinner's mind in the sense that the converted receive the Spirit as a comforter and a guide.

When Mr. H. undertakes to convert a man, he does not work on the outside. He gets his words to enter the mind of the man—gets them on the inside of the man. Hence his work is not on the outside, but rather on the inside. He himself gets into the heart of the man mentally; he gets in by his words; and his words and arguments are the means used to convert the man. His words come in direct contact with the man's heart.

The Holy Spirit gets into the heart through the Word. It first had the Word written, and now has it preached, and is using it as its sword by which to convert sinners, and while it does not enter the heart of the sinner to dwell there, it does nevertheless work with the sinner, without and within, to accomplish his conversion. PRAYER.

PRAYER should be offered with sincere repentance for sin. It will do no good for us to ask God's blessings, while we nurse and love iniquity in any shape. David says, "If I harbor iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me."

We must pray in the name of Christ; that is, what we ask must be by his authority. If we approach God in any other name he will not regard us favorably. Jesus says, "No man cometh unto the Father but by me."

When we ask according to the will of Christ, it is our privilege to always know that we have what we desire. John says, "And this is the confidence that we have in him, that if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us: and if we know that he heareth us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him."

Prayer must be offered in faith. We must believe that God will do just what we ask him to do. Without faith it is impossible to please him in prayer or in anything else. Jesus says, "And all things, whatsoever ye ask in prayer, believing ye shall receive." And again he says, "What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them and ye shall have them." "Lord, increase our faith."—Sel.

"I DIDN'T THINK."

WE often hear the above expression used, and sometimes by those of us of whom would be expected better things. We are so apt to forget to think, and say and do things that we have to regret afterwards. This could be all avoided if we would take time to think. It is well to spend time in thought, especially if our thoughts are pure, and were we to do so, we would get along much better in the world.

If we go through life in a thoughtless, indifferent manner, we will often have cause to say, "I didn't think," but we should "study to be quiet" and thoughtful and then we will think upon our ways and be saved of much pain and misery. Many young people have become idle and dissipated just because they did not take time to think upon their ways, and when it was too late, they discovered the great mistake of their lives. Then the folly of rushing thoughtlessly along was vividly impressed upon their minds, and no doubt they wished they could live over again their youthful days.

Such is life, therefore it becomes us to be careful in this respect. We were placed in this world for a noble purpose, and if we do not judiciously improve the time alotted unto us, and live for something, our existence will be a mere blank. Let us think soberly and we will be saved many a pang that may otherwise weigh heavily upon us. —Sel.

GROWING IN GRACE.—2 Pet. 3: 18.

BY H. M. BARWICK.

THIS subject engaged the mind of Peter and also of Paul, and is one that will profit any one by a careful consideration. We give a few reasons why we should grow in grace.

1. We are babes in Christ at the new birth. 1 Cor. 3: 1. Man is a progressive being, physically, mentally, morally and spiritually. At the spiritual birth there opens to us a boundless plane of progression and the farther we advance the more sublime and noble becomes the path, the end of which is reached only at the dawn of another life. Too many are married to the first pleasant feeling after repentance and baptism, and willingly abandon further pursuit, settling down at that point, and there remaining throughout life ignorant of the treasures farther on.

The term babes or "little children" conveys the idea of weakness, dependence and a lack of knowledge. It also implies that by and by we will outgrow this condition and become strong enough for "strong meat," having advanced beyond the need of "milk." The babe inherits the characteristics of the parent and from him imbibes a like manhood. Our parent in the spiritual birth being God, what should be expected of us? If this law were carried into effect by all Christians, then the world would know that we are his disciples.

2. We desire to excel in secular affairs. Savage or civilized this is true, and no sacrifice is too great if it will accomplish our end. We are in an age of rapid improvement. New methods, new inventions, and new theories are put into practice by all, that we may reap an abundant reward from our labors. Man advances far in advance of past researches on the road to success. One man does now what three were not able to do forty years ago.

Men of God, where are we? What new effort are we willing to put forth that our standard may be advanced and God's name glorified by more cleansed lepers? Half the ingenuity and scrutiny exercised in worldly affairs would move Christendom all along the line. We all know a good bargain and such ones we seek. Then let us learn a new trade, sell all we have and buy pearls of greatest price.

3. It brings disappointment if we do not grow. Imagine a father's disappointment if he should leave a five-year-old son at home and be absent fifteen years, and return and find the son just as he had left him. Truly that would be an unprofitable servant. How many "grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth" very rapidly for three, four, or five years, and then turn out to be only dwarfs or contract a disease and then slowly, but surely, grow weaker and weaker until bright hopes of a useful life are blasted, and they sink into an untimely, spiritual grave!

Shame befalls our countenance when a neighbor excels us in our occupation, yet we may have forty millionaires in God's grace around us, while we are not worth a dollar of the same, and yet we never take the hint that it is free and "to him that hath shall be given, and from him that hath not shall be taken even that which he hath." Paul says that "when ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again." Heb. 5: 12. Can we not feel the sting of nothingness in spiritual things as well as in worldly things?

A good seed will not bring forth fruit, even if moistened by the tears of the owner, unless he gives it the proper attention: then the abundance no one can tell. So with our soul, no one can tell its capacity until it is tested.

4. It is God's pleasure. God has always rejoiced at the success of his people and showed sympathy at their failures. His compliment to the servant with ten talents, and his reprimand to the one with one talent, is evidence that he helps those who help themselves. He has always placed our wants within the limit of our means. He saw man only partially equipped, therefore he made woman—a helpmeet. He gave the command to "be fruitful." We read that "it is the Father's good pleasure to give us the kingdom." Luke 12: 32. God waits for man to put forth the effort and he crowns it with success.

5. It encourages others. We hear the statement too often from outsiders that "we are just as good as those in the church." Either the world has suddenly been elevated to a level with the church, or the church lowered to the level of the world. Christians are to be leaders, therefore in advance of the world. "Ye are not of the world," but far, far above it.

6. "We are bought with a price." 1 Cor. 6: 20. We are not wholly our own, but belong to a Master, therefore we should glorify God in our bodies and in our spirits, which are God's. Begin with this last Scripture and stir the soil, and we shall reap a harvest of love.

HELP FROM THE SANCTUARY. Ps. 20: 2.

BY ENOCH EBY.

RECENTLY at our Bible meeting the sister, appointed to lead the next meeting, announced the subject: "I Hear." At the next meeting the brother appointed announced his subject: "Two Men." These texts seem peculiar at first thought,—perhaps we cannot see much in them to help the Christian,—but by the time ten or a dozen of warm-hearted brethren and sisters present their thoughts, the Christian must be very dull of hearing if he does not gather food to help strengthen the inner man.

The Lord knew we need help: "Without me ye can do nothing;" "his spirit helpeth our infirmities," Rom. 8: 26, but the Lord only made promises to those who desire and ask for help,—such who are trying to help themselves by working out their own salvation with fear and trembling.

We are also to help one another by not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, and to "admonish one another." Heb. 10: 25. "They that feared the Lord spake often one to another, and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written," etc. Mal. 3: 16.

Those apostolic meetings are too much neglected. Our experience is they are of more spiritual help than the ministry, where one, or at most three, do the work. These prayer-meetings give exercise to the laity, and make a healthy membership. We thus aid one another to bear our burdens, for all have them in some way. Help from the sanctuary is what we want.

THE MAN OF SORROWS.

IT was night. Jerusalem slept as quietly amid her hills as a child upon the breast of its mother. The noiseless sentinel stood like a statue at his post, and the philosopher's lamp burned dimly in the recesses of his chamber. But a moral darkness involved the nations in its unlighted shadows. Reason shed a faint glimmering over the minds of men, like the cold and insufficient shining of a distant star. The immortality of man's spiritual nature was unknown, his relations unto heaven undiscovered, and his future destiny obscured in a cloud of mystery.

It was at this period that two forms of ethereal mould hovered about the land of God's chosen people. They seemed like sister angels, sent to earth on some embassy of love. The one of majestic stature and well-formed limb, which her snowy drapery hardly concealed, in her erect bearing and steady eye, exhibited the highest degree of strength and confidence. Her right arm was extended in an impressive gesture upward where night appeared to have placed her darkest pavillion; while on her left reclined her delicate companion, in form and countenance the contrast of the other, was drooping like a flower moistened by refreshing dews, and her bright but troubled eyes scanned them with ardent but varying glances.

Suddenly a light like the sun flashed out from the heavens, and Faith and Hope hailed with exulting songs the ascending star of Bethlehem. Years rolled away, and the stranger was seen in Jerusalem. He was a meek, unassuming man, whose happiness seemed to consist in acts of benevolence to the human race. There were deep traces of sorrow on his countenance, though no one knew why he grieved, for he lived in the practice of every virtue, and was loved by all the good and wise. By and by it was rumored that the stranger worked miracles, that the blind saw, that the dumb spake, the dead arose, the ocean moderated its chilling tide; the very thunders articulated, He is the Son of God! Envy assailed him to death. Slowly and thickly guarded, he ascended the hill of Calvary. A heavy cross bent him to the earth. But Faith leaned on his arm, and Hope, dipping her pinions in his blood, mounted to the skies.—Sel.

"IT is a lovely and graceful thing to see men natural. It is beautiful to see men sincere without being haunted with the consciousness of their sincerity. There is a sickly habit that men get of looking into themselves, and thinking how they are appearing. We are always unnatural when we do that. The very tread of one who is thinking how he appears to others becomes dizzy with affectation. He is too conscious of what he is doing, and self-consciousness is affectation. Let us aim at being natural, and we can only become natural by thinking of God and duty, instead of the way in which we are serving God and duty."

DR. CHALMERS beautifully says: "The little that I have seen in the world and know of mankind, teaches me to look upon their errors in sorrow, not in anger. When I take the history of one poor heart that has sinned and suffered, and represent to myself the struggles and temptations it passes through—the brief pulsations of joy, the tears of regret, the feebleness of purpose, the scorn of the world that has little charity, the desolation of the soul's sanctuary, and threatening voices within, health gone, happiness gone—I would fain leave the erring soul of my fellow-being with him from whose hands it came."

"THE way to preach down error is to preach up truth. Never tackle Satan unless you are sure you can lay him. A great many men, by opposing error have magnified it, have glorified it, have given dignity to a hitherto unseen and comparatively unknown foe. The most that church-going people have learned of some forms of error they have learned from Christian pulpits. The Christian pulpit is not erected to preach evils, but to preach the glory of God. Infidelity is noisy, but it is shallow; a failure, an ignominious failure."

"THERE is no religion without love, and people may talk as much as they like about their religion, but if it does not teach them to be good and kind to man and beast, it is all a sham,—all a sham, and it won't stand when things come to be turned inside out, and put down for what they are."

TO THOSE WHO PRAY.

BY J. B. MOORE.

THE following article carries with it a lesson of so great import, that it was thought it might be of much use to our church in general, just at the present time, and in our great need, to send it out broadcast among our praying mothers in Israel, that they might be encouraged thereby to offer fervent petitions for laborers to be raised up by the power of the Lord, to fill the fields that are every-where white for the harvest, and wasting away for want of men and means to gather them to the Lord.

FAITH JUSTIFIED.

"About the year 1828, Mary Reed, a widow of Marblehead, moved up to Brookline, Mass., to live with her son-in-law, William Roper. Mr. Roper was a wealthy merchant, doing business with Russia, and had resided in St. Petersburg for many years. Mrs. Reed was an aged and stately lady, old enough to be the great-grandmother of the present writer, then a boy of nine.

"She was a religious woman and a consistent Christian, at a time when religion was at a very low ebb. On her arrival at her new home in Brookline, Mrs. Reed, then over seventy years of age, started a woman's prayer-meeting. After the prayer-meeting had been going on for some time, one of the attendants noticed a handsome ornament in Mr. Roper's parlor, and inquired about it. She was told that it was of Japanese origin, and that Japan was a heathen country that had completely isolated itself from the rest of the world. At once it was proposed to change their meeting from a general prayer-meeting to one for Japan, that the Lord would open it to Christian influence.

"A week or two later it was proposed to take up a collection for Japan. They were told that it would be useless; that, for two centuries, Japan had shut itself out of the world, and it was then death for a foreigner to enter Japan, or for a Japanese to go to another country.

"Notwithstanding this the women took up a collection for Japan at every meeting, and sent it to the American Board, to be used when God's providence should prepare the way.

"In a few years Mrs. Reed passed away, and the prayer-meeting came to an end. But in 1869 Japan having been opened by force of arms, Rev. D. C. Green and two other families went to Japan as missionaries, and the money, contributed forty years before, by this one prayer-meeting of women, and its accumulated interest, paid the expenses of all three families till they were settled at their missionary work in Japan, and to-day a great-great-grandchild of Mrs. Reed, having been head of a girl's school in Kyoto, the former capital of Japan, with 130 pupils, nearly every one of them Christians, is still, as the wife of a missionary, laboring to bring the people around her to the knowledge of the Lord."

The facts above, which are authentic, are related by William Hooper in Woman's Work for Woman, and ever since they first came to my notice, have made a lasting impression on my mind and heart. It is for the purpose of creating the same impression on the minds and hearts of others that they are now given to the MESSENGER.

In looking over the great fields of labor on every hand, the wide discrepancy between the labor to be performed, and the supply of those fitted and ready to undertake the work becomes more and more apparent, for we cannot begin to find men and laborers either fitted or partially fitted to go and occupy for the Lord.

Every year the field stretches wider and wider, and while our Great West is being densely peopled, there are opening every year new fields of labor where there are thousands and thousands who have never even so much as heard of our church, let alone possessing any knowledge of its faith and teachings. In some of our States our numbers show a fair increase each year and the Gospel, in its purity, is preached to a fair portion of our inhabitants, because many laborers, united in one purpose, are able, in some measure, to supply the need. But when we turn our eyes to the West, our laborers are few and far between, and when we look to other lands and other nations, we can count our laborers on the fingers of a single hand. How is this? Is not the command to "go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature," as given by Mark, and the last words of Jesus, as given by Matthew, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations?" How shall we escape if we neglect? Of course his words are binding upon all his followers until he himself comes. How is it that we have no men, scarcely, in foreign fields, and not one-tenth enough for the home fields? Is it not because we have not been asking for them? It seems so. As a church we are certainly old enough, and yet our missionary work is very, very limited indeed.

It can hardly be that the Lord has been deaf to the urgent cries of his children for a hundred and fifty years, while they all the time were trying to keep his Word more faithfully than other children of his fold.

Very early in the ministry of Jesus he spoke these words, "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest." Our great want to-day, as a church, is men,—good, faithful men, young men, true men, strong men, "men whose hearts God has touched," to go whithersoever the Spirit direct, to preach the Gospel, the whole Gospel, and nothing but the Gospel.

How is it that we are cut so short? We can have them and the means to send them, in abundance, for the asking. Let us, then, set ourselves about it. We only need do his bidding, and both will be forthcoming. Who will join in the petition to supply all our need?

For a long time the subject has seemed to press upon my heart. I have felt that, perhaps, it would be well to bring it before the membership in general and especially those who love to pray. When first awakened to the need of laborers and what our people could do if they would use earnest endeavor to enlist their friends and helpers around them in the work, I began to listen, as opportunity afforded, to see if others were praying for the same, and it is to be confessed that neither in prayer-meetings, or in public prayer or service, nor yet in a gathering of many ministers, where even one of the subjects under consideration was "Missionary Work," not so much as one petition has ever been heard asking directly for the Lord to raise up laborers for his service in his vineyard. I do not mean to say that there are none praying for laborers, but that I have not yet heard among many beloved brethren the first petition offered in public or private, that bore to our Heavenly Father that special request. Why is it? It is true that we do not pray in public for all the things that we ask for in private, but one law must ever and forever hold good,—that out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.

There are many true, loving hearts every-where among our members, that would be glad to do something for the Lord and the spread of the Gospel, if they only knew of something that they could really do that would be a help and a service.

When you cannot go yourself to spread the Gospel, you can pray that others may be sent, and God will send them. When you cannot give very much of your small means for the same purpose, you can pray that it may be put into the hearts of those who can. (But be very sure to give something, for it was said of Cornelius, that his prayers and his alms came up before the Lord for a memorial.) Then the Lord will provide.

When you cannot do great things, you can pray for others who can, and the Lord will raise them up and open the way. In short, the humblest, poorest follower of our Lord can, by faithful prayer and the prayer of faith, set in motion forces that will live and work and throb in ever-increasing pulsations to the end of time.

Then let those who are young pray for laborers, and get your companions to pray also. Let those who are older, and know the great need, pray also. Let even those who are discouraged pray. Let those who are strong and full of courage pray. Let those who have never before prayed for laborers, begin just now. Let us with "one accord" unite as a church in strong petition in our closets, around our family altars, in the mid-week prayer-meeting, at the congregational altar, whenever and wherever we pray, let us not forget to ask that God will open the way and provide the means for us to preach the Gospel to every creature under the sun.

"IT is one thing to have knowledge; it is another thing to be able to impart it. Many a man knows more than he can cause others to know; and he who has gained all the knowledge available on a given subject, may have yet to acquire the power of making it known to others. It was blunderingly said in praise of a man who had died, 'He was a very intelligible man;' but that is more than can be said for every intelligent man. To be intelligent is the first qualification of a teacher; to be intelligible is the second qualification, without which the first is of small practical value."

"AND when all is over, and our feet will run no more, and our hands are helpless, and we have scarcely strength to murmur a last prayer, then we shall see that, instead of needing a larger field, we have left untilled many corners of our single acre, and that none of it is fit for our Master's eye, were it not for the softening shadow of the Cross."

The Gospel Messenger

Is the recognized organ of the German Baptist or Brethren's church, and advocates the form of doctrine taught in the New Testament and pleads for a return to apostolic and primitive Christianity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and maintains that Faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration of the heart and mind, baptism by Trine Immersion for remission of sins unto the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, are the means of adoption into the household of God,—the church militant.

It also maintains that Feet-washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and as universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians, is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, as taught in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ.

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, James 5. 14, is binding upon all Christians.

It also advocates the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, thus giving to the Lord for the spread of the Gospel and for the conversion of sinners.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

Mount Morris, Ill., - - - - Sept. 29, 1891

ELD. HENRY GARST, of Tennessee, has been quite sick, but is now improving.

BRO. JAMES R. GISH is now preaching in Texas. Few men in our Brotherhood have preached and traveled more than Bro. Gish.

BRO. HENRY FRANTZ has arranged to spend three months of steady work in the mission field, and among the churches this fall and coming winter.

WE expect the General Mission Board to meet in Mt. Morris next Monday, Oct. 5. Parties having business with the Board can call at that time or write the Board in care of Galen B. Royer.

WE are always glad to receive newspapers containing special articles or items of news pertaining to the Brotherhood. But the sender of such papers should always mark the parts to which they desire to call our attention.

BRO. M. M. BASHOR reached his home at Sodaville, Oregon, Sept. 7, after traveling 7,500 miles and preaching forty-nine sermons.

BRO. J. J. EMMERT reports a soul-reviving feast in the Shannon congregation. Bro. David Rowland was ordained to the eldership. May the Lord stand by him in his work.

BRO. F. W. DOVE, of Washington County, Tennessee, is spending several weeks in the mission field in South-western Missouri. He will labor principally in Texas and Wright Counties.

IN this issue Bro. Enoch Eby has a good word in support of Bible or prayer-meetings, as some call them. Read what he has to say, and then organize prayer-meetings. Every church might profit by these Bible meetings.

ALL over the Brotherhood we are now in the midst of the love-feast season. This is the most enjoyable season of the year among our people. It is the time when the faithful souls can practically commune with their God, and be strengthened for the further duties of life.

IN this issue Bro. Noah B. Sherfy calls attention to ministers visiting Tennessee. We have often wondered why more of our traveling ministers do not visit that part of the Brotherhood. There is a warm-hearted set of members in Tennessee and North Carolina, and they would appreciate faithful preaching.

IN a private letter Bro. Balsbaugh says: "Let it not seem strange if we cannot see the truth alike in all its details, nor even in its broader outlines, or in some of its more radical aspects." He then adds, "Let brotherly love continue, and close up the intellectual gaps that may exist between the many minds in the household of faith."

IN No. 37, page 589, we printed that the Okaw church, Ill., would hold a love-feast Oct. 17, in connection with a series of meetings. The notice should have read, that a series of meetings would commence about Oct. 17, and the feast would be held some time during the meetings. Those interested will please make a note of this correction.

BRO. JACOB HARNISH, of Dorrance, Kans., writes us concerning the strange affliction of his eighteen year old son, whose knee commenced swelling from some unknown cause, and continued until it reached forty-five inches in circumference, and when amputated weighed seventy-five pounds. The young man seems to be doing well since the operation and is likely to recover.

WE regret to learn that Eld. Geo. W. Stambaugh, of Eagle, Nebr., is not in good health, and has not been able to do much preaching, even at home, for some time. At present the indications are that he will not be in a condition to do any evangelistic work this season. Those who have requested his services will understand, by this notice, why he has not responded to their calls.

IF those Arctic explorers, who are sacrificing life and money to reach the North Pole, would consult Job, they might learn something concerning the condition of that desolate region. Speaking of the Lord, Job says: "He stretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing." Job 26: 7. It has long since been demonstrated that the earth hangeth on nothing, but men will not believe that the North is an empty place, with nothing worth seeing, until by bitter experience they see for themselves. A little more belief in the Bible would be quite a help to some of these scientific men.

WE have just received a large assortment of Bibles. Do not fail to send for our Illustrated Bible Catalogue.

BRO. C. S. HOLSINGER, when last heard from, was in the midst of interesting meetings in Macoupin County. Several had united with the church.

THE earliest transfer of land, of which we have any record, is said to be the purchase of land made by Abraham for a burying-place. This took place 1800 years before the birth of Christ.

ALL orders for "Selections from the Brethren's Hymnal" have now been filled. The last edition has been somewhat improved by the addition of an index to the hymns in the selection. Every congregation ought to have a few dozen of these books and then organize a singing-school. Price, 10 cents; twelve copies, $1.00.

DURING the well-attended feast at Arnold's Grove, Sept. 19 and 20, brethren Franklin Myers and Wm. Eisenbise were ordained to the eldership. We are glad to see the church place these earnest brethren where they may prove themselves more useful to the cause generally. We pray the Lord to stand by them as well as all others, in maintaining the correct principles of the Gospel. Let the trumpet give no uncertain sound.

IT is a nice thing for a man to learn just where his business ends and the next man's begins. Then it is important for each one to attend to his own business and let others do the same. Many of the troubles in life are brought about by attempting to attend to somebody else's business. He who attends to his own business will have no time to meddle with that belonging legitimately to others. And when we find a man meddling with the things of others, we may rest assured that he is not attending to his own affairs well.

THE Bethlehem Iron Company has contracted to make one hundred steel guns for our Government, for the sum of $3,500,000. They are to be large, rifled cannon for coast defense, and it will take five years to fulfill the contract. But think about the Bethlehem Iron Company entering into such a contract. It looks as if it ought to be the Bethlehem Irony Company, for in what other sense should Bethlehem, the birthplace of the Prince of Peace, be associated with such warlike things? Well, it only shows that it takes the new leaven of Christianity a good while to purge out the old leaven of barbaric brutality. Christianity is the best coast defense this Government can ever have.

OLD brother John H. Umstad was extremely fond of fishing in his day. On a certain occasion, when on one of his preaching tours, he had an appointment at 4 o'clock in the neighborhood where he was stopping. As the people were generally busy, it being a week day, he concluded to go down to a creek, not far off, and fish until time to go to meeting. Four o'clock came, a little past, the house was full of people, but no Bro. Umstad to be seen. It was evident to those, who knew he was out fishing, that he had forgotten the appointment. Meeting was finally opened. Then the old brother was seen coming as fast as he could walk, having forgotten all about the appointment till it was past time. He walked right to the stand, and in his usual earnest and forcible manner said, "I GO FISHING," quoting the language of Peter. It is said he then preached one of the most powerful sermons of his life. If he were alive now, he would certainly enjoy the selected article, entitled, "The Gospel Fisherman," in this issue. We have some preachers who can find in it some food for thought, and will then begin to wonder what kind of a hook they are using.

ONE of our exchanges says: "The Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, who belongs to the most aristocratic family in Europe, has issued a decree that parents shall not permit their sons under seventeen nor their daughters under fifteen years of age to attend public balls. This experienced man of the world has seen the ruinous effects of this dancing business upon the young, and proposes to stop it if he can. Parents who disobey the decree are to be fined. Why would it not be a good plan to fine American parents who permit their children in their teens to run into vicious habits? Thousands of them would be treated to the new sensation of responsibility, and would find some means of controlling their offspring."

AN earnest brother, referring to an article sent us for publication, says: "Dear Editor:—If you think this will not be to the glory of God, do not publish it." That is the way we like to have contributors write. We may make an occasional mistake by publishing some article that ought not to have appeared, but we have a very clear conscience about the matter that we decline. Our best writers never complain when we decline some of their articles. Some years ago an able writer sent a well-prepared article to the Independent, a very scholarly paper. The editor declined the article and returned it to the author. He wrote back to the editor, saying, "I have written much for leading newspapers, but you are the first editor who had sense enough to decline one of my articles."

WE have always held, and still maintain, that if all the elders would properly present the matter to their congregations, there would be no trouble whatever about raising missionary money. As proof of this we refer to the harvest meetings mentioned in the MESSENGER the last few weeks. We had, in a late issue, a report of one congregation that gave nearly fifty dollars. All our people want is a chance to give, and they will respond freely. It is the duty of every housekeeper, without exception, to afford his members an opportunity to give as the Lord has prospered them. It is their duty to give, and if no opportunity is afforded them, somebody will be held responsible, and it is a matter of interest to the housekeeper to know whether he is the one who is to be held responsible.

MOST of our readers have very faint ideas what hardships must be endured by missionaries in new fields. The following, clipped from Secretary Peck's report of the Methodist Missionary Society on the Pacific Coast, will show what nerve is required for that class of work: "Dr. Rader, that grand man who superintends our Wyoming mission, reports that his work covers 95,000 square miles, or 500 square miles more than the States of New York, Pennsylvania, and Connecticut combined. During the conference year, in attending upon his duties as Superintendent, he traveled 13,500 miles by railroad, 1,300 miles by stage, 1,040 by his own team, and on foot 350 miles. Twenty-seven nights he slept on the ground, and cooked his own food by the way. One minister's field is fifty miles from a railroad, and the same distance from his nearest brother pastor. Another pastor, coming to the mission, swam one river, waded another, drying his clothes as he went on his happy way. Another, in five weeks form the time the spade was put into the sage-brush sod, built and completed a new church, in which the annual meeting of the mission was held. It was no crude, rough building but a tasteful, beautiful little church. Another young hero had a circuit as large as the entire State of Connecticut, with thirteen appointments." From this we may learn what kind of men we must have in these fields to succeed in keeping our plea before the people.

WE are in receipt of the program for the Ministerial Meeting of North-western Ohio, to be held in the Sugar Creek church, Oct. 5 and 6. The subjects for consideration are well selected and quite appropriate. A well-prepared sermon on the seventh and tenth questions would be an excellent way of establishing correct views on subjects of that class. We wish to encourage these ministerial meetings, believing that they may accomplish much good among our people. They are one of the expediencies of the church, and while the demand for them may not have been very great in the past, there is a growing demand for them now.

THE POSSIBILITIES OF PALESTINE.

A DISPATCH to the New York Tribune from London, Sept. 5, says: "A letter is published here to-day from the minister in charge of Christ Church, Jerusalem, saying that, on petition of the native tradesmen, the Sultan has stopped the influx of Russian Hebrews, and that he will not permit them to land in Palestine without a special order. Fifty families, who arrived there recently by steamer, were sent back. The letter adds that Baron Hirsch ought to arrange with the Porte terms of settlement which would permit of Hebrews locating in Palestine. Palestine, the writer says, is at present thinly peopled. If the country were terraced, planted and supplied with water reservoirs, it would be highly productive, and the cost would be small in comparison with the expense of the system adopted in South American countries.

In conclusion the clergyman says that the country across the river Jordan is fine and fertile, practically uninhabited, and able to receive an enormous number of settlers.

THE TEMPERANCE REFORMER.

A STRONG indication comes from Germany on the temperance question. Kaiser William, the King, proposes the following regulations, which, if adopted, will go far towards laying the foundation for a more thorough temperance reform:

"The sketch of the proposed new law does not give the amount to be paid for an imperial license. But this is probably to be regulated by the officials, as the excise taxes are regulated. No license will be issued to a person of immoral character, nor to the keeper of a place of immoral resort. No license will be issued for a saloon near a church—which is far in advance of local laws in the United States. Drug-stores can sell liquor only in sealed and labeled bottles. Liquor sellers are not allowed to sell liquor on credit—no slate business is permitted; liquor debts cannot be collected at law. The police can forbid the sale of liquors after 8 o'clock P. M. The different local governments may provide for or may prohibit the employment of female waiters. Liquor must not be sold to minors under sixteen years of age, unless accompanied by grown persons. The sale of liquor to drunkards is prohibited, and if a man becomes drunk in a saloon he must not be ejected but must be turned over to the police. Fines and imprisonment are the penalty for becoming intoxicated while engaged in work that involves the safety of life or the prevention of fire, or in the case of physicians and nurses on professional duty. Common drunkards are to be placed under legal guardianship."

While the proposed new law is not as far-reaching as prohibition, it nevertheless is a long stride in that direction. It remains to be seen whether the Reichstag will adopt the proposed law.

EDITORIAL WANDERINGS IN THE OLD WORLD.

BY D. L. MILLER.

Number Four.—Nordland.—The Rugged Coast of Norway.—The Beauties of Midnight in the Arctic Ocean. "There Shall be no more Night There."

TRONDHJEM, the starting-place for our trip to Nordland and the Arctic Ocean, is of all the larger cities of Europe the northernmost, being situated in north latitude 63° 30′, the same latitude as the southern coast of Iceland. It is nearly 22° north of Chicago and yet it enjoys a milder climate than that favored city; the mean temperature being 42° Fahrenheit. This is due to the modifying influence of the ocean currents upon the climate. Were it not for this provision made by the great Creator of the universe, all of Northern Europe would be included in the frozen regions of the North where eternal winter holds its sway. As it is, great nations of people occupy the land, the climate of which is tempered by the great ocean currents.

The city of Trondhjem was founded in the eleventh century and has a population of 24,000. It has beautiful, undulating environs and is said to be a very healthy and pleasant place to live. An old Norwegian poem has this line:

"Det er saa favert in Trondhjem at hvile."
"'Tis so pleasant in Trondhjem to dwell."

The vegetation around the city is very fine for so northerly a latitude. We purchased in the market-place, for a few pennies, a beautiful bouquet of carnation pinks, and saw a profusion of gladiolii, roses, pansies, and other beautiful flowers. The people are noted for their hospitality and kindness to strangers, as the following incident in our experience will illustrate. When we left the cars at the depot, a pleasant-looking man came to us, observing that we were strangers, and politely inquired where we wanted to go. We informed him that we wanted to take the first steamer north, and he very kindly went with us and insisted upon carrying some of our satchels to the wharf, and saw us safely on board the steamer and refused to accept any pay for his trouble. Indeed, wherever we have come in contact with the Norwegians we find them exceedingly kind and courteous, and always ready to give information about their country to strangers.

We were much interested in looking up and observing the vegetation as we traveled northward. We find wheat growing and producing a fair yield as far north as the 64th degree of north latitude. Rye, the universal crop in Scandinavia, is farmed and harvested up to 69° and oats and barley ripen as far north as the 70th degree.

In all parts of Norway are to be seen great forests of pine; and it is especially valuable owing to the fact that in this high latitude it is of a very slow growth and the rings which mark its annual increase in size are very close together. The fir tree, the spruce, the white birch, beech, oak, and maple are also to be found in the forests of the North. Plums abound as far north as 64° and apples almost up to the Arctic Circle, while cherries are found even beyond the line that separates the Temperate from the Frigid Zone. Gooseberries, currants, strawberries and raspberries may be found north of Hammerfest, at the North Cape, 71° 10′.

In addition to the influence of the ocean currents upon the climate of Norway the long Arctic summer days are helpful in ripening grain and fruit. In midsummer the sun does not go below the horizon from the middle of May until in August, and the continuous sunshine forces vegetation very rapidly. It is noticeable that the leaves on the same species of maple are much larger here than farther south.

The entire coast of Norway, from Bergen to North Cape, is a great chain-like archipelago with thousands of mountain islands. The sea cuts into the mainland and the larger islands form what are called in Norwegian, fjords, or arms of the sea. Many of the fjords are very large, that of Trondhjem being 120 miles long and of considerable width. Our ship's course northward carried us over the waters of the great arms of the sea, among the thousand islands with their great mountain walls rising abruptly from the sea in height from one to three thousand feet. The scenery presented, as we coast along the rock-bound shores of Norway, baffles description. In grandeur it does not compare with our own old Rockies or with the Alps of Switzerland, but it has a rough, rugged beauty which is all its own, and which we have never seen equaled. If the great valleys of the Rockies could be filled with water fifty fathoms deep and then opened one into another so as to be navigable, we would have the coast of Norway reproduced, only on a much larger and grander scale.

We are having most delightful weather for our northern trip. The days and nights, if half daylight can be called night, are wonderfully bright and clear. One of the beauties of the Arctic region is the clear atmosphere. The captain of our ship tells us that we are having unusually fine weather, and that rain is quite common at this season of the year, and this sadly mars the interest of the trip, but we have had bright, clear weather except the first day since we left Trondhjem, a compensation for our cloudy, rainy, foggy voyage across the Atlantic. In the clear atmosphere every mountain peak is sharply and distinctly cut, and the lights and shadows formed are a study for an artist.

The fjords at many places have the appearance of a great inland lake, walled in on all sides by precipitous mountains of bleak granite. The water is as smooth as glass, and as the ship glides smoothly and steadily over its unruffled surface, no opening appears by which we are to go forward on our voyage. At last a break in the mountain wall is seen and the ship, obedient to her rudder, which is in the hands of a trusty pilot, glides into a great mountain gorge only wide enough to allow her free passage, and we enter another open fjord, and this ever-changing scenery continues for a thousand miles.

We are led over and over again to express our wonder and admiration at the wonderful works of the Lord, and here on the rocky coast of Norway we have sermon after sermon preached to us that we shall never forget. Upon these great arms of the sea, amid the granite battlements, reared by the hand of the Almighty, God speaks as plainly to the soul that is searching for him, as he does in his revealed will, and the interpretation of the language is, "O Lord, how manifold are thy works! in wisdom hast thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches."

Wife and I sit together hour after hour, on the deck of the "Kong Halfdon," drinking in the grand, rugged beauty of the ever-changing scenery. The days are delightfully clear and pleasant, and the time speeds away unnoted. We are lost in admiration, and before we are aware of it evening comes, or, rather, what would be evening if we were at home. Here in this wonderland we have daylight nearly all the time. Even now at midnight we have a bright twilight, for the sun has only sunk a few diameters below the horizon, and we have not yet crossed the Arctic Circle. As we go further north we shall have less and less of night until we reach a point where, for a time at least, it may be said, "And there shall be no more night there."

As we sit alone in the large state room of our steamer and write these lines the hands on the dial of the clock indicate that the hour of midnight draws near, and we go on deck. The scene we behold is most wondrous for its beauty and grandeur, and it shall not, while life and reason last, fade from our memory. The night was brilliantly clear and bright. To the north not a single star is to be seen, and the words of the sage of Mesopotamia, set down in the Bible, are shown to be literally true: "He stretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing." The great bear, or dipper, and the north star are more directly overhead than at home. Our course lies centrally through a great arm of the sea, apparently surrounded by mountains that stand out in clear and bold relief in the transparent atmosphere. In the south-east the full moon, like a great globe of pale light, hangs just above the rim of the inland lake and casts a silvery sheen across its calm waters. It seems to be many times nearer the earth than we ever saw it before, but it is shorn of much of its brilliancy by the twilight when the midnight sun has sunk below the glowing horizon; and the wonderful gleams of the Northern lights as they send their white light far up into the northern heavens. The commingling of the different shades of light, as they fell upon sea and mountain, produce an effect so wonderful in its rich beauty that it cannot be set down on paper. The pen of a Taylor, or the pencil of a Raphael could never equal the task of describing this wonderful scene. We can only behold and wonder. It is well worth a trip to the Northern climes to see the grandeur of such a night, and it is the experience of a lifetime to behold a sight like this, which we have but faintly described.

How the Almighty Creator has beautified the universe, and how wonderful are all his works! The soul of the sweet singer of Israel must have been stirred to its depths by a scene like this when he exclaimed, "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge. There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard. Their line has gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world." What a time for meditation in the presence of these earthly scenes, so grand and so beautiful, and how the soul goes out to God and bows in worship to him as it stands in the presence chamber of its Creator!

And here we close this letter. When we commenced it we thought it should contain all we had to say about our northern trip, but there is so much to be seen that another letter must be written, and then the half shall not have been told. We are now in the Arctic Ocean and are nearing Tromsoe in North latitude 69° 38'. Our next letter will describe our visit to Hammerfest and Lapland. The weather continues fine, and we are having a remarkably pleasant voyage. God's blessings attend us and we praise his holy name.

"The value of everything in life depends on its power to lead us to God by the shortest road."

AN INTERVIEW.

In our leisure moments we sometimes call on Bro. Galen B. Royer, the Secretary of the General Missionary Committee, question him a good deal concerning the work, the outlook, pry into his missionary reports, and in this way learn all we can concerning the work of the Mission Board. Lately we interviewed him on figures. We wanted to know how much money had been raised for carrying on this mission work since it was inaugurated. He tells us that from 1884 to April, 1891, there has been raised for that purpose $36,094.20. That is not a very small sum.

Then we asked him how much were the expenses incurred in handling the money during that time. To this he replied that during these seven years the Committee spent for traveling expenses, stationery, postage, all incidentals, and the Secretary's salary for the last year, $711.84. It will thus be seen that it cost only two cents to handle every dollar this board received; so that ninety-eight cents out of every dollar go direct to the field. Perhaps there is no mission board in the world that can show such an economical record for handling mission money.

This is a good way to look into the workings of any board handling public money. There are mission boards in other churches that consume as much as ten and fifteen cents of every dollar received, but here is our Board using only two cents out of every dollar to defray expenses.

We then asked him how many churches there are in the Brotherhood, and he knows. It is his business to know. He knows how many are in every State, every County, about how many ministers, how many members, and a good deal about their financial standing. He tells us there are 616 congregations in the United States.

How many contributed to the mission fund last year? we asked. His answer may seem a little startling, nevertheless it is correct, for he has the figures to show. He says that out of 616, only 198, or less than one-third of the churches, contributed as churches. Of course he knows there are a few who give, in many of the other congregations, but that is not the church giving as a body. The entire sum given last year is $7,627.69. Of this amount the 198 congregations gave $2,194.71, or not one-third of the whole amount.

How about the remainder? we inquired. "Well, $1,271.85 comes from Annual Meeting contributions, refunded from loans to churches, ten Sunday-schools, children's mission, and the profits of the Miller and Sommer Debate book. The remaining $4,161.03 was given by 725 individuals, making an average for them of $5 75 each. But a still more interesting fact is that $1 603, or over one-fifth of the entire sum received was contributed by thirty-seven individual members." That looks like the bulk was given by the comparatively few. "Yes, that is true."

Did you say only ten Sunday-schools contributed last year? "Yes; I think in most cases the amount sent in was the surplus in the treasury after paying the expenses of the Sunday-school." "And I further think," continued Bro. Royer, "that here is a working point, and I wish we could get the superintendents and Sunday-schools to adopt it. Giving is a thing to be learned just like keeping. A parent teaches his child to keep his money, i. e., not spend it foolishly, but invest it profitably.

"Giving to the Lord comes under the same line of teaching. It is teaching the child not to spend his money foolishly, for then he will have none to give, but to save it so that he may give it to the Lord. This is the best investment any child or man can make in this world with a part of his money. The Sunday-school is the place to instill this principle into the minds and hearts of our young people, and the superintendent's encouragement will go far towards bringing about a good result. There is one Sunday-school in the Brotherhood that works on a good basis in this particular. The expenses for conducting the Sunday-school are raised privately by members subscribing a certain amount to be paid quarterly. Then all the collections are given to the mission fund. Last year the contributions alone from this Sunday-school amounted to the remarkable sum of $145. Yet outside of the District very few know that they are doing such a good work."

Since mission work has been agitated before our Annual Meeting, and received encouragement from her, for nearly forty years, and since the present plan of doing the work has been in active operation for over seven years, how do you account for the fact that last year two-thirds of the congregations did not contribute? "That question is a comprehensive one, and could have nearly as many answers as there are individual churches that do not contribute. However, this is true. While there are still a few congregations which, as a body, object to the work, the great majority do not object, but are not particularly interested in the work and the solicitation is forgotten.

"If the elders of the respective congregations would not only appoint a solicitor, but also have a regular time for doing the soliciting, the members would expect it, prepare for it, and the church would contribute from year to year. In some instances the one in charge of the congregation thinks the members too poor to do anything. Well, it doesn't take most of the flock very long to believe the same thing, and nothing is done. On the other hand, if that same foreman would appoint a solicitor, as Annual Meeting recommends, encourage the members to give as the Lord has prospered them, and let each one settle the question himself, whether or not he is able to give, the responsibility would rest on the individual, and the elder, church, and all, would be surprised to see how much would be contributed."

Do the wealthier congregations give the strongest? we asked. "One would think so at first, but the facts prove the reverse. Of course there are a few exceptions among the wealthier brethren, but the great bulk of the money comes from those in ordinary circumstances. It is exceedingly interesting to watch this phase of the work. I know one sister in very limited circumstances, who one year sewed carpet rags to earn enough to give her fifty cents for that year. Another young sister, working out at week's wages, gave $11 one year. Another who is an invalid for life, and might from a worldly stand-point save her money for a 'rainy day,' gives from $25 to $50 a year. I know her handwriting, and as soon as I receive her letter, I count on finding not less than one twenty-dollar bill between the folds of the paper, and I have never been disappointed. Then, too, she is so unpretentious about it. Nothing but 'a sister, Md.,' goes on my books. That is all she will permit me to report. The world knows not her good works; but there is an Eye that never sleeps, that is recording it all. Then I know another sister, whose husband is not a member, and is not very favorable to the church, who gives yearly, in a quiet way, $10.00 of what she makes by selling butter and eggs. Another one sends in a dollar as regular as the month comes round. It is so regular that I look for it like I do for my monthly papers."

What do you think of this inclination on the part of some to withhold their name from the public? "I admire the spirit of it. It shows a good spirit in giving. But in all cases the name and address should be given in the letter so that I can receipt for the money. I like very much the selection of some Scripture, as some do when sending their money, as I always learn something by thinking over it. It also gives me an insight into the donor's mind."

We might have continued our questioning, but we thought the above sufficient for the consideration of our readers who are interested in the missionary cause. We also trust that it may prompt all the churches that gave nothing last year to fall at once into the line of giving, and help push the good work along. Let none of those that give regularly become discouraged in the least, for all the other churches will certainly fall into the line by and by, and then we will able to accomplish a grand work in the mission field indeed.

THE Catholic News holds that the so-called Holy Coat, has in support of its genuineness, as much evidence as there is to prove that Matthew, Mark, Luke and John were written by the men whose names they bear, in reply to which the Independent says: "Let us see." We have an unbroken succession of Church Fathers and of complete translations, reaching from the end of the first century to the time of Constantine, testifying to the four Gospels, and from about Constantine's time we have manuscripts still existing. For the Holy Coat there is not one scintilla of proof before Constantine, and after him the Coat disappeared for seven centuries, and again for four, and again for three more. It has no continuous documentary history; it has no endorsement of the Catholic church even, only the approval of occasional Popes, interspersed with similar approval of rival relics. Is history a lost art?"

THE following, which we clip from the Christian Standard, is full of meaning. The Roman Catholic church is far from being asleep: "Although the Pope has been too politic to officially endorse the Cahensley scheme to prevent the Americanizing of foreign Catholics in the United States, it somehow happens that the young German who has been about the Vatican for five years, and was Cahensley's host and helper when he was in Rome last spring, is here with some secret mission in the interest of Rome. However patriotically our American hierarchs may talk, the policy of the Roman Catholic church in America is shaped in Rome, and the most narrow and bigoted Italian Cardinal may have more influence in shaping it than all of them together."

AT the present time there is quite a hostile feeling between the Pope and the Italian Government. As the Pope is growing old, and a new successor must be elected to take his place, we may look for important developments, for it is presumed that the coming Pope is to be elected outside of Italy. In case of this event it is said that Italy may possibly take possession of the Vatican, and let the new Pope shift for himself. Though old, and perhaps feeble, the Pope is by no means sleeping.

THE work went on pleasantly at Falls City, Nebr. We had a pleasant love-feast Sept. 12 and 13. From that place to Sabetha, Kans., we traveled by private conveyance,—a distance of about twenty-six miles. As to the country where the members live near Falls City, and between that place and this, it is certainly fine, abounding in apples, peaches, etc. My visit to the Falls City congregation was very pleasant. They reminded me that they appreciated the visit, and did not say, as some have heretofore, that, when "Paul went out preaching, he walked." They did not expect me to walk to them, nor from them. Neither did they say like some did, not long since, who claimed that they "enjoyed the preaching so well, that they never thought of my expenses."

Well, we are in this world for a purpose. We are to be the light of the world. Jesus gave ordinances, and sanctified elements, so that we can keep the ordinances as he did. We have the privilege of using the same elements that Jesus set apart when he was here. We can use the same ordinances, for the elements, which are necessary for that purpose, will be in existence as long as man is here, because some of the elements used by him, are such as man must have, while in this earthly house. Bread and water, are two of the essentials in sustaining the physical man. And the juice of the grape may be on hand, if man is mindful to provide for it. The same is true of the animal food, in so far as that is necessary. So there can be no excuse for man, if he does not keep the ordinances as they were delivered by Christ and the apostles. But do we realize that the body of Christ is one? And that each member in that one body must move in harmony with one mind, and that mind must be the mind of Christ? Paul says, "We have the mind of Christ." 1 Cor. 2: 16. This is expressed in the following words: "That they may all be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us." John 17: 21. In order that this happy condition of things might be brought about, one thing will be necessary, each member must make a personal application of a few Scriptures, and allow them to be applied to each one according to the sphere in which they are called to labor. To the elders Peter says, "Feed the flock of God which is among you, etc. 1 Pet. 5: 2. "And not as lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock." To those who are under the care of the overseers, Paul has this to say, "Obey them them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves: for they watch for your souls, as they that must give an account, etc." Heb. 13: 17.

That results in the following happy condition of things, "Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another; love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous." 1 Pet. 3: 8. Let us all try to bring about that very desirable end. The following will bring it: "Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing." Philpp. 3: 16. As an incentive to help us onward, let us remember, that, "even Christ pleased not himself." Rom. 15: 3. Then, as a further prompter, let us read carefully and study well, the following, "Now if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Rom. 8: 9.

Self-pleasing is the great trouble in this day and age, but Jesus tells us that we cannot serve two masters. If we wish to determine whom we are serving let us make a faithful application of the Scriptural rule, as found in 1 Cor. 10: 31, which reads thus, "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." When you wish to make a selection of something to wear on your body, let that rule control the case, and you will not buy that which is to be looked at by your fellow-men and women only. You want to adorn your body for the eye of God to behold, as well as your fellow-creatures, keeping it before your mind, that you must glorify God in this matter. God first and man second,—this is the way to do what you do, to the glory of God. If this rule is followed, you will not put many things on your bodies which give rise to any trouble. We do not need some one to interpret the Scripture for us, as much as we need a will, to do what our better judgment indicates we should do. Paul says, "This I say then, walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh." Gal. 5: 16. More crucifying of the world unto us, and of ourselves unto the world will bring about the desired condition of things in the Brotherhood. A. HUTCHISON.

McPherson, Kans., Sept. 15, '91.

From Weatherford, Tex.

I HAVE just spent about three weeks with the members of Jennings and Esterly, La., where I tried with all honesty, to present the plain truths to the people, whether they hear or whether they refuse. I did not shun to declare the counsel of God, according to the ability which God gave, and hope that the seed sown may yet bring fruit to the salvation of some souls. I left them in the hands of the Lord to whom they must give their account.

There were two baptized while I was there, mainly the fruit of other men's labors, however.

Sept. 4, I left Welch,—a station on the Southern Pacific Road,—for Houston, Texas. From there I went to Galveston thence to San Antonio and Ft. Worth, and finally reached Weatherford, Parker Co., Tex., where I am at present. I arrived here on Tuesday, Sept. 8, and found Bro. Henry Brubaker at work, like a good soldier of Jesus Christ. Through his efforts there were two baptized on Friday, Sept. 11.

On Saturday, Sept. 12, the brethren and sisters met to commemorate the sufferings and death of Christ, and keep the ordinances of the house of God. Together we had a pleasant and, I trust, a profitable little meeting. There were about twenty members present, part of them from other places. There are about twelve members at this point,—two ministers and two deacons. They have much opposition, and a hard struggle for an existence. The devil is still at large in Texas, as well as at other places, and surely he has some crafty agents.

We start from here for Nocona, Montague Co., Texas. Friends will please address us there until further notice. Our love and best wishes to all concerned. JAS R GISH.

McPherson Notes.

THE school at this place opened Sept. 2, with a good attendance, which has increased considerably since the opening. The religious work of the school is by no means neglected. The preaching service twice each Sunday, the Sunday-school, the weekly prayer-meeting and the members' meeting, all have their influence. Last Monday one of the students, the son of an elder, was received by baptism. The ministers living at McPherson are having all the labor they can perform, as so many calls are made upon them away from home. This is indeed a great mission field.

Bro. Paul Wetzel, so well known throughout the Brotherhood, is building a house here and expects to make this his home while on earth. Quite a number of old brethren and sisters have located here and others are looking this way on account of the church facilities here and the pleasant surroundings.

Quite a number of members have located in this County since the school has been started here. Before its location there were but nineteen members in the County. But now our number is quite encouraging.

The temporal blessings this year have been showered upon us by a Bountiful Giver. Never in my life did I see such a profusion of all kinds of fruit, as I saw this year in this State.

S. Z. SHARP.

From Laddonia, Audrain Co., Mo.

WIFE, sister Moomaw and I visited the members near Middletown, Mo, for the purpose of holding a love-feast and organizing a church. We expected to meet Bro. Culp, but he failed to come. I preached for the Brethren twice and held the first love-feast ever held in that County or in North-eastern Missouri. The first preaching was done here two years ago. The members here had never been at a love-feast nor had they seen any of our sisters. Having our sisters with us, made a good impression on the people, and very much encouraged the other sisters. Bro. Culp not being with us, the contemplated series of meetings could not be held, much to the disappointment of the people, as I had an appointment near Laddonia, for Sunday, about thirty miles away, where I expect to hold a series of meetings. This is a mission post. Bro. Joel Moomaw and wife are the only members here. I am here for some time. DAVID BOWMAN.

Notes and Jottings.

SINCE the Annual Meeting the writer has been trying to attend to home duties, temporal and spiritual, also looking after the wants of his own congregation, which is large and needs much attention. There are five places where we have regular preaching,—some as much as thirty and thirty-seven miles away. We also have meetings at a number of other points.

Sept. 5 we had a love-feast at one of our outposts, thirty miles from the main body. We had a very pleasant meeting; forty members were with us, who do not live near the place of meeting. Among them were Bro. John H. Brumbaugh and wife, from the Salem church, and Bro. D. S. Filbrum and wife, from the Grove church. These members aided us much by their presence, and the brethren still more by their preaching. One sister, not in the habit of going to the outskirts, said she believed it to be more profitable to go there than to the large gatherings. I say so too. May the Lord bless them all for their visit, and do them good as it did us! Let us remember the isolated places and help to build them up!

Sept. 24 Bro. James Horning and the writer are to go to Oak Shade, Ross Co., Ohio, by the authority of the Mission Board,—a distance of 125 miles,—not to preach in a comfortable, large house, near a good turnpike, but in a private house. The meetings will be at a place where people are not able to come in good vehicles, but where they come on foot across the hills, for miles, as I saw them come before, when I was there. Women may be seen walking three miles to church and carrying a large child. Do we, as well-situated members, realize how the Lord has blessed us, and are we doing what we can for the cause of Christ? Let us wake up all along the line!

Afflicted as I am with asthma, I sometimes feel as though I would better go somewhere else where my health might be improved, and not preach much for awhile, but when calls come from every direction, I say to myself, "I will go while I can, and endeavor to discharge my duty. I have a work to do and no one else can do it for me." Let all our brethren and sisters in the whole Brotherhood feel that they have a work to do and realize that God means that they shall do it, and then the cause of Christ will move onward.

To the laity, as well as our preachers, who are negligent, I want to say that we cannot enter heaven for you, neither would you wish us to do so. Just as little as we can enter heaven for another, we can do your work, nor can some one else do ours. I must labor for my salvation by obeying the Truth in all things.

For the benefit of a number, I will give my whereabouts for the next three months. The Lord willing I will go Oct. 1 to Lower Fall Creek Ind.; Oct. 6 to the County Line church, Ada, Ohio; Oct. 17 to Mexico, Ind.; Nov. 6 to the Middle River church, Augusta Co., Va.; Nov. 21 to Pyrmont, Carroll Co., Ind.; Dec. 8 to Georgetown, Ohio; Jan. 9 to the Central house, Salem church, Ohio.

Should my asthmatic trouble continue, I may be obliged to recall some of the latter appointments and go to California to spend the winter. From Dec. 24 onward, I expect to be at home for two weeks, to attend a series of meetings in our own church, to be held by Daniel Snell, of Indiana, at the Central house of the Donald's Creek church. Address me at Forgy, Clark Co., Ohio, and all mail will be sent me, as my wife will know best where I am.

One was recently baptized in the Donald's Creek church. Praise the Lord!

HENRY FRANTZ.

Our Visit to Mill Creek, Ill.

SEPT. 10 wife and I and sister Rohrer left home to attend a love-feast in the Mill Creek congregation, Adams Co., Ill., and reached Coatsburgh the next day. Bro. T. B. Digman met us at the station and conveyed us to his home, where we met his dear family, with whom we had often met in the East in former days. The meeting was a very enjoyable one to me. Bro. Digman is the elder in charge of the Mill Creek church.

We met in the evening for preaching in the Brethren's church, in the town of Liberty, where I tried to hold forth the Word of Truth to a fair congregation. Here we also formed acquaintance with the dear brethren and sisters that were present.

Next morning we met again for public preaching but, on account of rain, the congregation was small. There were some exercises also in the afternoon. The audience was still small, but in the afternoon it cleared off, and the roads began to dry off. During the afternoon the people began to gather for Communion services, and before seven o'clock the house was filled to its utmost capacity. There were not so many members present at the feast, but all seemed to enjoy it very much. Notwithstanding the crowded house, there was the best of order. We had a very enjoyable meeting. Here I met old brother John Wolf,—one of the pioneers of this church. He is in his eighty-first year, but is able to attend meetings, and is full of zeal in the cause of his Master. I went home with him on Saturday evening after the feast. Quite a number enjoyed his hospitality during the meeting, and they were all made to feel at home.

On Sunday morning all gathered in the room for morning services, when his daughter, Prudence, and John Jackson stepped in, and were united in holy matrimony. Afterward all joined in morning services and I do feel that it was good for us all to be there and to remember our Creator.

There was meeting again in the forenoon and also in the evening. The weather and the roads by this time were good, and the people could not all find room in the house. We had the best of order however, and very enjoyable meetings.

On Monday morning we started for home, where we arrived the same day, and found all well.

Dear Brethren, it is through the grace of God that ample provisions have been made for the soul, and I do feel that we ought to try to advance the cause as much as possible. While not all may be able to preach the Word, yet those who cannot preach can give their means to help to send those who can. If we would only give a little, it would help to advance the cause of Christ, and then, when our earthly labors are ended, we can all share of the blessings of God in the Paradise above. SOLOMON BUCKLEW.

Farmington, Ill.

Arnold's Grove Love-Feast.

IN company with wife and others, we attended the feast at Arnold's Grove, Ill., Sept. 19. Services opened at 1 P. M. Our hearts were made to rejoice to see so many brethren, sisters and friends present.

During the intermission and before the examination services the vote of the church was taken for permission to ordain two brethren to the eldership and it was the desire of the church that it should be done.

The examination services were conducted by brethren Samuel Lahman and Bro. Michael Sissler. At 6:30 the house was filled with members to participate in the services of the evening, which were very impressive, and we hope the good instructions of our old brother, Michael Sissler, may not soon be forgotten. Bro. Sissler officiated, this being his old home in former years. The meeting for the evening closed at 9 P. M., and it was a Communion long to be remembered.

The following elders were at the feast: M. Sissler, Dallas Centre, Iowa, D. E. Brubaker, D. B. Eby, Geo. D. Zollars, Henry M. Martin, and David Rowland; ministers, Samuel Lahman, Jacob Delp, Israel Stees, Lewis Wallace and J. H. Crouse.

The church is under the care of Eld. J. J. Emmert, and he feeling that he needed more help in that direction, hence the ordination.

At 9 A. M. Sunday morning the house was again filled, and the brethren that were to be ordained, namely, Franklin Myers and Wm. Eisenbise, were ordained to the full ministry by the laying on of hands by elders Michael Sissler and D. E. Brubaker. The scene was very impressive, and I think has made impressions on the outside world that will not soon be forgotten. May the brethren hold out faithful! After the ordination services we listened to a very good sermon by Michael Sissler, followed by D. E. Brubaker and D. B. Eby, after which the time had come when we must take the parting hand, each one to go to his respective home. S. M. ESHELMAN.

Mt. Morris, Ill.

From the Silver Creek Church, Williams Co., Ohio.

WE, the brethren and sisters of the above-named church, held a Communion meeting June 20, at which we held a choice for one minister and two deacons. The lot fell on Bro. Jacob Keiser for minister, and Bro. Alfred A. Throne for deacon. One was baptized,—a young boy, about thirteen years of age, who is in poor health. May he prove faithful during the time that may yet be allotted unto him in this world!

Ministers present at the feast were: Elders Landon West and John Brown; ministers, Daniel Snell and G. W. Sellers. Bro. Snell officiated. We had a pleasant and, we hope, a profitable Communion season. On Lord's day morning we had a children's meeting, conducted by Bro. West.

Sept. 12 we met in quarterly council. Everything seemed to pass off in good feeling. Preparations were made for another Communion Oct. 3, if it is the Lord's will. We extend a hearty welcome to all the brethren and sisters who feel to be with us. Those coming on the Wabash R. R., will be met at Kunkle, Ohio, by giving timely notice to Bro. Alfred Throne, Pioneer, Ohio. Those coming on the C. J. & M. R. R., will be met by Mahlon Moyer, Primrose, Ohio. We expect Eld. Jeremiah Gump, of Indiana, to be with us, if possible. NOAH LONG.

Frontier, Mich.

From Sidney, Ind.

THE members of the Spring Creek church, Kosciusko Co., Ind., are still upholding the banner of Gospel liberty and doing what little they can in warning sinners and encouraging saints. We are having meetings regularly at three points. Our meetings are well attended, with the best of interest, and all are in love and union. Though we have had no accessions to the fold, yet the door of the church stands open night and day, and many are the prayers going up to God for the salvation of the lost ones.

Our thanksgiving meeting occurred Sept. 12. Bro. W. R. Deeter, of Milford, Ind., was with us on the occasion, and preached a very acceptable sermon on the subject of thanksgiving, to an attentive congregation. Bro. Deeter remained with us over Lord's Day, and preached four discourses while with us. He preached twice in the town of Sidney.

Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely, with Bro. Lewis Workman as Superintendent. We expect, the Lord willing, to hold our fall love-feast Nov. 14, commencing in the afternoon, to which all are invited. We intend to hold a series of meetings in connection with feast, if we can secure a minister to preach for us.

Health is not the very best just now. There are some cases of typhoid fever. The weather is quite warm, and we have plenty of rain.

E. MILLER.

Sept. 16.

Out on the Mountain.

SATURDAY, Sept. 12, we, in company with Eld. S. R. Zug and our evangelist, Hiram Gibble, and other brethren and sisters,—ten in all,—left for the Tower City church. This organzation extends over a large territory. The members live from eighteen to twenty miles apart, and number about twenty in all, but at the point where we were there are only four members at present. They have the promise of three applicants for baptism.

On the evening of our arrival, the Brethren had meeting in the house of Bro. Tobias, the only family that is living here. On Sunday morning they moved the meeting out to the barn, and had meeting both forenoon and afternoon. In the evening they had a love-feast, the first one ever held in the neighborhood. It was largely attended by outsiders, but it was the smallest assembly of members I ever saw at a love-feast. Two small tables were set and only seventeen members communed. When we surrounded the tables, it was so quiet that you might have heard a pin drop, and thus it continued. Though some were looking on perhaps, in a light manner, others were weeping. You should have heard the expressions made when the meeting was over! Some said, "Surely this is the right way! It is just as we read it."

This point is not more than about seventy-five miles distant from well-organized churches, which number from two to five hundred members. Is it possible that there are places, so near to such churches where the Gospel has not been preached in its purity? People stopped us on the street to inquire what kind of people we are,—whether we are some of those "feet-washers." I stopped and said, "We are; we do that as a command. The Savior told us, that if we love him, we should keep his commandments." I had some of the "Brethren's Cards" along and gave one to an inquirer. He said, "Thank you for this." After reading it he said, "I must give this to our priest; this is pretty plain language." Brethren, let us not forget these places near home!

Bro. Zigler was also present at the love-feast. He is working hard for the missionary cause. There were some powerful sermons preached by the Brethren. GEO. S. SCHREINER.

White Oak Church, Pa.

From Pleasant Hill, Tenn.

OUR congregation at this place is increasing in members and our church work is prospering. During the Holidays last winter, brethren William A. Sherfy and David Clapper held a series of meetings, which resulted in the addition of six members by baptism and one reclaimed.

Bro. M. M. Bashor, of Oregon, on his return from the Annual Meeting, last June, stopped off at Bristol, Tenn., and came to our place, and preached one week. The Lord blessed his labors by adding nine to the church by baptism; one was reclaimed.

At our last church meeting two put on Christ by baptism. Thus we see that the Lord is carrying forward his work to the glory of his name.

Our Communion meeting will occur the third Saturday and Sunday of September. The Sunday-school at this place has been well attended during the summer, and we trust has been the means of some good.

Elder Henry Garst, who has, for many years, watched over this congregation, and broken the Bread of Life to the church so faithfully, was thought to be near the end of his earthly pilgrimage, when he sent for Eld. Joseph Wine and the writer, and was anointed in the name of the Lord. We are glad to state that since then he is improving, and we hope he will fully recover from his recent affliction.

We would welcome ministering brethren to our midst at any time. Those wishing to stop with us during the winter, will please address the writer during the next eight months at Bluff City, Sullivan Co., Tenn. NOAH B. SHERFY.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

A Pleasant Love-feast.—The members of the Elkhart Valley church held their love-feast Sept. 17. The meeting throughout was soul-cheering. Bro. A. Wise led in the services. Brethren John Stretch and Silas Ebersole, and also a number of ministers from adjoining congregations were present. The speaking and singing were good. There is no place on earth where a Christian can enjoy himself more than when seated around the Lord's table. I have found none like it. There we can hold sweet Communion with God, and with each other. We felt as Moses did,—that the place was holy ground. Ex. 3:5. —J. H. Miller, Goshen, Ind.

Two Baptized.—Yesterday we baptized two, one of whom was our son Otis, just fifteen years of age. The church seems to be in a prosperous condition. We have a good Sunday-school. Bro. Haller, from Texas, was here lately and did some preaching for us. He has bargained for a place and intends to locate at this point.—Samuel Weimer, Wyman, Ark., Aug. 7.

Ministerial Aid Desired.—A little band of about thirty members compose the Stone Lick church, Clermont Co., Ohio. Few in number as we are, our condition is rendered still worse by living so far apart,—some at a distance of about twelve miles. We have now appointed a love-feast for Oct. 3, at 10 P. M., and earnestly hope that the brethren and sisters will not forget us, but cheer us by their presence. Ministers should make a special note of our meeting.—Lydia C. Lesh, Mt. Repose, Ohio, Sept. 15.

Proposed Meetings. The Union City church is working in harmony. A love-feast has been appointed for Oct. 15, at 10 A. M., in the Brick meeting-house, one and one-half miles north of Union City, Ind. Our Sunday-school meets each Sunday and we are pleased to report good interest and attendance. We have arranged to have series of meetings held at two places in our congregation; at the one place by Bro. I. J. Rosenberger, at the other by Bro. Crosswhite. Ministering brethren, when passing through this place by rail, are invited to stop.—W. K. Simmons, Union City, Ind., Sept. 14.

Pleasant Love-feast.—Our Communion meeting in the Beaver Creek church, Va., though not so largely attended, was a pleasant one. The best of order prevailed and we had plenty of ministerial help from the adjoining churches. This made the meeting a good one, but while so many of us enjoyed the feast, a number of our brethren and sisters were at their homes with sad and sorrowing hearts, on account of the death of our esteemed brother, Shem Miller, son of the late Martin P. Miller, who died in June, 1890. Bro. Shem was confined to his bed six weeks. He was a deacon in the church, a school-teacher and a faithful Sunday-school worker. He had stern convictions of what he believed to be right, and an earnest zeal for the cause he espoused. He appeared to realize that his work was done and selected the text for his funeral,—2 Tim. 4: 7, 8. Brethren J. W. Click and Jacob Thomas made use of that text in addressing one of the largest audiences I ever saw at Beaver Creek. Our large house, 50x80 feet, did not hold all the people. Deceased was a little over thirty-six years of age. He leaves a faithful sister, a widow, one adopted daughter, and many relatives to mourn their loss, but we mourn not as those without hope.—G. W. Wine, Ottobine, Va.

Three Baptized.—The quarterly council in the Elkhart church, Ind., was held Sept. 5. The business before the meeting was pleasantly disposed of. Several letters were received and some granted. Three were baptized. Our aged elder, Andrew Bigler, is faithful in attending church,—much more so than some who are younger. May God bless the old veterans of the cross!—J. H. Miller, Goshen Ind.

Minister Elected. The Mahoning church, Ohio, held their quarterly council Aug 22. We appointed our Communion meeting for Oct. 17. Bro. J. H. Kurtz, our elder, and Bro J. Hoke were chosen as delegates to District Meeting. Bro Albert Harrold was chosen to the ministry. We decided to have a series of meetings at both of our houses during the winter.—E. Longanecker, Leetonia, Ohio, Sept. 11.

A Correction.—In the last item of news from me, in arranging it for the press, a mistake got into it. I said, "The Southern Californian, in its issue of the 13th inst, said there had eight more arrived at Lordsburg from Cerro Gordo, when in fact there were only two." You make me say there are only two at Lordsburg at this time, which is not correct, as there are some fourteen or more there now.—Geo W. Cripe, Cerro Gordo, Ill.

Pleasant Council.—To day the members of the Union church met in quarterly council. The business was all transacted in a Christian-like manner. Our delegates to District Meeting are brethren J. F. Appelman and Eli Gable. Two were received into the church by letter. Our elder, Bro. Jacob Shively, is fast declining in health. His race is well nigh run. May the good Lord sustain and keep him until he shall enter that rest that is prepared for all those that love his appearing.—Laura Appelman, Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind., Sept. 12.

Notice. The missionary solicitors and ministers of the North-eastern District of Ohio, we trust, will feel so much interested in mission affairs that they all will attend our missionary meeting, to be held Oct. 2, as announced in MESSENGER No. 34, page 542. It is expected that each minister will have a short speech on the subject and that each one will talk on a new point. That will encourage solicitors and others to do their duty, and enable us to explain to the members what good can be done with the mission funds.—Henry Royer, Miss. Solicitor, Louisville, Ohio.

In 1853 they moved to Madison Township, St. Joseph Co, Ind. Deceased was the father of three children. Two of them, with their mother, survive him to mourn his departure. Funeral services by Noah Metzler and the writer. JOHN METZLER.

Deceased had been a member of the Brethren church for fifty-five years. Funeral discourse by the writer, assisted by the home brethren. A. S. CULP.

SCHOLL.—Near Edgemont, Md., Sept. 12, 1891, Catharine, little daughter of brother and sister William Scholl, aged 1 year, 3 months and 7 days.

Funeral services by the writer, from the words, "Of such is the kingdom of God." WILBUR B. STOVER.

SMITH.—In the North Morrill church, Kans., Sept 11, 1891, Bro Jacob J. Smith, aged 69 years and 5 days.

It is with sorrow that we chronicle the death of our dear brother, commonly known as "Uncle Jake." He was truly an exemplary man in the world and in the church. He belonged to the Brethren church for a number of years, during which time he was called to the office of deacon, in which he remained faithful until death.

Deceased was born in Somerset County, Pa, in 1822, and was married to Anna Maria Nepper in 1841. His companion and five children survive him.

The remains were buried in the cemetery near Morrill, after an interesting discourse by Bro. William Davis, from the text, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints," to a large congregation of sympathizing friends and neighbors. T. A. EISENBISE.

HORNER.—In the Indian Creek congregation, Westmoreland Co., Pa., Aug. 23, 1891, infant son of Bro. E. J. Horner, aged 10 months and 28 days.

Bro Horner has been sorely bereaved, as he lost his wife not quite a year ago and now a son. Funeral services by the undersigned. D. D. HORNER.

DIEHL.—In the West Branch church, Ogle Co., Ill, Sept. 14, 1891, Bro. John Diehl, aged 79 years, 4 months and 22 days.

Bro. John Diehl was born in Franklin County, Pa., in 1812. When seven years old he moved to Bedford County and remained with his parents till March, 1840, when he married Elizabeth Bulger. Both united with the church the same year. Their union was blest with eight children. One daughter preceded him to the spirit world. He came to Illinois in the fall of 1854. His wife died in 1872. Since that time he has been living with his daughter. Bro. Diehl was a faithful member of the church for over fifty years. Funeral services by Eld Jos. Amick and others.

DETERS.—In the Cedar Lake District, De Kalb County, Ind, sister Elizabeth Deters, aged 85 years, 8 months and 12 days.

Deceased was born in Lancaster Co., Pa, Dec. 10, 1805. At the age of seventeen she united with the Albright church, and thirty-four years later she united with the German Baptist church, of which she remained a faithful and worthy member until her death. Deceased was married twice and leaves eight children. The funeral occasion was improved by Bro. J. H. Elson, assisted by Eld. James Barton, both of the home church, from Rev. 14: 13. G. I. PATTERSON.

FLORY.—In the Blue River church, Whitley, Ind., Aug. 24, 1891, of flux, Bro. Joseph Flory, aged 61 years, 3 months and 27 days. LEVI ZUMBRUN.

BRENAMAN.—In the Eden Valley church, Stafford Co., Kans, July 7, 1891, Bro. Levi Brenaman, aged about thirty years.

Disease, typhoid-pneumonia. Funeral services by the Brethren. Levi was a brother of promise to the church and although his help in the Sunday-school and church was much needed, his sun set before noon, and the night came in which he cannot work. ENOCH EBY.

BRUMBAUGH.—In the James Creek congregation, near Coffee Run, Pa, Oct. 5, 1890, of typhoid fever, sister Mary Brumbaugh, wife of Bro. Daniel Brumbaugh (deceased), aged 71 years, 9 months and 5 days.

On account of sickness in the families of several of the children and others, John H. and D. H. being in the West, the funeral services were postponed until on the Sabbath previous to our late Annual Meeting when John H., of near Dayton, Ohio, and the other afflicted members of the family were permitted to be present. GEO. BRUMBAUGH.

FANSLER.—In the Mound church, Bates Co., Mo., Sept. 10, 1891, sister Catharine Fansler, aged 80 years, 3 months and 25 days.

Deceased was a faithful and devoted member of the Brethren church for about forty years. She leaves a number of relatives and a large circle of friends to mourn for one whom they had learned to love. Funeral services conducted by brethren W. H. Miller and G. W. Lentz. HANNA BLOCHER.

KELTNER.—In the Yellow Creek church, Ill, Sept. 6, 1891, Elson Albright, infant son of brother William and sister Emily Keltner, aged 7 months and 4 days.

Thus one by one we are passing away, and the thought comes to us, "Are we prepared to meet our God?" May the blessing of God comfort the grief-stricken parents, that they weep not as those that have no hope, but that they now have a bright gem in heaven. Funeral services conducted by Bro. Jacob Delp. LEWIS E. KELTNER.

STIENEKE.—In the Maple Valley church, Cherokee Co, Iowa, July 18, 1891, Sophia Alma Stieneke, aged 23 years, 10 months and 9 days.

Deceased leaves a husband and two sons. She was a consistent sister and loved by all who knew her. Previous to her departure she called for the elders and was anointed. After that she said she was ready to go.

Deceased was a member of the church a little over three years. Funeral sermon by Eld. John Early to a large circle of friends and neighbors. JAMES HARDY.

LIFE AND SERMONS

—: OF :—

ELD. JAMES QUINTER.

The biographical part will be found quite interesting, instructive and impressive. No one can read an account of Bro. Quinter's life without feeling deeply and favorably impressed. The work shows how a poor orphan boy, by hard work, and faithfulness to his religious convictions, rose step by step, until he reached a field of usefulness and honor as broad as the Nation itself. Though dead, his good deeds and the impressive examples in piety, learning and simplicity will follow him for generations to come.

The Sermon Department contains many of his choice sermons, which will prove exceedingly interesting and profitable reading to all, and especially to our ministers and isolated members. We feel that this book will fill a long-felt want in our Brotherhood. Price, post-paid, $1.25.

During the first part of October we expect to spend several weeks in attending Communion meetings with the Brethren of the eastern part of our District. There are a number of these meetings in the western part which we would like to attend but cannot do so on account of them being held at the same time. We hope good meetings may be enjoyed every-where.

Dry weather seems to have set in, and we may have a dry period if it don't rain before this appears in print. The seeding of winter grain is about done and the farmers are now busy cutting off the heaviest corn crop ever raised in Pennsylvania. The large fruit crop is also being gathered, so that cider-making and the boiling of apple butter is a common scene every-where. Had some of the starving Europeans some of our over-abundance, there would be no necessity for suffering for want of food.

Bro. D. L., son of S. J. Miller, of Myersdale, Pa., has again returned to school. This family has passed through some severe afflictions within the last year. During the last Spring Term he was called home on account of his sister-in-law, and before his returning he witnessed the death and burial of his brother, husband of the first-named person, thus leaving four orphan children to be cared for by the surviving family. We extend to them our sympathies and pray that the Lord may sustain them in this, the day of their affliction.

THE WOODCOCK VALLEY.

One among the fertile valleys of the Keystone State is "Woodcock," hedged on the western side by Tussey's Mountain and on the eastern by Terrace Mountain, having a number of ridges thrown in, which our prairie people would be proud to call mountains,—and, indeed, we would be pleased to make an even exchange with some of them, believing that we would all be the better suited. Our "Piney Ridge" would be immensely valuable could it be dropped down crosswise somewhere in the Mississippi Valley. And could we have the alluvial soil, where it would sit, transferred to us, we would be equally blessed. But this is diverging from the subject. From one end of the valley to the other flows in many crooks and bends, the Raystown Branch, and on either side nestle the home buildings of the sturdy farmers, who were attracted there in the early opening of the country on account of the productive bottom lands, the game in the woods and the fishes in the river. The black bass are now taking possession, and a gamy fish are they, as we would like to tell you from a last week's experience, did we think that it would be unto general edification. The apostles went fishing and the Master helped them when they wouldn't "catch." This vocation seemed to be peculiarly adapted to developing men for the higher calling, and a little bit of religious meditation when the fish don't bite will teach us how at least one of the Christian graces may be developed. On our last effort in this direction we did not, however, enjoy this special blessing, as the fish did bite vigorously. The other day we had occasion to make a visit to this valley and while there we took a walk back into one of the ravines leading from the mountain, and seeing an unusually inviting seat beneath the thick foliage of a wide-spreading oak, we gratefully accepted that which nature so freely offered,—and commenced thinking. The same valley, hedged by the same mountains, and bisected and trisected by the same ridges; the same rivulets from the same springs continue to course their ways down through gulches and meadows to swell the volume of the same river. In all these things there has been but little change, and yet there have been great changes since the days when our great-grandfathers first startled the frisky squirrel or deer, wolf or panther, by the thud of the ax or the click of the flint lock. The round-logged and rough-sided cabins, with their puncheon floors and clap-boarded roofs, are no more to be seen, and the hands that then labored and the hearts that loved have long since been laid away in the silent graveyard to moulder and crumble to the dust.

But who were they, and who have taken their places? is the thought that now comes to us. A century and more ago might have been seen men,—strong men, with their wives and children from the East and South Land, wending their way through these mountain passes with their "all" in their budgets and on the pack-saddle horse, for this valley as their objective point.

Just stop to think a little, as we did, and you will have a picture before you that can be seldom or ever seen now-a-days. Do you ask what they had for supper in the evening when they got to their places of stay? Better ask where and how did they get it and prepare it? A pot, pan and a few pewter plates constituted the outfit, and a blazing fire, beside a fallen tree, the kitchen and dining-room. The supper was, perhaps, yet inside the skin of a deer or the feathers of a wild turkey or the scales of some fishes. Not much variety was required—only enough, that was all. Well, we shall not try to describe this first evening nor how they lived for the succeeding days and years. You can complete the picture from the material on hand.

The families were not many,—the Groffs,—Groves now,—the Hoovers, Brumbaughs, Grubbs, Peightals, Norrisses, Finks, Shontzes, Garvers and Buckwalters. Religiously, they were Dunkards, Mennonites, German Reformed, and Lutherans.

The same class of people and the same churches have their representatives in the Valley to-day, but there have been changes. Some have wandered from one fold to another, yet the proportion has not varied much except with the Mennonites. A few more of the fathers to lay away and this religious body will have no representative in the Valley. It might be interesting and instructive to tell why, but we forbear at this time. Suffice to say, that, unless a church cares for and gathers in her children, the end will surely come. Where there is a waste, there must be a supply. Our children, yes, our children, must be saved for the church and for Christ if the body is to be perpetuated, and were we to seek out the cause for our disorganized churches to-day, we would find their children in other churches, in other communions, but why they are there, might be another revelation. Somebody was responsible, and if we knew who they were and how, it might be of profit to us.

These are the lessons for us to learn, and we thought we saw one of them in looking back over Woodcock Valley.

If we, in our pencilings, have thrown out a lesson for others, we have our reward. James Creek and the Huntingdon Brethren churches are the outgrowth, or rather the perpetuation of the Dunkardism of the Valley over a century ago, and though it may not seem as large as it ought to be, yet when we think of the representatives we have in the great West and throughout the churches, we thank God that he has not left us without evidence of his love and faithful care. We received, we perpetuated, and we gave, and there will be hundreds to-day, as they read these lines, who will rejoice that there was a Woodcock Valley and in that Valley a people that remained steadfast in the Truth.

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

RECOMPENSE.

BY SADIE BRALLIER NOFFSINGER.

In earth's long, broad field of labor,
Men and women sit and wait
For the crowning fame and glory
Of some noble deed and great;
Scorning sore its hardship; only
Idle watchers through the years,—
Doomed at last to disappointment,
Sorrow, pain, regret and tears.

Would you, in Life's holy battles,
Have a high and noble part?
Would you have, in flaming letters,
"Conquered by a brave, true heart,"
Written on your forehead, pointing,
As the years flow swiftly on,
With their freight of grand successes,
To some deed that you have done?

Sit not idle, vainly dreaming.
Fettered with Desire's chains;
He can never wear the laurels
Who the mighty work disdains.
Toiling on through storm and sunshine,
Pausing not to dream or rest;
Conquering through firm endeavor,—
He it is whose hopes are blest.

A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

BY B. F. MOOMAW.

Chapter One.

By the request of a number of my brethren, I have concluded to write for publication a synoptical sketch of the history of the war period of my life, but in doing this at this late day, I am subjected to disadvantages that would not have been in the way earlier. Circumstances then being fresh before the mind, I could have given them minutely, in a regular line, as they occurred, with dates, as they transpired. Many incidents which would have been interesting, I will not now be able to recall.

THE CAUSE OF THE WAR.

The subject of slavery was the bone of contention in the Congress of the United States, and its abolition earnestly advocated throughout the country by some, and opposed by others. As for myself, becoming a member of the church, and opposed to slavery, and opposed to war, and for the sake of peace,—I became a member of the Colonization Society in the following manner: I was brought up with slaves and my father owned them. At that time the laws of Virginia were such that they could not be set free and remain in the State. My father devised in his will that his slaves should be sold among his children, and not out of the family. I claimed my portion of the money, and donated the whole of it to the Colonization Society, and thereby became a member of the Association, and hold my certificate of membership to-day, but the Association no longer exists, having gone into liquidation after the abolition of slavery.

About the time of this occurrence the question came before the Annual Meeting, as to what was best to be done where persons wished to become members of the church and owned slaves. A committee was appointed to form an answer; I was one of that committee. We retired to a private apartment where we worked until a late hour at night, but failed to agree. I remember that I said that I could see no better way than to send the slaves over the line, into the free States. To this a German brother responded with earnestness: "No, we don't want 'em over dare."

The next day, after dinner, the report of the committee was put before the meeting, and warmly discussed. Some of the brethren expressed ardent sympathy for the colored brother. O they felt so deeply for them! In turn I made my speech, saying that I also felt deeply for them, and if all felt as deeply for them as I did, something could be done for them. "Brethren, how deeply do you feel for them? I feel in my mind, and I feel down into my pocket for $500, or I will subscribe $50 a year for ten years, to help them to emigrate to their original country, where they can be free indeed, and be a blessing to their race."

In the discussion a certain brother became much excited, so that it was thought best to defer the question, and appoint a committee to investigate the matter, and report at next Annual Meeting. Brethren Philip Boyle, Isaac Price, D. P. Saylor, Joseph Arnold and I composed that committee, and, after an earnest and Christian effort, failing to agree, we presented a majority and a minority report,—three against two. (See Minutes of Annual Meeting, 1854.) The committee, as appears on the Minutes, was the first committee of 1853, and those named above were the committee that framed the report.

In accordance with my method on this subject, I, on going to the State of Ohio on business, took Bro. Samuel Weir with me. His limit of time, after his emancipation, having expired, and he having joined the church, and worked for his former master one year, for which he (Bro. Andrew McClure) gave him a good horse and the necessary outfit for his journey,—for his protection I took him with me. When we landed across the River, at the mouth of the Scioto River on the Ohio shore, I said to him, "Samuel, you are now a free man, on free soil," and he came near shouting for joy. We went as we had been, traveling on horseback, up the Scioto River, and arrived that evening at the residence of Bro. Thomas Major. Here we enjoyed the hospitality of sister Sarah, Bro. Major being away from home. Then, passing up the valley, we came that day into Ross County, where there was a congregation of Brethren. The next day being Sunday, we met with the Brethren at meeting. Our aged brother Calvert and Bro. Cadwalader did the preaching. I was not then in the ministry, but was elected deacon in my absence on that Western tour. I then left Bro. Samuel with the Brethren, in their care, and never saw him again. Any one wishing to know more of his history, can get it from the Book and Tract Work,—a full history, written by Bro. Landon West.

Shortly after the time when the question mentioned above was before the Annual Meeting, I wrote an article on the subject of colonization, which was published in the Gospel Visitor, and it coming into the hands of some slavery men, an effort was made to have me presented for meddling with slavery, but it failed.

CHRIST OUR REST.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

From the far-away Pacific coast there comes a sweet, heaven-freighted epistle from an "old man," pulsating with Christian greeting, and bristling with many questions. This dear old brother claims to write as the representative of "many brethren in the Lord."

Our rest of soul does happily not depend on solving the hundreds and thousands and tens of thousands of questions that crowd upon our minds even thicker as we grow older, and our horizon expands Godward. For every question that perplexed me a quarter of a century ago, I have a thousand on hand now. I expect to carry unsolved problems enough into eternity to last me ages on ages, if not forever. When the great question of our personal salvation is settled, we can patiently wait for the evolution of the other mysteries. It is not often that intellectual difficulties cause a ripple in my current of thought.

Their name is legion, and they are continually multiplying; but what God asks is a knowledge of Himself that enters into the very essence of our being, and transfigures the sap and bloom, and fruit of life. The food I ate yesterday is to-day flowing from the nib of my pen in the thoughts now tracing on this sheet. How I know not, but my ignorance does not disquiet my mind, nor in any way interfere with either my thinking or writing. So with a thousand other things of higher import.

I can see some correspondence between God's symbols and the sublime verities they represent. But of the philosophy of the verities themselves, I am as ignorant as a new-born babe. It is with this very necessity of finite being that Christ checked off Nicodemus in his inquisitiveness about the "how" of the new birth. Jesus remanded him to faith and the test of personal experience, as the only thing with which we are immediately and essentially concerned.

It is, of course, not wrong to investigate truth in all its known departments; but the more we know intellectually the greater our perplexity and confusion, if not ballasted by a living faith in Jesus that assures us an interest in the gracious and glorious possibilities of His incarnation and atonement. Faith takes in all there is, because it takes in God; while reason apprehends only a few scattered atoms which it does not know how to relate to the stupendous whole of things. "Thou wilt keep him IN PERFECT PEACE WHOSE MIND IS STAYED ON THEE; BECAUSE HE TRUSTETH IN THEE." Isa. 26: 3. The "WE KNOW" of Rom. 8: 28 constitutes "THE BLESSED LIFE."

If we know the utter surrender of the "COME" in Matt. 11: 28, we will be able to sing the jubilate in Psalm 46: 1 to 5, and 62: 1 to 8. The faith which God asks never questions its salvation, because it is large enough to include all that God is, all that He promises, and all He commands. Faith and doubt never co-exist. In such a state the soul is neither troubled nor restive about the solution of collateral problems. We never learn faster than when we are so in unison with God by an obedient, unfaltering faith that it is safe for our Father to admit us deeper into His secrets.

"Knowledge puffeth up; love edifieth." "Ye have an unction from the Holy One, and Ye know all things." 1 Cor. 8: 1. 1 John 2: 20. The anteroom may be flooded with lamplight sevenfold, while the inner chamber is black as midnight. The intellect is God's avenue, but not His pavilion. The mind affects the creed, but the heart transforms the life. "How many sacraments are there?" The Roman and Greek churches have seven. Strictly counting there are but two—Baptism and the Communion.* The love-feast is a triple institution, commemorative, prophetic, and social.

We remember Jesus in the inconceivable magnitude of His redemption, the awful depth and agony of His humiliation, and the glory of His exaltation and eternal royalty. We remember

*Webster says a sacrament is "One of the solemn religious ordinances enjoined by Christ, the head of the Christian church, to be observed by his followers." To our mind baptism, feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, the Communion, the holy kiss and the anointing, all come under this head. We hope Bro. B. will look into this subject more fully.—ED.

each other as a family having common interests and hopes, and especially as being individually ready to serve each other in lowly and loving self-sacrifice. At every meal the family is rebound in all the solemn and imperative obligations that pertain to the welfare of all its members.

The accepted signification of a sacrament is an oath. We commit ourselves anew at the love-feast to all the claims of our Redeemer, to all the necessities of His church, professing allegiance afresh to all that is implied in His crucifixion and resurrection. Baptism and the Communion are symbols of glorious meaning, and to abuse them is to be "guilty of the body and the blood of the Lord." To partake of them unworthily is to live the reverse of their signification. To be baptized, or eat bread and drink wine, and then set our affections on things on the earth, lay up treasure where moth and rust doth corrupt, and let self rule in all the relations of life, is "to lie to the Holy Ghost." God is oath-bound in all He has done for us, in all He is doing and will do, and so are we in every thought and act. Heb. 6: 17, 18; 2 Cor. 10: 5; 1 Cor. 10: 31; Col. 3: 17, 23.

You ask, "Why wash feet before supper?" Because no one is fit to set to the table of the Lord and partake of its emblems unless he is fully committed to the meekness and self-renunciation indicated by feet-washing "Is marriage a holy sacrament?" Originally one of the holiest, according to the etymology of the word sacrament. But it has become a fearfully desecrated institution, even in the church. It was designed as the propagation of what God created in His own image, but sin has perverted it into a cess-pool of lust.

"Is it right to marry saints and sinners?" Hard question. It is certainly incongruous. The prohibition in 2 Cor. 6: 14-16, does not specifically refer to wedlock, although it no doubt included it. In those days, and under circumstances then prevalent, such mongrel marriages were exceedingly perilous. They are never to be encouraged, though they are no doubt sometimes harmless, and may even have been, in certain instances, productive of good. "Unbelievers" were in the Corinthian dilemma hostile to Christ and His religion. The protest of Paul was against the conjunction of "Christ and Belial," "God and idols."

Your last question is already answered by implication. Converts are certainly to be instructed prior to baptism in all that is signified by the ordinance. Matt. 28: 19. Acts 8: 35-38. We are baptized, not unto man, not to the church, but unto God, and into God. The church is our working corporation, our disciplinary institution, our curriculum of mutual spiritual education, our opportunity for the trial and perfecting of our Christian graces, but Christ is our Head, and our Life, and our Peace and Joy, and all our motives and obligations and hopes centre in Him.

In His person is the glory and strength of Christianity. We believe, we live, we work, we grow, and are "transformed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. 3: 18. Is this our experience, my dear old brother? This is religion, this is faith as God defines it, this is "hope that maketh not ashamed," "sure and steadfast, which entereth into that within the veil." This is rest, the VERY REST OF GOD, open only to "faith which worketh by love." To the elect everything is sacramental, God in all, and all for God. The popular Christ of to-day is a dwarfed, mutilated Christ; but the Gospel Christ, accepted by faith as offered by God, is Rest, Righteousness, Peace, and Joy in the Holy Ghost. He is our Life, our bottomless, exhaustless ocean, and every tiniest rill of our life runs joyfully back to its eternal source.

Come unto Me, I will give you rest,—sweet, glorious, unbroken, divine. This is the inspiration of the saints militant, this is "the inheritance of the saints in light,"—"THE HIGH CALLING OF GOD IN CHRIST JESUS." Is our life the constant, Gospel-attested response? "THE DAY SHALL DECLARE IT." 1 Cor. 3: 13.

NEW TESTAMENT GREEK.

BY JAMES M. NEFF.

Number Eleven.

THE following query went up from North-western Ohio to our last Annual Conference at Hagerstown, Md.: "Will District Meeting ask Annual Meeting to give a Scriptural authority for ministers who are not ordained elders to anoint the sick?". This query, together with the discussion which grew out of it at the Conference, has given rise to, and created an interest in, the question:

WHO ARE ELDERS

in the New Testament sense of that term?" And it is this question which we beg permission now to discuss from the point of view indicated by the caption of this article.

This word elder, in the singular and plural forms, standing alone as the translation of a single Greek word, occurs in the Authorized Version of the New Testament, I believe, sixty-six times. In a single instance (Luke 22: 66) it is the translation of the Greek word Presbuterion. But in the Revised Version this word is translated "assembly of elders;" and as this is the better translation, we will strike out this passage from the list of texts having a direct bearing upon the question under discussion.

In Rom. 9: 12 the word elder is a translation of Meizon. But the literal and primary meaning of Meizon is greater, this being the only instance in the New Testament where it is translated elder.

But in the remaining sixty-four appearances of the word elder, it is a translation of the Greek Presbuteros. Hence the question with which we are chiefly concerned in this discussion is, What is the meaning of the Greek word Presbuteros? We first observe that it is an adjective in the comparative degree, the positive (Presbus) meaning, literally, old. Hence the comparative, Presbuteros, means older, elder, senior. Accordingly Luke (15: 25) applies this adjective to the elder son in the Parable of the Prodigal. Peter (1 Peter 5: 5) uses the word similarly, though the modified noun is not expressed. These two passages, together with John 8: 9 (where it is translated eldest), are the only instances where the word has a purely adjective use. Everywhere else (that is, in sixty-four passages out of sixty-seven) it is used as a noun.

Our next inquiry, then, should be, What is the meaning of this word Presbuteros as a noun, which is primarily an adjective, and as such means older? It would naturally follow that in the masculine gender it would simply mean an older man, and in the feminine gender an older woman. And this is true of its literal meaning. In Acts 2: 17 it appeared in the masculine plural, and is translated "old men," in distinction from the "young men," mentioned in the same verse. In 1 Tim. 5: 2 it appears in the feminine plural, and is translated "elder women." But everywhere else it is translated elder.

Very well. So far we have learned that the word elder is almost always a translation of the Greek Presbuteros; that this, though primarily an adjective, is almost always used in the New Testament as a noun; and, as such, is almost universally translated elder, meaning literally, a person advanced in life. But the question still remains to be answered, Is this word, though usually receiving the same translation, always used in the same sense? Or, is it ever used in any other than its literal signification?

The answer to this question is to be sought in the general history of the word, and a study of the contexts of the various passages of Scripture in which the word is found.

In Acts 2: 17 the word seems to be used in its most literal sense, and, as we have already stated, is translated "old men." And in 1 Tim 5: 1 it is probably used in the same sense. Paul says to Timothy (who was then a young man), "Rebuke not an older man (Presbuteros), but exhort him as a father; the younger men as brethren; the older women as mothers; the younger as sisters." But this latter passage (1 Tim. 5: 1) seems to be the only one in the New Testament where the word elder as a noun is used in this, its most literal sense.

Then there is a second sense in which the word is used; that of forefathers or ancients. It is generally believed that the word is used in this sense in Matt. 15: 2; Mark 7: 3, 5. And in Heb. 11: 2 it is most probably used in the same sense, referring to all the ancient worthies mentioned in that chapter. Most of my readers, who will make a study of these passages, will no doubt agree with me in this interpretation; as also that Paul does not have particular reference to a church officer at 1 Tim. 5: 1.

But these uses of the word (1) in the sense of men of advanced age, and (2) in the sense of forefathers or ancients, are (though the first is the primary and literal meaning of the word) the exceptional, and by no means the common and ordinary applications of it, so far as the actual usage of the New Testament writers is concerned. For out of the sixty-seven passages, containing the Greek Presbuteros, we find but two in which it seems to be used in its literal sense; that is, simply, old men; and of the sixty-six passages containing the English word elder we find but four in which it seems to be used in the second sense of forefathers or ancients.

Every-where else the word elder (a translation of the Greek Presbuteros) is used as "a term of rank or office." It shall be our next purpose, then, to learn something of the significance of that rank or office. Besides the passages already referred to, there are in the first three Gospels twenty-one passages (Matt. 16: 21; 21: 23; 26: 3, 47, 57, 59; 27: 1, 3, 12, 20, 41; 28: 12; Mark 8: 31; 11: 27; 14: 43, 53; 15: 1; Luke 7: 3; 9: 22; 20: 1; 22: 52) in which the word elder occurs; and in every case the reference is to Jewish officers. It would seem from this that the office of elder had not yet been created in the Christian church at the time of the writing of these Gospels.

Now Jewish elders, according to Dr. Thayer, were "members of the great council or Sanhedrin, so called "because in early times the rulers of the people, judges, etc., were selected from the elderly men." The term is sometimes also applied to "those who in the separate cities managed public affairs and administered justice." To this practically agree Drs. William Smith, Albert Barnes, Canon Cook, and others.

Besides the twenty-one references to these Jewish elders in the Gospels, of which we have already spoken, there are seven in the Acts (4: 5, 8, 23; 6: 12; 23: 14; 24: 1; 25: 15). And it is to be noted that in all these passages in the Gospels and Acts the word elder refers to men in some special official position, and not simply to men of advanced years.

But as we come further down in the apostolic history when the Christian church began to grow and assume more definite and organic form, we find the term elder applied to members of this new body. It is so applied in, I believe, eighteen instances, as follows: Acts 11: 30; 14: 23; 15: 2, 4, 6, 22, 23; 16: 4; 20: 17; 21: 18; 1 Tim. 5: 1, 17, 19; Titus 1: 5; 2 John 1; 3 John 1; 1 Pet. 5: 1, 5. And in every one of these, with a single exception of 1 Tim. 5: 1, it seems to be applied to an officer; and it is by virtue of his office that the term elder is applied to him.

But let us look further for evidence as to the fact of the word elder being a term of office, and as to the nature of that office. As evidence that they were church officers I refer to the fact that they were ordained into office (Acts 14: 23; Titus 1: 5); that they were frequently associated with the apostles in the transaction of important church work (Acts 15: 16); that the nature of their duties and qualifications is such as would be required in persons specially set apart to the leadership and oversight of a church. They evidently had a general charge of the church in Judea (Acts 11: 29, 30); they helped the apostles settle the question of circumcision in the council at Jerusalem (Acts 15: 2, 6; 16: 4), and to fix upon a plan whereby their decision should be made known to the churches (Acts 15: 22, 23); they were to rule (in the sense of presiding or superintending) in the churches (1 Tim. 5: 17); they were to "feed the flock of God" (they being as shepherds) "taking the oversight thereof" (1 Peter 5: 1, 2); and were in a position that made it possible for them to assume to themselves a lordship over God's heritage, or in a special way be "ensamples to the flock" (1 Pet. 5: 3).

All these Scriptures go to corroborate the statement of Dr. Thayer, that in the early Christian church the elders were "those who presided over the assemblies (or churches)." And as further evidence as to the nature of the elder's office, allow me to call special attention to Paul's exhortation to the elders of the church at Ephesus as recorded in Acts 20: 17–35. Among other things, he says to them (verse 28), "Take heed therefore to yourselves, and to all the flock (in allusion again to the figure of the shepherd and the sheep, the former representing the elder, the latter the church), over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers." Observe that the Holy Ghost is said to have made them overseers of the church.

But let us go to the Original again. Here we find that the word overseers is a translation of the Greek word Episcopous, a word which means literally, superintendents or overseers. The word occurs but five times in the New Testament; once (Acts 20: 28) translated overseers, and four times (Phil. 1: 1; 1 Tim. 3: 2; Titus 1: 7; 1 Pet. 2: 25) translated bishop. Once (1 Pet. 2: 25) it refers to Christ; elsewhere to officers in the church. Be particular to observe, then, that Paul (Acts 20: 17, 28) calls the elders bishops; and that they are also identified in Titus 1: 5, 7; and that the duty of the elders in 1 Pet. 5: 2 is defined as "taking the oversight (bishopric)." This amounts to three direct assertions that the office of elder and bishop is one and the same, and this is nowhere denied, either by statement or hint. The only distinction that is made between officers of the church is that between bishops and deacons. Phil. 1: 1; 1 Tim. 3: 1, 8.

CONCLUSION.—By the array of facts above given, it seems to me that we are unavoidably driven to the conclusion that the command, "Call for the elders of the church" (James 5: 14), in its most strict and literal sense, is not obeyed without the calling of two or more regularly ordained elders or bishops.

Nevertheless (I give it as my own opinion) I believe that the spirit of the command is fully satisfied by the calling of a single elder where circumstances make it difficult to secure the services of more than one; especially in such emergencies as that of which Bro. Geo. C. Bowman, of Tennessee, gave an account at the last Annual Meeting (see Report, pages 84 and 85); and no doubt many similar cases could be given.

I believe, then, that I am justified in insisting that, where it is possible to do so, we should be more particular to secure the services of ordained elders to perform the ordinance of anointing; but isolated members who do not find it convenient to secure the services of two regularly ordained elders should by no means feel that they are thus justified in leaving the ordinance unadministered.

HOW LONG HALT YE?

BY A. HUTCHISON.

"How long halt ye between two opinions? if the Lord be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him. And the people answered him not a word."—1 Kings 18: 21.

THE result of the above question, as given here, is not different from what we now meet when the same, or a similar question is put to persons who have not decided for Christ. They sometimes will answer this far, that they can scarcely tell what they are waiting for, and while all this is true, it is nevertheless strange that it should be that way. We do not act in this way with reference to any other business that is of interest to us. Even in the time of the "sweet singer of Israel," this halting seems to have had a place, for we hear David saying, "And now Lord, what wait I for? my hope is in thee."

While this was true of David, it is also true of every other person who has any hope of salvation at all. All hope to be saved by Jesus, but still they want to wait awhile, that is, they want to be saved and they expect Jesus to save them, but not now. Well, can any one tell why not now? What are you waiting for? How long halt ye between two opinions?

Did you ever think about what two you are halting between? One is your best friend, the other is your worst enemy. Your friend tells you that the part of wisdom is to act out your convictions, and be saved now, but your enemy tells you to put it off till some other time,—he will do his utmost to prevail upon you to put this matter away for the present. He well knows that, if he cannot succeed in getting you to halt in your efforts for salvation, his case is lost. Then, after being fully aware that the enemy is seeking your everlasting destruction by trying to induce you to procrastinate your return to Jesus, why listen to him?

We again introduce our text, "How long halt ye?" No amount of persuasion could keep you from being a millionaire, if such could be the case upon as easy terms as you are promised eternal life. Not only eternal life is promised you, but "all things are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's."

Joshua said to the Israelites, "Ye cannot serve the Lord: for he is a holy God; he is a jealous God; he will not forgive your transgressions nor your sins." Josh. 24: 19. This makes the picture look pretty dark,—to tell a man to do a certain thing, and encourage him in the work by saying, "Choose you this day whom ye will serve," and after all this, to tell him that he cannot serve God. Now we want to interrogate Joshua a little farther on this subject: Why not serve God? He answers in the twentieth verse: "If ye forsake the Lord, and serve strange gods, then he will turn and do you hurt, and consume you, after that he hath done you good."

Here we learn a very important lesson: When we decide to serve the true and living God, we must let go all other gods, for we cannot serve two at the same time. We have something further on that subject from the apostle Jude. He says, "I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not." Jude 5.

From the above Scriptures it is plain to be seen, that when we have made a decision between the two, we must not look back to the toys of earth or the sinful pleasures of our fleshly nature. The devil has no objections to our professing the religion of Jesus, just so we don't turn him out. He wants to go with us when we go into society. He wishes only to give us a little instruction as to how we shall behave, and how we shall appear. Very likely he tells us that we look just a little too plain,—we must not bring reproach upon the high profession which we have made. Yes, he turns out to be a regular attorney for Christ, only to get you to wear some of his own gilded trappings. Well may he claim that we are his servants, though we claim to be the servants of Jesus. In conclusion we have this to say: The more we yield to the insinuations and temptations of the wicked one, the less we will enjoy our fellowship with the church. If you wish to enjoy Christ and his holy service, cast out the evil one, and give your whole heart to Jesus. "How long will ye halt between the two?"

A SLAVE SET FREE.

BY AMOS T. MORRISON.

Nov. 10, 1882, my sins weighed upon me heavily, and I wanted to do what was right. I retired to my closet and on my knees I asked God to save me. He rolled the burden away.

Next morning after breakfast the question came up, "Can you serve God and use tobacco?" No, I could not think of doing that, after I had named the name of Christ. O what must I do to get rid of that terrible appetite? It seemed that I could not rid myself of it. Just then the thought came to me that if God can take the burden away, he can take the appetite away. So I stopped the use of tobacco and promised God if I died in the struggle, I never would put it into my mouth again. Then I prayed that God might remove the appetite, and glory to God in the highest, he answered my weak prayer! I have never desired it since, and I am now a free man. The Lord did it.

If there is a brother who is troubled in this way, I say, "Take courage; throw it away and go to God. He will set you free. If the light does not come immediately, do not become discouraged, for he will surely set you free, if you will only fully consecrate yourself to him. I pen these lines because I do feel sorry for those who use tobacco. I am praying for them. I believe that every brother in Christ does want to quit the use of tobacco. I know the MESSENGER has helped some to quit, and we praise God for it.

"NEITHER MALE NOR FEMALE."

BY MARY KINDELL DICKEY.

SINCE Annual Meeting has given us one year to consider whether it is in harmony with the teaching of the New Testament for sisters to break bread, the same as the brethren do in our Communion services, let us consider it well and look at all sides of the question. Let us lay aside all prejudice and preconceived opinions, and accept the truth. We have always understood the Scriptures to teach that the followers of Christ should be one undivided body. They should be baptized by the same baptism, and all should observe the ordinances in the same manner.

1. It has been urged that, because "man is the head of the woman," therefore man should break the Bread of Communion to the woman. Paul gives no such reason and is not talking about the Communion, but is showing why woman should cover her head when she prays or prophesies.

2. "Let a woman learn in silence," etc. The Communion is not a service of teaching and learning, but a service of remembrance of our Lord's death. Therefore this Scripture has no reference to the Communion.

3. "But I suffer not a woman to teach or usurp authority over the man." It is not necessary for a woman to usurp authority over a man in order to use the authority which Christ, the Great Head, has given her. "For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body." 1 Cor. 12: 12, 13. If we were all led by the same Spirit in which we were all baptized, could that same Spirit lead us to observe some of the ordinances alike, and observe one of the most sacred and solemn ones in two ways, that is, the male members break the bread to each other, while the elder breaks the bread to the female members? We think it would lead us all into the same ceremony in observing all the ordinances. We always felt we were communing as two separate bodies,—a male body and a female body, and then we would wonder which was the body of Christ. "But God tempered the body together, giving more abundant honor to that part which lacked, that there should be no schism in the body, but that the members should have the same care one for another." 1 Cor. 12: 25, 26.

4. "Wives be in subjection to your own husbands in everything,"—therefore it is proper for elders to break the bread to the sisters. Now, I do not think Paul spoke this in regard to spiritual things at all, for if we take that position, it would make the husband the savior of the wife's soul as well as that of her body, which is not in harmony with the spirit of the Gospel; if so, how can we work out our own salvation? The "everything" can only refer to the conjugal relationship and cannot, by any means, be applied to church or spiritual relationship, for spiritually there is no sex.

5. "That since woman first transgressed, it is but proper that man should hand back the emblems of life to the woman." We do not need to go back to the first sin, in order to establish the ordinances of the church. Christ himself is our pattern, -the Author and Finisher of our faith. Because woman first sinned, the Savior does not say she should never break the emblems of life.

6. "Because sisters took no part in Christ's crucifixion, therefore sisters should not break the emblems of Christ's body." This is a beautiful reason, but I fear is founded more on sentiment than Scripture. True, the sisters never took any part in his death; but do we accuse the brethren of taking an active part in that sad event? I do not think we would say they did. Peter denied him but we do not believe he took any part in his death, and Judas always was an enemy and could not be called a brother because he was never born of God. This, then, can be no reason why the elder should break the bread to the sisters.

7. "That woman is, in the order of her creation, below, and subject to, the man." I presume no one would attempt to deny the above assertion. In the natural or common sense every one knows this is true and is a Scriptural fact, but not every one will admit it is true as regards the spiritual life. God has made us spiritually equal, and each soul, whether in a male or female body, must work out its own salvation, and must look to Christ as the only spiritual head of the church. Man is not the head of the church, but simply of the woman. Man and woman does not always mean brother and sister. These facts should always be borne in mind in interpreting the Scriptures. It is not said that a brother is the head of the sister, "for ye are all sons of God, through faith in Christ Jesus." Gal. 3: 26.

It is hard for some to understand that, naturally, we are male and female, and spiritually we are neither male nor female. When the Sadducees asked Christ concerning her who had the seven husbands, "Whose wife shall she be in the resurrection?"—Luke 20: 27–37,—they understood not the spiritual relationship or the power of God, therefore Jesus said, "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures." "For they neither marry, nor are given in marriage." Why so? Because marriage belongs to the natural body, and in the resurrection sex has passed away with the natural body. We are sown a natural body, we are raised a spiritual body. In the face of all these facts, we wonder how any one can claim a spiritual superiority for the man while the Gospel so plainly teaches that any circumstance of sex does neither increase nor diminish, in any way, the spiritual life, while it neither encourages nor discourages spiritual growth.

Is a Jew Christian, who was originally a child of God according to promise, any better qualified to break the Bread of Life on account of the promise? Has the Greek Christian as good a right as the Jew Christian? Has any freeman who has been born again, as good a right as the Jew or Greek Christian? Has any bondman who has been born again as good a right as the Jew, Greek, or freeman? Has any male who has been born again, as good a right as the Jew, Greek, freeman, or bondman? Has any female who has been born again as good a right as the Jew, Greek, freeman, bondman, or male?

Paul answers, "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ." Gal. 3: 28.

The above is from the same author as "Wives be in subjection," etc., but here he is referring to the spiritual relationship and positively says there is no difference. Naturally, then, there are Jews, Greeks, freemen, bondmen, male and female, and in the natural relationship he has put a difference. The servants shall obey their masters, or be "obedient unto them with fear and trembling, in singleness of heart as unto Christ," "And ye, masters, do the same things unto them and forbear threatening." There is also a natural difference between husband and wife. "Wives submit as unto the Lord," "husbands love your wives as your own bodies," etc. Then he says, "There is no difference." There is, and there is not. Here is a case where we must study to rightly divide the truth, and we should be careful not to confound the natural with the spiritual.

All of the commands are addressed to man, he being the head of the human family, except in a few cases where it pertains to our natural relationship to each other,—the covering as a token of spiritual equality or joint heirship, and the adorning, etc. Where the Gospel makes a difference, it is plain and needs no laborious reasoning to get the idea that all the commands addressed to man in general, are addressed to the whole human family.

Therefore, since the Scriptures do not teach that we should commune differently and does teach that, spiritually, there is neither male nor female, it would be more in harmony with the Scriptures for the sisters to break the bread the same as the brethren do.

A FEW THOUGHTS.

BY J. S. FLORY.

Some weeks since I noticed in an article in the Gospel Messenger, a quotation from an old brother in which he asserted, that almost invariably, when members lose their identity by appearance, they also lose their Christianity. The idea at once struck me that it was just the other way,—when one loses his Christianity he loses his identity. The meaning is the same, but it seems more logical the latter way. Identity to the church and her peculiarities arises from the essence of true Christianity in the heart. The more we lose of the divine, inbred image and mind of Christ, the more fully we become wedded to the world, and fall in with the customs and fashions thereof, and, therefore, lose our mark of identity with the people of God. Extended thoughts may be drawn out on this subject. Let us think on it!

I have been asked to give the best method to pursue in order to have good sermon thoughts.

1. I would say all sermon thoughts should be the essence of Gospel truth.

2. The preacher's thoughts should harmonize with what he himself believes, knows and has felt in his life and power.

3. Sermon thoughts should be of a nature that others may readily appropriate them to their own use, or, in other words, the preacher should have the seeds of Divine Truth so far developed in his own faith and experience as to have plants, fit to be transplanted into other minds.

No doctrine is so convincing as that which our inner and outer life confirms. No promises are so precious to others as those we can testify to as having been proven to be true in our own case. Experience forces truth to be accepted. The workings of the Holy Spirit in the soul prepares the minister to speak with the boldness of a "son of thunder" and with the power of conviction akin to him who "spake as never man spake."

BETTER THINGS TO COME.

Let things go as ill as we can fear in this world, if we are sincere Christians there is a far better state to come, to which we shall be admitted when we are once out of this troublesome and sinful world. We are assured that we are under the constant care of Divine Providence. The tranquility of our minds in this world depends very much upon the esteem we have of Providence, and the trust we repose in God. We cannot alter the methods of Providence by all our solicitude; God will govern the world by his own measures and not by ours. The government is his, the duty of submission is ours.

Let us not, then, be peevish and quarrelsome at what he doth; but make the best use of an extraordinary instance of his providence which seems intended for our good unless we turn it another way. But it is not enough to be merely contented with Providence; we ought to be active and useful in our own places to promote the common interest, and not to repine and murmur at what is necessary for the support of it. Let us not torment ourselves with fears of what may and what may not happen; but let us commit ourselves to God in well-doing as to our Creator and Preserver.—Sel.

"What good does it do to pray? Ask the man who hath by its power been lifted above earth's sorrows, who hath received strength to overcome, and who hath the evidence in his own heart that God hears and answers prayer."

THE HOLY SPIRIT.

BY C. FITZWATER.

From the above heading, I wish to draw a few thoughts, which, I hope, may be of interest to some of the brethren and sisters, if not to all of them. We learn from the Word that God is unchangeable, is from everlasting to everlasting and to endless years the same. We believe that Father, Son, and Holy Spirit constitute the Godhead, and, inasmuch as the Father is unchangeable, we believe that the Son is unchangeable, likewise we believe the Holy Spirit to be unchangeable.

Then, how is it that persons who claim to be controlled by the teaching of Holy Writ and the guidance of the Holy Spirit, differ so widely from from those we read of in Apostolic times, who were endowed with the Holy Spirit?

I am either mistaken in getting the idea, or else I don't understand the reading of the very plainest English language in this particular, and am always ready and anxious to learn.

Let us read Acts 2: 1-4, "And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place. And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance." Again, Acts 2: 41-46, "Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls. And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers. And fear came upon every soul: and many wonders and signs were done by the apostles. And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need. And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart."

Acts 4: 32-37, "And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and one soul: neither said any of them that aught of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common. And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and great grace was upon them all. Neither was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold, and laid them down at the apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need. And Joses, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is, being interpreted, The son of consolation,) a Levite, and of the country of Cyprus, having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet."

Now, if the Holy Ghost prompted those early Christians to so much charity and liberality, as to sell their possessions, and distribute among their brethren, how is it that modern Christianity is not prompted by the same invincible Spirit? We find among Christianity so much difference, and difference in so many ways, that the problem is hard to solve. This occurs among brethren of the same persuasion, who are claiming to follow the same Word and the same Spirit.

We find, in looking over the country, some people in very limited circumstances, financially, while we find others just the reverse. We also hear occasionally, something said about conformity and sameness. That is what I am trying to bring before our minds, viz., "sameness" or "oneness" in all things. How are we to be uniform in all things, unless the high will come down to meet the low, in some respects? It is impossible for a man of a few hundred dollars and a large family to come on a level with brethren who build houses, costing thousands of dollars, and fitted out with fine furniture, and gilt inscriptions, such as "Our Beautiful Home," etc. Poor brethren cannot meet in that scale, but if the Holy Spirit takes hold of our modern Christian, it will find a level. We are commanded to not mind high things, but to condescend to men of low estate. I would at once infer from this that the high-minded must come down. Pride is a great and growing evil, but when are we to see where pride is? Is it in the cut or make, or is it in the costly material to some extent?

We all can see farther from home than at home. It seems so natural for us to see other's faults sooner than our own. Some brother may come along and imagine he sees something very wrong in me, while I may pass along his place and cannot tell by his surroundings, that a brother lives there. That may look as wonderful to me as my apparel, etc., does to him. How are we to get together now on a level? My putting away my apparel and putting on one like his will not do it. Will he tear his silver mountings off his buggy and harness, yes, put his buggy away because I can't afford one? Will he change his fine house into a plain one like mine, put away his fine furniture and get plain, or even inferior, like mine, because I am not able to get better, or fine like his?

I have now come to a problem I can't solve. If there is so wide a difference between professors of Christianity of this day and of the apostles' times, and all were prompted or led by the same spirit then and now, it certainly cannot be the same spirit now that it was then, unless it has changed. Might it not be another spirit that has taken hold of many of our modern Christian professors? We read that many spirits have gone out and are commanded to try them and see if they are of God. "Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you." 2 Cor. 6: 17.

Then, if we are to be a separate people from the world, we must be separate in all things, —big as well as little,—and especially be separate from those who sell at exorbitant prices, and guarantee things that are unreliable. Would not the Holy Spirit set this matter right? Certainly. It has never changed since the time of the apostles or or any other times. Nay, verily, the fault must be with some of us.

The apostle says: "What will it profit us to preach to others and be cast away ourselves?" I tell you, my conviction is that we all should be very careful not to trust ourselves too far, but let us examine ourselves, both rich and poor, and see if there might not be some little foxes destroying our crops unawares to us. After the Children of Israel had crossed the Red Sea, they were not yet in the promised land, so it is safest to be on the lookout, and try to know that we are in possession of the Holy Spirit, which will lead us into all the Truth.

The Holy Spirit will renovate all things. It will tear all unnecessary things from our persons; it will not misrepresent our goods, our stock or anything we have to sell; it will not ask from one dollar to one dollar and a half for a bushel of corn, because it is scarce, and in demand; it will not allow any one to guarantee a certain thing before they know it to be a fact, and take pay for more than there is; it will not make people take advantage of one another by making fair promises and then fail to perform when it is possible to do so; it will not act the hypocrite, by showing you a good face, and behind your back try to slander or bemean you in any way. It will not allow any one to use false weights and measures in buying and selling. It will not tell you that any part of God's Word is not essential. It will not tell you that any way you believe to be right, is right.

The mission of the Holy Spirit is to lead man into all the Truth, and direct and guide his footsteps to that home over there. Eventually our souls, by the help of the Holy Spirit, may be made perfect. How grand, how sublime is the idea that we have such majestic witnesses as the Word and the Spirit to testify what we are, when we are right, what to do and what to leave undone, that we may have a right to the tree of life, and enter in at the straight gate. So, if we fail to obtain a home in heaven, it will be our own fault, by indulging in some or all of those things, just named, which are contrary to the Word and Spirit of God.

THE LOST CHORD.

BY ELIZABETH H. DELP.

The poet, in the song, describes the infinite beauty of the lost chord, and then he bewails his loss. He sits down again by the keys, and music sweet, and harmonies almost divine, are found, as he searches for that one chord. But it is all in vain. The strains of that "grand amen" elude him, and he has only the hope that in heaven he may hear it again.

It is not in music alone that chords are lost. The now completed work which we admire, first existed as an ideal in the mind. But how many creations of the mind are never finished! And what becomes of the plans that are not executed, the thoughts which seem to have found no expression? Our thoughts do not perish; even though unexpressed, they go to make up the abiding elements of the life within us. Our ideals may never stand before us as a living reality, yet we are better for having them.

Paul said, "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect." How imperfect we find ourselves after a critical self-examination! But the apostle continued, "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." He did not designate in their details, the things that he would do in order to live nearer his ideal of Christian excellence. We know that he was always "looking unto Jesus," that he was ready to spend and be spent for the Lord. If we have the spirit of Christ we will gladly render him our best service.

God knows the intents of our hearts. He knows just what our daily efforts, and our patient endeavor will do for us. He sees where each line of duty, bravely followed, is leading us, and sometimes, when we are feeling encouraged by our progress, we are thwarted in some way, and we feel that we have failed. But it is not so. The Lord delivers us from ourselves and defeats our purposes, because he loves us with unchanging and unfailing love. We do not know the possibilities of our own natures, and our ideal life was too small. God sees within us the seeds of a higher life and a richer fruitage. So he pushes aside our poor little plans, and, by discipline and trial, we receive the culture that we needed. We learn to change our will to the will divine, and thus the longing of our souls for the development of the highest and noblest life, may be realized.

We shall not rest satisfied in the world; there are always lost aims, hopes and purposes over which we grieve. They are lost chords here, but let us be comforted by the thought of the singer,

> "It may be that Death's bright angel
> Will speak in that chord again,
> It may be that only in heaven
> I shall hear that grand Amen."

"Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come."—1 Cor. 16: 2.

"Every man as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give. Not grudgingly or of necessity, for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver."—2 Cor. 9: 7.

HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE?

"Every man according to his ability." "Every one as God hath prospered him." "Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not."—2 Cor. 8: 12.

A NEW BIBLE.

BY BERT CASSEL.

TRANSLATE your Bible into flesh and blood. Transcribe its commandments and blessed promises into a cheerful obedience and a hopeful trust. Rewrite its truths in an honest life. Advertise the Gospel by blessed helpfulness. Put out the sign of the Spirit's inner working,—a gloriously changed life.

Think how little you read your own Bible, and how closely you scrutinize your brother's character; then tell me, is it any wonder that the ungodly man neglects his? But there is a Bible which the ungodly will read. It is the flesh and blood translation; it is the Holy Spirit's reprint; it is the living version; it is the new emphatic diaglott,—the language of the soul blended with your own. This is the Bible that is held up before men's eyes,—the one they must see, and the one that all will read.

Can you hold up without shame, your version of Christ's life,—his redeeming power, his self-denying uplifting of the lowly? What is your rendering of God's love, and of the transforming power of the Holy Spirit. How much of God, and heaven, and redemption, and love, and honesty, and helpfulness, and grace would your neighbor know, if he had no Bible but your daily life? How about your faith and that simple, unquestioning, child-like faith that Jesus taught, and the apostles preached, and that the world and the church know so little about to-day?

Surely we are "living epistles, known and read of all men," friendly letters of love to friendless worldlings everywhere,—heaven's messengers of salvation to dying men. "Only let your conversation (general course of conduct) be as becometh the Gospel of Christ."

"As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world," "but now I go my way to him that sent me." "He shall give you another comforter, that he may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of Truth; whom the world cannot receive;" "and when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin and righteousness and judgment;" so, "Ye are the light of the world." What if, in the darkness of your presence, a soul should stumble over your misdeeds into the lowest hell! How glorious, if some benighted, sin-cursed soul, in the light of your life, should see the sun of your soul,—should break the thrall of sin, and be lighted to the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem! Heaven only knows our responsibilities.

WAYSIDE THOUGHTS.

BY J. H. MILLER.

"ACTIONS speak louder than words." This is an old adage, and in many instances true. Our walk and conduct in life are a good indication of our character.

As a rule men and women who love to read their Bibles, talk much of the "Better Land." The mind seems to be drifting in that direction. Those who are regular church-goers, seemingly are pleased to talk much of the goodness of God. I step into a man's house and look over the stand or writing desk. I can soon come to a conclusion as to his literary work. If the Bible is lying handy, and not much dust covers its lids, I conclude that the family is religiously inclined, but should I see novels and other fictitious literature, I would conclude they were seeking that wisdom that comes from beneath, that is earthly, sensual and devilish.

If I meet a man and offer him a good book, insisting upon his buying it for the family, and he tells me that he does not have the work, and is not able to make the purchase, and at the same time has a family of children growing up, who are eager for some reading matter; if he, while their souls are precious, and should be saved, will indulge his children in all the gay fashions of the day, giving them liberty to frequent places of vice and wickedness, and even desecrate the holy Christian Sabbath,—I conclude that such a man does not love his children as he should,

The young mind will not be idle. The brain must be fed, as well as the body. If we wish our children to grow up to be useful in society, we must fill their minds with useful knowledge. From the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. Fill the brain with useful knowledge, (good books) and the heart will be properly educated. The heart and mind will work in unison. The growth will be healthy,—the whole physical structure will be inclined to reach to a higher life. "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it." This training starts from the mother, and can be much encouraged by the father.

One of the first duties of parents towards their children is to make home pleasant and attractive. Singing is one of the attractive features to make a child happy and cheerful. In order to sing correctly we must have a good singing-school. Some good books will be needed. The Sunday-school is also a means to draw the young mind. Good books will also be needed. The Bible and other good books should be brought into the family circle. Pursuing this course, the results will be a blessing to our race.

PURE HOMES.

THE following most excellent advice we clip from The Christian Standard. It well deserves the attention of those concerned about domestic purity.

"When the Hebrews would keep the passover, they put away all leaven from their houses, and no leaven was to be found in all their quarters. Since Christ, our passover, has been slain, all of us who keep the feast must put away all leaven of malice and wickedness, not only out of our houses, but out of our hearts.

"Now, if the proper observance of the paschal feast required the absolute cleansing of the home, how can any family keep the perpetual Christian pascha, when the home is defiled with the leaven of impure literature, or of immoral social practices? So-called Christian homes are sometimes the nurseries of some of the worst of our public evils.

"We know of a case where two little girls, children of a preacher who abhors such things, were invited to a children's party, at the home of a playmate. It was supposed to be a Christian home, but when the children returned, behold, they had each a prize, won in a game which was as purely and essentially a piece of gambling as could be found in the city. They complained, too, that they did not secure any of the best prizes, because the mother of the little girl in whose honor the party was given, stood by her favorite and trickily assisted her to win the desirable stakes.

"If your children had been invited to a house, and on returning should tell how they had been wantonly exposed by the hostess to diphtheria, you would lose no time in applying a disinfectant, but you would take care that they should not accept another invitation to that house. So the preacher did in the case mentioned, but how many other children were there at that party who received their first taste of gambling to whom no antidote was administered?

"This is but one of many insidious ways in which silly, would-be-fashionable women, although members of a church, are corrupting the young. Eternal vigilance is the price of domestic purity, and upon domestic purity depends public purity,—social, political and religious. Nothing would so thoroughly cleanse public affairs as an utter putting away from all the professed Christian homes of the land of all leaven of immorality —from the nursery, the dining-room and the parlor.

THE WONDERFUL LAMP.

BY SOLOMON SCHUBERT.

GOD'S Word is a wonderful lamp, because it sheds such a light. Think how long it has been burning,—6,000 years, since its first rays of light were shed, when the promise was given to Adam, Gen. 3: 15. How bright and ever brighter it grows as time goes on!

Isaiah holds up a beautiful light to us. Thus it shone on, and on, till that brightest Light came into this dark world.

The light from this lamp will enable you to see the golden gates, and the redeemed around the throne, and the Lamb in the midst thereof. Whatever objection men make to the Bible, it will light your home. Though you have to go comfortless and in darkness through this world, "hope to the end," and this lamp in your hand, by God's grace, will light you home.

This light shines athwart the widest ocean and into the dreariest spots of earth. O the comforts it gives! Does this Bible comfort you when the storms pass over your soul? Do you get your comfort from this lamp? It will give comfort in trial, in affliction, in death. What a comfort to have this lamp through the dark valley, and down to the river's edge! "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from sin." Many a soul has been lighted over the river by that promise to the golden gates.

The Gospel Messenger

Is the recognized organ of the German Baptist or Brethren's church, and advocates the form of doctrine taught in the New Testament and pleads for a return to apostolic and primitive Christianity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and maintains that Faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration of the heart and mind, baptism by Trine Immersion for remission of sins unto the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, are the means of adoption into the household of God,—the church militant.

It also maintains that Feet-washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and as universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians, is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, as taught in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ.

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, James 5. 14, is binding upon all Christians.

It also advocates the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, thus giving to the Lord for the spread of the Gospel and for the conversion of sinners.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

Mount Morris, Ill., - - - - Oct. 6, 1891

ALL money for the General Mission Board should be sent to Galen B. Royer, Mt. Morris, Ill.

CONSIDERABLE correspondence and church news reached us a little too late for this issue. It will appear next week.

THROUGH an oversight, "Chapter Three" was omitted at the head of Bro. J. G. Royer's article on "The Church.—Its Government," this week. The mistake was not noticed till the first side was printed.

AN inhuman story is told of a "faith cure" family in Michigan, whose son was taken with malignant diphtheria, and they refused to call in a physician, notwithstanding the protest of neighbors. It is unfortunate that erroneous faith will lead people to sacrifice the lives of their children in such a manner. Faith and works united is wise for the body as well as for the soul.

WE are arranging to send out our prospectus next week, trusting that our agents are preparing to make a thorough canvass of their neighborhoods.

BRO. P. S. Myers has moved to Los Angeles, Cal., with the intention of making it his home for a time. His address is 1001 Kuhrtz Street, East Los Angeles.

BRO. D. M. MILLER returned from Wisconsin last week, where he has spent several weeks in the mission field. We have not yet learned the results of his labors.

BRO. M. L. WENGER, and wife, of South Bend, Ind., made us a very pleasant call last week. The people have appreciated their short visit very much. Hope they will call again.

ELD. SAMUEL MURRAY and wife, of River, Ind., are with us. They seem to be in good health, and we trust they will have a very pleasant visit among the members here. Bro. Murray is an old man with a young heart.

SERIES of meetings are opening up encouragingly. In one of the reports this week mention is made of twelve accessions and another reports thirty. We trust that this good work may be continued in all parts of the Brotherhood.

THE great liberality of Baron Hirsch, the wealthy Jew, in behalf of his persecuted countrymen in Russia, is winning for him the admiration of the civilized world. He has already offered fifteen million dollars, with a promise of much more, in order that the Russian Jews may, in some manner, be relieved by transporting them to countries where they may enjoy liberties equal with other citizens. He also intelligently realizes that great wealth brings great responsibilities, for he says of himself, in connection with this offer: "There is, in my opinion, no possibility for doubt, that the possession of great wealth lays a duty upon the possessor."

"THE trouble of exiling Jews from Russia has at length apparently blocked the entire system. A Russian steamer has just returned to Odessa with 1,000 Jews aboard whom it carried away some time ago. They were sent to Jaffa, but the authorities there protested against the landing of this class of emigrants, and the ship made for Constantinople but the passengers were not permitted to land there. The perplexed captain applied to the underwriters for instructions as to the disposal of the Jews, and in reply was ordered to return to Odessa. On arrival there he was informed by the Russian officials that, according to the Russian law, the Jews were considered in the light of fugitives and could not be admitted. That captain appears to have a permanent load of passengers."

LET it be distinctly understood that the MESSENGER is conducted in the interest of the Brethren church, and not in the interest of one or two men's opinion. Whatever will help our cause along we want, and what will militate against it,—we do not care to encourage. Our desire is to insert nothing that is a hindrance to our work. If anything of that kind has found its way into the paper it was a mistake. We are here not to propagate our private opinion, but to set forth, maintain, and to spread abroad the principles of the Brotherhood. This we are doing in all good conscience, believing that the church is resting upon the foundations of the apostles and prophets. And we trust that all who write for the MESSENGER will keep this consideration in view, remembering that the paper is for the building up of the church, and not for the purpose of pulling it down.

ONE of our congregations in the West finds it inconvenient to keep up the Sunday-school during the winter months, but they hold prayer-meetings instead. That is far better than nothing at all. A Sunday-school is a good thing even in the winter, but if we cannot have Sunday-schools, let us by all means have prayer-meetings.

THE Chicago Evening Journal says that "a recent Methodist Conference adopted a resolution that, when it is needed, prayers for rain should be offered in all the pulpits controlled by the Conference." To us it would seem far more sensible for everybody to do his duty towards God and man, and the Lord will certainly send rain when it is needed.

IN one of his articles, Bro. Balsbaugh says: "Visiting a locality and sowing seed a few weeks, and then again leaving is not the highest idea of evangelizing." We have often wished that all of our missionaries could clearly see this defect in our manner of carrying on mission work in new fields. To visit a new field, preach a few sermons, and then leave, we have always considered a waste of both time and money. When a missionary enters a place, let him remain by the seed he sows, and cultivate the plant as it grows. No other way can we make the work in new fields a success.

BRO. D. L. MILLER'S address is now changed to London, England, care of Thomas Cook and Son, Ludgate Circus, E. C. This company will forward his mail to him at different points during his travels. Those who write Bro. Miller should not forget the five cents postage required on letters sent to Europe, otherwise Bro. Miller will have to pay ten cents on every letter received. When he reached Denmark he found about thirty letters awaiting him and many of them cost him ten cents each before he could take them from the office. Twenty letters at ten cents each is $2.00. Please do not forget the five-cent postage stamp required for each half ounce or less.

WE learn that our beloved brother, S. S. Mohler, who is now living in Warrensburgh, Mo., is very slowly improving. His disease is a very complicated one, requiring great care and time to handle. While it seems to be located in his stomach, it affects the entire system, both mentally and physically. At times he is hopeful and cheerful, but has also to contend with his seasons of depression. Being a man of great activity in former years he now, no doubt, greatly misses the extensive correspondence he used to hold with most of our leading brethren. We learn that he enjoys hearing from his old correspondents as well as he ever did. We now suggest that those who have plenty of sunshine to spare will let Bro. Mohler hear from them. Give him something good and cheerful to think about.

IF a weak member desires to withdraw from the church, do not be too hasty in granting his request. Admonish him many times before you permit him to pass from under your influence. As long as there is spiritual life, there is reason for hope. With proper encouragement and forbearance men, who purposed leaving the church, have been won back again. So do not be too hasty with such. Give them time to think and also time to be kindly visited and encouraged by the faithful members. Give members time to pray for them, to "dig about" them and labor for their restoration to spiritual health. Spiritually there are some sickly among us, and they deserve the attention of those who are strong in Christ, and it is our duty to exhaust every means to restore them to health before dismissing them. When there is no chance of saving them, it is time enough to put them away.

ISOLATED members, who do not enjoy regular preaching service, ought, by all means, to have the privilege of attending prayer-meeting. In any locality, where a few members are in reasonable distance of each other, they might come together once a week, and have a very profitable season of worship. Let the meeting be opened with singing and prayer; after which a Scripture should be read, and the subject announced. A few remarks from each one, with an occasional hymn, will often do more good than a regular sermon. Close the services with prayer, and announce the place, time and subject for the next meeting. Wherever our missionaries travel they should urge isolated members to organize prayer-meetings as a means of comforting and holding the members together. We urge the isolated to try this means of grace, and let us hear from them. Any instruction needed we will cheerfully give, so far as we are able.

MINISTERS are public servants. They stand before the public for the good of the public. And while they are expected to work in harmony with the rules of the church they represent, they are also expected to exercise good judgment and taste so far as their abilities will permit. While the public may excuse the lack of knowledge in a minister who has had few opportunities for self-improvement, it never overlooks rudeness or low wit. Therefore a minister ought to be exceedingly careful what he says before the public or elsewhere. We once heard a minister at a meeting where there were several other ministers present say: "Well, I will talk awhile, and then I will be out of the way." A man who talks just to get out of the way accomplishes no good in that talk. Another one at a love-feast said, "We big wheels will take our turn, and give the little wheels a chance to turn." Such expressions are hardly becoming a minister who deals with holy things.

MANY seem puzzled to understand how the Holy Spirit could guide the believers into certain acts in the apostolic age, and then guide them differently now. It should be remembered that the Holy Spirit guides with the Word, which is the Sword of the Spirit. People who will not hear the written Word are not guided by the Spirit, and those who do listen to the Word and are led by the Spirit, follow in the same line of obedience as did the saints during the times of the apostles. It should be further borne in mind, that the mind of the Holy Spirit is the written Word. He who understands the Word understands the mind of the Spirit, for the Word was written as dictated by the Spirit. He who looks for the Mind of the Spirit outside of the Bible will never find it in this life. The meaning of the Word on any subject is the mind of the Spirit on that subject. Follow the Word and the Spirit will lead you.

THE District Meeting of Middle Iowa has decided in favor of Cedar Rapids as the place for holding the next Annual Meeting, which will convene June 7, 1892. We think the selection a good one. Cedar Rapids is a thriving city of over 17,000 population, in Linn County, not very far from where the Quinter and McConnell Debate was held. The railroad facilities are excellent and the accommodations are likely to be all that can reasonably be desired. The citizens are very much in favor of holding the Meeting in their city, and have promised to do all in their power to make it pleasant for our people. The railroad companies have also manifested a strong desire to have the Meeting located at that point, and no doubt will give rates that will be quite satisfactory. In the course of a few weeks we hope to give further information concerning the arrangements that may be agreed upon, as well as other things of interest connected with the location.

THE JEWS.

PERHAPS there has never been a time in modern history when the Jews attracted more attention than at the present. The persecution of the Jews in Russia, the prospective opening up of Palestine to the long-exiled race, together with the building up of Jerusalem, and the firm hold the wealthy Jews have on the finance of the world, render them an object of more than ordinary interest.

They rejected Christ and lost their kingdom and national existence. Since that time they have been wanderers upon the face of the earth, generally despised and rejected by the nations. Still they have held their own, living among other races, and yet sufficiently apart so as to retain their individuality in religion and nationality.

As a race the Jews do not mix with other nationalities. The sons and daughters marry those of their own race and take great pride in large families, so that in spite of much opposition they rapidly increase in number. They are also the greatest financiers the world has ever known. The greatest bankers of Europe to-day are Jews, who are in strong sympathy with the welfare of their race. Their wealth and wide-felt influence in all business circles have made them a power in the finances of the whole earth. They have reached a position that enables them to command respect. The wealth of the world is rapidly flowing into their channels of business. But with all of this they still remain Jews in the fullest sense of the term, fully settled on the interest of their race. Of them an able writer in the Literary Digest says:

"The Jews possess mental qualities that fit them admirably for professions not requiring manual labor. This concentration of their activities for twenty centuries on monetary affairs has developed, by the force of heredity, financial capacity of a higher order even than that possessed by the Genoans, the Scotch, the Genevans, the Armenians, or the Parsees. Moreover, if the Jews have their full share of the vices of humanity, they have at least preserved those of the moral qualities that prevent social disorganization. They attach much importance to having a numerous progeny. They show profound respect for their parents, and in this sentiment Jewish families imbibe a force that preserves them from the dissolute spirit of the age. Rich Jews no longer become converts to Christianity, nor is it now necessary in order to strengthen their social position and influence. Their daughters marry among their own people. Contemporary Jews do not despise labor, nor are they inclined to prodigality. However great their fortunes, there are always some of the sons in every family who devote themselves to business, and hence one does not see their banking-houses, like those conducted by Christians, break up after a generation or two."

The world is watching them with more than ordinary interest. The civilized nations dare not persecute them as a race, for the sense of justice in power positively forbids it. If left to themselves they are more than a match for other races. Money is becoming a power in the world and the Jews know how to accumulate this to the very best advantage. All of this in the face of prophecy, concerning the return of the Jews to the Promised Land, is giving the Bible student an interesting subject for consideration, and we may watch the outcome with deep concern. EDITORIAL WANDERINGS IN THE OLD WORLD.

BY D. L. MILLER.

Number Five.—"The Land of the Midnight Sun."—Fine Scenery.—Lapland and the Lapps.—Reindeers.

WE were especially fortunate in securing passage on the steamer Kong Halfdan. She is a strong, staunch ship, a steady sailer, and is in command of captain C. O. Amdahl, of Trondhjem, one among the kindest and most courteous gentlemen we have ever met. He is an experienced navigator, is thoroughly acquainted with every part of the coast of Norway, and speaks English quite fluently. He took pains to point out to us many places of interest on our trip to the North and we are under obligation to him for much information. If any of our readers ever take a trip to the North Cape, we advise them to sail with Captain Amdahl.

After leaving Bodo on our way North the captain changed the course of his vessel to give us a view of the Beierenfjord, a deep mountain chasm nearly a mile long, with fifty fathoms of water. The ship was steered directly into the narrow mountain gorge which seemed hardly wide enough to allow her to pass in, and we wondered how we were to get out again. On either side and at the farther end rose the almost perpendicular mountain walls of granite to a height, we are told, of about 1300 feet. Standing on the bridge with the captain we had an exhibition of the skill with which the navigator handles his ship. As we near the farther end of the chasm, with its abrupt wall, it widens slightly, and the ship is turned about as if it were on a pivot. When we were near the center of the chasm the steam whistle was sounded a number of times and we heard the wonderful echoing of the sound as it was thrown from mountain wall to mountain wall until the reverberations died away among the snow-covered hills of the Mainland. It was among the most interesting views we had on our cruise to the North.

We stop at Hammerfest one day and have ample time to visit the northernmost town in the world, situated in 70° 40″ north latitude, with a population of 2,300. In the streets were to be seen Lapps and Finns, from Finland, with their quaint suits made of reindeer skins, sailors from the north of Russia, with heavy woolen and fur clothing, made to protect them from the rigors of the Arctic winter, travellers from all parts of Europe and, by way of variety, occasionally an American. The town carries on a large fishing and oil trade, and the strong fishy smell of the place is far from pleasant. Tons of cod fish are caught and dried here and on the adjacent islands. The fish are split open and carefully cleaned, and then hung on frames to dry. After they have been thoroughly dried they are pressed and tied into bundles with strong wire and then shipped to Spain, Italy, and the south of France.

Cod liver oil is one of the important manufactures of Hammerfest. Large quantities are annually produced, and it is said to yield a handsome profit to those who are engaged in the industry. We visited the place where it is made but the strong, fishy smell made it rather unpleasant. We were assured, however, that it was good for the health. Persons with weak lungs are said to be benefited by breathing the air in the oil factory. The liver of the cod fish is esteemed as a great luxury by the natives. We ate some of it. It is rather pleasant to the taste but it did not require very much of the rich, oily substance to satisfy our appetite.

We climbed a mountain close to Hammerfest and had a fine view of the harbor and of the Arctic Sea. The day was bright and clear and we enjoyed the fine scenery very much indeed. We could scarcely realize that we were north of the seventieth degree of north latitude and only a few days' sail from the fields of unbroken ice and the latitude where Sir John Franklin perished in his attempt to reach the North Pole and where the Jeanette was lost only a few years ago. The day was moderately warm, something like October weather at home. We found our heavy clothing quite comfortable. Usually at midday it was quite warm, but by 9 o'clock in the evening, when the sun was only a little above the horizon, the air was quite cool and chilly.

Our trip takes us but a short distance north of Hammerfest, perhaps to north latitude 71°. We are in the "Land of the Midnight Sun," but are not to see the sun at midnight, as we are a few days too late, but on deck of the steamer last night between 11 and 12 o'clock it was so light that we could easily read a letter. The scenery of the North has been many times described. One writer, speaking of the sun at midnight, says: "The Northern Sun, creeping at midnight at the distance of five di ameters along the horizon, and the immeasurable ocean in apparent contact with the skies, form the grand outlines in the sublime picture presented to the astonished spectator. The incessant cares and pursuits of anxious mortals are recollected as a dream; the various forms and energies of animated nature are forgotten; the earth is contemplated only in its elements, and as constituting a part of the Solar System."

Tegner's lines on the same subject are remarkable for their simplicity and beauty:

"Midnatssolen på bergen Satt,
Blodröd till at Skåda;
Det var ej dag, det var ej natt
Det Vägde Emellan båda."

Literally:—

"The midnight sun sat on the mountains, blood-red to behold; 'twas neither day nor night but a balance between them."

The natural scenery in these far northern regions excite the liveliest interest in their ever-changing variety. The total absence of night at this season of the year, the peculiar light of the moon, and the display of the Northern lights all go to make up a picture that can only be seen in this part of the world. Then, too, as one writer has said:* The weather, the winds, and the fogs, the play of light and shade, the purity of the atmosphere are all unlike corresponding phenomena in other parts of the world. The animal world is of extraordinary richness. The sea teems with cod, herrings, skate and other fish. Whales are frequently seen spouting columns of water into the air, or rising to the surface in unwieldy gambols. Swarms of eider duck swim near every island, and the air is full of sea-gulls. Often one may see the industrious sea-gull robbed of its prey by the skua, which, unable to fish for itself, compels the gull to drop its booty, and with unerring dexterity catches it before it reaches the water. Often the water is ruffled by shoals of herring pursued by the seal, to escape from which they dart into the nets spread for them, or even spring ashore. To add to the pleasure of the scene we had, with the exception of half a day, on the Trondhjem fjord, and a few hours of fog, for the entire cruise northward, delightfully clear and pleasant weather. It was all that in any way could have been desired.

*Bädeker.

In this far northern climate the sun does not appear above the horizon from November until January and the weather during this period is cold and stormy. The harbor-master at Hammerfest told us that the storms are very severe. When the sun appears above the horizon after its long absence the inhabitants manifest their joy by firing guns and congratulating each other. Notwithstanding the scenery is grand and imposing, and the climate in summer is delightful, we prefer our home on the western prairies of Illinois rather than these Arctic regions.

We leave Hammerfest and after steaming northward we visit the island of Vanno, a whaling-station, and then our course is taken for Trondhjem. At Vanno we found a large oil manufactory where the blubber of the whale is turned into oil. Sixteen of these huge sea monsters had been towed into a small bay and drawn up to the shore. The fat, or blubber, as it is called, is cut out in large masses and drawn by means of ropes and pulleys up an inclined plane to a large platform where it is cut into smaller pieces and then put into large kettles and the oil is fried out, very much the same as lard is prepared from the fat of hogs at home. Out in the larger open bay a large whale, some forty or fifty feet long, which had just been captured, lay moored to a float. We had an excellent opportunity to see it as it lay in the clear water. This is the summer home of the whale. They come here in large numbers and many are caught and turned into oil. From Vanno our ship took on board several hundred barrels of whale oil. The captain very kindly placed his boat, and two sailors to row it, at our service.

Southward from Hammerfest we stop at Tromso and visit a camp of Lapps. These interesting people resemble somewhat, in their habits, the American Indian. We found their huts built of sticks and stones, covered with birch bark and sod. They are dome-shaped with a hole in the top to let out the smoke from the fire, which is kept burning in the center, over which a pot is suspended. Fine brush cut from birch trees are laid on the ground all around the inside of the hut and on these are laid the reindeer skins which serve as beds at night and a sitting-place in daytime. The huts are filthy and forbidding in their appearance, but not more so than the Lapps themselves. Their dress from head to foot is made of the reindeer skin tanned with the hair on, and as this kind of clothing wears a long time and is never washed, our readers may well imagine that cleanliness is not a virtue among these people.

Men and women dress so nearly alike that, so far as their clothing is concerned, it is difficult to distinguish between them. The only difference observable to us was that the women are less in stature and their hair was longer and more matted and tangled than that of the men. They surrounded us as soon as we entered their camp and it was wonderful how many men, women, children and dogs came out of a single hut. The dog is a family companion and occupies his place in the wigwam. They had many articles of their own manufacture which they offered to sell us. Spoons made of reindeer horn, shoes made of the skin of the same animal, and many other things were pressed upon our notice, and we were strongly urged to make purchases, and from the persistent efforts made in this direction we concluded that the Lapps would, under favorable circumstances, make very good shop-keepers and salesmen.

The reindeer is the Lapp's chief source of wealth. In the summer their milk supplies them with wholesome and nutritious food; when winter approaches large numbers are killed, the flesh is dried and smoked, to be eaten during the dark winter months. When the ground is covered with snow the reindeer is harnessed to the boat-like sledge and carries the Lapp over the crested snow with wonderful rapidity. From their skin all their clothing is made; the sinews furnish thread and fishing lines of great strength, and their horns are made into spoons, knife handles and sheathes, and various domestic utensils. The flesh of the reindeer, of which we ate frequently on our trip, is very palatable, and the tongue is considered very fine.

The Lapps belong to the yellow race; they are small of stature, the men less than five feet, and the women about four, or less. The largest men we saw among them would not weigh over one hundred pounds. They have high cheek bones, low foreheads, the top of the head somewhat flattened, light, yellow hair. Their bones are small, and they have but little muscle. We saw five of them tugging at the carcass of a reindeer that would have weighed perhaps 125 pounds, and they seemed to have about all they could do to carry it. The race is becoming extinct; there are now only about 30,000 of them left. Once they dominated the whole of Scandinavia, but, like the American Indians, were compelled to give way before the strong tide of civilization.

Efforts are made to civilize them, and missionaries from the State church of Norway are sent among them, but as they are constantly moving from place to place it is a very difficult matter to bring them under the influence of civilization. Further than this, they have learned the use of tobacco and intoxicants from our higher civilization. They all use tobacco, and many of them are addicted to drunkenness. Outside of this, they are a harmless, honest, inoffensive and interesting people.

The camp of Lapps at Tromso own, it is said, between four and five thousand head fo reindeer, valued at four dollars each. They drive them from place to place for pasture, and in this respect are something like the descendants of Ishmael in Palestine. During the summer months the pasture is plentiful in the valleys, and the animals soon become plump and fat on the nutritious grass. In the winter they live on the moss that covers the rocks, and they dig it up from under the deep snow with their sharp hoofs with wonderful dexterity. The reindeer is milked twice a week and gives an abundant supply of strong, rich milk.

THE CHURCH.—ITS GOVERNMENT.

BY J. G. ROYER.

ONE BROTHERHOOD.

THEY are represented as one body, one family, one fold, one kingdom. They sustain similar relations to a common head, law, faith, and mission; and they meet common responsibilities and trials. They constituted one church or brotherhood in apostolic times. "At that time there was great persecution against the church, . . . and they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria except the apostles." . . . "As for Saul he made havoc of the church,

"They that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word," and multitudes were added to the church,—the one church. Acts 2: 47; 5: 14; 11: 24. These believers were in separate local, but not in independent churches. They remained subject to a common government.

We have an account of a general conference in Acts 15. It was composed of "the apostles and elders, with the whole (all that were present) church." The question considered was one of faith and practice, and hence general in character. The decision rendered (vs. 22–27) was delivered not only to the church from which the query came, but unto the churches in general as well. "And as they went throughout the cities they delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem. And so were the churches established in the faith, and increased in number daily." Acts 16: 4, 5. The authority of the council extended over all the churches, and they in turn constituted one Brotherhood. As the peace and harmony, therefore, of a local church are promoted by the members being subject one to another, so the prosperity of the general Brotherhood demands that individual churches be subject one to another, in the same spirit, and to the same extent. And when an individual is received into membership by a local church, he joins in membership not that individual local church, but the general church, and is bound to "love the Brotherhood" and promote its interests, and not those alone of the local church where he became a member. Each local church is also in duty bound to respect the decisions of the General Conference and avoid doing whatever would weaken their just authority and influence. It is likewise the duty of each local church to aid in spreading the Gospel as directed by the General Brotherhood.

Should a local church depart from the faith and practice of the Gospel, it is clearly the duty of adjoining churches, together with the General Brotherhood, to seek with all tenderness and fidelity its recovery from error. Failing in this it is manifestly the duty of the General Brotherhood to withdraw fellowship.

IN FORM.

The government of the church is theocratic in the sense that it is administered by directions of God (through his Word) with Christ as its Head. It is republican in this that every member has a voice directly or indirectly in all its deliberations. The church exercises the judicial and executive functions, but not the legislative. The Scriptures is the Law. In the absence of "Thus saith the Lord," questions should be decided according to the spirit of the law. Under the present administration of government by the Brethren, every member has access to the following

TRIBUNALS FOR TRIAL.

(a) Before his local church.

(b) Before his local church and adjoining elders.

(c) Before his local church and a committee from District Meeting.

(d) Before his local church and a committee from General Conference.

Since the church grants the most humble member, as well as its highest officer an opportunity to be both counselor and judge in all questions presented for deliberation, and on the other hand opens the doors of four separate tribunals before which he may have trial, it certainly brings each member individually under obligations to do all in his power to promote rule and order, peace and harmony, throughout the Brotherhood, and zealously second every effort of the church in the spread of the Gospel and the conversion of sinners.

From River, Ind.

THIS beautiful Lord's Day I am at home, as our meeting is at our eastern meeting-house, some eight miles away. I did not feel quite well enough to travel that distance. I thought I could have a sermon at home, so I read sermon No. 3 in the "Life and Sermons of Bro. Quinter." It was rich food for the soul. I thought, what a blessed thing it is that we can have such a soul-reviving set of sermons in our houses when we are not able to go to our regular meetings. In this way we can have the best of sermons at home to cheer and strengthen us on our way heavenward. Every family in the land ought to have a copy of this book. What a nice birthday or Christmas present it would be for children and others! I know that I can profit by reading the sermons that are in the book, as well as reading the short history of Bro. Quinter. I also know that many of our ministers would be greatly benefited by reading the book. I am trying to read one sermon each day. I know they will help me. Were I young they would be of greater value to me. God bless every lawful effort for the cause of Christ.

Sept. 13, '91.

From Eglon, W. Va.

WE met in council Sept. 5. A good deal of business was before the meeting, but all passed off nicely. One brother was reclaimed. We were all very glad to receive him. One sister was baptized a few weeks ago.

Sept 12 the writer and a large number of brethren and sisters from this place went to Fairview church, Md, to a love-feast. We had an enjoyable time. Elders D. B. Aarnold, Asa Harmon and Jeremiah Beeghly were present. We were indeed glad to meet with the brethren and sisters.

Sept. 19 was our love-feast at Maple Spring which was well attended. Eld. Jeremiah Thomas, brethren S. A. Sisler, W. F. Nine, O. Abbott, Isaac Abernathy, J. O. Thompson and Dennis Clark were the ministers present from abroad. Bro. Thomas officiated.

On Sunday morning we had a children's meeting. Bro. Thomas talked to the children, and Bro. Abbott to the parents. After the children's meeting Bro. Thomas preached. Johnny Kiny's funeral was to have been preached to-day, but it was put off. He died with the typhoid fever and on the same day that his funeral was to be preached, his mother died. She is the eldest daughter of Eld. Samuel A. Fike.

RACHEL WEIMER.

From Macoupin Creek, Ill.

OUR love-feast occurred Sept. 18, and was a pleasant one to all. One dear soul desired to be baptized just previous to the examination services. This was complied with. On Sunday, Sept. 20 three more came forward. Bro. Holsinger is holding forth the Word nobly, and others are counting the cost.

On Sunday, while we were at the church, the news came that a young man had fallen from a wagon the night before, and had broken his neck. Inquiry made the matter still more sad, when we learned that the person referred to was the son of sister Mary Brown,—one of our worthy widowed sisters. The writer was called upon to officiate on the occasion of the burial, which took place yesterday. The occasion was a sad one, when the circumstances were all considered. He made no profession of religion, and that fact was the cause of much sadness. The sister and mother is nearly overcome with grief. May God help, is the prayer of his people!

MICHAEL FLORY.

Sept. 22.

A Response to Bro. Sharp's Proposition.

AFTER reading the report of the Western Sufferers' Relief Fund and noticing the disposition that was to be made of the amount yet on hand, our soul was made to say, Amen. May God speed the good work! As a second to Bro. Sharp's motion in a former number of the MESSENGER, wife and I pledge ourselves for the amount of $10.00, Sarah Steel, $1.00, and Amanda Steel, $1.00, total $12.00, to be paid over to the treasurer of the General Mission Board, whenever called for, for the purpose of scattering the Bread of Life over the field which has been so richly prepared for its reception through the benevolence of the Brethren. We further move that every local church appoint a special solicitor to collect money for the above-named purpose. Who will be the first to respond?

ISAAC STEEL,

Weilersville, Ohio.

REMARKS.

We suggest that those who feel interested in the proposition made by Bro. Sharp will send their donations direct to Bro. Galen B. Royer, of Mt. Morris, Secretary of the General Mission Board, and he will report the same in his quarterly reports. The proposition is a good one and deserves the support of all who desire to spread the Gospel in the West. Send the money right along and it can be used at once. This will work better than sending in pledges.—ED.

"Fighting Against God."

THE above was the subject for discussion at our prayer-meeting Sept. 17. Examples from the Bible, the Amalekites, Canaanites, Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, Baalam, Nebuchadnezzar, Saul of Tarsus, Ananias, Sapphira, and others were given. None of these were successful. It was shown that fighting with God is the only warfare which pays.

The many persons who are at this place led to seek salvation and to love the Savior leads us to believe that, however individuals may err, our general influence is a conflict for God. It seems strange, but we hear that the number of accessions to the church is by some disapproved. What shall we do? Face about, turn our weapons against the church and Bible; and fight for the enemy of souls? Certainly not. Paul had just one thing to do. No Christian has more. He must be all the time an exponent of the religion he professes.

SALOME A. STONER.

Mt. Morris, Ill., Sept. 19, '91.

From the Olathe Church, Johnson Co., Kans.

SEPT. 6, a series of meetings commenced in a a tent at the home of Bro. Wm. Brunk, near Olathe, and Sept. 10 was the time set for the love-feast. About sixty brethren and sisters surrounded the tables of the Lord, and in deep solemnity partook of those sacred emblems.

If those emblems are used as intended, it seems that nothing would tend to a greater building up of the inner man, and yet sometimes we see brethren and sisters who stay away from the Communion table. Surely something is lacking, but it is not on the part of Jesus, for he knew the disposition of humanity and made ample provision for all cases. We had good order and the weather was all that could be desired. Eld. Geo. E. Wise officiated. The meetings continued till the 13th. The next day after the love-feast two dear souls were buried with Christ in baptism, one of them being the daughter of Bro. and sister Isaac Crist.

At the last meeting another one made the good resolve, and oh! how her husband did weep for joy to see his dear companion decide to walk with him! At ten o'clock on Sunday, Sept. 13, a children's meeting was held. The children paid close attention and answered quite a number of questions. These meetings are beginning to be very common among our people, and we believe they will bring good results.

We had almost forgotten to say that our home ministers did the preaching at the above meetings. Bro. J. H. Neher, of McCune, Kans., was telegraphed for during the meetings, but could not come.

Bro. J. H. Crist expects to be out in the Master's field the greater part of the fall and winter. Bro. Geo. E. Wise expects to be gone a part of the winter. Bro. Crist starts to-morrow in the mission field at Coffey County, this being the first point.

Bro. Wise will soon go to Ft. Scott to labor for the brethren and sisters there. A. M. SHARP.

Gardner, Kans., Sept. 14.

From the Summit Mills Church, Somerset Co., Pa.

SEPT. 12 Eld. Geo. S. Arnold, of Burlington, W. Va., commenced a series of meetings in the Summit Mills church, which continued until Sept. 20. Bro. Arnold's labors were full of earnestness and zeal. He wielded the spiritual weapon with power. Twelve precious souls were added to the fold, and several others were almost persuaded. The brethren and sisters were much revived, strengthened and built up in the good cause. Sept. 19 we held our Communion meeting, which was certainly a feast to the soul, and, we think, enjoyed by all present, as the indications were plainly shown by the goodly number that assembled around the Lord's table in the evening, to commemorate the sufferings and death of our Lord and Master. Quietness prevailed among the large assembly, while the brethren and sisters were engaged in the solemn ordinances. Oh, what means of spiritual strength and grace these reunions afford the children of God! It carries our minds to the future, when the faithful shall partake of the Marriage Supper of the Lamb which will be fulfilled in the kingdom of God.

From the Prairie View Church, Mo.

ON Wednesday, Sept. 9, we started, in company with Bro. David Bowman and wife, to Montgomery County, Mo., where our isolated members live. Upon arrival, on Thursday afternoon, we were met by Bro. Nelson and taken to his pleasant home. The same evening Bro. Bowman delivered an interesting sermon to a very attentive congregation.

Next day we visited the little band of brethren and sisters. We found an old sister who was not able to attend the meetings. She expressed herself as being still in the faith and willing to work for the cause. That night we had preaching again.

On Saturday morning we met at the house of Bro. Nelson, to prepare for a Communion meeting. At two P. M. the brethren and sisters met for council, and in the evening we surrounded the Lord's table to observe the ordinances of God's house. The number of communicants was small,—only three brethren and seven sisters. One thought comforted us, that Christ has promised to be with us, though but few in number, when we assemble in his name. Realizing this, we had an enjoyable meeting.

Bro. Bowman, being all alone, labored very hard, and the brethren and sisters appreciated his efforts very much. One dear sister said she never felt better in her life, and that she was much built up in the faith.

This was the first love-feast ever held at this place. We feel that much good has been done, and that much more may be accomplished in the future. The brethren and sisters seem very anxious to have a minister locate among them, and we hope that the Lord will provide a way by which they may be supplied with spiritual food. All seemed to be much disappointed because the meetings were not continued.

Bro. Bowman having made his arrangements to go to Audrain Co., Mo., to hold some meetings, on Sunday morning Bro. Warker, sister Schaw and friend Rudd conveyed us to that locality,—a distance of about thirty miles. We stopped at the house of brother and sister Joel Moomaw, where we were kindly received. These two are the only members at that place. On Sunday evening we met for preaching. On Monday we visited some of Bro. Bowman's friends, and greatly enjoyed our short visits with them. At night we met for preaching again. On Tuesday the writer started homeward, leaving Bro. Bowman hard at work in the continuing of the meetings. May his labor produce good results! KATE MOOMAW.

To the Saints in Christ.

RECENTLY we were requested to visit some of the churches in Southern Missouri; and on our return home visited our afflicted brother, S. S. Mohler, at Warrensburgh, Mo. We found him improving slowly, though he himself hardly admits it.

His disease seems to be a combination of physical debility and nervous prostration. His physical debility is located principally in his stomach and bowels, and his nervous prostration affects his entire organism. This complication affects him periodically. There are periods every day when his nerves give him proper support, —when his physical condition seems normal, his mind active, and his spiritual prospects cheerful. At other times his nervous support gives way, and his entire organism,—physically, mentally, and spiritually, seems to sink before him into hopelessness.

In these hours of despondency, every support seems swept away, and his helplessness seems to be overwhelming. At this we are not surprised. A nature that has always been strong and sensitive, like his, must, when every support is gone, fall into the other extreme.

In addition to this, it seems, that his former correspondents, with whom he used to associate much in church work, have about all ceased to write to him. This gives him additional cause to feel lonely. An occasional letter of cheer, from his former correspondents and associates in church work, would afford him a great deal of pleasure, and might aid him much in the restoration of his usual health. Little things go a great way with our afflicted brother just now. As his physical strength increases, his periods of despondency will become fewer in number, and we hope and pray that they will ultimately cease.

Bro. Mohler should be addressed at Warrensburgh, Mo., as he now lives there. He is able to answer letters, but, perhaps not as lengthy as formerly. Letters to him should all be consoling in their character, and not contain church troubles, or questions that have a tendency to harass the mind.

Bro. Mohler takes short drives in his buggy every day, and can attend church near him, but cannot sit long enough yet to remain till the close of the services. J. S. MOHLER.

Morrill, Kans., Sept. 22.

Echoes from the Highway.

A SPECIAL council of the Lordsburg congregation was held in the College Auditorium on the evening of Sept. 8. A number of letters of membership were read. Arrangements were made for the church to use the College Hall for public and private meetings. There will be Sunday-school every Lord's Day, and two services of public preaching; also social or prayer-meeting once a week. This arrangement gives excellent facilities for all the members to enjoy religious intercourse with each other, and with the Lord, and throws around all persons here an influence for good. The school starts out with excellent promise, more so than was anticipated even by the warmest friends of the enterprise. It seems that Jesus is taken for the key-note in all that pertains to the school, and it is hoped that this seat of learning, here on the Pacific coast, will be a power for good in moulding minds for this life, and for the life to come.

At a recent meeting of the Missionary Board of the State District, held at this place, vigorous measures were considered and passed to push the the grand work as speedily as possible. In the command "Go ye," there is such an irresistible power of love and duty that it seems hard for the true child of God to resist it. Resistance means spiritual power lost, souls lost,—may we not truthfully say, heavenly rewards lost! Oh! let us think of this and bestir ourselves! If some will do the sending, and others submit to be sent, all will then have a mutual benefit in the great reward.

Our great want is men fully equipped for work in the harvest field. Unless men can be found willing to put on the whole armor of God, it is useless to commence an agressive work. Time and money will be lost. Let us pray that God may raise up men of the right stamp to labor in the Master's cause! J. S. FLORA.

Notes of Travel.

MY last communication was written at Limestone, Tenn. From there we were conveyed by Eld. J. B. Pence, to the Knob Creek congregation, where we met many of our dear brethren and sisters and old friends.

On Sunday we had two meetings. This, I believe, is the oldest church in Tennessee. The elders here are brethren S. S. Sherfy, George C. Bowman and Joseph Bowman. From here we were conveyed by Bro. Daniel Bowman and Bro. Wm. Garst to the Pleasant View congregation. We met with these members in council on Saturday, and had a very pleasant meeting. We also had preaching after the council. They have monthly council meetings at this church. The elders in charge are brethren F. W. Dove and Jesse Crosswhite. On Sunday we had two meetings.

On Monday we were conveyed to New Hope by Bro. George Dove, where we had preaching at 11 A. M. We were next taken to the home of my brother, Conrad Bashor, to visit once more my old father, before starting West. This is near the Pleasant Valley church. The elders in charge here are Conrad Bashor and Christian Diehl. Here we had four meetings.

On Wednesday, July 15, we took the train at Jonesboro for Greenville, where we had four meetings at the Mountain View school-house, during which time three came out on the Lord's side

This point is in the bounds of Eld. J. B. Pence's congregation.

July 21 we took the train for Cabool, Mo., where we arrived July 22. On Sunday evening we met quite a number of members, but had only one meeting. This place is in the bounds of the Mansfield congregation, in charge of Eld. Mason. Only one meeting was held here. At Norwood we met quite a number of members and had four meetings, during the progress of which three made the good confession. Our next call was at Slide, where we met with my sister and family, and where we had three meetings in the M. E. church. We also visited Bro. J. P. Baley, at Bolivar.

At Watson, Kans., we had three meetings in the Presbyterian church, and then went to McPherson, where we visited the College and held two meetings, and also attended the Brethren's prayer-meeting.

At Russell we visited Eld. John Holinger and family. Aug. 28 we took the train for Oregon, by way of Denver. We arrived at Brooks, Oregon, Sept. 2. We visited the members of the Salem congregation, and met with them in council Sept. 5th. On Sunday, Sept. 6, I preached at Macleay at 11 A. M. Next day we took the cars for Sodaville, and reached home at four P. M. We thank the good Lord for his care over us and our children. We traveled in all about 7,500 miles and preached forty-nine sermons. Eighteen united with the church during our meetings.

M. M. Bashor.

From the Bunker Hill Church, Ohio.

Aug. 16 four were baptized at this place. Aug. 30 eleven more were baptized. Sept. 11 an aged mother in her eighty-sixth year united with us, and the next day there were seven others received by baptism.

On the evening of Sept. 12 we held our Communion meeting. Ninety-six members were present. Brethren from abroad were Wm. Dessenberg, F. B. Weimer, Eli Holmes and Samuel J. Burger. Bro. Weimer officiated. Bro. Dessenberg came on the evening of Sept. 10 and preached for us till Sept. 20, when there were seven more baptized, making in all thirty. Out of that number there were thirteen Sunday-school scholars,—their ages ranging from twenty-two down to twelve years. Among those baptized there was also one crippled man, and one woman that can neither talk nor hear, but who seems to understand what the Lord requires of her. Others were almost persuaded to come. My heart rejoiced to see some members of my Sunday-school class come forward to put on Christ. One that had wandered away from the fold, came and made confession. The Brethren forgave him.

Sarah Middaugh.

Wayside Notes.

After attending the Pleasant View feast, Kans. [an account of which has been sent by others], the writer, in company with Bro. B. B. Whitmer and others, went to the Solomon church to be at their feast, which was held Sept. 12 and 13. Arriving at the place of meeting we found Bro. David Brower, of Oregon, Bro. John Brower, of Dorrance, Kans., Bro. P. B. Porter and Bro. Palmer, of the Burr Oak church, Jewell Co., who gave us, during the meetings, an abundance of spiritual food. Thus we have passed an enjoyable meeting with the brethren and sisters whom we had not met for twelve years.

On the morning of Sept. 15 we returned home. On arriving we found that Bro. Brown, from Colby, Thomas Co., Kans., was here to commence meetings. Thus we have enjoyed another happy season of worship. Bro. Brown preached eight very interesting sermons. He gave us many good instructions. We would all be pleased to have Bro Brown come again Our church seems to be laboring earnestly for the advancement of Christ's kingdom and the saving of souls We expect to hold our love-feast Oct. 17, commencing at 10 A. M. We also intend to have a week's meeting previous to the feast, commencing Oct. 11. The place of meeting will be nine miles north of Oronoque, and fifteen miles north-west of Norton Center.

J. R. Garber.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

One Baptized.—The Mexico church, Miami Co., Ind., is moving along harmoniously. We were made to rejoice to-day, when one young sister made application for baptism. We trust she may live faithful until death.—J. M. Replogle, Mexico, Ind, Sept. 20.

Interesting Meetings.—Our series of meetings, conducted by Bro. C. S. Holsinger, began last Saturday evening, Sept. 12. One was baptized last night, and others are counting the cost. One more will be baptized this evening.—Michael Flory, Girard, Ill., Sept. 18.

Refreshing Meetings.—Our love-feast was an enjoyable one. Bro. H. W. Strickler gave us three soul-cheering sermons and would have remained longer, but, as sister Annie Lapp, of Cherry Box, Mo., called for the elders to anoint her, he had to attend to that work. She is much afflicted. Bro. Strickler will stay with the members at Cherry Box to labor for them and we trust much good may be done for the Master.—Mary Thorp, Steffenville, Mo., Sept. 14.

One Added to the Fold.—The Solomon's Creek congregation met in quarterly council Sept. 5. There was but little business before the church, and everything passed off pleasantly. We elected one delegate to District Meeting,—Bro. Hiram Forney. Our congregation seems to be in good working order. We appointed our semi-annual love-feast for Oct. 17 at 4 P. M. A dear young sister was received into church fellowship by baptism recently. She was one of our Sunday-school scholars.—J. Arnold, Milford, Ind, Sept. 23.

Pleasant Love-feast. Our Communion meeting in the Labette church, Kans., Sept. 12, passed off pleasantly. About fifty members communed. Ministers from abroad, were Caleb Fogle, Samuel Edgecomb, A. B. Lichtenwalter, and Eli Wolf. Bro. Edgecomb officiated. The brethren preached the Word with power. I think good impressions were made on some. We held the meeting in the town of Altamont, under a tent, and had fine weather, though it was a little warm. The meeting was well attended, especially at night. We also held a social meeting the following morning after breakfast At the preaching services later on, Bro. Fogle labored for us.—C. H. Kingery, Sept. 20.

Harvest-Meeting.—The South Waterloo church, Iowa, held a harvest-meeting Sept. 23. It was the first meeting of the kind ever held in this church. Brethren J. A. Murray and L. R. Peifer, of the Waterloo congregation, were with us. The exercises consisted of preaching in the forenoon, and Sunday-school exercises in the afternoon. The brethren read Psalm 37, and spoke to us of the wisdom, goodness and mercy of God. The Sunday-school exercises were entertaining and encouraging. The meeting was well attended, and I believe I am voicing the sentiment of all present when I say it was good for us to be there. The sum of $25.25 was given for the furtherance of the Lord's cause.—S. H. Miller.

Proposed Meetings.—The Mound church, Mo., is in good working order. Our meetings, as well as our Sunday-school, are well attended. We are anxiously looking forward to the series of meetings to be held at this place by Bro. Crist, and which are to commence Oct. 4.—A. J. Lentz, Adrian, Mo., Sept. 21.

Under the Hand of Affliction.—Eld. Henry Garst has been very ill for some time, so much so that he was hardly expected to recover. He called for the elders of the church, and was anointed in the name of the Lord. It is thought at this time, that he is improving slowly. Though his health is very low as yet, our prayers are that he will be restored to health, that he may yet aid much in the great work of the Master that is so much needed here in the South.—N. N. Garst, Bluff City, Tenn.

Three Souls for the Lord.—The Williams Creek feast, Texas, occurred Sept. 12, and passed off pleasantly. Besides the members of this church, there were with us Bro. Holler, of Clay County (a minister) and his son, Bro. Abe Molsbee, sister Molsbee, and a few others from Nocona. This was very encouraging to the church of this place. Meetings continued until Wednesday morning, when three were led down to the water and baptized. All were under fourteen years of age. At the feast we had the best of order. All seemed very much built up in the Lord.—Lottie E. Austin, Muenster, Texas.

Minister and Deacons Elected.—The love-feast in the Kansas Center church, near Lyons, Kans., Sept. 19, was a pleasant one. One applicant was received by baptism. Eld. John Forney, of Abilene, Daniel Dierdorff and Isaac F. Gingrich, of Nickerson, John Clapper, of Great Bend, Jonathan Brubaker, of Girard, Ill., and the writer were the ministers present from other churches. Henry T. Brubaker was chosen by the church to the ministry, and J. N. Dresher and Robert O. Boon to the deaconship. On Sunday morning they were installed into their respective offices and their companions received as help-mates with them, in the usual way.—Daniel Vaniman.

Working for the Master.—Sept. 19 I boarded the cars at Limestone for Rogersville Junction, Tenn., to meet the dear members of the White Horn church at their love-feast. It was certainly a feast of love to all the members present. Eld. John Brubaker, M. Garber, from Mountain Valley, and the writer, were the only ministers present from abroad. The weather was all that could be desired, and a very large assembly was present. More union and love I never saw. This church, like some others, has had its troubles, but I am glad to know that a better day has come. I think a bright future awaits the White Horn church. Bro. Thomas Berry is their minister.—P. D. Reed.

Three Added to the Fold.—According to previous arrangements Bro. Hutchison began work here on the evening of Aug. 29, and continued his labors for two weeks, preaching in all about eighteen sermons. This is the first series of meetings held in our new house, and a very refreshing meeting it was. The brethren and sisters were encouraged to press forward to higher attainments in the divine life, and three wandering souls were made to realize the danger of their situation and were baptized. Two were also received by letter at our council-meeting. Our love-feast, Sept 12, was well attended. About seventy-five members communed. Neighboring churches were well represented. This is as it should be, for it is very encouraging to not only hear, but to know that others are journeying with us unto the place of which the Lord hath said "I will give it you."—Maggie A. Peck, Falls City, Nebr.

Two Baptized.—The members of the Kingsley church, Iowa, held their quarterly council Sept. 10. There was some very important business transacted, but all passed off pleasantly. Two dear souls declared themselves as being willing to forsake sin and unite with the people of God. May they ever continue faithful!—J. D. Bell, Sept. 10.

Much Edified.—Bro. Lemuel Hillery's health is improving very slowly at this time. His discourse at the Big church, Solomon's Creek, last Sunday evening, was profound and sublime. His text was Luke 12: 49–53. The assembly paid much attentention to the discourse, while the members were much edified and built up in the cause of our Redeemer.—J. B. Peffly, New Paris, Ind., Sept. 19, 1891.

Pleasant Harvest-meeting.— As previously appointed, the Brethren of the Woodbury church held their harvest-meeting Sept. 13. Elders David Clapper and James A. Sell conducted the meeting from Prov. 3: 9, 10. After services a collection was taken, which resulted in $20.27 being donated to the missionary cause. We also had a children's meeting in the afternoon which was both interesting and instructive. Both meetings were well attended.—J. C. Stayer, Woodbury, Pa., Sept. 14, 1891.

Minister and Deacon Elected.— Our Communion meeting was held at the house of the writer Sept. 12, where we celebrated the suffering and death of our Blessed Savior. Eld. John Hollinger, of Russell County, was present and officiated. We had a very pleasant meeting, and believe the brethren and sisters were much built up and encouraged. The church called one brother to the ministry and one to the deacon's office. May the Lord help them to be faithful to their calling!—S. P. Weaver, Eden Valley, Kans.

Minister and Deacons Elected.—The brethren and sisters of the Milmine church, Ill., met last Thursday, Sept. 10, for quarterly council. Nearly all were present and all business was disposed of in a very agreeable manner. Some very important business came before the church. As the church needed more help in the official body we decided to elect a minister and two deacons. Bro. S. Heitz was chosen to the ministry and brethren Peter Gara and Daniel Heckman to the office of deacon. They were all duly installed and seem to realize their great responsibility. We feel confident that by the power of God and their own good talent they will be of much aid to our little band, and bring others into the true fold. Our Communion will be held Oct. 8. At the above council we also elected a delegate to represent our church at District Meeting.— Anna Bowman, Cerro Gordo, Ill., Sept. 15, 1891.

Six Additions.—I have just returned from the love-feasts at Pleasant View, Smith County, and North Solomon, same County. We had an enjoyable time and interesting meetings. There were six additions in the Pleasant View church, Phillips County, three of whom were applicants when we came there. We traveled over 300 miles and found good crops everywhere and a cheerful people. Praise God for all his mercies towards us.—B. B. Whitmer, Quinter, Kans., Sept. 21, 1891.

Three Added to the Fold.—Last Saturday the Hurricane Creek church, Bond Co., Ill., commemorated the death and suffering of our Redeemer. We had public preaching at 10 A. M., after which three dear souls were received by baptism. Bro. Michael Flory was with us in the evening. He was assisted by our elder, Henry Lilligh, and Bro. Granville Nevinger. We had a pleasant Communion and also had good preaching on Sunday morning after Sunday-school. On Sunday night Bro Flory addressed us.—Cornelius Kessler, Sept. 19.

Proposed Meetings.—In the MESSENGER of some weeks ago we find our church name given as "Coon River" instead of Boon River, which is our right name. Our Sunday-school, held in the Stilson school-house, is still in progress, and a deep interest is manifested by all who attend. Bro. Wm. Ikenberry has promised to be with us Sept. 28, and will preach for us until Oct. 7. He is our elder and we expect, while he is with us, to hold a council-meeting preparatory to the District Meeting. Brother and sister Hixson are now at their new home, two miles south and one-half mile east of Stillson, Iowa.—Daniel Aschenbrenner, Britt, Iowa.

One Baptized. Sept. 12 the Mansfield congregation, Douglas Co., Mo., met in council at the Fairview church. The members were found to be in love and union. All business, we hope, was transacted in the fear of God. On Sunday morning we met for Sunday-school and at 11 A. M. for preaching. After preaching we went to the waterside, where a dear sister was buried with Christ in baptism, and arose rejoicing that she had started to follow her Blessed Savior. One month ago a brother and his companion were baptized, and others are counting the cost. Brethren and sisters, pray that they may not put off the all-important work till it is too late.—Nannie Harmon.

Minister Elected.—The Brethren of the New Dale church, Hardy Co., W. Va., enjoyed a love-feast, Sept. 10. We also had a council-meeting Sept. 9. Elders S. A. Shaver and S. H. Myers, of Virginia, were with us. Bro. B. D. Hinegardner was installed as our elder. Dro. David Whitmer was elected as minister in the first degree, and duly installed. We have a Sunday-school and are getting along fairly well. Bro. S. W. Teets is our Superintendent and the writer Assistant. We use the Young Disciple. We enjoyed our love-feast, and feel that some are encouraged to press forward in the good work of the Master. We have meetings every fourth Sunday in the month. May the good work of the Lord still go on!—Lorenzo H. Miller, Sept. 14

She leaves four children,—three sons and one daughter,—to mourn their loss. Deceased was a worthy and devoted member of the Brethren church. Funeral services by Eld. John H. Caylor from Job 14: 14, "If a man die will he live again?"

She removed to Ohio in 1838, where she united with the Brethren church in 1851, then moved to Illinois in 1860, and to Missouri in 1870, where she lived the remainder of her life. She was the mother of five children who are all living. Her husband preceded her to the spirit land about four years. Funeral occasion was improved by Bro. W. H. Miller, assisted by Bro. Geo. W. Lentz, from Ps. 90: 10. Interment in the Crescent Hill cemetery. A. J. SMITH.

CRUMPACKER.— Near Denver, Ind., Aug. 27, 1891, Peter G. Crumpacker, aged 56 years, 7 months and 27 days.

The subject of this notice, at the time of his death, had been living in Indiana near Denver. He had gone about two miles from home to prepare some ground for a wheat crop. He plowed till noon and then put away his horses and ate his dinner. Between three and four o'clock it was noticed that he had not gone out to work, and upon investigation they found him cold in death. The cause of his death is supposed to be either paralysis or heart disease. He joined the Brethren church while young in years and lived a consistent member. During the late division he identified himself with the Old Order church. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn their loss. One son preceded him to the spirit world. Funeral discourse from Mark 13: 32–37. JAMES T. KINZIE.

MARTIN.—In the Mohican church, Wayne Co., Ohio, May 8, 1891, Bro. Christian Martin, aged 76 years, 9 months and 23 days.

Deceased was born in Bedford County, Pa., and moved to Ohio in 1833. He was married to Nancy Worst Oct. 3, 1837, who preceded him to the spirit world eleven years. To them were born eleven children, ten of whom are still living. He left forty-four grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren, also a widow with whom he had lived happily a few years previous to his death. He was a member of the Brethren church for forty-five years and to it he closely clung even under adverse circumstances. Often he spoke of the sweet rest in heaven and longed for its enjoyment. At his call he was anointed as the Gospel teaches and departed in peace. Those who knew him best speak of him as a kind husband and father. Funeral services conducted by the writer in the presence of a large assembly of relatives and friends.
I. D. PARKER.

LIFE AND SERMONS

—OF—

ELD. JAMES QUINTER.

The biographical part will be found quite interesting, instructive and impressive. No one can read an account of Bro. Quinter's life without feeling deeply and favorably impressed. The work shows how a poor orphan boy, by hard work, and faithfulness to his religious convictions, rose step by step, until he reached a field of usefulness and honor as broad as the Nation itself. Though dead, his good deeds and the impressive examples in piety, learning and simplicity will follow him for generations to come.

The Sermon Department contains many of his choice sermons, which will prove exceedingly interesting and profitable reading to all, and especially to our ministers and isolated members. We feel that this book will fill a long-felt want in our Brotherhood. Price, post-paid, $1.25.

BRO. J. B. BRUMBAUGH spent last Sunday with the Brethren at Martinsburg, Pa., and before returning called with Eld. J. W. Brumbaugh, of Clover Creek, who has been unwell for sometime. He is thought to be slowly improving and is able to be around in the house.

ELD. WM. HOWE, of Lewistown, Pa., stopped off a short time on last Monday on his return from the Hopewell church, where he had been called to attend to some church work, which, he reports, was satisfactorily adjusted. We had a pleasant interview with him during his short stay.

WE have appointed our Communion in the Huntingdon church on Nov. 14. We intentionally delayed the time of holding our meeting so that the meetings of our surrounding churches would be over and thus afford our ministering brethren and others an opportunity of being with us. All are invited and we hope that we shall not be disappointed. Please make a note of the time.

OUR brethren wishing to locate at one of our schools for the purpose of educating their children and of having better church privileges, or retiring from the active labors of life, are invited to come to Huntingdon. Our town is pleasantly located, homes and rents are cheap, and we have goodly surroundings,—pure air, good water, plenty to eat, and we are surrounded by "ye everlasting hills" on every side.

BRO. T. T. MYERS, of the Philadelphia church, is now preaching a tabulated series of sermons to his people which will, no doubt, prove interesting and instructive, as the subjects selected embrace the doctrines of the Gospel.

THE ministerial meeting for Middle Pennsylvania will be held in the Clover Creek church. Programs of the meeting will be printed and distributed in a few days. We hope that our people will arrange to attend this meeting, as the subjects to be discussed will be made interesting to all Christian workers. What is good for the preacher to preach is good for the hearer to hear. All earnest Christians delight to be where religious work is done. All are invited.

QUERY ANSWERED.

A SISTER asks: "Are the decisions of Annual Meeting infallible?" No. Annual Meeting never claimed to do such work. We assemble, and discuss questions pertaining to church government, and make decisions on the principle that in the multitude of counselors there is wisdom. While the chances for a right decision being made are in favor of the many, yet it is possible for the few to be right and the many wrong. The design of those who go to these meetings has more to do with the character of the decisions than the number.

After all the Scriptures must be made our standard of right, and the decisions made at our Meetings as helps to Biblical interpretations. Pure and unselfish Biblical interpretations is what we need. This we need badly, and the only way to get this is by "studying the Word," and by an humble submission to the truths as they come to us.

Much of the Bible is made mysterious because we try to interpret it to harmonize with our own preconceived opinions. An old colored man of the South declared that the Baptist church was the oldest church in the world because Jesus was baptized by a Baptist in the "ribber ob de Jordan." His rule for Scriptural interpretation was a very simple one, and yet we have seen our white brethren do worse.

BY THE STILL WATERS.

THE sweet singer of Israel said many beautiful things about God, but nowhere do we find more of it than in the twenty-third Psalm, and in it nothing more impressive than the few words which we have noted above. In it there is a sedative for every sin-tossed soul. To feel it and enjoy it we must get the picture before us. A valley of green pastures, and through the midst of it, gently flowing, a beautiful river, clear as crystal and as quiet as the evening breeze,—so still that you know it moves only by the white bubbles that gently move with its surface. Beneath is seen the pebbly bed as if inviting the flocks, feeding on the hillsides, to come and drink freely and without fear, for the water is pure and still. The shepherd reclines on his staff at ease, as he watches his flock go to and from the still waters, as in them can befall no harm, even to the tender, skipping lambs of the flock.

This Psalm came to us the other day as we and Bro. Swigart were driving along the banks of the Raystown Branch. The afternoon was such an one as can only be enjoyed in September's closing days. Skirted on the nether side by the Terrace Mountain, bedecked with a forest of oaks, pines and scores of the varieties common to our land, we saw tinged foliage,—slightly tinged by frosts,—so light that they could be felt, not seen, and yet with tints more delicate than art ever knew, were painted the leaves. As seen from above and reflected from below, we had an inspiration that could not help but stir the inmost soul. Yes, said my soul, "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures, he leadeth me beside the still waters."

For a mile or more the surface of the river was as smooth as glass, without a riff or a ripple it flowed, and as it flowed Bro. Swigart said, "How I feel like getting off and wading in that water!"

Why such a feeling? Was he, too, thinking of the twenty-third Psalm and of being "beside the still waters?" Was it not a lovely place for the shepherd and the sheep to be at the noontime, and to feed and drink as the shades gathered at the mountain's side?

Dear reader, are you a sheep of the Good Shepherd's flock or a lamb in his tender care? If you are, he spreads before you "the green pastures and leads you beside the still waters."

It is no fancy picture but a blessed reality. The Lord is your Shepherd. Do you believe it? Can you say it? Did you ever stand beside the flooded stream, as it rushed madly downward, carrying on its breast the victims of its destructive power? Did you ever stand on the edge of a cataract as it plunged downward, carrying death and destruction with it?

If you did, it may have inspired you and filled your soul with awe, but the picture was a different one from that which you had "beside the still waters." The one was the Great God thundering to you in his majestic power. The other, the Good Shepherd, calling in tones of love to come and lie down in green pastures and to drink beside the still waters.

May you be a lamb of this Shepherd's fold, and as the storms of sin blow and rift and sough, may you hear the gentle call and feel that it is the Shepherd's voice inviting you to come within the fold where are pastures green and waters still, and the outgushing of your soul will be: "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

ESSAYS.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

THE WEIGHT OF A WORD.

HAVE you ever thought of the weight of a word
That falls in the heart like the song of a bird,
That gladdens the spring time of memory and youth,
And garlands with cedar the banner of Truth,
That moistens the harvesting spot of the brain
Like dewdrops that fall on a meadow of grain,
Or that shrivels the germ and destroys the fruit
And lies like a worm at the lifeless root?

I saw a farmer at break of day
Hoeing his corn in a careful way;
An enemy came with a drouth in his eye,
Discouraged the worker and hurried by.
The keen-edged blade of the faithful hoe
Dulled on the earth in the long corn row;
The weeds sprung up and their feathers tossed
Over the field, and the crop was—lost.

A sailor launched on an angry bay
When the heavens entombed the face of the day;
The wind arose like a beast in pain,
And shook on the billows his yellow mane;
The storm beat down as if cursed the cloud,
And the waves held up a dripping shroud
But, hark! o'er the waters that wildly raved
Came a word of cheer, and he was—saved.

A poet passed with a song of God
Hid in his heart like a gem in a clod;
His lips were framed to pronounce the thought,
And the music of rythm its magic wrought;
Feeble at first was the happy trill,
Low was the echo that answered the hill,
But a jealous friend spoke near his side,
And on his lips the sweet song—died.

A woman paused where a chandelier
Threw in the darkness its poisoned spear;
Weary and footsore from journeying long,
She had strayed unawares from the right to the wrong.
Angels were beckoning her back from the den,
Hell and its demons were beckoning her in;
The tone of an uncle, like one who forgives,
Drew her back, and in heaven that sweet word—lives.

Words! Words! They are little, yet mighty and brave;
They rescue a nation, an empire save—
They close up the gaps in a fresh bleeding heart
That sickness and sorrow have severed apart.
They fall on the path, like a ray of the sun
Where the shadow of death lay so heavy upon;
They lighten the earth over our blessed dead,
A word that will comfort, oh! leave not unsaid.

BY D. F. MOOMAW.

Chapter Two.

As time rolled on the excitement on the slavery question became more and more intense, and the two political parties, in the main, took opposite positions. But, at the time of the Presidential canvass of 1860, the Democratic party became divided, and in a convention at Charleston, South Carolina, failing to agree on the nomination of candidates for President and Vice-President, the majority adjourned to Baltimore, and nominated Stephen A. Douglas, of Illinois. A number of the delegates withdrew from the Baltimore convention, and nominated John C. Breckenridge, of Kentucky; a third party named John Bell, of Tennessee. This division resulted in the election of Abraham Lincoln, of Illinois, the Republican nominee to the Presidency, and Hannibal Hamlin, of Maine, Vice-President.

Immediately after the election of Lincoln, the political leaders of South Carolina executed their plan of withdrawing from the Union. A convention was called for that purpose, and an ordinance of secession was passed which was ratified by the State Legislature Dec. 20, 1860, and within a few weeks Georgia and all the Gulf States followed the example. This caused an immense excitement throughout the Southern States generally.

In the meantime a large number of the citizens, and among them those of my County (Botetourt) assembled at the court-house on court day. The question was sprung concerning the course Virginia should take in this matter, and decided to appoint a committee to draft resolutions upon the subject. I was appointed as one of said Committee. After consultation, we agreed on the following: "Resolved that we are in favor of the preservation of the Union if it possibly can be done, and therefore advise that the State of Virginia remain with it,—that it do not secede nor encourage secession." But in the meantime an aged man, a Judge of the superior court, had written up a resolution, favoring the secession of the State, which he read before the audience, and made an exciting speech in favor of it, declaring that the Union was already dissolved, and that the State of Virginia naturally belonged to the South because of its location and its institutions.

The question of the adoption of his Resolutions was then put to the vote of the meeting, stating that those in favor signify it by saying Aye. This was responded to by the entire audience with one exception. The negative being then called for, a single individual responded No, and this one was your humble servant. Being so constituted that I cannot do anything contrary to the convictions of my own mind, consequences notwithstanding, this action, of course, was not very favorable, as thereby I went contrary to the popular current.

Finally the time arrived for the inauguration of the new President. In his inaugural address, he declared that he had neither the right nor the wish to interfere with Southern institutions, but would hold and defend the property of the United States against all who should assail it, assuring the leaders of the South that there could be no conflict unless they themselves should choose to begin it.

When I read the address it inspired me with the hope and belief that it would end the difficulty, and that peace and fraternal feeling would be restored, and I am inclined to think that, after the sad experience resulting therefrom, many would agree with me that it ought to have ended it. As was confessed to me by a Confederate General, with whom I met on the cars some time after the close of the strife, he knowing my position on this as well as my sentiments religiously, in speaking of the opposition against me, with which he was familiar, said to me, "There is one thing that you have reason to be proud of, you have proven to the world that you were right." I will farther on speak of my acquaintance with him in the time of the trouble.

But the South did not accept the reasonable proposition of the President, vainly supposing that an alliance would be secured with European countries, because of their need of the Southern production of cotton to supply their factories, they supposing that England and France would combine to put an end to the war and procure the needed supply. Thus, presuming that success would attend their efforts, they began the conflict April 12, 1861,—one month after the inauguration of President Lincoln. The first cannon ball from a Confederate battery struck the wall of Fort Sumpter, and, after a bombardment of thirty-four hours, Major Anderson, the officer of the fort, surrendered and marched out with his eighty men. With the horrors of war now commenced, the news flew along the telegraph wires, and aroused the whole country to decided action.

The new government, under the name of the Confederate States of America, was formed in February, 1861, with Jefferson Davis, President. Both Presidents called for volunteers. Virginia now falling into line, an effort was made to do her part in filling the ranks. Every possible means was resorted to, to induce our young men to volunteer. Politicians of every grade were active, making speeches to encourage it and even professed ministers of the Gospel, of different denominations, were engaged in the work.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRIST.

BY A. HUTCHISON.

WHEN we examine carefully the Spirit of Christ, as we find it exhibited in the history of his life and work, we are filled with admiration, but when we examine our own language, life and work, as compared with his, we are filled with shame and self-loathing, and then, when we look at what Paul says about this matter, we are filled with terror. Let us read the apostle's words right slowly, and mark the emphatic words. Here they are: "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Rom. 8: 9.

When we have done the task of reading and locating the emphasis, we will feel that every word has a wonderful meaning, and that we may well emphasize every word in the entire sentence as a powerful word. When we remember that it is said of him, that "he was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin," we are again made to exclaim with one of the disciples of old, "Who, then, can be saved?"

While we are thus viewing the situation, and almost ready to give up, and hang our harps upon the willows, we turn, in our deep sorrow and perplexity, to look for relief somewhere, for we readily see the great contrast between Christ and ourselves, then we at once see, that we need shelter soon, or our case is doomed. O how sweet the following words are: "For we have not a high priest which cannot be touched with the feelings of our infirmities." Heb. 4: 15. He, too, was tempted, therefore he knows how to sympathize with such as are in any way tempted. Again, "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him." Ps. 103: 13.

These are delightful words to the tempted, and the sorrowing disciple, and he is made to thank God and take courage. It is good for all of us, to see ourselves in a true light, and we cannot do this more successfully than to compare our life with that of Jesus,—for if we undertake to compare ourselves by one another, the apostles would tell us, that such a course is not wise. With all of our failures and shortcomings, we are still encouraged by the words of the Apostle John when he says: "He that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as he is righteous." 1 John 3: 7. We are glad to know, that we can do nothing that is right, but what we get due credit for it. We admire the forgiving Spirit of Christ; but while we are admiring these noble traits in Christ, let us once more consider what Paul says about this matter, "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Let us see where that places us. He has a spirit of forgiveness,—then, if we have not the same, we are none of his. It matters not, if you do wear a plain dress and a modest cap, or if the brother wears a full suit of plain clothes, even with strait collar and rounded skirt, if we have not the spirit of forgiveness we are not of Christ's. No form of exterior, though we may be able to point to much Scriptural proof for it, will be able to protect a hypocritical heart from the penetrating eye of him who seeth deeper than man seeth. You may even stoop low enough to wash the feet of your brother, and kiss him with all the apparent earnestness and love that it is possible to exhibit by any outward sign, and yet if you do not, from your heart, forgive him, when he humbly asks your forgiveness, you do not belong to Christ, as a true disciple of his. Then we have the ordinances of the house of God, which serve as a medium through which to test our spirit. But it is clear that, if a man refuses to do them, he has not the Spirit of Christ. Yet he may do them, as far as the outer form is concerned, and still not have the Spirit of Christ, hence the necessity of a careful examination of our own case, to see if our motives are right, for we may be very loud in our profession of faith in Christ, and love for him, and yet our hearts may be far from him, and if our hearts are at a distance from him, our spirit is not in unison with his, and then we are none of his, and if we are not for him we are against him. We must be held accountable for the spirit of our life and work, for these will have their influence over somebody else.

THINGS OF DOUBTFUL PROPRIETY.

BY DANIEL HAYS.

The term, "Our great Brotherhood," as used by some of our brethren, is of doubtful propriety. God's people are never so designated anywhere in the Scriptures. Besides, it is misleading. The church is a "little flock," and "few" there be that find the "strait gate," and "the narrow way."

To apply the term "Reverend" to others, when we consider it wrong to receive and use the title among ourselves, is of doubtful propriety. "Holy and reverend is his name," is applied by the Psalmist to the Deity.

In our council-meetings we should not aim at victory, but the truth, and aim to correct the error in ourselves as well as in others. This will save as well as gain friends. "In lowliness of mind let each esteem others better than themselves," is the great rule of Christian courtesy. It is of doubtful propriety for a few brethren to do all the praying and all the preaching, when there are many ministers present. Divide the work.

It is not proper to scold a small congregation because the many did not come to meeting. Better visit the absentees and give them an admonition at their homes, and then you will hit the right ones in the right way.

It is not good to let yourself down from a sermon to a small talk just because the audience is not so large as you expected. "Preach the Word." Earnest, faithful work will produce a growth in the audience as well as in yourself.

It is of doubtful propriety to speak disrespectfully of others in the presence of your children. Our ministers get their full share of censure in some households, and, as a result, the children grow up distant, and wander off no one knows how nor where.

It is of doubtful propriety to bring a charge against a minister for failing to fill his appointment, when we so often fail to attend meeting ourselves. We should not condemn another in that which we allow for ourselves.

It is of doubtful propriety to publish our acts of charity. The Lord will keep the account straight.

"Take heed that ye do not your alms before men to be seen of them, otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven. Therefore when thou doest thine alms, do not sound a trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets, that they may have glory of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

It is of doubtful propriety to eulogize the dead in long obituaries and funeral discourses. Better far show more kindness, and give more encouragement to the living. How many hearts would be lightened, how many souls would be gladdened by timely words of kindness, and a little judicious praise; and the most discouraged need the most encouragement.

A CORRECTION.

BY BENJ. MILLER.

I WISH to correct some things in the article in MESSENGER No. 34, page 534, written by Bro. B. C. Moomaw.

1. The eighteen spoken of were not sent to Richmond, but held in prison in the valley. The ones that were in the Castle Thunder Prison, in Richmond, were captured near Petersburgh, Va., sixty-two in number, mostly members of the Brethren and Mennonite churches. I was one of the number. We were taken to Richmond, Va., where we were asked for our arms. Some handed the officers their Testaments and said that was all the weapon they had. They did not want them. We were not robbed of our money. Bro. Moomaw speaks of the baker who had compassion on us and sent us provisions. We received nothing only what we paid for in cash, above the allotted rations, which were little in quantity and poor in quality. We were never visited by Bro. B. F. Moomaw, but were visited by a John Balden from Stanton, Va., who was a member of the Rebel Congress at that time, and it was through his influence that we were released by paying $500.00 for each one.

REMARKS

I gave my statement not on authority, but as I said, by tradition. I had, sometime ago, heard brethren, down the valley, relate this and other war stories. It only shows how unreliable a tradition is, though handed down through apparently excellent channels. A little is added here, or subtracted there. Time and change and imperfect memory will do the rest, and, lo, it is quite another story. Probably Eld. B. F. Moomaw was connected with quite another affair, as I have heard him and others relate his efforts in Richmond to secure the liberty of imprisoned brethren. At any rate this chapter of history is an interesting one, and there is no earthly reason for a disagreement as to details. Bro. Miller ought to know all about his own experience certainly. The writer is very thankful that he was only a little boy at that time, else he, too, might have been running through the bushes, or shut up in jail, or listening to minnie balls. B. C. MOOMAW.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

BY VALYETI BRANDT.

How many of us, who eat the Lord's Supper, comprehend the intention for which it was instituted? I firmly believe that our glorious privilege of eating that Supper tends greatly towards giving us a clearer insight and understanding of the Word.

How beautifully symbolical of the mission of Christ, our dear Redeemer, is our entire Communion service!

1. The disciples sat down to that last supper as to any other meal, though, likely, more sad and impressed with instinctive solemnity, as the approaching great events drew near. Jesus had been referring before to his near departure, but he is not yet ready to partake of the supper, as he intends the events of this particular evening to be impressed upon his disciples, and observed by them after his departure, in remembrance of him. Hence he rises from supper and begins to wash the disciples' feet. Oh, boundless, matchless love and incomprehensible mercy! The Father's own Son, the Beloved of God, teaches, by his example, a lesson of humility.

Next they sit down to a full meal, to partake of it together. What does the supper symbolize? The Word of God,—Christ's life and example while here on earth. Christ's whole life was a living epistle, given for our salvation or assimilation to the formation of spiritual growth. We make use of the kiss of charity, signifying that love is the essential element or atmosphere for spiritual life, of which Christ is the embodiment.

Then comes the completion of the grand scheme for our redemption,—the bread and wine, symbolizing the broken body and shed blood of our Immanuel. "It is finished." Oh! inestimable words! The veil is rent. The plan is complete! Man is redeemed, and at what cost? At no less sacrifice than the whole life, suffering and shameful death of the Immortal Son of God.

Oh, let us rejoice greatly, and let us unitedly pray for a pure atmosphere in which to exercise in order to promote healthy appetites, to partake of our spiritual supper which is ever spread, and inviting to the soul.

READ HELPFUL VERSES.

How many of you, as you take up the Bible for the morning devotions, turn to something which will be of practical use through the busy day at whose threshold you pause to render homage to him whose kindly presence you need throughout its hours? There are strong, helpful words, that will, thus read, stay by children as they go to the school-room, stay by your wife at home, ring sweet music in your own soul all day long. "As much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men," may keep your boy out of a fight. "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed," may help him to overcome the temptation to do a little cheating in his lessons. "Even Christ pleased not himself;" the memory of that verse may help your girl to be unselfish and kind. Read the Bible in course; read it so with your family, if you like, but when you gather them around you in that precious morning time, give them, as a key-note for the day, some helpful Old Testament story of faith and its reward, a psalm full of praise or consecration, sweet words of comfort and counsel from the lips of Christ and his Apostles. If you are pressed by cares, and have time but for a few verses, let them be words that shall be "echoes of blessing" all day, and God alone knows how much good may be the result of thus "rightly dividing the Word of Truth."—The Presbyterian.

A WARNING.—A man once took a piece of white cloth to a dyer, to have it dyed black. He was so pleased with the result that after a time he went back to the dyer with a piece of black cloth, and asked to have it dyed white. But the dyer answered, "A piece of cloth is like a man's reputation; it can be dyed black, but it cannot be made white again."

"MANY a Christian trusts Christ to carry him through the valley of the shadow of death who does not rely upon him to take him through the dread to-morrow. If you are Christ's you have no right to worry. He is a safe pilot. You can trust him in the shallow, quiet river as well as in the sea beyond."

THE PATRIOTIC SONS OF GOD.

A SERMON BY J. G. ROYER.*

"Now are we the sons of God."—1 John 3: 2.

I AM happy, dear brethren and friends, to be with you again. The sermon which I should like to preach to-night, was prepared partly because of some thoughts that were suggested when I last talked to you in the spring, and partly because of some thoughts suggested by our brother, D. L. Miller, who preached for us on the Fourth of July.

In the Scriptures, Christians are compared to soldiers, and their work to a warfare. My text says: "Now are we the sons of God." We have a society in this country known as the "Patriotic Sons of America." I can think of no reason why we, as Christians, should not be called the "Patriotic Sons of God." Every one of you knows how very patriotic men become on the Fourth of July. Every drop of blood seems to course more rapidly through their veins. It seems to me it would be a good thing to have a kind of spiritual warming-up occasionally. It would be a good thing to have our spiritual blood run a little faster than it does at times. It would be a good thing for the church, and for us as individual members of it. It would be good for sinners and for the world; and I am sure, for the Bible says so, that it would cause rejoicing in the upper courts, if the children of God here,—the sons of God,—were a little more patriotic in their work.

Some of the institutions of our country are neglected because somebody neglects home and country. The same is true spiritually. We do not prosper spiritually as we might, because somebody neglects home and church. As Americans, we feel that ours is a great, a noble, a good country, and I doubt very much whether we shall ever be able to reckon up correctly the blessings that come to us because of the good country in which we live. Yet great, and noble, and good as our country is, our heavenly interests are greater. Our heavenly interests are of greater moment than the interests of our country. To be a son of God is more than to be a son of America. Indeed, to sustain the relation of sonship to God is a relation so great that I admit, I do not properly understand or comprehend it. Man is so low, so depraved, so sinful, and God is so great, so high and so holy, that to think of ourselves as sons of the living God seems to surpass human comprehension.

I remember reading of missionaries in a foreign country, who set to work some of their heathen converts to translate portions of Scripture. When they came to a passage where Christians are denominated Sons of God, one of them said, "It is too much; let me rather render it, 'They shall be permitted to kiss his feet.'" No marvel the poor heathen convert would say, "It is too much," when St. John himself in amazement exclaims: "Behold," the vastness of "the manner" in quantity and quality, "of love which the Father hath bestowed upon us," that we might be constituted,—not renowned philosophers, not invincible heroes, not some imperial monarch,—no, but sons of the High, the Omnipotent, the Everlasting Jehovah!

We poor, depraved sinners, to be sons of the God of the universe? The reach is too great! It surpasses our capacity to grasp. We may give expression, in part at least, to a realization of our lowness and of God's highness, in

"Give me the wings . . to rise,"

And in,

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly."

*Preached to the students at the opening of the school, Sept. 6, 1891, and reported by H. M. Spickler, Mt. Morris, Ill.

Thus we may get a glimpse of the exalted position and holy relations for which God is willing to fit us, if we are willing to be faithful "Soldiers of the Cross," and humble "followers of the Lamb."

No wonder Jesus said, "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness;" and again, "If a man gain the whole world and lose his own soul, what will he give in exchange for it?" The thought is, that heaven and eternal joys are worth striving for; and, heaven lost, all is lost. No wonder when the rich man asked Father Abraham to send Lazarus down to cool his parched tongue, that Abraham said, "Between us and you there is a great gulf fixed."

But to be patriotic means something. It means work. It means sacrifice. You remember the rich, young lawyer who came running to the Savior, and said, "Good master, what must I do to inherit eternal life?" The Savior pointed him to the commandments. The young man said: "All these I have kept from my youth up, what lack I yet?" The Savior said unto him: "Go, sell all thou hast, give to the poor, and come and follow me." That young man went away sorrowful. You do not consider his an example of Christian patriotism, because it lacks the essential elements of it.

You, my young friends, know but little of the late Civil War. There are older ones here who know something about that terrible war and the sacrifices that were made,—the sacrifice of home and home enjoyments,—the severing of social ties in the home,—fathers, husbands, and sons, going away to be sacrificed upon the altar of their bleeding country, sacrifice, from one end of the country to the other, and all for worldly institutions. All this to protect the institutions of our country. King Jesus is engaged in a war that is to wipe out a greater curse than negro slavery was to this country, and you, my brother, and I, are soldiers in his army, if we are the sons of God, and we are patriotic sons of God, only in proportion as we are willing to sacrifice our all. "We have left all and followed thee," said Peter. In Peter we have a noble example of patriotism.

To be patriotic sons of our country we must be willing to obey promptly the demands of our country. I read the other day of a young man who had enlisted in the army. He had been engaged to a devoted young lady. She plead with him to remain at home, but the young man went away to the battle-field. His faithfulness as a soldier led to promotions, from a private to lieutenant of his company, then captain; then he was made colonel of his regiment.

Having been in the service for nearly two years, he secured a furlough to spend ten hours at home. He telegraphed his intended, to be ready to be married. They went to the minister, and, while standing on the floor, a messenger stepped in with a telegram. At the close of the ceremony the message was handed to the young man. He opened it and found these words: "To the front." You ask, "What did the young man do?" What would you and I have done? Remain at home the allotted ten hours? No. He gave his young bride, the dearest object upon earth, good-bye, and hurried to the front. He was a truly patriotic son of America in a worldly sense. So we, to be patriotic sons of God, must be ready promptly to obey the mandates of heaven.

To hesitate spoils the obedience. Follow that soldier to the front. A terrible battle ensued. Column after column fell. His flag-bearer fell,—another took it up and fell. A third shared the same fate, when the colonel himself picked it up and carried it upon the breastworks, and gained the victory for his country. Such is true patriotism, for it is said that after the battle the surviving men sang, "Colonel Brenner bore the flag on high that others bore to die." My brethren and sisters, are we bearing the flag on high that others have borne to die? Think of the patriarchs, of Moses, of the prophets, of Jesus himself, of the Christian fathers, of our own fathers and mothers, and what they did to afford us the enjoyments of to-night, and then let us ask ourselves: "Are we bearing on high the banner which our fathers bore to die?" Patriotism means sacrifice. Did Abraham make a sacrifice when he took his son Isaac to offer him? Did Jacob, when he gave up Benjamin? Moses, when he refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter? And Jesus, what sacrifice did he not make? And what did our fathers and mothers not sacrifice that we might enjoy religious blessings such as surround us to-night? What sacrifice are we making? Are we willing to sacrifice for Jesus,—for the church and her interests,—for the salvation of perishing ones around us? If we are willing to make sacrifices, then are we patriotic sons of God.

But let us see how we make this sacrifice. The Bible says, "Husbands love your wives, as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it." Suppose I tell you I love my wife, and sit down and look at her washing at fifty cents a day. Would I be a patriotic husband? You would say, "I don't believe a word you say as long as you sit down while she does all the work, and then you eat her living." So if we are ready to share the enjoyments the church affords, but do nothing to promote her interests, our actions say, "We do not love the church." If my indifference leads me to neglect my religious duties to my family, to the sick, to the poor and to the church, I am not a patriotic son of God.

Again we find those who are willing to remain with the church so long as they are allowed to do as they please, and go where they please. But when the church finds it necessary to bring them under discipline, they are ready to leave the church. Such are not patriotic sons of God.

We must bring into subjection the carnal mind. It is at enmity with God. It cannot please God. As self-sacrificing sons of God, we may please God. But to do so our patriotism must lead us to the front. It must lead us into battle. Our Christian patriotism is measured by our readiness to sacrifice for the church and her interests in time of trouble and discouragements. We may become discouraged because sin seems to prosper at every point, and Christ's cause seems to advance so slowly. When we notice intemperance, skepticism and infidelity with their flags high in the air, we may become despondent, especially if we do not look beyond these flags. But if we look high enough we shall see the banner of Jesus floating over all, and we have no reason to be discouraged, because the church moves on and will prevail over all.

Others are ready to fall out of rank because their work is not appreciated. Others, because the church does not put them into positions. Now, my young friends, never allow yourselves to worry about higher positions. Andrew and Philip were very useful to the Master while he was upon earth, but not because of the eloquent sermons they preached. The one thing that made them so useful, was that they were always close by their Savior when he needed them. Andrew and Philip were always on hand. Never mind about getting up higher. If you are all right, Christ will put you up high enough for your good.

And now I must close. We have come to the beginning of another school year; and I bless God that he permitted so many of you to come. I feel that you are willing to work for the Blessed Master. When I call to mind how he has blessed us during the past seven years, I feel that we have no reason to be discouraged; and I want to say to my dear brethren and sisters, be not discouraged, but, at the opening of this new school year, begin to work as patriotic sons of God, and the Lord will bless us. He has blessed us in the past, and he will bless us in the future.

And you, my young friends, who have not yet come into the fold, — you who are outside of Christ, let me say just one thing to you to-night. It is this: I want you to remember that you will never be rejected at heaven's gate for being a sinner. But you will be rejected there for rejecting your Savior now. You will be rejected for rejecting Jesus Christ. Do we understand what we mean by the word "reject?" If I should come to your door and ring the bell, and you could see that I was there, and could hear me and understand that I desired admittance, and you would refuse to open the door because you did not want me in, that would be rejecting me. You will be rejected at heaven's gate for rejecting Christ by not opening the door of your heart when he knocks there. When you get to your room to-night, turn to the tenth chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews, read the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth verses, and see whether you want to be one of that number. May God bless you all, is my prayer!

THE MASTER'S CALL.

BY J. F. BRITTON.

"The Master is come, and calleth for thee."—John 11: 28.

WHILST this call was for Mary, it is applicable to every son and daughter of Adam's race. Jesus is our Master. If he is not, the devil is. Jesus should be in the hearts of all true disciples, directing their thoughts, controlling their feelings, shedding abroad the light of their life, day by day, sustaining and strengthening them for the battles of life. Those who have served him most, are most anxious to continue in his service, for his yoke is easy and his burden is light. You, who are serving the other master, if you would know what true joy is, take Jesus as your Savior, and obey him as your Master, and a life of usefulness here and happiness hereafter will be yours.

"The Master is come." That is the best news this world ever heard. When the shepherds were watching their flocks that night in Palestine, and heard such music as had never greeted their ears before, they looked up to see who had brought such sweet melodies. They found that the angels were gathering around them, and telling them the blessed news that the Master had come.

"The Master is come and calleth." He is always calling. He calls by every providence. When you were sick and felt that, perhaps, you might never get well, he was calling for you. When you looked into the cold, pale face of your own loved dead, he was calling. You have never read the Bible, or heard the Gospel preached in your life, but it was a call of the Master, and to-day the call is repeated. Notice how personal it is,—"He calleth for thee." If, while you are reading these lines, you feel in your heart this means you, take it home, apply it to yourself and do the Master's biddings.

"The Master is come, and calleth for thee." What did he want? He wanted Mary that he might comfort her. He knew that her poor heart was breaking with sorrow and grief, and he wanted to relieve her of the anguish that the irresistible hand of death had brought. Are you afflicted? Is your poor heart burdened with trouble and sorrow? Do you feel that, like Mary, grief has smitten your soul,—is there some trouble, in regard to which you cannot confide to anybody? Why tarriest thou? Arise! Go to the Master, for he calleth for thee!

"Here bring your wounded hearts, here tell your anguish; Earth has no sorrows that heaven cannot heal."

He is calling, too, for those who have come into his vineyard. He wants you to go to work. Why stand ye here all the day idle? What have you done for the upbuilding of the church? What are you doing for Jesus to-day? Are you thinking about your own enjoyment, day by day, busy after the things of this world, diving into all sorts of hilarities? Stop a minute! The Master is calling for thee. He wants you to go and work for him. Yonder wayward wanderer is thy brother, thy sister. Go and win them back to Christ. There is much for every one to do, and the Master is urgent in his demand.

"Hark! the voice of Jesus crying—
'Who will go and work to day?
Fields are white, and harvest waiting;
Who will bear the sheaves away?'
Loud and strong the Master calleth,
Rich reward he offers thee;
Who will answer, gladly saying,
'Here am I; send me, send me!'"

THE BEATITUDES.

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

WHEN Jesus Christ, the Great Redeemer and Head of the church, left the bosom of his Father, and descended to the scenes of earth, to make known his Father's will toward poor, degraded, fallen man, he lost no opportunity of doing and speaking good. In the beginning of his ministerial labors, he selected twelve men from among those who occupied positions in the humble walks and vocations in life, - those who would, naturally speaking, be easily entreated and would also be competent witnesses of his mighty works.

While he was preaching and teaching the multitudes publicly, he also healed their bodily infirmities and diseases, that he might demonstrate his miraculous power and readily enlist their sympathies, thus convincing the people of his ability to forgive their sins.

But it often became necessary for him to take his disciples apart from the multitude, and instruct and comfort them privately. In his memorable sermon on the mountain, where he made known to his disciples the blessedness of their calling, we learn many things which are calculated to encourage and cheer us on our weary pilgrimage to that celestial home above.

"Blessed are the poor in spirit," "blessed are they that mourn," "blessed are the meek," "blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness," "blessed are the merciful," "blessed are the pure in heart," "blessed are the peacemakers." For each character, here represented, there is a blessedness pronounced, a satisfying of their desires, and a fulfilling of their highest happiness and aspirations.

But we read a little further in the Sacred Narrative, and we find another more comforting assurance to the tempest-tossed mariner on the heavenly voyage. "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake." Matt. 5: 11. This declaration might seem to almost stagger the faith of some of us, did it not come from the lips of the immaculate Son of God.

It has been asserted that "in the service of God, all is unalloyed happiness, if we are converted and live in constant communion with our Divine Master." This is true in one sense, but the true follower of the Son of God finds many obstacles in his pathway; he cannot be "carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease." Even the Savior himself was persecuted, falsely accused, and reviled by those who themselves believed they were doing God's service, and after he had accomplished the great work whereunto he was sent, and had been buffeted, spit upon, and condemned to the ignominious death of the cruel cross, some of those, who had been his most intimate friends, deserted and even denied any knowledge of him, yet he possessed within him the blessed assurance of his Father's approval and recognition, and while he was thus persecuted and reviled, he lifted his eyes to heaven and pleaded with his Father in their behalf,—"Father, forgive them, they know not what they do."

Oh, what an example for his disciples to emulate and follow after! The Apostle Stephen beheld the heavens opened, while his persecutors were stoning him to death, and he received the promised "blessedness" of his God, and in his expiring moments supplicated at the throne of mercy for his tormenters, beseeching God to forgive them, and to receive his spirit.

All along the history of past ages in the church, men and women have suffered martyrdom for their adherence to the teaching of the Savior, realizing the wonderful truth of his words, as they are recorded by the sacred writer. "Blessed are they who are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." "And blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake." Matt. 5: 10, 11. Yea, for JESUS' SAKE, the great pivot upon which the Christian's obedience moves, his faith directs and his hope anchors within the vail.

A NARROW CONCEPTION.

IT is a defect of our thought and teaching often, that our conception of individual Christian life is not wide enough. The fault runs through much of our common language upon matters of religious life. We hear people talking about their religious experience as if they had at least two sorts of experience—religious and some other. You hear people talking about their religious life, their religious duties, their religious work. It's all a mistake; all founded on an inadequate idea of what religion means. Can you imagine Jesus Christ talking about his religious experience, his religious duties? Or even Paul? No, the truth is, if a man have any religion worth having, he has no life but religious life, no experience but religious experience, no duties but religious duties.

"I know no life divided,
O Lord of life, from Thine!"

Our whole distinction between secular and religious things is mostly factitious and misleading. Between right and wrong, between good and evil, there is, indeed, an everlasting distinction, deep as hell and high as heaven; but between what we call religious and what we call secular there usually is—or ought to be - no distinction. Whatsoever is duty at all, is religious duty. We are constantly talking as if God enjoined us to do some few things for him, and allowed us to do a good many more for ourselves. But in strict fact it is not a whit more a religious duty for me to take part in a prayer-meeting than it is for me to lecture to my college classes. Worship is no more a religious duty than work is—what we call secular work, daily work. As one of the best of hymns says:

"Work shall be prayer, if all be wrought
As thou wouldst have it done,
And prayer by thee inspired and taught
Itself with work be one."

For to the genuinely religious man all duty alike is the injunction of him whose we are, and whom we serve.—Sel.

THE FATHERHOOD OF GOD.

BY GERTRUDE A. FLORY.

"He careth for you."—1 Pet. 5: 7.

WHEN we look around us at the varied handiwork of God, wrought in pictures of beauty and grandeur, we think of him as "the Creator," whose powers are vast and measureless as eternity. The natural mind sees him as an unapproachable Being, whose very loftiness and holiness excludes man from his association. The depraved soul views him as a strict judge, sitting in judgment upon his evil deeds, and dealing out justice without mercy. The repenting sinner beholds him only as a Savior, whose hand is outstretched to save him from the fiery pit of eternal woe.

But, oh, how differently does he appear to the regenerated! While they are overwhelmed with a sense of the Omnipotence which could speak into existence a universe, and fashion from the dust of the earth a being in his own image, and astonished by the holiness which never gave place to sin, and awed by the justice which rewards according to the work, and humbled by the mercy which saves from sin and death, they know God as a Father whose love reaches out to the farthest points of the compass, to care for his children whom he has begotten by the blood of his Son, Jesus Christ.

Let us meditate a moment upon the plan of redemption, whereby God became the Father, and we the heirs of eternal salvation. Our Creator, looking down from his heavenly habitation, beheld us groveling in sin, "with no eye to pity, and no arm to save." Our utter helplessness awoke his compassion, which sent his only Son to lift us out of our fallen, wretched state. This redemption work was so great that it required deprivations, losses, sufferings, lonelinesses, fatigues, buffetings, persecutions, that we might become joint-heirs with him in his Father's love, care and glory.

Why God made so great a sacrifice for his created souls who had forfeited all right to heirship, is beyond human comprehension, but we do know that through that sacrifice he is the Everlasting Father to all that believe in his name, and in that knowledge is our supremest joy. For us he has given the most precious treasure of heaven on whom he lavished the tenderest love. What better proof of his abiding fatherhood could he give to us? It is love without a parallel, and mercy without comparison. No other act could have so grandly exemplified the character of a God who deigns to bestow upon a disobedient people the attributes of his paternal nature.

Having now conclusive evidence of the fathership of God, do we know to what extent he exercises paternity over his blood-bought children? Do we spiritually discern the exceeding tenderness of his father-love? Do we regard that ear that always hears and that eye that never closes, lest one of those precious children should call for aid and not be heard, or one of them should go astray or fall and not be seen?

"God is love." 1 John 4: 8. Think, then, what must be the depth of that love which warms the bosom of our Father,—God! Can any other affection equal it? Nothing but the love of the crucified Son, in whose life we find a perfect index to the character of the Father and his relation to the children, and Jesus himself says: "I do nothing of myself, but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things." John 8: 28. How excellent were the things he spoke! His gracious words, falling in winning sweetness from his sinless tongue, were balm to the wounded, comfort to the sorrowing, peace to the troubled, joy to the grief-stricken, consolation to the broken-hearted, courage to the despondent, strength to the weak, rest to the weary, sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, speech to the mute, vigor to the lame, freedom to the afflicted, blessings to the poor, food to the hungry, raiment to the naked, health to the sick, mercy to the sinning, cheer to the desolate, love to the lonely, happiness to the bereaved, home to the homeless, spirit and life to the dying, resurrection to the dead, grace and truth to all mankind, and immortality to all who believe unto salvation. What a glorious record is this,—a true copy of what the Father is doing for his children from day to day!

How do we know that he exercises a personal care over us and bears the burden of our every-day cares? "God is the same yesterday, to-day and forever," and hear what his never-failing Word says: "Take no thought for your life, nor food, nor raiment, nor to-morrow," Matt. 6: 25–34, "casting all your care upon him, for he careth for you." 1 Pet. 5: 7. The sparrows are fed and the lilies are clothed,—"Are ye not much better than they?" What consolation! How soothing to the soul, weighed down by life's fretful burdens! "Casting all your care upon him." This injunction precludes every possibility of his refusal to notice even the least care and trouble which may befall his children. Again he says, "Be careful for nothing." Philpp. 4: 6. He not only invites us to cast our care upon him, but would have us absolutely without care, like the little child who is not concerned about its welfare, because its wants have ever been supplied by parental love and care.

The little one knows that its fall will be lamented, its wounds bound up, its little hurts and bruises anointed with generous, healing kisses. When the task assigned the child becomes too laborious and wearisome for its weak strength, the kind parent assumes a portion of the work, or all of it, if he deems the latter better for the child. How often has father lifted the little one and its burden, and carried both in his arms, because the child complained that its load was too heavy for it to carry! "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him." Ps. 103: 13. "And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear." Isa. 65: 24.

If God is so kind, so careful of our lives, so compassionate toward our complaints and misfortunes, and is, indeed, a Loving Father, why are we ofttimes afflicted and overwhelmed by angry waves of sorrow? Have we not heard, "Many are the afflictions of the righteous," Ps. 34: 19, and "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth?" Heb. 12: 6. Even the Only-begotten of the Father was not exempted from suffering. He was "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief," and endured many things that we might have a right in the fatherhood of God. "If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons." "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby." Heb. 12: 7, 11.

For our own good or the good of others we are sometimes left to wrestle alone with midnight wailings and heart-groanings which cannot be uttered, and tears which flow as a fountain of deep waters. A darling babe, upon whom our richest affection was centered, may be transplanted above; our home, of which we made an idol, may be swept away in a flood of misfortune; the treasure, that we worshiped more than our Creator, may be ruined by a conflagration. Some other calamity, equally or more appalling, may befall us, to show us how we wrong the Good Father, or to draw us away from earth and earthly love, into the purer atmosphere of that great Father-love. God knows how to keep his own, and no one shall be able to pluck them out of his hand. John 10: 29.

"He careth for you." Let that blessed assurance, rich in comfort, console us in the hour of need! How cheering and inspiring it is! Coming, as it does, from the lips that sin has never touched by even a blot, it falls upon the weary spirit as healing drops from Jehovah's wings outspread to shield us from earth's storms. He bids us come to him and partake of his measureless love, peace, bliss, happiness and home. With fearless abandon we throw ourselves into his open arms, confident that the shadow of his paternal wings shall shield us from every harm. In dangers seen and unseen, his hand is over us; and when floods of sorrow or temptation or misfortune threaten us, we need not be appalled, for "underneath us are his everlasting arms."

La Porte, Ind.

DON'T BE TOO TENDER.

DON'T be too swift to take offense. Many times the shot is not aimed at you. Don't cry before you are hit. But if your feelings are hurt, bear it in silence. Don't tell it. Don't parade it before others. Suffer in silence, and wait God's time to right the matter. Learn to suffer for Christ's sake. You can get the victory over the devil by not talking about your injured feelings. He likes for you to speak of it often. It adds fuel to the fire. "For Christ's sake" lightens many burdens, and makes it much easier to suffer.

Paul's feelings were sorely hurt when beaten with many stripes, yet he suffered patiently. Peter and John were sorely hurt when they were unjustly imprisoned for preaching the Gospel, yet they rejoiced that they were counted worthy to suffer for his name's sake. Stephen's feelings were hurt when he was stoned, yet he prayed: "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." And One greater than all was humiliated in a mock trial and a crucifixion between two thieves, and he prayed: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Be Christ-like, and pray that the offenses against you may not be laid to their charge. Learn to suffer a little for Christ's sake. Under no circumstance allow your injured feelings to provoke you into saying hard things, or bearing resentful feelings, or in neglecting a known duty to preacher, church, or Sunday-school.—Sel

"'FAITH cometh by hearing.' Why, the Gospel that you hear is the power of God unto salvation, and this power works secretly and silently upon the heart in hearing, when the person may be little knowing that it is the power of God that is dealing with his heart; and yet that power is, perhaps, working so effectually that, in hearing of Christ, there is a heart beating toward, a heart burning toward him. Faith cometh not by working; it comes not by doing; it comes not by forcing yourself up to the act of faith; but it cometh by hearing the object; it comes by hearing Christ, and what he hath in hand."

"SYMPATHY does not lighten a burden of sorrow, but it does help the burdened one to bear his load. If, therefore, you know of a sorrow which presses another's heart, give expression to your sympathy with him, even though you understand that he alone must struggle under the weight of his burden. In one sense your words cannot help him; in another sense they can. Speak them out, therefore, for what they may be worth. He will be grateful for them, and you will be the better for their speaking."

WORK.—"I must work the works of him that sent me while it is day, the night cometh when no man can work"—Jesus (John 9: 4). So must we, the "children of light, and the children of the day" (1 Thess. 5: 5), his followers, work while the sun of our day is still shining, and the Gospel light, in all of its glorious fullness, brilliancy and power illuminates our pathway. May its divine and heavenly beams light you into all truth, and bless your work and your voyage to the other shore!—H.

TRACTS.—The demand for tracts is steadily increasing. The calls are more numerous now and for larger numbers than at any previous period in the history of the work. Upwards of 70,000 copies have been sent out since Aug. 1,—the beginning of the present quarter. In several cities and towns a number of earnest faithful workers are now visiting and distributing tracts from house to house with good effect. This is a practical way of working and getting others interested in the good cause so ably represented by our tracts, treating upon the various topics and principles of doctrine. All ask the earnest prayers of God's people in their behalf and in this branch of teaching and missionary work. The field is wide and the harvest great. May there be many more laborers!—H.

"NOTHING is harder in life, nor nobler, than to do one's simple duty when there is a strong temptation not to do it. A duty that would be very easy at another time, is a very difficult one just then. Yet it may be said that a man deserves no credit for doing his simple duty. That is true in one sense, but not in another. A man has no right to claim any credit for simple duty-doing at any time; yet if he does his simple duty when strongly tempted not to do it, he shows the spirit of a real hero, or of a real saint. Even though he claims no credit for himself, in such a case, we should fail in our simple duty if we did not accord it to him. When did any man ever bear himself worthily and with nobleness, save by doing just that which, all things considered, was his simple duty? Our nobleness is really tested by our ability to perceive and to honor the nobleness of another's simple duty-doing,—when it is worthy of such recognition."

CHARITY IS THE CHRISTIAN'S FRIEND.—Let it be the aim and the end and moving cause of all your giving and doing. Charity thinketh no evil and is very kind. Give as the Lord has prospered and cheerfully, "for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver." Give liberally for he is your great reward.—H.

THE GREAT CURRENT.

BY S. P. WEAVER.

I OFTEN imagine that I can see that mighty current of water that swept through Johnstown, Pa., a few years ago and hear the cries and shrieks of those struggling for life. Then, again, I hear the groans and sighs of friends standing on the bank, or running to and fro, trying in vain to find some way to help.

But there is another mighty current to which I wish to call your attention. It is the current of sin, which far exceeds all other currents. Its length and breadth are equal to that of the world, and its end will be when Christ will come again to judge the world and take vengeance on them that know not God.

This mighty current is sweeping its thousands into eternity, only to take up their abode in that awful place where the wicked are forever banished from the presence of God, and where they must suffer the penalty of a just sentence.

Although this mighty current is rushing all around us, many professed Christians are asleep, having their eyes and ears closed to the cries of those who want to be fed with the bread from on high. They stand seemingly careless and unconcerned while their friends, and even their children, are falling into this mighty current and being swept on to destruction. They stand blind and dumb, seeming to have a form of godliness but denying the power thereof. They complain of the elder who has charge of the flock and who is watching over them with all the anxious care of a father's love for their good. They say his expenses are too much. He comes so often that he burdens the church, while, at the same time, their granaries are filled with grain, their tables are bountifully laden, and temporally they are feasting. But when the question is asked, Can we build a church-house or can we give something to the Lord, they raise the cry, "We are too poor; we cannot afford it; we must do without a church-house and have less preaching." Meanwhile their children are floating along in the mighty current, dressing in all the fashions of the world.

Of such Christians it can often be said, "Their seat in the church is vacant; at the Sunday-school they are seldom seen. They have but little concern for the young and rising generation, while around them are thousands of souls going the broad road, floating along on the mighty current to destruction." Awake, thou that sleepest; arise from your dull slumber; open your eyes, and see what a work there is for you to do! Open your purses; show your faith by your works; let your money go to carry the Gospel to the many that are starving for the Bread of Life; try to regain lost time and if you can save a soul from death, you have done more than if you had gained the whole world.

OUR BIBLE CLASS.

BY A. W. VANIMAN.

Lesson One.

THE present is an age of research; especially is this true concerning Bible truths. History, science, language, archæology, and, in fact, every avenue of human knowledge is ransacked to prove or disprove the Bible. Were it any other than the Book of an all-wise God, it could not possibly stand the innumerable tests put to it.

The starry heavens, the beasts of the field, the vegetation of the earth, the rocks under the surface, man with his ever-varying history, the rise and fall of empires, all unite to confirm the inspiration of the Bible. Never before in the history of our Brotherhood, was there such an interest in the study of the Bible and Bible subjects. This is made evident by the large attendance and intense interest at the Bible Normals of the different schools last winter and the prospects for the coming winter.

The object of "our Bible class" is to assist in a systematic study of the Bible and kindred subjects. The greatest difficulty experienced by the writer is, that the field is so large, making it difficult to decide upon what points to touch. For the present our object will be to briefly fill up the gap between the Old and New Testament, which is an interval of about 400 years. When we consider that the last book of the Old Testament was written about 400 years before Christ and that over 200 years before Christ the Old Testament was translated into another language, we see how erroneous are the statements of some skeptics, who assign such a late date to some of those writings. As the prophecy of Daniel covers this interval it may be interesting to take a brief view of the same.

This prophecy was written about 600 B. C., while Daniel was at Babylon. As the whole book of Daniel can be read in a couple of hours, every one who is not perfectly familiar with it should read it in order to fully understand what is here referred to. Then re-read the second, seventh and eighth chapters. In the second chapter we have a description of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, wherein he dreamed about an image with a head of gold, arms and breasts of silver, belly and thighs of brass, legs of iron, feet and toes of iron and clay mixed.

In the seventh chapter we have Daniel's vision of four beasts,- first, a lion with wings and a man's heart; second, a bear; third, a leopard with four wings and four heads; the fourth a terrible, as it were, indescribable beast.

In the eighth chapter we have another vision of Daniel's, two years later than the other vision. In this he saw first, a ram with two horns, second, a he-goat with one notable horn between his eyes, which horn being broken, four others came up in its stead From the midst of these four horns comes up a little horn, which becomes great.

Now we learn from the interpretation given in connection with these prophecies, that they refer to kingdoms, and enough is said by which we can determine, with the light of subsequent history, what kingdoms are referred to.

Again, it is evident that these three prophecies refer to the same kingdoms in general, but each brings out some peculiar features not noticed in the others.

The first kingdom referred to is Babylon, represented by the head of gold and the first beast like a lion This kingdom is not noticed in the eighth chapter. Babylon, in her wealth and splendor, is well represented by the head of gold. In its power to conquer and its ability to cover much territory, it is fitly represented by a lion with eagle wings, but Daniel watched it until its wings were plucked. It no longer went in search of conquest but became proud, haughty, indolent and cowardly. This kingdom was brought to an end in the manner described in the fifth chapter of Daniel which will be more fully described in our next lesson. Each week we will give a few practical questions on the previous lesson.

The Gospel Messenger

Is the recognized organ of the German Baptist or Brethren's church, and advocates the form of doctrine taught in the New Testament and pleads for a return to apostolic and primitive Christianity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and maintains that Faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration of the heart and mind, baptism by Trine Immersion for remission of sins unto the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, are the means of adoption into the household of God,—the church militant.

It also maintains that Feet-washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and as universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians, is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, as taught in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ.

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, James 5: 14, is binding upon all Christians.

It also advocates the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, thus giving to the Lord for the spread of the Gospel and for the conversion of sinners.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

Mount Morris, Ill., - - - - - Oct. 13, 1891

THE Brethren of Middle Indiana will please take notice that Levi Miller is now Treasurer of the Old Folks' Home in place of Noah Fisher. His address is Mexico, Ind.

WE are glad to know that a church has been organized in Fort Scott, Kans. The location is a good one, and we trust that it may become a stronghold for our Brethren.

WHEN you read Bro. Hays' article this week on "Things of Doubtful Propriety," please apply all of it to yourself, and not one particle to any one else. It will then do you some good. We have taken our part.

ON his return from Linn County, Iowa, last week Bro. I. J. Rosenberger stopped with us one day and preached an excellent sermon in the Chapel. He was too anxious to get home to be induced to remain longer. He reports a very enjoyable mission among the Brethren in Iowa.

TO AGENTS AND PATRONS.

IN this issue, to each of our agents, we send our annual prospectus and subscription blank for 1892, in the form of a supplement. If any of those, who have been acting as agents for us, should fail to find in their papers the prospectus, they will please inform us at once and we will gladly supply them. Our agents are a great help to us. We hardly see how we could run our business without them, and we certainly do appreciate their efforts. We trust they will immediately enter upon their work, and not only call on all the old subscribers but procure as many new ones as possible. The character of Bro. Miller's letters is such as to adapt them to all classes of readers, and there are thousands who would subscribe if their attention were called to this feature of the paper. As an inducement to all who are not now taking the MESSENGER we will send the paper the remainder of the year free to all new subscribers. As soon as we receive their names, they will commence receiving the paper.

Heretofore we have been sending the paper until it was ordered discontinued, but on account of many refusing to pay even after they had received the paper one whole year, we have concluded after this to send the paper to those only who subscribe. It will therefore be necessary for our subscribers to see to it that their subscriptions are renewed in good time.

We are happy to report that the MESSENGER is steadily growing in favor among our people. We are glad to know that our efforts are appreciated, and we assure you that our aim is to make the paper still more interesting and instructive. So far as our work is concerned everything seems to be moving along smoothly. We seldom receive an unkind letter concerning the character of the paper. Of course we have doubtless made some mistakes but our readers have kindly made due allowance for such.

And now, thanking you, one and all, for your liberal patronage in the past, for your earnest prayers and sympathies, we ask you to renew your subscriptions and enjoy our work another year. We think we can do you good. May the Lord help us all to enjoy this work and receive good from it.

ABOUT forty thousand pilgrims visit the Holy Coat daily. This is superstition in the extreme. One would think that people could hardly be so full of superstition in this enlightened age.

SISTER DELLA DOVE, of Olean, Miller Co., Mo., would be pleased to know if there are any members living near that place, or even in or near Miller County. Parties knowing will please write her.

BY the time this reaches our readers we will be ready to fill orders for the "Brethren's Family Almanac" for 1892. In addition to the calendar, usually found in almanacs, it contains a corrected ministerial list and a number of well-prepared articles, with biographical sketches, etc. A well-written article concerning Quinter's debate on "Freemasonry," at Covington, Ohio, will be found exceedingly interesting. The work contains forty-eight pages, being eight pages larger than it was last year. Price, ten cents. Agents will please write for additional terms.

A LETTER just received from Bro. S. S. Mohler informs us that he is hardly strong enough to do any writing for the MESSENGER, but we are glad to learn that he is greatly interested in the contents of the paper.

BRETHREN A. S. Culp, of Monticello, Ind., and G. M. Myers, of Laconia, Ind., we learn, are now in Kentucky, engaged in mission work. It is to be hoped that Bro. Culp may be induced to locate in that State and take charge of the work there.

A TERRIBLE famine is prevailing in parts of Russia. Parents are selling their children to buy food, and in some instances men and women are eating that which animals themselves would refuse. Russia taxes her people nearly to death to sustain her large standing armies, and they are ill prepared to endure a famine in any part of her provinces.

Now and then a man will write something that seems to fill a universal want. Of this class it is said that the tract, written by Dr. Newman Hall, the English Congregationalist, entitled, "Come to Jesus," has had a greater sale than any other religious work, the Bible excepted. Several million copies have been translated into more than thirty languages. The author is now seventy-five years old.

IN his report of an election for a minister, one of our correspondents states that, before the members cast their votes, they were carefully instructed concerning the Scriptural qualifications of a minister. This was certainly the right thing. No church should enter upon the responsible duty of selecting either a minister, deacon, or elder without first having carefully listened to proper instructions concerning the needed qualifications of the officers to be voted for.

WE are now receiving a good supply of church news and are very thankful for it. Our readers greatly appreciate good news. But we suggest to our writers that they make their reports short and to the point so we can find room for all. Now and then a writer throws in an exhortation, containing some real good thought if we only had room for it. But when we are pressed for space we have to omit that part. We have little to complain of, but many things to thank God for, and we hope our writers will send us all the good news they can gather.

FOR some months our readers have been enjoying Nancy D. Underhill's excellent articles. Her home is in a part of Colorado not favored with religious influences. For sometime she has been seeking for more light, having in the meantime heard of the Brethren and also become a regular reader of the MESSENGER. Bro. G. W. Fesler, of Longmont, Colo., now writes as follows: "I am glad to inform you that wife and I have been to see sister Nancy D. Underhill, of Canon City, Colo., and baptized her while there. She is surely a devoted Christian woman."

WHEN you write Bro. D. L. Miller use very thin paper. Remember that the postage is five cents for each half ounce on all letters to Europe, and by using light paper, letters may be kept within the proper weight. By the way, do not fail to write often. They will certainly appreciate news from their many friends in America, especially from now on, for they will soon be entering upon the dangerous part of their journey, where they will not see a member for many months. Address them at London, England, care of Thos. Cook & Son, Ludgate Circus, E. C. They are traveling in care of this company, and their mail will follow them in all their dangerous wanderings through Egypt, Arabia and Palestine.

Bro. Daniel Vaniman was with us last week, attending the meeting of the General Mission Board. His stay was too short to permit him to preach for us, very much to our regret.

A writer has well said that no man can be rightly judged without taking into consideration the kind of wife he has. There are men who go through the world without doing very much harm, because they have angelic wives to restrain them, but who would have developed into devils had they married Jezebels. The day that a man marries a good wife he takes one step toward heaven. "A virtuous woman is a crown to her husband; but she that maketh ashamed is as rottenness in his bones."

On Sunday morning, Oct. 6, Bro. Samuel Murray preached for us in the Chapel. His discourse was very much appreciated by both old and young. These aged ministers can accomplish great good by their earnest and encouraging talks. Bro. Murray is now past eighty-five years old, probably the oldest preacher in the Brotherhood. He has lived in three generations, and has a valuable store of knowledge concerning most of our leading ministers and many of the congregations in Ohio and Indiana especially. We always feel benefited by coming in contact with these aged pilgrims who are waiting for the gate to open and pass them into the other world.

We have been receiving some requests to have the Messenger discontinued because the parties are not able to pay for it. They tell us that they do this with great reluctance, because they much enjoyed reading its pages. It seems to us that in this year of blessings an ample provision should be made to have the paper sent to all such poor. It is true, when we look at the world as it is, things don't seem to be equal. But, perhaps our Father has a wise purpose in all these things, as they afford possibilities for the developing and exercising of that Christian charity which is so essential to our growth and perfection. Let us not lose the opportunities!

The General Mission Board met in Mt. Morris last week and transacted considerable business. There were only a few calls for aid in building meeting-houses, but a number of calls were presented for help in the various mission fields, nearly all of which were responded to. The outlook is encouraging and the work enlarging. The State Districts are getting a better understanding of their duties and things are moving along quite harmoniously. Several ministers will probably be placed in the field by the Board and many more will be used by the State Boards. There is every reason to be greatly encouraged. If space would permit we would like to say more, but cannot at present.

Some time ago, while enjoying the hospitality of a Christian family in the country, we lifted from the shelf a well-worn New Testament, in large print, to look up a Scripture for our discourse that day. We found it one of the most interesting family Testaments that we had met with in a long while. Scores of verses were marked, and on the margin were traced the names of the ministers who had preached from the different texts. We were soon absorbed looking for the names of ministers and reading the texts opposite their names, and also reading other marked parts. What an interesting book that will be for the father and mother in their old days! Seeing the names of ministers alongside of familiar texts will enable them to again enjoy, in their memories, the good sermons heard many years ago. It will enable them to go over the past and gather up the sweetness of life for comfort in declining years.

We trust that the readers of the Messenger appreciate our efforts to give them an interesting paper. It requires no little care, labor and watchfulness to do this. A late issue contained one hundred articles, items and notices in addition to over one hundred and fifty love-feast announcements. To get them all in readable shape is no small task, and it need not be wondered that we sometimes make mistakes.

The Committee of Arrangements for next Annual Meeting are John Zuck, Clarence, Iowa; J. S. Snyder, Brooklyn, Iowa, and George W. Hopwood, Deep River, Iowa. The Cedar Rapids people, where the Meeting is to be held, have already taken steps to carry out their part in arranging for the Meeting. They have secured a fine plot of ground upon which the necessary buildings are to be erected,—another plot, with abundance of shade adjoining, to be used for overflow accommodations, and still another adjoining plot with shade to be used for hitching horses. They are greatly pleased over their success in securing the Meeting and have assured the Brethren, since it has been located there, that they shall do all in their power to make the Meeting pleasant and agreeable to our people during their stay in Cedar Rapids, in June, 1892. The City of Des Moines and Iowa City made also quite liberal offers to assist us in holding our next Annual Meeting, for which they have the sincere gratitude of the Brethren.

Our readers should not be too free to censure ministers who spend much time preaching in large, wealthy congregations. In the vicinity of these large congregations are many sinners, and a concern is felt for them. Often there are members' children who are not in the church. These churches desire a protracted meeting and send for one of our ministers to come and hold a series of meetings. There is nothing wrong about this. It is the privilege of churches to do so, and they ought to be encouraged in it. It is a very commendable means of converting the people and edifying the church. Besides, we have many poor ministers who cannot afford to spend their time and means at new points where they can get no assistance to help defray their expenses and support their families. If they preach away from home at all, it must be where they can be aided. Then we have others whose health will permit them to labor only where they can receive the very best of care. We feel to rejoice that ministers of this class can find suitable fields in which to properly use their talents, and they ought not to be censured for it.

The London Times contends that it is a part of the fixed policy of Russia to finally, perhaps in the remote future, obtain possession of Palestine and of the Holy Places. All our readers know that Russia acts as the champion and protector of the Greek church. Just outside of the Jaffa gate at Jerusalem she has erected immense hospices for Greek pilgrims, with frowning walls like a great fortress, and she is steadily acquiring sacred localities. Within the last year it has been announced that Jacob's well, near Nablous, has been purchased, and at Bethlehem, Nazareth, and in Jerusalem the legendary holy places are largely under the control of the Greek church. In view of the traditional policy of Russia the Times suggests that the colonization of Palestine by the Jewish fugitives from Russia may turn out to be a case of jumping out of the frying-pan into the fire. That this is no chimera is shown by a telegram sent by the Rabbi of Jerusalem to his colleague in Odessa, begging the latter to warn his distressed co-religionists against emigrating to the Holy Land, where their condition must inevitably become deplorable.—C. Evangelist.

BY D. L. MILLER.

Number Six.

Southward from Tromso to Trondhjem we have a repetition of the beautiful scenery which we so much enjoyed on our way north and it has lost none of its sublimity and grandeur. We saw some of the mountains on our return covered with storm clouds, and this added to their wild beauty. In this high latitude the mountains are in many places covered with snow to within five or six hundred feet of their base, and the snow coming down to the line of green grass makes a striking contrast, beautiful to look upon. Here you may pluck bright Arctic flowers with one hand and make a snow-ball with the other. North of the 69° of north latitude we gathered a bouquet of beautiful wild flowers of a dozen different varieties, some of which we sent to friends at home.

Along the sides of these great mountain islands are often to be seen small valleys and a narrow coast line where a few acres of arable land are to be found. At these places the hardy Norwegian farmer has made himself a comfortable home and a small farm. He owns the land and pays no rent or interest on mortgages. His field of rye yields all that he needs for bread. He has just finished harvesting and the sheaves are placed on upright poles to dry. A small patch of potatoes and a few acres of grass make up his farming. This he supplements by fishing and altogether he manages to get on very well. Our glass enables us to see him at work in his rocky field cutting, drying and gathering in his hay. The grass, after it has been cut, is hung on poles to facilitate the drying process. Far up on the mountain side you may see him as he searches out every green tuft of grass and cuts it for his horse and cows, for the long, dark winter night is coming and they must have food. A strong wire is stretched from his barn to a tree on the mountain side; when the grass is dried he ties it into bundles, fastens the bundles to the wire, and sends them by his telegraph line directly to his hay-mow, thus saving himself many weary steps. His farm has the appearance of being well attended and his mountain home has a look of comfort and prosperity that is pleasant to see. Here he lives in apparent comfort, works hard, has but few wants and is correspondingly happy.

We would not by any means favor a change from America to Norway, neither would we like to see all the conditions here transferred to our own country. But it would, in our opinion, be good for us if we would take a lesson in some things from these Norwegians. There would be less of the overreaching in our hurry to get rich; there would be less nervous excitement and waste of nervous energy; there would be fewer mortgages on many of our American homes and less worry and heartache; there would be fewer failures and much less unhappiness and misery than there now is occasioned by the ambition to become suddenly rich. And, as a result, there would be more real happiness, for there would be an increase of contentment, which, with godliness, is great gain.

These hardy Norwegians have a strong love for their country and homes. If a man sells his home he may redeem it again after five years, or any one of his sons may have the same privilege. In either case the price at which it was sold is to be paid with the exact cost of improvements added

After five years the sale becomes absolute. Very often farms that have been sold are redeemed as provided by law.

On our way north we met an intelligent Norwegian who had spent some time in America, and who spoke English quite fluently. He had been in Chicago and had travelled over our great western prairies and then had returned again to Old Norway. In answer to our question, "Did you not like America?" he replied, "Oh yes, but my home here much better." As our steamer rounded a sharp cape, we entered a beautiful little bay and there close up to the mountain side stood a few well-built houses, surrounded by probably a hundred acres of tillable ground. It was a beautiful little spot. "That," said our friend with a gleam of pride in his eye, "That is my home." After all there is no place in this world like home, and it only requires loving companionship and but few of the comforts of this life, with godliness and contentment, to make a home anywhere. Somehow, as we watched our friend of a few hours go down into the little boat and row ashore, where loving hearts were waiting to welcome him, our thoughts went out to our own western home, six thousand miles away, and we wished it were our own home coming.

Many of these hardy sons of the North go to America and they make excellent citizens, but they never fail to re-visit the old home if they are able to do so. The love they have for their country is set forth in the following simple lines which we find in our Norwegian grammar:

"Ja! herligt er mit Fodeland
Den gamle Klippefaste Norge
Med Sommerdal og Vinterborge,
Der Evig trodser Tidens Tand
Our Kloden rokkes end, dets Fjelde
Skall Stormen dog ej Kunne faelde."

Literally:

"Yes! glorious is my native land, the ancient cliff-bound Norway, with summer valley and winter fastness, which ever defies the tooth of time. Even if the globe be shaken, the storm shall be unable to overthrow its mountains."

"Min Norske Vinter er saa vakker:
De hvide Snebedackte Bakker
Og groune Gran med Pudret Haas
Og trofast Is paa dybe Vande
Og Engledragt paa nogue Strande
Jeg bytter Neppe Mod en Vaar."

Literally:

"My Norwegian winter is so beautiful: the snow-clad hills, and green pines with powdered hair, and steadfast ice on deep lakes, and angel garb on barren shores, I would hardly exchange for spring."

Our readers, who understand the German, will find, upon a casual examination of the verses here given, quite a similarity in the Norwegian, the German and the English. To one acquainted with the German and English, the Norwegian is very easy to acquire. The construction is much easier than the German as it is more nearly like the English. We find but little difficulty, outside of the want of time, in studying the language.

We began this letter at Hammerfest and it then seemed to us that it would be short, but, like some ministers' sermons, it has grown on our hands and we still have more to write. Our Office Editor may either cut it in two, or cut it down. Thus far we have written north of the Arctic Circle, which we will now soon recross on our return to Trondhjem, where, if we safely arrive, we will close and mail this letter.

We reached Trondhjem in safety. On our way south we had some rough sea, but as we are getting to be good sailors we were not troubled with seasickness. Our trip to the Arctic Ocean has been exceedingly interesting to us, and we trust our readers may be profited by our description of what we saw on our journey. We feel that the Lord has blessed us and cared for us, and to him we give the praise.

From the North Solomon Church, Kans.

On Saturday, Sept. 5, our quarterly church council was held at the home of Bro. Jas. N. Morrow. Some of the members were hindered by sickness from being present, yet a goodly number were there, and we had a good meeting,—spiritually and socially. The work of the church was carried on in a Christian-like manner. In the afternoon a dear sister, in the prime of life, was received into the church by baptism. May she ever prove faithful!

On Saturday night and Sunday forenoon we had preaching in a school-house near by, and we felt that God was with us. On Saturday, Sept. 12, our scattered membership gathered at the home of Bro. Lewis Lerew, on Lindly Creek, for a love-feast. Some came a distance of nearly fifty miles to that feast. Ministering brethren visiting us were, Bro. P. Porter and an aged brother, Palmer, from Burr Oak church, Bro. J. Garber, of Maple Grove, Elder Whitmer, of Quinter, and Eld. J. Brower, of Dorrance, with his cousin, David Brower, of Oregon, who officiated in the evening. Several other visiting brethren and sisters gladdened us with their presence; especially do we feel like commending those young members who visited us from the Burr Oak church. We know, from some words we heard dropped by worldly people, that their neat, plain way of dressing was highly respected.

On Sunday morning Bro. David Brower addressed the children, of whom quite a large number were present, and gave good attention. Doubtless some seed was sown which will bring forth fruit in after life, when he, who addressed them, shall have passed away. Children should often be instructed in the ways of religion. I wonder whether any of us realize how near we are to the kingdom of heaven when in the presence of a little child! We were favored with good weather throughout the meetings.

Fanny Morrow

In the Field.

We closed our meetings in the La Fayette church, Ohio, on the evening of Aug. 23. The love-feast was held the day before. We had a very pleasant feast. The old father in Israel, in his ninety-first year, and the youths of the fold feasted together. The ministerial force was not so large, Bro. Jacob Driver, of Lima, Ohio, and the writer were the only ministers from a distance. There were three baptized during our series of meetings. May they ever prove faithful! I returned home Aug. 24 and found all well, for which we felt grateful.

On Saturdry, Sept. 5, was our church council. Our love-feast was appointed for Nov. 6, at 10 A. M.

I remained at home until Sept. 16, when, in company with my little family, I went to Montgomery County, Ind., to attend the love-feast in the Raccoon Creek church, held Sept. 17. We had a very pleasant meeting. Brethren Daniel Neff, of Elkhart County, Robert Goshorn, of Owen County, D. C. Campbell, of Clinton County, Bro. Smeltzer, of Hamilton County, and the writer were the ministers present, besides the home ministers. We remained with the Brethren here until Saturday and were then taken to Boone County by Bro. Jesse Ronk, where we are at this writing, trying to hold up the banner of our Lord. This is within the bounds of the Raccoon Creek church. A new house of worship was built at this place about a year ago, largely at the expense of Bro. Wm. Hicks. Would that more of our brethren would show as much zeal for the cause! May God bless Bro. Hicks and family! We are making our home with them, and have held three meetings here, so far. At this writing the interest is good, and should it so continue, we will remain until October. We expect to go from here to the Nettle Creek church. May God bless Zion every-where, and may extra efforts be put forth this coming winter for the advancement of the cause of Christ! Geo. L. Studebaker.

Shideler, Ind., Sept. 21.

From the Pleasant View Church, Kans.

The members of the Pleasant View church, Phillips Co., Kans., held their love-feast Sept. 5 and 6, and I can truly say that it was a feast of love indeed. About thirty-three members surrounded the Lord's table. There were no members present that did not commune. That is the way it should be. It does not look right when members stay away from the tables at love-feasts. There was quite a number of brethren and sisters from neighboring churches at the feast, and their presence was highly appreciated by us. There were four ministers with us from abroad, namely our elder, B. B. Whitmer, from Quinter, Kans., Eld. John Garber, from Norton County, Kans., Bro. Lomax Miller, from Beaver City, and Bro. J. P. Noffziger, of Mascot, Nebr. They preached the Word in its purity, and as a result, there were five baptized on Saturday.

Brethren B. B. Whitmer and Garber remained with us and preached for us two more sermons, which caused one more dear brother to forsake sin and walk with the people of God, making six baptized at this meeting. A choice for a deacon was held; the lot fell on the writer of this article. May the Lord help him to do his duty!

Our little church in Phillips County seems to be in a healthy condition. Brethren, pray for the little vine that has been planted here in Phillips County, that we may walk as obedient children of our Lord and Master. Sylvester Workman.

From the Highways and Hedges.

On Wednesday, Sept. 16, we left Weatherford, Parker Co., Tex., for Nocona, Montague Co., where, after a day's travel, we arrived in the evening and were met by Bro. Burkman and kindly cared for. The next day we went to the home of Bro. Henry Brubaker. Here we held a few meetings. The attendance was rather small, but the attention was good. Here there are about twenty-six members in all,—two elders, one minister and one deacon. They having an able ministry, we made our stay rather short, as I do not believe it best to spend our time where a congregation is well supplied with preaching. I will further say, while so many of our most able ministers will persist in spending their time in preaching and traveling in the large, rich churches, teaching the well fed, they let the poor, the destitute and the scattered members go without food. If the twelve had confined themselves to the large churches where the most preaching was done, when would the Gospel have been preached to the poor? Never! The twelve whom the Lord sent out did more preaching without any missionary boards and without any known help, than our whole Fraternity put together.* The Lord said to them, "Go, preach the Gospel." They went. They did not stop and wait to hear from the Mission Board, and to hear how much they were to get, but, with strong faith and confidence in God, they went through privations, poverty, sufferings and want. They obtained the crown that fadeth not away.

Under this ease-loving system, if time lasts one thousand years, these Southern States, with their millions, white and black, will never hear the Gospel preached as we preach it. Talk about going to Europe, to England, to Germany to hunt up people to preach to, that never heard the true Gospel preached! Stop and ponder; you are within easy reach of thousands of just such people all over this Southern country, and if you don't believe it, come and see. Well, it is still true that from the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.

On Monday, Sept. 21, I left for Muenster, Cook County. This is where Bro. A. W. Austin is laboring for the little band of members. This church has had its reverses and losses, especially by moving away. They now only number about twenty-two members, — one minister and two deacons, with a wide field open for work that they cannot supply. We are having meetings each evening and expect to continue over Sunday, if the Lord will. On Monday, Sept. 28, we expect to start for Dallas, then to Lancaster, Dallas Co., where we expect to have some meetings where there are no members. JAMES R. GISH.

*It would be a very fortunate thing if a few hundred of our ministers could be stirred up to enter the field upon their own responsibility, and not wait for the call of the Board. The Mission Board is all right in its place, and is doing a good work, but it must not be expected to do everything. Its place is on isolated fields and in new, unoccupied territories, and while it stands in need of preachers to work under its instructions, it does not propose to do all the work and leave nothing for individual ministers to accomplish.—ED

SEPT. 4 five of us took hack conveyance for Parker County, Texas, to encourage the Lord's children in the Live Oak church. We commenced meetings Sept. 6, and continued till the evening of the 15th, with increased interest and three additions by confession and baptism. Others were seemingly near the kingdom. The church was also greatly built up. We held a love-feast during the meetings, and on Sept. 8, Bro. J. R. Gish and wife came to our assistance and did some efficient preaching. I was glad once more to meet Bro. Gish. For a long time I had been on the front, and away from the General Brotherhood; and it did my soul good to meet those of like precious faith. The prospects in Parker County, to build up a church, are becoming encouraging. All it wants is a faithful, steady zeal on the part of the members. Dear brethren, let your light shine and live out your profession! Work all along the line is needed in that direction, and more consistent living.

Bro. Gish remained several days with us at Nocona. He gave all of us the best of counsel. Let all heed the same! HENRY BRUBAKER.

BRO. H. C. EARLY, of the Valley of Virginia, commenced wielding the Sword of the Spirit among us Sept. 12, and continued in a series of soul-stirring discourses during the following week. O, how our hearts were made to burn within us, as Bro. Early opened unto us the Scriptures, and sinners were made to tremble, as he demonstrated before them that it is their greatest duty to desist from their wickedness, and to seek the Lord while the door of mercy is open. In the evening of Sept 19, twenty-six members surrounded the Lord's table, and participated in the sacred ordinances of the church. Our ministerial force consisted of brethren H. C. Early, Abram Connor, and S. H. Myers (who is our elder). Six dear members from other congregations were present. It thrilled our souls with joy to have those of like precious faith to congregate with us in our Communion services.

As a visible result of our meeting, five dear souls were ushered into the family of grace. One who had strayed away from the fold, came back, confessing that there is no joy outside of the church. Bro. Early labored hard to awaken the members of our church to a true sense of their duty, and now, dear brethren and sisters, let us not be forgetful hearers, but work till Jesus comes. J. F. BRITTON.

We recognize the fact that some of our best local talent has not been assigned a topic, but we could not give all a place on the program, and yet we earnestly desire that all our ministers will lend a helping hand to make this, our first meeting, a spiritual feast to all who may attend. Please encourage your congregation to attend, and help us with their counsel and advice, as occasions may be presented.

But one hour will be devoted to each topic. The first-named brother will present his views on the subject in a fifteen-minute speech. The one who leads the discussion may continue the line of argument at his pleasure, or he may advance different views if well authenticated, as he may elect. Time not to exceed ten minutes. This will leave thirty-five minutes for five-minute talks, in which all are invited to participate.

As we have but one day for the discussion of six very important subjects, let them be well studied and the remarks to the point.

By order of the Committee,
A. G. CROSSWHITE.

WE closed the second quarter of our Sunday-school yesterday. The work of the quarter was a very pleasant one, and will, I hope, long be remembered by many. Love, peace and union pervaded through the entire school, and we hope that many good impressions were made by our assembling. We pray that the good seed may have fallen into honest hearts, and that at least some little good may be the result. Our worthy Superintendent, Bro. Lewis Workman, conducted the school to the full satisfaction of all concerned. May God bless him for his great love for the Sunday-school cause!

Health is not the best here at present. There is some typhoid fever in this vicinity just now, and there have been a few deaths. The weather is unusually warm, and now it is getting quite dry again. E. MILLER.

From S. H. Myers.

AUGUST 22 we attended thanksgiving meeting at our lower house, and then anointed a brother whom the Lord called home the next day. We visited Bro. S. A. Shaver's congregation to solicit for the Old Folks' Home. We started out in good faith and intend to canvass all our territory, if spared. On our return we had council in our lower house. We held an election which resulted in selecting three deacons.

Sept. 1, we started to the Welsh Run church, Pa., to serve on a committee sent by A. M., consisting of Wm. Howe, J. R. Zug, and myself. Bro. Zug filled Bro. D. Long's place. Our report was accepted almost unanimously.

We stopped one night with Bro. Barnhart in Hagerstown, Md., and one night in Martinsburgh with Bro. J. Brice. We also attended the feast at Bro. D. Baker's church.

On Aug. 7, we started to West Virginia, to attend two feasts and two council-meetings. We elected one speaker and ordained Bro. S. A. Shaver to the eldership. We reached home Aug. 14. Aug. 17, we visited the members in Madison County, where Larkin's factory was formerly located. Here there are fourteen members.

Bro. H. C. Early held a series of meetings here the week before. Five united with the church, and good impressions were made. The members here are under our care. Bro. Jos. L. Britton is a minister in the first degree. Brethren A. Connor and M. Z. Early assist in the work. Bro. Connor was at the feast.

From Lordsburg, Cal.

IT is now three weeks since we arrived in this genial clime on the Pacific Coast. We have visited some among the members at Covina, and attended prayer-meeting and church. We find the members generally alive to the work, and commend the zeal of the young members that they take such an active part in social meeting. They are earnest workers in the vineyard and will not lose their reward.

We spent the day at the grand old ocean. Pen cannot describe the beauty and grandeur of Nature's works. Oh, the wondrous works of God,—how excellent is his holy name! We were sorry when the signal was given that our train was here, as we were loath to leave the place.

I intend to spend the winter here and am now pleasantly situated as a helper in the Brethren's College at Lordsburgh. We believe this to be a noble work which is calculated to benefit the rising generation.

The Brethren are coming in from various places. We have visited among some of the members of this place and find many from Illinois. Old father Metzger, whose face is always lit up with love and sunshine, with his heart-gladdening wife by his side, and many other dear brethren and sisters, who all have a smile and a welcome for us, adds greatly to the homelike appearance of the place. We can scarcely think of getting homesick, though, at times, it takes a great deal of courage on our part to think we are so far away from the home, family and friends, but we can work here to the honor and glory of God, as well as elsewhere, if we are but faithful to our trust.

Random Thoughts.

RECENTLY I have received quite a number of letters from brethren, asking why I have quit writing for the MESSENGER. I assure you that it is not on account of a lack of interest in the paper, for next to the Bible I prize its presence. But I am not able to see how a man who preaches once or twice a week, and has to provide for his family, can find time to get up interesting articles for the press.

I have in time past spent considerable time in preparing articles for the press, and by some means they got lost in the "waste basket." But I have always decided that it was best, or they would not have gone there. Every man and woman would better wait on the gift they have.

At our visit meeting, Sept. 5, we had quite an interesting council. Several admonitions were presented, and for the first time in the history of our church the tobacco habit was publicly denounced. We were pleased to see some of our brethren who indulge, denounce it as a "filthy habit." We can not expect a reform in this matter as long as some justify the use of it. If used only for its medicinal properties, let it be abandoned, till skillful physicians recommend the use of it.

Not long since I was traveling along the highway and came to a lane, leading to a house which was in full view. At the entrance of this lane was a sign-board with the word "BRANDY" printed in large letters, and a finger pointing towards the house. It did not require any interrogation; we understood the meaning thereof. On our return, a few days later, the board, perhaps by accident, had been knocked down and some one had moved it on the opposite side of the lane. The word on the board was not changed, but the finger pointed to a little knoll, where I noticed a grave-yard. I did not ask any question, but decided on the following conclusion: First to the saloon; secondly to the grave, and then eternity will reveal the third place.

The Brethren at St. Paul, Carroll Co., Va., decided to organize into a separate congregation. Sept. 19 was set for the organization. Eld. Jerry Barnhart, of Salem, N. C., Eld. H. P. Hylton, of Hylton, Va., and the writer met with them on that day. They also decided to elect one minister, and the lot fell on Bro. William H. Tow, who, with his companion was duly installed into the office. We pray the Lord to bless them in the good work. They chose H. P. Hylton to preside over them for the time being.

At night we enjoyed a love-feast with the members at that place, and I never witnessed a more quiet, public Communion than we had here.

By good management and right living we may expect to build up a flourishing church at this place in the future.

It was our privilege to baptize a young lady Sept. 13. We expect to hold our love-feast at the brick church on Saturday, Oct. 3. Services to begin at 4 P. M.

After our love-feast we expect, the Lord willing, to visit some of the isolated members in Carroll County, and hold a Communion, and then we go to Mercer, W. Va., where we have been called to spend a week or so with the few children there. In November we have promised to visit the Fraternity church in Forsythe County, N. C., where we will spend a week or more. C. D. HYLTON.

OUR love-feast was an enjoyable season in the service of the Master. Two were added to the church by baptism Sept. 16, and communed with us in the evening. Three were received into our number by letter, at our quarterly council, Aug. 15.

Sept 17 we held a choice for a minister. The lot fell on Bro. Christian Myers. May he faithfully perform the work laid upon him! Bro. Isaac Crist, of Johnson County, was with us, and gave us many words of encouragement. His earnest labors were appreciated by all.

Sept. 18 wife and I went to Fredonia, Wilson Co., where we had meeting at the Brethren's meeting-house. Saturday, Sept. 19, we had preaching at 2 o'clock, after which a choice was held for a minister. The lot fell on brethren Allen A. Oberlin and Stephen Thompson. The Lord help them to be faithful in their calling!

We continued the meetings until Thursday evening, when, owing to scarlet fever being in the city, the brethren thought best to close the meetings for the present. CHAS. M. YEAROUT.

OUR Communion, of Sept. 19, was an enjoyable one. Everything seemed to be especially favorable for the occasion. Ministerial assistance consisted of brethren T. B. Digman, who preached several interesting discourses previous to the meeting, —B. F. Britt, Conrad Fitz, and John C. Demmy. Bro. Digman officiated. Communicants from the Loraine, Mill Creek, and Astoria churches were present. Among the number were our respected brother John Wolf and wife, of the Mill Creek church. Bro. John is now an octogenarian, yet he can read without glasses, and his mental faculties are well preserved. Physically he is failing, but no more so than can be expected at so extreme an age. Bro. John is probably the best-informed brother now living, concerning the interesting history of the rise and progress of the Brethren's church west of the Ohio River. His father was one of the pioneer preachers of the then extreme West. It is very interesting to hear Bro. John relate some of the incidents in the early history of the church in Illinois.

From the Scipio Church, Ohio.

BRETHREN JONAS HORNING and J. H. Christian came to us, and began a series of meetings at the Scipio church on the evening of Sept. 5.

The weather was fine, with a few exceptions, and each evening our brethren were favored with a fair audience, but more frequently with a crowded house. A good spirit seemed to pervade the meetings and the entire neighborhood during their stay with us.

Our brethren visited all our members, and others also, and, as far as we know, were kindly received by every one. On Thursday, Sept. 10, we held our council, and one, who had wandered away from the fold, made confession, and was received with gladness into the family again.

Sept. 13, previous to love-feast, our mother, Susan E. Graham, feeling that the Lord would soon call her into his presence, requested to be anointed, which was attended to by Eld. Horning, assisted by John H. Christian.

Soon after this rite was performed, word came that a dear one,—Bro. Nelson's wife—had resolved to follow the Lord in all his appointed ways. We then repaired to the water, where she was received.

When all things were ready, we seated ourselves at the Lord's table, at the house of Lewis Graham, to commemorate the suffering of our Lord and Master. The house was filled to its utmost capacity, with our neighbors. The best of order prevailed throughout the entire service, and when the parting hymn was sung, we have no doubt every one under the sound of our voice thought it good to be there. Eld. Horning officiated. He preached the funeral of J. A. Graham's wife on Sunday, Sept. 13, to a large concourse of people.

On Monday morning, Sept. 14, they left our place, and we think the good wishes of a majority of our community attended them.

Old Folks and Orphan Children's Home of the Middle District of Indiana.

WE hereby notify all who may have business with the 'Old People's Home," that the Board has re-organized as follows: Noah Fisher, of Perrysburgh, Ind., President; James Himelick, of Mexico, Ind., Secretary; Levi Miller, of Mexico, Ind., Treasurer. We trust all communications will be sent to the proper parties, as it makes additional trouble when not sent to the proper person.

The Board also decided, that any inmate who should go from the Home and talk disrespectfully and hurtfully of the Home, would be reported to the elder in whose charge such a member may reside, the elder to see that the matter be properly adjusted. At present there are nineteen inmates in the family, and health is exceedingly good.

From the Iowa River Church, Iowa.

SEPT. 15, Bro. Moses Deardorff commenced a series of meetings which he continued until the 22nd. Sept. 19 and 20 we had our Communion. It will long be remembered by some of us, as some of our Brethren met with us who had not done so for several years.

On Sunday morning we had children's meeting in place of Sunday-school. Bro. Tisdale, of Cedar Rapids, talked to the children first, followed by Bro. Stephen Miller, of Mahaska County. Those meetings are very interesting. I love to see the little faces brighten and the hands go up. God help us all to be interested in the children.

Bro. Dierdorff preached the Word with power. It did seem that sinners would cry out, "What must I do to be saved?" Bro. Dierdorff did not rest through the day, but visited from house to house, entreating those who had not come to Christ, to come soon.

One was reclaimed who had gone away from the fold several years ago. One dear young sister said: "I will walk with the people of God. Let us not forget her at a Throne of Grace.

Our meetings closed far too soon, as usual. Why could not each District keep two or three men in the field? Then, when there is an interest, let them work in that place as long as they think best. May God give us such men as we need for just such places!

Bro. Dierdorff goes from here to attend the District Meeting at the Panther Creek church, Dallas Co., Iowa. ELLEN M. NICHOLSON.

Rockton, Iowa, Sept. 23.

We are Yet in the Field.

OUR last report was written from Des Moines, Iowa. We closed that meeting with a good interest and one addition by baptism,—an old lady seventy-four years of age. I baptized her in the Des Moines River in the presence of a large congregation. The first thing necessary in this city is a house of worship, and then some one to work. We think a great work might be done here.

We next went to Adair County, and there we found a few scattered members, with only one speaker, and the people calling for so many meetings that one man cannot supply half of the calls. It is sad, indeed, to hear poor souls pleading for help, and yet to be compelled to go away amidst the cries and tears, and leave them spiritually to starve to death. What shall we do? Shall we sit still and pray the Lord to send laborers into the field?

While in Adair County we held over twenty meetings, with one addition by baptism. There were many calls out there that we could not fill.

We are now laboring in the English River congregation. Any one wishing to correspond with me will address me at Greene, Iowa.

WM. C. HIPES.

From Newton, Kans.

THE members of the Newton congregation, Harvey Co., Kans., are still trying to work for Christ as best they can. We have meetings every Sunday and calls for more, but as the writer is the only resident speaker (and has been for about five years past) and as he is in limited circumstances, he cannot do near all the work that his office demands.

We are discouraged, sometimes, with our heavy burden. Then, again, we are encouraged by some one, occasionally, coming to the fold. Sept. 20 we received a dear young sister, and yesterday, Sept. 27, another one, and we have hopes for still more to come soon.

Last Saturday we held our quarterly council, and disposed of business to general satisfaction. We appointed a Communion meeting to take place at our meeting-house, five miles south-west of Newton, on Saturday, Oct. 10, commencing at 2 P. M. We desire to extend an invitation to our members around, especially the ministry, on that occasion. Here is a good opening for a loyal minister to come and help to sow the Master's seed, care for the tender lambs, and dress the vineyard of the Lord. Who will come and help us?

L. ANDES.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

At Work for the Lord.—Two more were added to the little band of members at Ozawkie, Kans., recently. Both are heads of families. Council-meetings were held at two different points in the above congregation last Saturday, and the wants of a mission-post were attended to by one of our elders on the same day, who administered baptism at that time. At present I am at St. Mary's, where I am busily engaged in mission work. Sister Nancy D. Underhill's article, on page 595, I find to be a great auxiliary, especially in my work among the children.—C. C. Root.

Six Additions.—In the Kingsley church, Iowa, on Sunday, Sept. 27, after preaching, six were received by baptism, to walk in newness of life. At our quarterly council, Sept. 10, two were received by baptism, making eight during the month of September.—Samuel Horner, Kingsley, Iowa

Harmonious Council —The Wyandot church, Ohio, met in council Sept. 26. All were reported to be in love and union, and the work of the meeting passed off pleasantly. Our elder was with us. We expect to commence a series of meetings on the evening of Oct. 10, and continue till after our feast, which will occur Oct. 17.—Alverty Buxton, Upper Sandusky, Ohio, Sept. 28.

Information Wanted.—Will some one please state whether there are any Brethren living in the following-named Counties in Virginia: Princess Anne, Isle of Wight, Elizabeth City, and Warwick. An answer to the above will be appreciated, as several members are contemplating locating in South-eastern Virginia and would like to get as near to church privileges as possible.—F. M. Bowers, New Stark, Ohio.—[We know of no members in that part of the State.—ED.]

Delegate Elected.—The Bijou Hills church, South Dakota, met in quarterly council Sept. 12. All business was adjusted pleasantly. We expect to begin a series of meetings Oct. 3, and hold our love-feast Oct. 31. We expect Bro. George Cripe, of Cerro Gordo, Ill., to be with us during our meetings. Our elder, W. G. Cook, was chosen delegate to District Meeting. This church has a membership of about forty-eight, including six deacons, two ministers in the first degree, and one elder. We have an interesting Sunday-school during the summer season. Our house of worship being too uncomfortable during the winter, we discontinue the Sunday-school during that time, but hold prayer-meetings at our dwellings each Thursday evening.—M E Stair, Sec., Bijou Hills, S. Dak., Sept. 15

Encouraging News.—Wife and I started Sept. 10, for Shamokin, to fill an appointment at that place in the evening. After meeting, Bro. George Tobias conveyed us to his home, where we had meeting next evening. On Saturday, Bro. Hiram Gibble and Eld. S. R Zug and wife, in company with other brethren and sisters, arrived, and we had meeting in the evening. On Sunday morning, we met again, and in the evening had our Communion-meeting. It was truly a feast to the soul. At the close, several expressed a willingness to join in with us. Next morning the brethren and sisters started for home, but wife and I had to spend ten days more in the Mountains. This is a new field, where the Brethren were not known before. I trust much good may be done.—D. P. Ziegler, Tower City, Pa.

At Work in the Field.—I have just returned from the Communion meeting in the Walnut Valley church, near Great Bend, Kans. The meeting was a pleasant one, and the ministerial help abundant. We were pleased to meet Bro. Jonathan Brubaker, of Girard, Ill., who, in company with his wife and daughter, and also Moses Brubaker and daughter, of the same place,—is visiting in the West. We also enjoyed the labors of brethren Moses and Isaac Brubaker, of Lyons, Kans.; Bro. Crissman, of Russell County; brethren J. F. Perry and Jonas Hertzler, from the Eden Valley church; Bro. Daniel Deardorff, of Salem, and Eld. Enoch Eby, from the Fairview church. There were about eighty communicants. Bro. Michael Keller was ordained to the full ministry and now takes charge of the Walnut Valley church. Bro. John Clapper was advanced to the second degree of the ministry.—Daniel Vaniman, McPherson, Kans., Sept. 28.

A Good Meeting.—Our love-feast in the Limestone church, Tenn., was held Sept. 25 and 26. Quite a number from adjoining congregations were with us. Ministering brethren present were, Eld. John Brubaker, J. B. Bowman, S. J. and D. B. Bowman, C. H. Diehl, John Bashor, and Garret Bailey. We had a good meeting. One was baptized on Saturday evening. May the good work go on! —P. D. Reed.

Enjoyable Love-feast.—Sept. 19, we had a pleasant and well-attended love-feast in the Springfield church, Summit Co., Ohio. A strong force of ministers from surrounding churches was present. Next day we listened to short but very good speeches in the interest of our Sunday-school, by brethren N. Longaneck-r, J. J. Hoover, and Geo. Worst, after which Bro. Worst delivered an able sermon.—Jacob Mishler.

A Refreshing Meeting. Our church council was held Sept. 11, at 2 P. M., and the business done was, I hope, adjusted in the spirit of love. Sept. 12 Bro. D. J. Miller, of Overhill, W. Va., preached interesting sermons, both afternoon and evening; also on Sunday morning, Sept. 13. In the evening we held our love-feast, which truly was a time of rejoicing among the children of God.—H. S. Claypool, Rollyson, W. Va.

Annual Council.—The members of the Quinter church, Kans., held their annual council Sept. 26. The members were reported to be in peace and union. We decided to hold our love-feast Oct. 24, beginning at 3 P. M. Passenger trains stop at Quinter at 9 A. M. going west, and 6 P. M. going east. All that desire to attend our feast, will be made welcome. We have a membership of about sixty, with four ministers, two being elders. —J. B. Spurgeon, Quinter, Kans., Sept. 26.

Minister Elected.—At a council-meeting, held in the Union Center congregation, Sept. 24, Bro. Henry Neff was called to the ministry. May the Lord give him the needed wisdom! At the close of the meeting we were all made to rejoice, when we learned that some desired to unite with us. Two, —a young man and wife,—came forward and requested baptism. They were gladly received into fellowship with us. May they prove faithful, and become diligent workers in the vineyard of the Lord!—J. R. Miller, Locke, Ind., Sept. 25.

Pleasant Love-feast.—The Decatur County church, Iowa, numbering fourteen members in all, held a very quiet and enjoyable Communion service at the house of Bro. J. H. Johnston, four miles north-west of Lineville, Iowa, on the evening of Sept. 12. Six have been added to the little band there during the past summer, one of whom has passed over to the other shore. Ministering brethren, passing over the Rock Island Railroad, are solicited to stop and preach for them. Address J. Henry Johnston, Lineville, Wayne Co., Iowa.—Lewis M. Kob, Garden Grove, Iowa, Sept. 22.

Ministers Elected.—Sept. 1 Bro. D. S. Clapper began a series of meetings at Hyndman, Bedford Co., Pa., assisted by Bro. William T. Sines, of Oakland, Md., and also Edward Hochstettler. On Saturday, Sept. 5, Eld. Kelso met with us and in the evening we held a love-feast. Next day we met at 9 A. M., to hold an election for help in the ministry. Brethren Thos. Harden and Francis Bowen were the brethren selected for that work. They are thought to be well qualified for the position. The little band of brethren at Hyndman belongs to the Myersdale congregation, which is under the care of Eld. C. G. Lint. They are situated at the extreme end of the congregation, and number only about twenty members. There is a good opening for successful work at that point.—J. H. Clapper, Yellow Creek, Pa.

Minister Elected.—The Brethren of the Union Center church, Elkhart Co., Ind., held a church council Sept. 24. Ministers present from abroad were Eld. John Metzler and Eli Roose. We decided to hold an election for a minister and after an earnest prayer in behalf of the work at hand, the church was duly instructed as to the Gospel qualifications of a minister by brethren Metzler and Lemuel Hillery. The election resulted in the choice of Bro. Henry Neff. Bro. Henry is past middle age, but we believe the church's choice is God's choice. We are strongly of the impression that the true prosperity of the church depends largely upon competent and judicious housekeepers. We also had two additions by baptism.—J. O. Culler.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 17, 1872.

For the benefit of those who think consumption incurable, I will make a statement of my cure. On the 12th of last March I was taken with the lung fever, or, as the doctors called it, pleuro-pneumonia. I was attended by one whom I had considered the most eminent physician of this city, for three months and a half, during which time he employed five other physicians as counsel. For about three weeks I thought I was getting better, when an abscess began to form in my left lung, and the physicians pronounced it quick consumption. From this time I failed rapidly, and raised a pint to a quart of phlegm and matter each day, and had night sweats. By the 26th of June I had got so weak that I could not hit a glass of water to my mouth, and was confined to my bed; was reduced to a skeleton except my legs and feet, which were greatly swelled. At this time my wife seeing Dr. S. Clay Todd's circular, employed him, and I am free to say I improved steadily from the time I commenced taking his medicines. In three days this swelling had gone out of my limbs, and in three weeks I was able to be up and walk out doors a little, and in ten weeks I was able to walk two miles, and I felt as well as I ever did. Now I walk from three to four miles each day and neither cough nor spit. I have no pain and think my lungs healed perfectly.

THE FOUR PICTURES.

Two on this Side—Two on the Other.

ON this side we have a world of pictures of things as they have been, as they are, and as they may be, but of the "beyond" not much, indeed very little. Only once is the veil lifted and we are invited to look at things on the other side as they have been or may be. Thus this becomes to us the cosmopolitan picture for the ages, and though it has been looked at and studied for the last eighteen centuries by friend and foe, wise and otherwise, the real background has been seen only as through a glass darkly. Life, in all its various and varied forms has been pictured to us from the infant in the cradle to the bending form leaning on the staff, but from the ever-recurring inquiry, "What more?" comes the answer, "Thus far and no farther." Lazarus, the brother of the loving sisters, Mary and Martha, passed over and returned, but his lips, as to the other side, were either sealed, or his history of it is unwritten or forever lost. Not one word do we have beyond the fact that he was dead and again restored to life. Is it not strange that he did not give the world a picture of those four days? We feel it so, but perhaps he had none to give. Yes, so we are inclined to believe.

We have some well-authenticated accounts of life being restored, but in no case was there anything real in the short beyond. The many trances and visions recorded give us no real picture of the condition of the existence of the state of the soul beyond. All we have and all we can ever get we have from Luke's Gospel, and to this we now go.

A break-off in the history that is wonderfully serene, and we have the first picture. In the account of the rich man and Lazarus we must accept it as a real history or a parable. If a history, we have what has been. If a parable, what is now, has been, or may be hereafter. "A certain rich man" as an introduction, is equally fitting for either, as it would not have been well to have been personal in speaking thus of a rich man full of worldly honor, especially after having been preached to heaven on a choice chariot, as is done now-a-days. But the good that is said of poor Lazarus would not shock the world, even if it were admitted to be true.

But the first look we have of the first picture is that of a "rich man." He had been successful in life, had economized and gathered a large fortune. He lived in a fine mansion, had a large number of servants, had many feasts, and his table spread with the best that the times could afford. Perhaps he was a rich farmer, such an one as we have pictured to us in the man of big crops and who had barns that were too small. He had done as he desired, and was now taking his ease,—with men of his kind as frequent guests. He was taking his "case" and enjoying his gathered substance. Or he may have been a retired merchant, —possibly a wine merchant or a hotel keeper. But the mere fact that he was rich is nothing strange, neither is it especially disparaging to his character.

In our second look we see him clothed with purple and fine linen. Being very rich, he could do this without drawing very seriously on his capital in stock, and then, too, it was in keeping with his circumstances and surroundings. He was at ease, and as he did not perform any labor, he could wear such apparel without either soiling or spoiling it. Rich men generally do this and it is expected, even laboring men do not feel offended, if wealthy persons dress in a costly manner, if they are otherwise what they should be. So far, we have rather an inviting picture.

We look again. This time we see him on one of his feast days, and this continued every day. "He fared sumptuously." His table was loaded down with the very best. Perhaps some of you have seen a picture, in your Bible, of this man as he was seated at his table. We are not sure that there is much theology in such pictures, but they are suggestive and give us something tangible to lay hold upon. He may not have been the large, fat man portrayed at all,—only a man that had everything in abundance, and enjoyed a good meal.

Once more we look at the picture and we see him on his bed of sickness and death. Poor man now! The end, on this side, for him comes, and all that riches, fine apparel and big meals can do for him is done. After this follows a magnificent funeral. Perhaps he lies in state a few days, and then is buried. Is this all of life? If it were, our picture would stop here, and we would have no other side to give.

But there is another picture on this side. A young man starts out in life without means. He marries a wife, gets himself an humble home, has a darling boy, and calls the place of his stay "sweet home," because love reigns there and bright prospects loom up before him. But the Lord loves him and for reasons unknown, outside of himself, sees fit to apply the chastening rod. The companion of his life and the sharer of his joys sickens and dies. The son of his strength and the remaining light of his home soon follows, and the ties that bound him to life are severed. One affliction after another follows, and at each succeeding stroke he humbly kisses the rod that smites and the more fully turns his heart to the One who afflicts only to bless. Homeless and friendless he wanders up and down through the Judean hills and valleys, asking alms and presenting himself at the doors of those who have to give and to spare. As he thus journeys from place to place his afflictions grow from bad to worse, and at last, sick, weary, and covered with sores, he lies down to die. A sad picture, and yet such ones were made in the land of promise and beneath the shadow of the Great City and within sight of the glistering spires of the Holy Temple, where the Good Father deigned to come and bless his people. Do we still have such pictures, and are they to be seen in this Christian land of ours, where the light of the Life-giving Son pierces into every nook and corner? God forbid that such should be! A good Samaritan passes along, and as he beholds the suffering Lazarus, his bowels of compassion yearn towards him. Near by he sees the beautiful home of the rich man,—at whom we were looking in our other picture,—and then it was a time of feasting, as it was every day, and surely there some compassion will be shown. He lifts him up, carries him to the gate and lays him down. Let us look at him for a moment,—hungry, sick, and sore he lies by this gate. The servants pass in and out and we hear him ask, not for a seat at the well-furnished table, but only for some of the leavings,—the crumbs that have fallen from the table. A servant halts at the tender appeal, his heart is touched and he runs to the Master. He tells him, "There is a very sick man lying out at the gate and he seems to be starving and asks for a little of what is left of the dinner. Shall I take him some? He is very hungry." "Haven't time to look after beggars now. Let his friends take care of him, or let him die," answers the rich man and goes to his place of ease.

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

ALWAYS A RIVER TO CROSS.

SELECTED BY SARAH A. MILLER.

THERE'S always a river to cross,
Always an effort to make,
If there's anything good to win,
Any rich prize to take.
Yonder's the fruit we crave,
Yonder's the charming scene;
But deep and wide with troubled tide
Is the river that lies between.

For the treasures of precious worth,
We must patiently dig and dive;
For the place we long to fill,
We must push and struggle and strive.
And always and every-where
We'll find in our onward course,
Thorns for our feet and trials to meet,
And difficult rivers to cross.

The rougher the way that we take,
The stouter the heart and nerve;
The stones in our path we break,
Nor e'er from our impulse swerve;
For the glory we hope to win,
Our labors we count no loss;
'Tis folly to pause and murmur because
Of the river we have to cross.

So ready to do and to dare
Should we in our places stand,
Fulfilling our Master's will,
Fulfilling the soul's demand.
For though as the mountain high,
The billows may fear and toss,
They'll not overwhelm if the Lord's at the helm
When the difficult river we cross.

"ALL THINGS OF GOD."—2 Cor. 5: 18.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

TO GEORGE HOSSACK, OF LEASK DALE, ONT., CAN.,
Beloved Brother:—

YOUR pathetic, nobly Christian letter is here. It touched me deeply, and made me feel ashamed of myself. I am not near so self-sacrificing as you infer. Of the political world I know little, but of the human world I keep myself posted, so that I may know its wants, and what is done for its amelioration. I must deny myself largely for this very purpose, as this knowledge does not come without laborious mental effort and some of the currency which many of the brethren love inordinately.

No one can keep himself abreast of the great, solemn tide of humanity and of the evangelizing movements astir throughout the world, without having one's inmost soul kindled with longing for the elevation of the millions who are wallowing in the most appalling corruption. Whoever has read General Booth's "Darkest England," has had a reflection of Darkest America. Whoever has followed Livingstone and Stanley, Father Taylor, John G. Paton, and the heroic light-disseminators in China, Japan and India, must have a strangely callous heart not to be moved to compassion and self-sacrifice for the drawing of the world to the uplifted Redeemer. John 12: 32.

The great desire that burns with unconceivable intensity in the bosom of the Triune God, seems to generate not even a spark in the souls of many of us. The utter self-renunciation of Jesus for the reconciling of the world unto God, is with many professing Christians the deadest letter ever put on parchment or paper. Deny and cover it as we will, we are guilty of shameful defalcation in our glaring neglect of the world-wide commission which our benign and mighty Savior has committed to his church.

There are indeed souls among us who are pulsing with the life and love of Jesus, and are straining body, soul and purse that Christ may "see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied." But how many, alas! "live unto themselves," and not "unto him who died for them, and rose again." Indeed my intercourse with men personally and by correspondence, and in the literature of the day, satisfies me that many who claim to be Christians, and look even with contempt on those who differ from them, do not know what it signifies that Jesus rose from the dead and is seated at the right hand of the Majesty on High.

Oh how solemn, how imperative, how vital is Rom 6: 3–12; Gal. 2: 20; Col. 3: 1–15! To die, be buried, and rise with Christ, and have these transcendent facts as the salient characteristics of our conscious and declarative being, sounds like "another Gospel" to many among us. And yet these sublime verities are the only true inspiration of Christian work. Love does it all, and only love,—"the love of God shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost."

"The love of Christ constraineth me," is "God working in us to will and to do of his good pleasure." And unless we have God's arms and his Spirit to compass them, we are verily not his people. "The joy set before Jesus," enabling him to "endure the cross and despise the shame," must be our incentive in all our undertakings, privations and sufferings, even unto death, for the consummation of the eternal purpose of God in Christ. Heb. 12: 2, 3, 4; Philpp. 3: 5–10; Eph. 3: 9–12. If we want to participate in Col. 1: 12–14, and the climax of the last four chapters of Revelation, we must not shrink from the essential antecedent. Gal. 6: 14; 2 Cor. 12: 9, 10.

The complete redemption of human nature from sin in a single person, is a guaranty of the possibility of the salvation of all. Who that single person is, needs to be kept before our minds and deepest in our hearts perpetually. When no man in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the Book, neither to look thereon, then the Lion of the tribe of Judah, the ROOT of David, the LAMB of GOD, the co-eternal Son of the Everlasting Father, prevailed to open the Book, and to loose the seven seals thereof. Rev. 5: 1–10.

In that PERSON is all that belongs to humanity, sin included. "Without controversy, great is the mystery." 1 Tim. 3: 16. But the fact is divinely asserted. 2 Cor. 5: 21. When he died, with all the sins of the race on him, not a soul was left unreconciled, provisionally, of the entire progeny of Adam. 2 Cor. 5: 14, 15. It is our privilege to go to the ends of the earth, into the filthiest slums and dens of devilism, and proclaim the universal amnesty of the Sovereign of the universe, through the absolute satisfaction of eternal righteousness in the life and death and resurrection of Jesus Christ.

If we would appreciate the heights and depths, lengths and breadths of this amazing sacrifice of God, and the greatness of the sin it expiates, and "the far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory," to which it exalts us poor, hell-deserving sinners, we would reach to the bottom of our pockets, and into the deepest, purest abysses of our souls, and into the highest heavens, for means and motives and inspiration and power to fly like flaming evangels to the ends of this sin-smitten planet, to rescue the perishing from "the wrath to come."

God has deposited "all the fullness of his Deity" into the man Christ Jesus," "and hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things TO THE CHURCH, so "that the man of God may be perfect, THOROUGHLY FURNISHED UNTO ALL GOOD WORKS." Eph. 1: 22; 2 Tim. 3: 17. What excuse have we for our supineness and our self-petting? Where is our "glory in tribulation," our "suffering the loss of all things, and counting them but dung, that we may win Christ," and that others may win him through our self-oblation? Rom. 5: 3; Philpp. 3: 8; Rom. 9: 2, 3; Acts 5: 41; 1 Pet. 2: 21 and 4: 14.

Oh the daring, self-forgetting, yet discriminating, Christ-magnifying zeal of holy love! But just as soon as a soul breaks out with this divine fervor, and cannot be held back for very love of Jesus, manifesting something of the apostolic power and enthusiasm, how many throw up their hands in amazement and disapprobation, and put the clamps of conventionalism on the erratic spirit! Would to God we could en masse throw off our heritage of formalism and artificial proprieties, and display once more the meek and lowly, yet unflinching boldness of those who "loved not their lives unto death," but overcame "the world, the flesh, and the devil," "by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony." Rev. 12: 11.

In counting the cost of our redemption, Christ counted in humiliation and poverty and derision and scourging and spitting and mockery, and the blood-sweating agony of Gethsemane, and the forever inexplicable horrors of Golgotha! Are we so on fire with this divine tragedy, so heart-sick with desire to be like Jesus in "the fellowship of his sufferings," and in the joy of the Great Harvest Home, that we can heartily offer the prayer and repeat the testimony of the great apostle to the Gentiles? Philpp. 3: 10; Acts 20: 24. These things are not idle rhetoric, but the divine standard of loyalty by which we must finally be judged.

I can well understand your soul-sorrow in your Canadian isolation. I enter sympathetically into your lamentation for workers in the grand and solemn and arduous vocation of soul-saving. Visiting a locality and sowing seed a few weeks, and then again leaving, is not the highest idea of evangelization. It is abiding and working and living,—working, WORKING, living, LIVING, emphasizing every word by the DIVINE IMPRESS OF SELF-SACRIFICE, that COUNTS for the KINGDOM of GOD.

The excitement of a protracted effort must be sustained and augmented and deepened by the manifestation of incarnate Truth, "commending ourselves TO EVERY MAN'S CONSCIENCE IN THE SIGHT OF GOD." 2 Cor. 4: 2. In this way you can do much for Jesus, and be "manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ, written with the Spirit of the living God, known and read of all men." 2 Cor. 3: 2, 3. Read over and over day by day, "with strong crying and tears," Eph. 1: 15–20, and 3: 14–19, and Philpp. 3: 8–14, and Col. 1: 9–12, and 3: 8–17.

In word and deed show the very meekness of the Lamb of God to all you meet. Speak and live the truth of God in the love of God. Never point any soul to the church for authority, but to Christ and the Gospel. Spend yourself and your means freely, but wisely for Jesus. Sanctify EVERYTHING BY THE WORD OF GOD AND PRAYER. 1 Tim. 4: 5.

THE CHURCH.—ITS GOVERNMENT.

BY J. G. ROYER.

Chapter 4.—Officers.

IN the Scriptural constitution of the church are also indicated the offices necessary "for the edifying of the body of Christ." Eph. 4: 13.

These offices being divinely constituted, it is no marvel that "a bishop must be blameless, of good behavior, apt to teach," ruling commendably "his own house, having a good report of them which are without;" and that "deacons must not be double-tongued, not greedy of filthy lucre, holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience." 1 Tim. 3: 1–9.

These offices, being divinely established, cannot be changed, nor multiplied, nor abolished by human authority. Nor can the power, belonging to an office thus divinely appointed, be increased or lessened by man. This is evident from the Savior's pledge, "Lo, I am with you (the ministry) alway, even unto the end of the world." Matt. 28: 20. Among these divinely constituted offices, we name

THE MINISTRY.

It is a special gift from Christ to the church; for "he gave some apostles; . . . and some pastors and teachers, for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ." Eph. 4: 11, 12.

Ministers are "embassadors for Christ," speaking in his name. They are "stewards of God," intrusted with the Gospel for men. The office is not chosen as men choose a profession, consulting their inclination of mind or personal interests. It is entered in obedience to a call from God through the church. The call from God is made manifest by the existence of the Scriptural requisites in the life and character of the individual, and, in his providence, God opens the way to the work to which he has called the brother. The call is founded on the existence of those Scriptural qualifications, and the church, and not the individual himself, is the proper judge of his possession of them. Hence the church is the medium through which he is called.

Whenever the church or individual members of it discover the manifestations of a divine call in the existence and gradual development of the qualifications of an "embassador" and "steward" of God, it becomes as much the duty of the church to take steps by which that brother may become a sower of the Gospel seed, and a reaper of souls, as it is her duty to look after a sinner in whom are manifest the drawings of the Father, and the operations of the Spirit, convicting him of sin and judgment to come.

Good government requires elders, with their official corps, to "take heed" to the workings of the Spirit in "the flock over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers," Acts 20: 28, and carry into effect properly the directions of Annual Conference in this particular. Neglect in this important part of church government cannot but affect unfavorably the future good and success of the church.

Among the

for a minister, we name first,

Genuine Regeneration.—A man might be born "of water" and not "of the Spirit." It is all-important that the man "be in Christ,"—that he be "a new creature." A defect here would be fatal in every way. Think of a spiritually blind, godless minister endeavoring to guide souls to eternity! Such "blind leading" would prove a disastrous "example of the believers," and yet he is to be an example in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity." 1 Tim. 4: 12.

The minister must be in possession of a good degree, yea, an advanced degree, of spiritual life and experience. Intellectual or literary attainments cannot take the place of "love, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." Gal. 5: 22.

Soundness in the Faith is another all-important requisite. If he is unsettled in his convictions of religious truth, he cannot be expected to "speak the things which become sound doctrine," Tit. 2: 1, and hence has no rightful place as an "embassador."

Coupled with a sound faith is aptness to teach. Fitting mental development and discipline, and an adequate knowledge of the Scriptures are important helps to make him "able to teach others also." Since the principal business of the minister is to direct the minds of his fellow-men, the use of ample mental training must be obvious to all. The necessity of a knowledge of the Scriptures is equally apparent, since he is to impart instruction on the doctrines and duties of religion. He should also have a love for the cause, that would lead him constantly to endeavor to increase his knowledge.

Aside from these, however, there must be the special aptness or gift of imparting to others what he knows, in a manner that will draw, interest and hold the people. Paul and Barnabas did not only preach the Gospel, but they "so spake that a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed." Acts 14: 1. To do this the spiritual qualification of an invincible faith in God and in his Word, and a consecration to the work that will lead him to love men as some men love money, are as much more valuable than the intellectual alone, as is the house than the foundation alone. Napoleon once declared that "God is always on the side of the heaviest guns," but afterwards found reasons to revise his opinion. The rams' horns at Jericho were no doubt crooked, ungainly things, and anything but melodious in tone; but they brought down the walls notwithstanding. There has been many a minister with few of the graces of speech, esteeming himself but a ram's horn in the hand of the Lord, who brought down more strongholds of sin than any silver trumpet that ever charmed men with its music.

The minister must also "have a good report of them which are without," 1 Tim. 3: 7; "giving no offense, that the ministry be not blamed," 2 Cor. 6: 3, but commending himself "to every man's conscience in the sight of God." 2 Cor. 4: 2. No suspicion of dishonesty, untruthfulness or impurity must rest upon the minister. He must have a fair reputation for integrity of character. He must be true and just and honest in his dealings. In his intercourse with the other sex, he must be regarded as a man of a pure life and a holy walk, or he cannot possibly expect to do others good.

THE OBLIGATIONS ASSUMED

by the one who accepts the office of the ministry are solemn and far-reaching. It is understood that he accepts, as Scriptural, the doctrines and practices of the church, and puts himself under obligation to vindicate them. This is the chief duty of the minister. Should his convictions not permit him to defend the Gospel, as understood by the church, he is untrue to himself and to the church in accepting the office. There is no escape from the charge of dishonesty resting upon the man who accepts the holy office of the ministry, when he is not in sympathy with the doctrines of the church that calls him. Should he, at any time during his ministry, change his views as to the doctrines of the church, he is entitled to freedom of personal conviction and action, but he should not continue in the office, since the essential conditions upon which he was called, and upon which he accepted the call,—i. e., that the doctrines of the church are Scriptural,—have, so far as he is concerned, ceased to exist. He has no right to retain the office to the subversion of the doctrines he had solemnly obligated himself to defend.

Since every member is a soul entrusted by Christ to the church to protect and educate for heaven, he who accepts the ministry also accepts the care of souls as a sacred trust from Christ, and agrees to labor for their sanctification and salvation. The salvation of souls and the edification of the church and the spread of the Gospel, constitute the one great work of the minister's life. He is expected to do this in times of adversity, as in times of prosperity. He is not justified to leave his post because the wheels of the kingdom seem to move slowly. "The good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." It is "a hireling" that "leaveth the sheep and fleeth." John 10: 11, 12.

Mt. Morris, Ill.

BY B. F. MOOMAW.

Chapter Three.

ONE circumstance I want especially to notice,—that three ministers, representing different churches, made an appointment in a village near the center of the Botetourt County church, the object was believed to be to capture the young men, the sons of our Brethren who were quite numerous in that vicinity. Their theme was that war is consistent with Christianity, and that it would be honorable to unite with their countrymen in defending their country, and protecting their friends and firesides.

The next day, Sunday, I preached to a large congregation. I took for my subject the peace principles, as taught in the Christian Scriptures, bringing them into contrast with the lectures of the three divines, as presented the day before, and in my closing remarks I quoted Matt. 12: 41, "The men of Nineveh shall rise up in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas, and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here." "The queen of the south shall rise up in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here."

Then, taking the Bible in my hand, I said, "The three divines who addressed the assembly yesterday, may be great men in their way, but behold, a greater than all these is here," holding up the Bible,—"This is our guide, and may God forbid that I shall ever come into the presence of my Judge with the blood of my fellow-man dripping from my fingers."

There were present a number of soldiers in their uniforms, the badges of war upon them. They hastily rose up and went out of the house and were seen promenading back and forth outside.

Seeing this, I expected to be arrested at the close of the meeting, but there was no attempt made to molest me. A few days later I was informed that a committee of three was appointed by the home guard, a few miles away, to interview me concerning this matter. I knew the men. One was a professor in a female institute, one a physician who indulged in strong drink, and the other a slave-holding farmer and very immoral. When I heard this I wrote a letter to a gentleman, through whom the information came, saying that a committee of sober, moral and intelligent gentlemen would be respectfully received.

Upon this information the committee declined a personal visit, but interviewed me, by writing, upbraiding and threatening, declaring that I would not be allowed to occupy a neutral position, that I would be compelled to take a stand for or against the Confederacy. They severely ridiculed our peace principles religiously, claiming that it was the height of presumption to pretend to a higher state of sanctity than so many others who were Christians, and did not hesitate to engage actively in the conflict, in which so much was involved.

This opened a considerable correspondence, which all together would have made a considerable volume if it had been preserved. They finally concluded to give it up, and, as they said, turn me over to the authorities. On getting this last letter I concluded to pay a personal visit to a conservative gentleman who was familiar with their movements, and my personal friend. In our conversation he said he would advise that I be careful, that, if I should fall into the hand of the powers that be, it might prove disastrous. I told him that I had no fears; that if I was to come into the hands of authorities, I would be in the hands of men, and of the truth of this fact I had special evidence in a certain transaction of which I will give an account later.

In this interview my description of a committee that I would accept was referred to, and my friend said that Mr. —— was a sober, moral and intelligent gentleman, but that Mr. —— was a very immoral man, and that Dr. —— had been intemperate, but had reformed. To this I replied, "His reformation is questionable, for Captain Ross says that he was drunk yesterday." Capt. Ross was an officer in the Fifty-first Virginia Regiment, and at my house, very sick in bed. Dr. —— was then the army physician, and had been my family physician, but now was very bitter against me, because of what I was doing to keep our members and young men out of the army. On the day before, visiting the captain who was not able to be out of bed, the doctor seemed to be excited and told him that he must get away from here,—that he could not get well if he stayed. To this the captain replied, "Doctor, I cannot understand you, for my own father and mother could not be more kind, nor treat me any better than Mr. and Mrs. Moomaw are to me." He told me of this on my coming to his room the same evening, and said that the doctor was drunk.

My telling this to my friend, it came to the doctor's ears, and he became so enraged that he came near the house the next day, sent for the captain's attendant, and sent in a challenge to him for a duel. To this the captain replied that he could not then, but if he ever got well he would accommodate him.

The doctor also became so enraged against me, that he, to others, threatened me with violence, and provided himself with a stick, three feet long and a half inch thick, which he carried in the whip-socket of his buggy, ostensibly for the purpose. I met him frequently so equipped, but he did not speak to me, nor make any attempt at violence. I did not go out of my way on business or duty to avoid him, nor did I carry pistols or knives, nor a stick to defend myself. Why he did not attack me, I do not know unless it was because a friend of his told him that it would probably not be safe for him. But I attributed it to quite another source, — the lion's mouth was stopped in Daniel's case, and I believed that I was in the right, and was not afraid, and so I told my brethren when they would warn me of my danger, and the probability of bringing trouble upon the church.

Bonsack's, Va.

COMMITTEES SENT BY GENERAL CONFERENCE.

BY ENOCH EBY.

I DO not write to deprecate the above feature of our church government, but I do think a good work may be overdone. Some things are lawful, but, at the same time, not expedient. The calls for committees increased till they reached eighteen in one year. That is certainly no credit to the Brotherhood.

About the time the Old Order Brethren and Progressives organized, the calls for committees dropped to one each year in 1884 and 1885. This is as it should be; but at this time committees are slowly on the increase again. In 1890 there were 6; 1891, 5; and I felt like calling the mind of the Brotherhood to the fact that Conference has authorized District Meeting to send out committees, and if they have not suitable brethren in the District, then brethren from adjoining Districts can be obtained, so that each State at least could, and by all means should, settle its own difficulties.

It is no credit to any local church to advertise herself by calling for a committee from Annual Meeting. In most cases brethren in your own State, and even in your own District will be appointed by Annual Meeting. Why not call for them at once, and be satisfied with their work? The authority of General Conference does not qualify them any better for the work. Money, time and credit of both churches and brethren could be saved, were we to adjust our troubles without appealing to General Conference. There are exceptional cases that may require the above measure, but we think they are few.

Another advantage we have in doing the work at home is this: When we can learn the character of the trouble, and are acquainted with the brethren, we are better qualified to select a committee adapted to the nature of the work. The Standing Committee, as a rule, sends out ordained elders, in order to meet matters of doctrine, or implicated officials, but it always seemed inconsistent to me to send an elder several hundred miles to meet a financial trouble, which may require shrewd business tact, and even a knowledge of the laws of our land, in order to do safe work, and when, at the same time, it would seem necessary that he (the elder) should have a guardian over him, because of the lack of business qualifications. The laity, as a rule, can furnish us better financiers than the body of elders. They are more skillful because of practice. Why not use them for such work? You may say, however, "Following that rule, we might have the lay-member setting the elder right." Well, the Scriptures teach we all shall be subject one to another. 1 Pet. 5: 5. While the elder can admonish the lay-member in points of doctrine and church government, etc, the lay-member can, in return, admonish the elder in finances.

In order to avoid failures it would be good, and an honor to the cause of Christianity, if quite a number of our ministers and elders would seek the counsel of well-to-do brethren. It is thought by many that it is humiliating to do so, and they prefer not to let their true standing be known, but rather go on and bring reproach on the church by a financial shipwreck. Any brother too proud to be counseled by a lay-member, because of his official standing, magnifies his office with self-conceit. Rom. 12: 3–16.

Again, it is said that a large per-cent of our church troubles are among the officials. This is measurably and lamentably true. Sometimes this is offered as a just reason why the laity should be more frequently used in committee work. It should, however, be considered that the official brethren are more exposed to trials and temptations than the laity; hence, in order to bear one another's burdens, the members should sympathize with the brethren who have special and responsible duties to perform, and aid them as opportunity may require. In so doing many errors might be avoided.

A VISITATION OF ANGELS: OR SOME EXPERIENCES OF A SOUL IN SEEKING LIGHT.

BY N. D. UNDERHILL.

(Concluded.)

ALTHOUGH I had loved the Lord and served him, as opportunity would permit, over seventeen years, I earnestly longed to obey those other commandments, at which so many of my acquaintances (yea all of them) sneered and scoffed. Having learned that a truly obedient class of believers did exist as one church on earth, I sought to meet with and become one of that number. It was some time ere I learned where they were located, but having learned from the Good Book that all things work together for good to them that love the Lord,—that those who seek shall find, and that those who hunger and thirst after righteousness shall be filled, I trusted in him, and, by ceaseless prayer, sought and received the guidance of the Holy Spirit which God and Christ have promised to those who ask him.

During my moments of meditation, I often thought of the second coming of Christ, which is promised to them who look for him, and involuntarily looked out of the east window for the coming of the angels in advance, but finally, when, for a moment, I had ceased to look, lo! two of them had come. Our dear brother and sister, G. W. and R. A. Fesler, were the ministering guests in this case, and words could never express the joy with which their ministrations were received, and now I can truly say, "I have found that peace which passeth understanding."

All the dear sisters and brethren who, by their kind, helpful letters, and otherwise did cast many rays of light across my path, I would love to take by the hand and say, "God bless you," but it is unnecessary, for when our Blessed Savior shall say, "I was a hungered and ye gave me meat, sick and in prison, and ye came unto me," etc., your joy will be full.

Now my home is more than a hundred miles away from the nearest church. Not one of my kindred or former friends are members or even friends of the Brethren's church, yet I feel that I have more brethren, sisters, parents and friends than I had before, for that tie of love which binds us together as one family in Christ, is much stronger than the dearest earthly ties. "Love is a golden knot, tied by angel's hands," and ever since I loved my Savior, I also loved the Brethren (though I could not see either), because they are his obedient servants and faithful disciples, his friends, the members of his church.

My greatest desire is to be a faithful servant of Christ. My opportunities and means are limited, yet I could scatter seeds if the Lord sees fit to place them in my hands. I know of a few seekers after the Truth in this vicinity, and I could use a few tracts of all kinds (especially on baptism) to advantage. If some one cares to send a few, they may do much good.

I think the sisters' white cap and plain bonnet, also their plain, inexpensive dress, are so becoming to women professing godliness. I do hope that none ever have the least desire to adorn their bodies with silk, satin, plush, or other costly apparel. We surely could not enter the house of God or even kneel in our closets with that emblem of purity, love and devotion upon our heads, and a rustling silk dress or other costly apparel upon our bodies.

There is one other subject I would like to mention. Among worldly people it is common to attend services, listen to the sermon, address or prayers, for the sake of criticising them afterward. Every grammatical mistake, every difference of opinion expressed, every look and gesture of the speaker,—all is rudely commented upon, held up to ridicule, and, if possible, condemned. Of course God's children do not commit such grave faults, yet it is possible that some who read this are not so different from others as might be. Every member of the flock has its own place to fill, its own duty to perform; none should sit idle, being content to leave all the burden of soul-saving upon the shoulders of their faithful leaders.

Sometimes people have dust on their spectacles, which makes all things appear unclean. Let us keep our own selves pure and clean, our consciences clear, and our hearts so full of love that no unkind thought can proceed from us, to injure the useful influence of a fellow-servant. Let us love all of God's children, and bear one another's burdens gladly. While we sympathize with the afflicted, help the poor, and entertain the stranger, we must faithfully hold up the prophet's hands, and cheer his heart with good attention, ready assistance and loving encouragement. Then, indeed, will God bless our efforts, and the good seeds which are sown will spring up and grow, and bear much fruit.

The letters of the good sisters and brethren, both private and through the GOSPEL MESSENGER, have been a great help and comfort to me.

Lesson II.

Last lesson brought us to the close of the Babylonian Kingdom, and it shows the remarkable fulfillment of prophecy. Looking at the matter from a human stand-point, one would think this mighty City of Babylon could not be taken. It is described as being sixty miles in circumference, surrounded by a wall 350 feet high. This wall was probably made out of brick, manufactured out of the earth right around the City, thus leaving a large ditch outside the wall which was kept full of water, as was the custom in cases of walled cities. There are said to have been 100 brass gates, 100 feet high. There were 25 streets, running each way across the City, thus dividing it into 625 large blocks, containing something like a quarter section of land, with the houses built facing the streets, thereby leaving a great deal of land to farm, probably enough to support the City, as the soil was very rich. The river Euphrates passed through the middle from side to side. There was a high wall on each side of the river, of the same height as the outer walls, so that it would be impossible for an army to get into the City even if they were in the bed of the river. Thus it would seem to be impossible for any army to take this mighty City, either by siege or by storm, but God had decreed that the Babylonian Kingdom should fall and another take its place, and the time had arrived. Belshazzar is king. He makes a great feast to a thousand of his lords, as described in Daniel, fifth chapter.

Previous to this time Cyrus, the Persian, was stationed outside the City with an army. Knowing that there would be a great feast, he planned for it, arranging to have the river, above the City, turned out of its channel so as to allow the river bed to run dry. Then he stationed men at either side of the City, with instructions to wade the river to the heart of the City as soon as the water was low enough. This even would have been useless, had the gates in the river walls been closed as designed. However they were left open, and after the warning, given by the handwriting on the wall, the City was taken and the King slain. How many persons end their days on earth at the banquet or ball room!

One scene in the prophecy is now brought to a close. Scene two opens with the Medes and Persians jointly reigning. These are represented by the arms and breasts of silver in chapter two, the bear in chapter seven, and the two-horned ram in chapter eight. This epoch, termed the Persian supremacy, lasted from about 538 to 331 B. C. As shown by the silver, as compared with gold, this kingdom was one of less splendor than the former. As shown by the bear and ram, it was very ferocious. The inequality of the two horns of the ram foretells the supremacy of the Persian Kingdom over that of the Medes.

Scene two now closes. The third opens, represented by the belly and thighs of brass in the image; by the leopard with four wings and four heads in chapter seven, and the he-goat in chapter eight. There are several interesting features of this epoch that are well worthy of notice.

1. In splendor the brass is inferior to the silver, but it was to rule over the whole earth,—the then known inhabited world.

2. A he-goat came from the West and touched not the ground, representing the rapidity of the movement. The leopard had wings, indicating rapidity.

3. The leopard had four heads, and the one notable horn of the he-goat being broken, in its stead came up four horns.

In studying the prophecies of Daniel, we find that the more remote the fulfillment of a prophecy, the more it goes into detail. This is directly opposite to what it would be if man had written it, but is characteristic of God's works, showing his unbounded wisdom and power. In the next lesson we will show how beautifully the prophecy of the four heads and four horns was fulfilled.

THE words confession and acknowledgment, in their different forms, are sometimes used interchangeably, and there are places and connections in which this may properly be done, and there are other places and connections in which each word expresses its own idea and must occupy its own place.

One may confess a virtue or a vice already existing, a desire already formed, or a truth already received, but one would not be said to confess an idea but partly revealed, or a principle only partly understood. When an alien immigrant desires citizenship in this country, he does not "confess" the supremacy of this Government in his oath of allegiance, but he "acknowledges" its supremacy.

When one violates a law of the land and is arrested and fined, his yielding is not considered a a confession, but an acknowledgment of the power and righteousness of the Government.

Again; no alien is ever considered a citizen until acknowledgment of the Government and laws is made. Formally, a criminal may confess his crime, but submission to the power of the State, in the penalty affixed, can alone relieve him from the stigma of guilt, or restore him to favor, and that submission is an acknowledgment of the truth and righteousness of the law condemning him. All good human laws are but copies of divine laws; all good citizens are but shadows of which Christians must be the substance. In the divine polity it is required that an alien must confess his sins in his repentance, but he may confess and repent all the days of his life, and still die without salvation. There must be a "repentance to the acknowledging of the truth." 2 Tim. 2: 25. That "truth" is the law of God which makes a bad act a sin. When one enters the church he must acknowledge the supremacy of the law governing that church. He acknowledges not only the power and justness of the law, but the power that made the law, and the power that executes it,—the church. If he did not, he could never become a member.

As long as one lives in complete subserviency to law, there is no trouble with the powers that be; but, unfortunately, one does not always do that. Then what? The civil law says, a man must pay his tax. One says, "I will not." The officer comes in the power of the State and seizes the man's property and cites him to court. The man appears and confesses he did not pay, but that does not restore his citizenship to its pristine standing, nor liberate his property,—he must pay the debt and the penalty, and thus acknowledge the power and the justness of the law and of the State in executing the law.

So it is with the Christian. In the olden time, when God dealt with his people direct, sins were confessed, and the justness of God was acknowledged. Ps. 32: 5 and 50: 3. In Jer. 3: 13 the Lord makes acknowledgment on Israel's part, the condition upon which pardon and favor depended. Again, in Jer. 14: 20–23, the Lord required his people to acknowledge their transgressions and his justice.

Now, when God deals with the people through the church, one acknowledges the supremacy and justness of God's law to the church. Thus the church becomes the interpreter and executor of the law to the individual; else one could never know what church he wanted to join, nor could one ever become a member of any church, neither could a church ever govern its membership or maintain its unity.

It is written that, "what was written aforetime, was written for our learning." One thing we learn is that members did backslide sometimes, and another thing we learn is that God required them to acknowledge their sins and acknowledge the justness of the law in fixing the penalty.

But now what? When one violates a provision of the law, must a simple confession of the act be sufficient? If he simply say, "I did it," shall that end the matter every time and in every case? It does not do so in civil law; it did not do so in the church when it was governed by God direct. It will not do so in the church to-day.

The apostle, in 1 Cor. 14: 37, says, "If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord.

In Matt. 18 a refusal to hear carries a case through the steps up to the church, and will finally end in expulsion. But, mark you, none expel but the church. What is a refusal to hear? Evidently a refusal to heed, or acknowledge the correctness or justness of the church's decision. Now, if one is expelled for refusing to acknowledge the justness of the church's interpretation and application of law, would it not be inconsistent to restore such a one without such acknowledgment?

Is not God's example in governing his church plain enough? Are not the acknowledgments, made on entering the church a sufficient predicate? Does not the authority to "bind" and "loose" convey sufficient power? Can the oneness of the church be maintained in any other way?

Another thing. Did any one ever know an earnest, devoted, humble, unselfish person who refused to acknowledge his own wrong-doing as well as the church's right? Nay, verily.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

BY S. N. M'CANN.

S. N. McCANN,

Dear Brother: -

Will you please answer the following questions, and confer a great favor on a poor old man and many brethren! (1) Why do our Brethren call the Lord's Supper and the sacred emblems a love-feast and make them an occasion for a worldly gathering? (2) Why do they wash feet first? (3) Why marry and given in marriage to the people of the world? (4) Is matrimony a sacred union? (5) How many sacraments does the New Testament teach? (6) Is the baptismal covenant explained to converts? Please answer through the GOSPEL MESSENGER. BENJ. SEARS.

1. THE Brethren call these exercises a "love-feast" because Peter speaks of it as such when he says, these are "spots and blemishes, reveling in their love-feasts while they feast with you." 2 Pet. 2: 13. (New Translation.) Jude says, "These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, or better, "These are they who are hidden rocks in your love-feasts when they feast with you." (Verse 12, New Translation.) "Agape," the Greek term for love, is the original term, used to designate this supper or feast; hence "love-feasts."

It is no more the occasion for a worldly gathering than any other public service. We are commanded to preach the Gospel to all, and the most effectual preaching is that, which we exemplify. We hold our love-feasts openly on account of the good that may be done to others, and because there is no Scripture for such meetings to be held secretly. Then, too, we can let our light so shine that others may see our good works and glorify God. Matt. 5: 16.

2. The Brethren wash feet before they eat supper, because it is evident that Jesus sat down to the table again after the feet were washed. John 13: 12. It is also evident that they were eating after they sat down; for both Jesus and Judas dipped into the dish at the same time. Matt. 26: 23. Mark says that the twelve were all dipping into the dish. Matt. 14: 20. John says that Jesus gave one of the sops that he dipped to Judas. John 13: 26.

Satan entered into Judas now, and he went out, but the rest remained at their supper. John 13: 27, 28, 30; and while they were eating, Jesus instituted the Communion. Matt. 26: 21.

As they did eat, he said, "Verily I say unto you that one of you shall betray me." Mark 14: 22. "And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed and brake it, and gave it to them." Luke 22: 20. "Likewise the cup also after supper." Here we see that the betrayer was designated while they were eating, and that the emblems of Christ's body were broken while they yet did eat, and that the emblem of his blood was given after the supper.

From the above it is evident that Judas went out while the supper was in progress and that he had his feet washed before he went out. Christ says, "Ye are clean but not all for he knew who should betray him." John 13: 10. Hence he had them washed before the supper. Christ washed feet before supper and the Brethren follow his example.

3. The Brethren marry and are given in marriage with the people of the world because there are no good grounds to forbid it, and because there are some reasons of justification in the Scriptures, for Paul says, "If any brother hath a wife, that believeth not, and she be pleased to dwell with him, let him not put her away. And the woman which hath a husband that believeth not, and if he be pleased to dwell with her, let her not leave him." 1 Cor. 7: 12, 13.

Our old brethren have generally advised against marrying outside of the church, and the general tenor of the Gospel is at least to some extent opposed to marriage with the world.

Under the Mosaic dispensation it was strictly forbidden because of the danger of being led away. Moses says: Thou shalt make no covenant with them, "Neither shalt thou make marriage with them, thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son, for they will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods." Deut. 7: 3-4. Joshua says, "If ye do, in any wise, go back, and cleave unto the remnant of these nations, even these that remain among you, and shall make marriage with them, and go in unto them, and they to you, know for a certainty that the Lord, your God, will no more drive out any of these nations from before you; but they shall be snares and traps unto you, and scourges in your sides, and thorns in your eyes, until ye perish from off this good land." Joshua 23: 12, 13. Ezra says: "Now therefore give not your daughters unto their sons, neither take their daughters unto your sons, nor seek their peace or their wealth forever." Ezra 9: 12. Much more might be given to show that matrimony under the Jewish dispensation was limited to marriage in the church, and that it was not permissible to marry an outsider.

Marriage would bring about much better results to the parties married, and to their children, if this old rule were followed. One of our strongest powers, to maintain our principles as a church, is lost when we marry unbelievers. The New Testament doctrine would seem to advise us to marry "only in the Lord." 1 Cor. 7: 39.

4. Matrimony should be a sacred union, and it is sacred if we let God do his part of the work, but if lust, lucre, and other low motives join the parties, the bond loses its sacredness and becomes legalized licentiousness and prostitution. Paul represents the union in marriage as similar to the union of Christ and the church, Eph. 5: 28-32, and Mark and Matthew speaking of marriage say, "What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." Mark 10: 9; Matt. 19: 6. The apostles regarded the union too sacred a thing for man to break.

5. Protestants usually regard baptism and the Communion as the only sacraments, but the Catholic churches give five more sacraments, viz., Confirmation, Penance, Matrimony, Holy Orders, and Extreme Unction. If we take the definition for sacrament, viz., "One of the solemn religious ordinances, enjoined by Christ, the head of the Christian Church, to be observed by his followers," we must count each of the following ordinances sacraments, viz., baptism, the Lord's Supper, Communion, feet-washing, salutation of the holy kiss, anointing with oil, and matrimony.

6. The baptismal covenant is fully explained, and its importance deeply impressed by the Brethren. Every question that we ask the penitent is a comment upon the baptismal covenant that he is about to make for life.

Hoping that these answers will be satisfactory, and in harmony with God's Word we send them as requested.

BREVITY OF HUMAN EXISTENCE.

BY VIOLA TROSTLE

LOOKING back upon the past ages of the world, and the different generations of the human race that have passed away, the brevity of human existence, and the insignificance of individual influence become apparent. True, there are instances of men whose names and actions are still quoted for their influence in their lives, but to each one of those are millions who lived and died forgotten centuries ago. Thus life after life has passed away, and faded. Each one filled, for a time, its niche in the world, performed its portion of labor, felt its share of pain and pleasure, and then passed away to the grave. While nature smiled unchanged through centuries, the sun shone, the rain fell. Man came and passed away like a cloud over the heavens,—forgotten as the vapor is forgotten when the sun absorbs it in its rays. While we live, nature will smile; when we die the sunlight still will fall upon our graves, and the great works of creation take no note of our loss.

For us the world still offers the attractions she presented to our ancestors, and when our names are forgotten, the same pleasures will await coming generations. Only a short time and the end will come to us all, as it has come to our predecessors. Only a little while and the throbbing heart will be still, the busy brain will cease to plan. Only a short span of pain and pleasure, and the coffin lid will close above us. The last solemn prayer will be said, the tears will be dried that fell from the mourner's eyes, and our names heard no more, even in the household prayer. Time will not stop for us. The gap our loss made for a brief time will be filled. Joy will take the place of mourning, and we shall be forgotten.

Then this life, thus brief and unimportant, is yet a preparation for a higher and more enduring existence where death does not come, where mourning is never heard, where the perfect existence denied here is promised to those who earn it in this brief sojourn on earth. It is but a brief time we have in which to gain this blissful eternity, and none should be spent in rioting or evil.

Our life here can only be compared to a school in which to learn the lessons that fit the soul for eternity. It is a journey in which we travel to a haven of everlasting peace and joy,—a trial where conscience is our judge, and where no perjury can save the guilty from punishment. It should always be kept in mind, not as a terror, but as a wise kindness of our Heavenly Father that we cannot know the day nor the hour when our career will close, and the gates of eternity be opened for us. We shall die and be forgotten here, but each word and act of our short sojourn will influence the future life for which we are preparing. How often are we reminded that our lives are but "a shadow that declineth," and that we soon pass away!

These thoughts show us the importance of doing quickly the work the Lord has given us to do. Let this brief life, then, be passed in useful deeds and influences, that we may live a little while as a beloved memory, and earn the kingdom of heaven for life everlasting.

THE SOUL'S IMMORTALITY.

BY DANIEL HAYS.

AMONG the attributes of the soul may be named, faith, hope and love. These are abiding principles, are inherent, and the source and ground of character and right action. The soul stands subjectively related to them. It is the soul that believes, that hopes, that loves. Can these principles abide, remain, and that which holds, which evolves them, perish? Can the stream flow on and the fountain be no more? No; that which loves shall remain while love remains. "And now ABIDETH faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity."

HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE?

"Every man according to his ability." "Every one as God hath prospered him." "Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not."—2 Cor. 8: 12.

FROM THE FIELD.

BY A. HUTCHISON.

I CLOSED my work at Sabetha, Kans., Sept. 29. We began at that place with some empty seats, but enough full ones to give some spirit to the work. As the meetings went on, there were new recruits, until the vacant seats were greatly in the minority. Sept. 19 we had a very pleasant love-feast, and having the presence of several ministers, and others, from the surrounding congregations, and from the adjoining States, all added to the pleasure of the occasion.

What grand and happy seasons these would be, if we would only let the world go! We all ought to try to realize the full force of these words, "Thou God seest me." Gen. 16: 13. Then, and then only, can we fully realize the true import of the subject of self-examination. While this is to be between us and our God, it also is to be between us and our families,—brethren and sisters, and our neighbors as well.

Do we realize that the Judge is looking at the case through all of these avenues, and holding us responsible for our behavior toward all these? If so, then self-examination will have a meaning that will ring in our ears clearly.

Again, we ought to think of the following: "What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost, which is in you?" 1 Cor. 6: 19. When we put the language of the apostle in connection with that, it makes a case that we dare not be indifferent about. Here it is: "If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy." 1 Cor. 3: 17.

Taking this view of the case we will soon be made to wonder how we would feel, standing before God,—some with their rings of gold or imitation, some with their shoulders much out of the normal condition, so much so that their dress don't fit smoothly,—thus trying to change the shape that God gave them; others with their hair frizzed in front, far from making them look either intelligent or beautiful. There may be brethren, flourishing a fine watch chain, with charm, in some cases, added, and hair and beard arranged in the latest style. We certainly ought to be very careful of these bodies,—not to have them defiled with anything that our Master would not be pleased with, for these bodies must be offered to God in an acceptable condition.

Again; we ought to be able to discover that we stand in the same relation to Jesus, as we do to the church. If we cannot commune with the church, how can we commune with Christ? "For whatsoever ye do to one of these, my brethren, ye do it to me." Then, if we refuse to commune with the church, may we not, in this way, refuse Communion with Jesus?

We should make every effort in our power, to remove every hindering cause, that would keep us away from a Communion season. This is one of the enemy's methods of successful warfare,—for he knows we will grow weak if we do not take food. "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" Luke 6: 46.

We must view the church as being the place where the Lord has been pleased to record his name. Our Master has set life and death within our reach, -a blessing and a curse,—and he will not force us to choose life, but he does work in us to that end. And while the Lord will not compel us to choose life and salvation, I am happy to feel fully assured that the enemy cannot compel us to choose the dangerous road. We are what we are, because we have made choice of a course that made of us what we are.

Now a little chat on the subject of holding series of meetings. When we undertake to handle heavy timbers or stones, we usually call on our neighbors to help us, and when they lift, we lift too, and that makes the work light. What is true in that case, is true of us as a church, in the work assigned to us to do while here. A full and hearty co-operation of the entire body of members in a congregation makes the work so much lighter for those who have the preaching to do. All hope to have a good meeting, -and the meetings will be just what we make them. Sometimes we hear persons say that it seems as if the Gospel had lost its power. Well, did you ever think that it might be possible that we are the cause of it? Suppose each one of us resolves firmly that, as for me, I will live a correct life this year, and I will renew that promise every day, so as to be sure not to forget it. Now, if each member in any one congregation, will do that for one year, and so report to me, I will surely make an effort to be there, and we will see if the Gospel has lost its power.

We can learn useful lessons from the people of this world. While at Sabetha, there was some kind of an exhibition to be held in a hall or opera house, to make people laugh and get their money, and there were more posters and circulars distributed, and more efforts put forth to have the people know of that little show, than all the meetings I ever attended. I do not mean to say that our people should resort to this method of work, but I do mean to say that, we should all give ourselves more concern about the Master's business,—do like the woman of Samaria, tell the people to come to church. Do not be afraid to speak a word for Jesus. He is interceding for you.

We had good attendance, while at that place, and feel hopeful for the work there. A hearty co-operation, all along the line, must tell for Christ sooner or later in any town, city or country. "Because greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world." 1 John 4: 4. I expect to remain, here at Yale, until Oct. 15. Then I shall go to Harlan, Iowa, for two weeks,—then home by Nov. 1.

The Gospel Messenger

Is the recognized organ of the German Baptist or Brethren's church, and advocates the form of doctrine taught in the New Testament and pleads for a return to apostolic and primitive Christianity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and maintains that Faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration of the heart and mind, baptism by Trine Immersion for remission of sins unto the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, are the means of adoption into the household of God,—the church militant.

It also maintains that Feet-washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and as universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians, is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, as taught in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ.

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, James 5: 14, is binding upon all Christians.

It also advocates the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, thus giving to the Lord for the spread of the Gospel and for the conversion of sinners.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

Mount Morris, Ill., - - - - Oct. 20, 1891

ELD. S. S. BARKLOW has been elected to represent Oregon on the Standing Committee next year.

WE learn that Bro. J. H. Miller is to spend several weeks preaching in the Northern part of Michigan.

BRO. GEO. W. CRIPE, we learn, is booked for a series of meetings in the town of Roanoke, Woodford Co., Ill.

ALL new subscribers will receive the MESSENGER free from the time their names reach us, to the end of the present year.

BRO. D. F. EBY, who has been located at Mt. Vernon, Illinois, for several years, has moved to Westfield, Hamilton Co., Ind.

WRITING from Sterling, Ill., Oct. 12, Bro. P. R. Keltner says, one was received by baptism, another made application for membership, and others seem near the kingdom.

IT is said that the printing press which Voltaire set up in Fernay to demolish Christianity is now used to print Bibles in Geneva.

We are arranging to issue a missionary number of the MESSENGER the last of November. We are preparing it especially for the mission field. A further notice of it will appear later.

BRO. D. E. BRUBAKER has been selected by the General Mission Board to do missionary work in Canada. He will leave for his new field of labor in a few days. He is now preaching in Wisconsin.

WE are pleased to see the Brethren in Oregon pushing their missionary work. Considerable was done at their late District Meeting in that respect. The field is large, and the opposition very strong, but with continued, well-directed efforts they will succeed in the end.

AT the Ministerial Meeting in Marshall County, Indiana, a few weeks ago, there was a very large gathering of members, among them over one hundred ministers. This speaks well for the meeting. We are glad to learn that the work of the meeting gave general satisfaction.

EVERY now and then an obituary or love-feast notice goes into the waste basket because the writer fails to give date or place. Correspondence frequently meets the same fate on account of the writers forgetting or declining to give their name. There is no reason for any one withholding his name when writing to a printing office.

WE are glad to see the Brethren in Kansas manifesting such commendable zeal in pushing their missionary work. Their cry is that they have not preachers enough. While we know that the rest of our churches have no active preachers to spare, we still hope that these western fields may in some way be supplied with all needed help.

SOME years ago, a brother and sister gave their endowment note to the General Mission Board for five hundred dollars. A short time ago they sent the money to pay off the note, saying, they did not know what would become of their money after their death, and they wanted the Mission Board to have the five hundred dollars; so, to be sure of it, they paid it while they were living. It might be well for others to think of this. Money that has been promised to the missionary cause is consecrated money, and he who appropriates it to his own personal use, has committed a most serious error indeed. It is indeed a grave thing to keep back consecrated money. Children and others who keep back the money, pledged to the Lord's cause by departed saints, are guilty of a crime that will follow them to the judgment.

WHEN a man gets into trouble, he must contrive some way to get out. The longer he stays in, the worse it is for him. It may take longer to get out than it did to get in, and then it may cost more. To retrace steps is often the only way out of a difficulty, and is generally a sure way. To lose time and money getting out of trouble is far better than staying in and losing all that one has. It is not wise to spend precious time over a mistake, for that will not remedy it. The best of men have made mistakes, and thereby plunged into trouble, but many, by diligent efforts, redeemed their losses, and started anew upon the path of duty, and made life a success. Getting into trouble and making mistakes does not always mean a failure. The man who is in trouble has a chance of getting out if he does not remain in too long, while the one who makes mistakes may correct them, provided they are not too grave to admit of correction.

THOUGH we gave ample opportunity and time to send in corrections for the ministerial list in the Brethren's Almanac, some are still sending in their corrections. The work went to press some weeks ago, hence those who sent in too late will likely not find their corrections entered, but we will hold them for another year.

IN the United States Treasury is a fund known as "The Conscience Fund." Now and then a man, who has stolen money from the Government, cannot stand the burning of his conscience any longer, so he sends the stolen money to the United States Treasurer, but withholds his name. In this way he relieves his conscience in part at least. We sometimes wonder if any of our readers have any conscience money! Have we any money that belongs to the Lord? What say you?

THE Minutes of the District Meeting for Middle Iowa have been received, and show the work in that District to be harmonious. Bro. Stephen Johnson will represent the District on the Standing Committee. Applications for the Meetings are made ahead as far as to 1899. They have no papers for the Annual Meeting.

THIS congregation held its love-feast Oct. 9 and 10, in the Silver Creek house, a large stone building, four miles north of Mt. Morris. The weather was delightful, and the attendance very large of both members and outsiders. Every available part of the house was occupied with tables for the evening services, and only a few not members could find room in the house. A very large number remained in the yard, and yet we had most excellent order. The ministerial force was quite large. Eld. Samuel Murray officiated, and stood up to the work well, for a man of his great age. The feast proper commenced at 5: 30 and closed at eight. We believe it was one of the most orderly feasts we ever attended. Such gatherings are well calculated to greatly strengthen the pilgrim on his weary journey through life. There were members present from nearly every congregation in Northern Illinois. About one hundred went out from Mt. Morris.

IT hardly seems credible in the eyes of most readers, but figures seem to demonstrate that less liquor is sold in the Southern States than other parts of the Union. "A table has been published by the Census Bureau which gives the ratio of the retail liquor sellers to the whole population in all the States except North and South Dakota, from whence the figures have not yet been secured. The table is based upon the official figures of the late national census and upon the official returns of the Internal Revenue Department for 1890, showing the taxed retail liquor-dealers. An examination of the figures shows that the percentage is least in the Southern States. In Alabama, Arkansas, South Carolina, North Carolina and Mississippi, one liquor dealer can supply the wants of from 1,033 to 1,188 persons on the average. In eleven more States, Georgia, Florida, Vermont, Kansas, Tennessee, West Virginia, Virginia, Delaware, Nebraska, Maine and Massachusetts, the range is from 514 to 939. In California there is one rumseller to 91 persons, in Nevada one to 71, while Montana heads the list by requiring one saloon to every 60 persons! The States that range between one and two hundred are New Jersey, Rhode Island, New York, Colorado, Idaho and Wyoming. If the figures, representing the ratio of dram-sellers, are an index, the most temperate States of the Union are Alabama, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Arkansas, while the most bibulous are the mountain States of Montana, Nevada, California, Wyoming and Idaho."

We hope that many of our ministers are preparing to spend a month in one of the Brethren's Bible terms the coming winter. A month of careful study will be of advantage to any of our ministers, and especially the young preachers These terms will be held in the month of January,—a very suitable time for Bible study.

Brethren, do not let the isolated churches suffer for the want of care. Let our State Mission Boards keep them constantly in mind, and see that they are properly looked after. It is not enough to organize a new church, and then let it shift for itself. It needs attention until it is strong enough to care for itself. 'Train up a child in the way it should go" is good doctrine to apply to new churches, and then they will not depart from it. Churches need training as well as other things, and usually go all wrong if they are not trained aright.

We are glad for the article on "Committees sent by General Conference" in this issue. In our estimation it relates to matters that have been too much neglected in our Brotherhood. Read it carefully, and then settle your difficulties at home without calling on the Annual Meeting. If your trouble involves finance or educational work, see to it that there are some good business brethren on the committee. We, too, feel that we are not making enough use of our well-informed laity. Had we pushed some of our careful business brethren forward more, it might have been greatly to our financial honor and success in some respects in the past, and may prove of equal benefit in the future.

October 11th was our day to fill the appointment in Chicago. The work is in charge of Bro. J. G. Royer who is very much interested in the Chicago mission, and preaches there quite frequently. One week previous to our going, the appointment was filled by Bro. J. C. Murray, of Nappanee, Ind., who has arranged to preach in the City the first Sunday in each month. The meetings are held in the Disciple church, corner of Oakley Avenue and Jackson Street, at 3:30 P. M., this being the only time on Sunday when the house is not occupied. It is very inconvenient, but the best that can be done at present. The congregation was not large, but the interest was excellent. Bro. J. A. Weaver, of Monticello, Ind., was with us and aided in the services. To us the Chicago mission looks hopeful. We believe that a good congregation may be built up and maintained in the City. They, however, need a house, and need it badly. We hope some generous souls may be found who will respond to the great need. The members seemed full of zeal, and do not mean to permit a few obstacles to materially hinder the work. One brother had to come fourteen miles to reach the place of meeting, and yet he lives in the City. Chicago is a large city, and our people must not rest contented until they get a good, strong church well established there. Those who have friends in the City might do well to write them about our services, at corner Oakley Avenue and Jackson St., every Sunday at 3:30. They have appointed their feast on Thanksgiving Day.

SHALL THEY SUFFER?

We just learned from the Secretary of the General Missionary Committee that at their last meeting on Oct. 6, they did not have sufficient means on hand to meet all the calls for help which were made. The Secretary of one of the District Mission Boards in the West sends in an urgent request for two ministers for fall and winter, to fill the calls of the District. They are in much need of ministerial help.

Then the contributions are not as strong and as many as they should be. There is an effort being made to raise a large fund for preaching the Gospel this fall and winter. We do not wish to discourage the movement, but wish to call the attention of those who have not done anything yet, to do it now. With a bountiful harvest just garnered will we not be robbers of God in more ways than one, if we do not give freely for his cause? Let us not fail to give freely, sacrifice willingly, and pray fervently for the upbuilding of the kingdom.

There seems to be quite an awakening among our people in new fields especially, and we look for quite an ingathering of souls the coming winter. Ministers are entering the fields in full earnest, and we must help and encourage them to the full extent of our ability.

SOUND PREACHING WANTED.

Just now many of the popular churches are put to their wit's end to secure and hold good congregations at their religious services. They have tried popular music, sensational subjects and semi-religious preaching, which draw full houses for a time, but when they see their congregations diminishing, and the concert and lecture halls full to overflowing, they, too, are tempted to dispense with their old-fashioned religion, and turn their Sunday evening services into respectable (?) places of amusement. This is the condition that many city churches have permitted themselves to get into, and instead of being a help to the cause of Christianity, they are actually a serious hinderance.

The remedy is, more of that religious zeal that characterized the Christianity of the apostolic age. It should be an earnest desire, prayer and consecrated effort for more piety, more purity and more zeal in the church. True, the congregations may not be so large, but those who do attend may be depended upon to stand in defense of that higher life that we should labor to attain. Every minister who turns his church over to amusement, in order to fill the house with the masses, has surrendered to that influence that is laboring so earnestly to destroy what little piety yet remains in the churches.

The true church and the world must ever remain distinct, or the church ceases to be that power for good her Founder intended she should be. Yet the minister should do all in his power to legitimately draw the people to his place of preaching, and edify and instruct them to the best of his ability. But by all means should his preaching possess the old Gospel ring, and give no uncertain sound. People who cannot be converted and edified by pure Gospel preaching are not likely to be reached by any of the sensational lectures and semi-religious preaching so common in many of the popular churches of to-day. If there is not a demand for spiritual food, a demand for it must be created. The minister must labor to keep his members up to that higher state of spirituality where there will be a yearning for the bread and water of life. The success of his work depends on this, and in proportion as he fails to succeed, in that proportion does his work prove a failure. To resort to worldly devices and semi-religious entertainments is neither becoming his high calling in the church, nor is it for the edification of the consecrated members of his flock. J. H. M.

BY D. L. MILLER.

Number Six.

We closed and mailed our last letter at Trondhjem where we spent several days on our return from the North. Here we spoke at two meetings, Bro. Hope acting as interpreter. The meetings were well attended and the interest was good. Bro. Hope canvassed the city pretty thoroughly, distributing tracts. We found the people kindly disposed and courteous in their manners. When we handed them a package of reading matter it was usually received with the expression, "Mange Tak," many thanks. We had many evidences of the fact that the tracts were read. We noticed on our way from Trondhjem to Gottenborg a man, standing on the platform of the cars, intently reading the historical sketch of the Brethren, of which we had 5,000 copies printed at the former place by authority of the Tract Committee. Afterward he had a long talk with Bro. Hope on religious topics.

At Gottenborg, Sweden, we spent several days. The sailors along the wharves were supplied with tracts and they received them gladly. Here we had an evidence of the fact that it requires courage to live up to our principles under all conditions and circumstances, but as the incident is purely personal we shall not allude to it further.

This letter is to be made up of odds and ends, notes, illustrations, and observations found in our note-book to date.

The Gottenborg Licensing System.

Our notes say we were much interested in the workings of the Gottenborg system of dealing with the strong drink evil.

According to official statistics the consumption of distilled liquors at one time amounted to twenty-eight quarts per head of the entire population, and drunkenness was very common. By the enactment of license laws, the raising of the duty, and the efforts of the various temperance organizations, the quantity has been reduced to less than nine quarts per head per annum, and, as a result, drunkenness and crime have very greatly decreased. According to a law passed in 1875 it is provided that the authorities of a District, a territory somewhat larger than our Counties in the United States, may, by a majority, refuse to grant any license for the retail of spirits within their District, or they may grant a monopoly of the spirit trade to a company, which is bound to pay the whole of its profits to the municipality, after deducting all expenses and five per cent interest on the capital invested. In many country districts no licenses are granted, and, as a result, drunkenness is almost unknown and poverty, crime, and disease have greatly diminished. In the larger cities, however, the sale of spirits cannot be wholly suppressed, and the company plan has been adopted.

In Gottenborg, a company of temperance men own the entire right to sell spirits. They have opened a limited number of shops for the sale of pure and unadulterated liquors. The managers receive a stipulated salary and have no interest whatever in the sale of intoxicants. If they carry out the intentions of the company they sell as little as possible. The company receives five per cent interest on the money invested, and hands over the profits to the city authorities. They have no incentive, from a money stand-point, to labor for large sales. On the contrary, their efforts are in the direction of selling as little as possible. The shops are closed at night, on all holidays and on Sunday. The same system has been introduced in the city of Stockholm, and the statistics show a considerable falling off in drunkenness and crime.

The Gottenborg Licensing System has been the subject of a great deal of controversy, into which we do not propose to enter. But this we have to say: We are strongly in favor of any lawful plan that will reduce and finally wipe out the use of all intoxicants. The system that has resulted in reducing the consumption of spirits more than two-thirds should commend itself to all earnest temperance men, unless we adopt the policy of the starving man, who, because he could not get a whole loaf, refused the half. If we could introduce a system into America that would reduce the amount, annually spent for strong drink, from six hundred to less than two hundred million dollars annually, what a wonderful revolution would be effected. It is to be observed that drug-store and back-door saloons are unknown to Gottenborg, that men addicted to drunkenness cannot purchase intoxicating liquors and that the American saloon does not exist here.

White Fog.

In the great fjords of Norway we sometimes found the most beautiful scenery obscured by the white fog of the Arctic Ocean. At times it became so dense that the captain of our ship thought it not safe to run the steamer and we were compelled to lay by until the fog lifted. The sun shone brightly upon the thick bank of fog which spread itself upon the face of the water and hid from us the beautiful scenery along the shore. The scenery was there, and we were there to see it. We had bright sunlight and good eyes and the conditions were all favorable to our seeing, with the single exception that the fog was in the way. We learned that all the conditions for seeing must be favorable. So, too, we thought, are the beauties of God's Word often obscured by the fog of error. Tolstoi says it would be a great blessing to humanity if all the commentaries, with their erroneous teachings, could be swept out of existence, and we are half inclined to the same opinion. The beauties are in the Word but error's fog is in the way. The Psalmist once expressed a desire that his eyes might be opened that he might see the beauties in God's laws. The conditions for seeing must all be favorable. Thousands of people look at the Word of God through the fog of error, and although they may be honest they never see all its beauties. From childhood they have been taught that it is unnecessary to obey all of the Master's laws, and this error clings to them through life. What a grand thing it would be if the fog of error could be swept away, even as the white fog of the Arctic Sea is lifted, and the beauty of God's Word seen in the bright light of truth.

Moving Upward.

On our trip across the Atlantic we formed the acquaintance of a very pleasant gentleman from Jefferson City Mo., who, with his son and daughter, were to spend some time in Europe. We spent considerable time together and have some very pleasant recollections of these friends made on our ocean voyage. On one occasion, in speaking of the high spiritual and intellectual development of our being, our friend said, "I have always told my boys as they grew to manhood to MOVE OUT OF THE BACK PART OF THEIR HEADS." This forcible expression found a place in our note-book and we recommend it to the careful consideration of our readers. It means that we shall get above the animal into the spiritual and intellectual part of our being. The animal passions and instincts must be overcome and we must get above them, or they will get above us. We would that even among Christians there could be a general moving out of the back of the head, moving from the lower to the higher spiritual life, becoming more and more like Christ, our Great Head. What an increase of true vital piety, of holy living, of consecrated lives, of true, spiritual enjoyment would result from an upward movement of this kind. Come, brethren, let us move upward; no danger of becoming too much like Jesus.

Pulling Together.

A great, unwieldly freight-boat, laden with several hundred barrels of fish, is to be brought from the ware-house to the side of our steamer. How? Not by a steam tug, for they have none at the small fishing villages along the coast of Norway. Six men enter a small row-boat, which is connected with the heavy-laden lighter by means of a strong line. The men begin to pull steadily and all together on their oars. At first we could not see the great hulk move, but the men pulled and worked as one man works. Slowly, but surely, the great burden was moved, and as the little boat, with its six steady oarsmen drawing its heavy burden, came near to the ship, we heard, at every stroke of the oars, a low voice of command from the leader. His word was law. The wills of the six men were as the will of one man. There was no schism, no halting; all pulled together. If one had refused to obey the word of command, confusion would have resulted and the object sought could not have been accomplished. The loss of the one man's strength would not have been the only hindrance, his oars would have thrown the others into confusion. We saw in this a beautiful illustration of the power there is in union and of united effort. If all the members of our church would but sink their wills into the will of Christ and all pull together, what a great burden of souls might be brought on board the good old ship of Zion. Then we would hear no talk of schism, no talk of other church homes, no talk of church troubles, no work for committees, but only strong, steady pulling and all pulling together. Perhaps it is too much to hope for as long as we have flesh and blood to contend with, but we would just like to see every member of the church pulling together as we saw the six strong-armed oarsmen pulling for the ship on the coast of Norway. We would feel like saying with one of old, "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace; for mine eyes have seen thy salvation."

Just now there is much excitement in Europe over the grain supply for the coming year. A famine in Russia is imminent, and already the papers here contain lengthy accounts of the starving peasants in the Czar's dominions. An imperial proclamation forbids the exportation of rye and rye flour from Russia and commands that trains carrying supplies to the needy districts shall have precedence over all passenger trains. As Germany and Scandinavia depend largely upon Russia for rye flour, the situation is not a pleasant one for these countries. Speculation runs riot and a few days ago rye was a few cents higher than wheat. Much rain here has injured the rye in the shock. We found much that had sprouted badly and was nearly worthless, and the rain and damp weather continues. The United States must feed Europe for the coming year.

From the reports it seems that all over the country at home immense harvests have been gathered and that an abundant supply of wheat, corn and oats will be available for shipment to Europe at such prices as will bring a handsome profit to our American farmers who have been working for some years with but little income for their labor. Prosperity is always desired and we should be thankful to God for the rich blessings he is giving to our nation. We cannot, however, get rid of the feeling that all this is to come with heaviest force on the toiling millions of poor laborers in Europe. It means a year of want and of pinching poverty to them. The common loaf of rye bread which sold for ten ore, about three cents, when we were here before, is now sold for twenty. The price having just been doubled, and as wages do not rise, people must eat less. Who can think of these hungry people and not feel sad?

And how will the increased prosperity, with which God has blessed our native land, be received? For what purpose will the increase be used? The increase in value over the crop of last year is estimated at two hundred million dollars. Will our nation forget God as prosperity comes and wealth is poured into her lap? One per cent of the increase given to the Lord will amount to two million dollars. What will you do, dear brethren, with the great increase with which God has blessed you? Will you not consecrate a part of it to the Lord? Will you remember the poor? Will you remember the missionary and tract work of the church? If so, then you will have done well; if not, the Lord will not hold you blameless.

From Gottenborg we cross over the Categat to Frederickshaven. This narrow sound, some sixty miles wide, separates Sweden from Denmark, and is a continuation of the Skagerak, of ominous reputation. We had a stormy passage, although it only lasted six hours, but in that time we had the roughest sea voyage in our experience, and we are ready to advise any of our readers, who may travel in this country, to give the Categat a wide berth. It is a rough and treacherous sea and many a good ship has gone to pieces on its rocky shores.

At Frederickshaven we receive our first letters and papers from home. Six weeks without any news has seemed a long time but now we have some twenty-five letters, four issues of the MESSENGER and several copies of the New York Tribune, and a day is spent in reading and answering letters and in scanning the MESSENGER. The paper, it seems to us, was never so interesting. We have read it over carefully, and, being so far away from the office, are better prepared to look at it from a critical stand-point. We are of the opinion that the MESSENGER is improving and that it is in all respects a first-class religious journal. Some recent contributions and editorials are exceedingly good. We especially recommend to our readers a careful study of what has been given on the subject of church government. The vital principles have been brought out and they should not only be read but should have a careful study.

We are now holding meetings in Denmark and will continue the work here and in Sweden for some weeks. We feel that the nature of the work here is of such a character that we would like to give several years to it, but our present plans prevent us from doing this. In our next letter we shall say something about our meetings and the mission work in Scandinavia.

CORRESPONDENCE.

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches."

☞Church News solicited for this Department. If you have had a good meeting, send a report of it, so that others may rejoice with you. In writing give name of church, County and State. Be brief. Notes of Travel should be as short as possible. Land Advertisements are not solicited for this Department. We have an advertising page, and, if necessary, will issue supplements.

From the Chippewa Creek Church, Mich.

Our love-feast, which was held sixty miles from the nearest church, was an enjoyable one. There were eighteen members from other congregations with us, among them the following ministers, Levi Dague, E. Bosserman, D. Chambers, and David Baker. These brethren furnished us with that spiritual food which cometh down from above. We feel that the Spirit of God was with us in our meetings. A number expressed themselves as being almost ready to unite with us. May the Lord help them, that they may not put off the wooings of the Spirit until it is too late! We expect to hold a series of meetings sometime this fall or winter. We also held a choice for a deacon. The lot fell on Bro. Samuel Holsworth.

From the Round Mountain Church, Ark.

We have received donations from several churches for the purpose of helping us to finish our meeting-house. We certainly feel very thankful for this, as it will enable us, by a little more help, to secure lumber enough to complete the interior work of the building.

The donations are as follows: From the English Prairie church, Ind., and friends of the church, $9.25; from the Thornapple church, Mich., $9.25; from the Woodland church, Mich., $7.75.

If there are any others that feel to give us anything for our house, it will be thankfully received, as the members here are poor. The church house is not finished. It is a good, substantial building, as far as it is done. It has been built for some years, but was not finished, on account of inability of the members. We would like to have it finished so as to hold meetings in it during the winter.

We have lately reclaimed one who had left the church, and now another one wishes to be restored to fellowship. We also gave certificates to two members who moved to Texas.

Wyman, Ark., Sept. 23.

From Port Alleghany, Pa.

Friday, Sept. 25, Bro. J. M. Mohler, of Lewistown, Pa., came to this place to hold a few meetings. It being fair week, everybody seemed to have "fair" upon their minds. So Bro. Mohler spent his time in distributing tracts during Friday afternoon and Saturday, also becoming acquainted with the people. Sunday forenoon and evening Bro. Mohler preached two excellent sermons in the Baptist church. The audience though not large, was appreciative. While there were no visible results, it is our prayer that the good seed sown may bring forth fruit to the honor and glory of God. May it be as bread cast upon the waters, to be gathered not many days hence. We enjoyed the visit of Bro. Mohler very much, and would be glad to have any of the brethren, coming this way, to stop with us.

I have lived here now for the past seven years, and during these long years have had no church associations. The nearest church of the Brethren, of which I have any knowledge, is nearly seventy-five miles distant, hence my isolation is complete. During this time I have made several visits to the southern part of the State and thus enjoyed a few meetings with Brethren on these special occasions. During one of these visits, I had the pleasure of a special trip to Vancleves-ville, W. Va, and there enjoyed my first and only Communion Meeting. These special occasions which I have enjoyed, are, as it were, oases in my Christian journey. Though few, they are greatly enjoyed.

I attended the Annual Meeeting, held at Hagerstown, Maryland, last June, and the only regret that I had was, that it did not last longer. It seemed to have so much attraction that I was loath to leave when it was over. I sometimes think that, perhaps, only the isolated feel this particular appreciation. J. M. Keeny.

From Osceola, Missouri.

Bro. J. S. Mohler, of Morrill, Kansas, came to us on the evening of Sept. 9, and preached three soul-cheering sermons. We were made to rejoice to see three souls come out on the Lord's side. One of the three was a girl only ten years of age.

Our love-feast occurred Sept. 12 and 13. It was a pleasant occasion to all. Bro. Mohler preached his last discourse on the night of Sept. 13, to an attentive audience. The outlook for a great amount of good to be done here, in converting souls to God, and building up a large church of the Brethren, is excellent, if the proper steps are taken. Ministers who may chance to pass this way, will please give us a call. We will try to make them feel at home while with us.

Sept. 20, 1891.

From Loraine, Ill.

Since my last report I have been out nearly all my time, doing what I can for the Master.

According to previous arrangements, I left my family Sept. 3, to assist in a council and Communion meeting at the Brethren's meeting-house in Steffenville, Mo. The council being appointed for special work, and that special work not being in readiness, little or no work was done. The Communion was not as well represented as was desired, yet we felt that the Lord was with us and strengthened us.

As this was the first Communion ever held in the Brethren's house at this place, there was a very large attendance, and many anxious listeners to the Word, as presented by the Brethren.

From there we, in company with Eld. Christian Lapp, went to his home, about twenty-five miles west, to anoint sister Lapp, who has been declining in health for several months. She had been to Kansas for some time previous, visiting her sons, hoping by that trip to regain her health. On her return, however, she found that disease was still preying upon her already reduced body. Then she felt to resign herself to the will of the Lord, and was thus anointed in his name.

Having arrived late on Sunday evening at their house, it was thought best to wait until the next day. In the meantime some of the neighbors were notified of our presence, and invited to meet at the house of the afflicted one, next day at 8 P. M.

At the appointed hour about twenty-five of the Mennonite friends and other neighbors assembled in the room, where the sick sister was seated in a comfortable chair, her countenance glowing with love and gratitude, that she could now look back over a well-spent life, and could say, in a spirit of resignation; "Thy will be done." She was glad that she could enjoy that glorious unction, and re-invigorate her soul with that blessed hope to the full assurance of a full pardon of all her sins. After reading a few appropriate passages from the Sacred Word, and a few remarks suited to the occasion, we applied the oil in the name of the Lord, after which we sang a few soul-cheering songs. Never did we engage in a more solemn exercise, and never did we feel that the Lord was so near, and that every soul present so vividly felt the pressure of the truthfulness of the sayings of Jesus, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

He remained a few days and preached for the Brethren at that place, but, owing to a camp-meeting that was being held in the immediate neighborhood, we thought it best to discontinue our meetings until we could command a more extensive hearing.

From there we went to Mendon, Chariton Co., Mo., where we preached a few sermons in the Methodist church, and visited some friends. Many who heard us there, said, "Come again. We want to hear more of your Dunkard doctrine."

From there we returned home, to attend our love-feast, which will be held this evening, Sept. 26, after which we expect to continue some meetings here.

In a few days I expect to start on my way to the District Meeting of Southern Illinois, and will likely stop with the Brethren in the Kaskaskia church, Fayette County. After District Meeting I shall go to Madison, Monroe Co., Mo., to hold a series of meetings at that place. Nov. 16 I have promised Bro. C. Lapp to meet him at Hope, Clark Co., Mo., to open up a new field in the mission work, there to remain two weeks. Thence I expect to go to Steffenville, Mo., to assist in council, Nov. 28. Thence to Leonard, Shelby County, to work for the cause of my Master.

Thus my many correspondents may see that my line of work is mapped out until near the Holidays. After that time I am ready to fill other calls. Correspondents may address me at my home, as all matters of importance will be forwarded to me by my family. H. W. Strickler.

Sept. 26, '91.

From Fort Scott, Kans.

The series of meetings, as agreed on, commenced at the Paint Creek church, Kans., Sept. 12. Elders John H. Neher and S. Click were present at the beginning, but elders Jacob Appleman, Samuel Edgecomb and Jesse Studebaker came afterwards. All held forth the Word with power and spirit, so that both saint and sinner received their due portion. The attendance was large, and close attention was paid. Sept. 19, two dear souls were immersed. On the evening of Sept. 19, the love-feast was held. The meetings closed on the evening of the 20th, with a good interest.

The series of meetings at Ft. Scott began on the evening of Sept. 23, at the United Brethren church, and was conducted by brethren J. Appleman, Samuel Edgecomb and John H. Neher. The attendance was good each evening, and the audience was well entertained by the powerful sermons preached by the brethren. The ministerial force was later on augmented by brethren S. Click and Geo. E. Wise.

On Saturday, Sept. 26, the meetings commenced in my lumber-shed, and the organization of the members of the eastern part of the County, into a separate church, was completed. It will be known as the Fort Scott, Kans., church. There was no election held for minister, but Eld. John H. Neher, of Crawford County, Kans., was chosen as our elder. The writer was elected to the office of deacon. Twenty-six members enrolled in this arm of the church when we organized, and one dear brother was baptized just before the love-feast, Sept. 26. He belongs to the Nevada, Mo., church. One young sister came out on the Lord's side on Sunday, Sept. 27, and was also baptized. This makes twenty-seven members for our church here, and the prospects are good for several more.

We had a glorious feast on the evening of Sept. 26. The members were all built up and sinners edified. The shed was well filled, but the best of order prevailed. Many had never seen our members commune previous to that occasion.

We expect to hold another series of meetings, commencing about Dec. 28, and desire ministerial help. We also extend a cordial invitation to all members, passing through our place, to stop with us when convenient, and especially do we request the ministering brethren to so arrange their matters, as to preach for us as often as possible. We have our regular appointments on the first Sunday of each month, and our prayer-meeting and Bible class the second, third, fourth and fifth Sundays. All appointments are at 11 A. M., at the home of the undersigned. We are thus ready, on any Sunday, to have preaching.

Brethren, pray for us, that our little band, here in Ft. Scott, will prove faithful, and that we may show, by our walk, that we are working for the Master. Do not only pray for us, but come and help us build up the cause, here in the City.

Any one wishing to stop with us will, by dropping me a card, be met at the train.

ACCORDING to previous arrangements Bro. I. J. Rosenberger, from Covington, Ohio, began a series of meetings near Burnett, on Friday evening, Sept. 18. Bro. Rosenberger is an able expounder of the Truth, and did not shun to declare the whole counsel of God. As the people here wished to know more of the doctrine, as preached by our Brethren, Bro. Rosenberger preached mostly on the commandments, and granted the privilege to any who wished, to ask questions.

I never heard such plain, logical preaching. His illustrations were such that any child could understand clearly. As the truth began to dawn upon the people, they began to tremble, when they saw their former church theories crumble before the power of Gospel Truth. In the daytime he visited among the people, talked to them about the welfare of their souls, read the Bible with them, prayed with them, and urged them to obey all the commands of the Bible. Eld. N. A. McConnell, of the Christian church, who is well known by reputation to many of our readers, attended services one evening. He holds meetings at the same place occasionally.

When Bro. Rosenberger first began to preach here, the people were somewhat offended at such plain preaching, and called his Bible, "The Dunkard Bible." He quoted so much Scripture, that they thought it was not in their Bibles, but upon investigation they were found to be alike, and the longer they attended the meetings, the more were they convinced that we should not make the worship of God simply a matter of taste.

Bro. R. not only told the sinner what to do to inherit eternal life, but he told all those who had put on Christ how to live. Our brother distributed tracts and MESSENGERS, and did all he could to spread the Gospel.

On Tuesday evening, Sept. 29, Bro. Rosenberger preached his last sermon for us, after which he bade us farewell. There were no additions, but the seed must be sown, ere we can reap a harvest.

May it not be said by any who attended these meetings night after night, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended and my soul is not saved."

From this place our brother went to preach in our church-house near Robins. He continued meetings there until Saturday, Oct. 3, the day appointed for our feast. We were very sorry the weather was so inclement, but nevertheless we had a good meeting. We were gladdened by the presence of six ministers from adjoining congregations. In the evening we surrounded the tables of the Lord, and partook of the broken emblems once more. It was a very quiet, solemn meeting, there being but few outsiders present. Bro. I. J. Rosenberger officiated. The adjoining churches were well represented by young members. If those, outside the pales of the church, could only realize the enjoyment young people have in the church, they surely would not remain in the cold world, seeking for pleasures which are not lasting.

On Sunday, at 10: 30 A. M., Bro. I. J. Rosenberger again admonished us, and at 2: 30 we met for children's meeting. Oh, how glad we are that the children are not forgotten! "Bring a child up in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

After children's meeting we again said the sad farewell, and went our way, feeling it was good for us to be there. When shall we all meet again?

THE members of the above congregation held their Communion meeting Sept. 17. There was a large attendance of members, and as all could not be seated in the audience room, about fifty brethren engaged in feet-washing, and partook of the Lord's Supper in the basement, and then came up-stairs and took the Communion with the others. The ministering brethren with us were D. C. Campbell, Isaac Neff, Elias Smeltzer, R. R. Goshorn and G. L. Studebaker, besides our home ministers. We were fed richly on the good things of God, and hope that our hearts were as good ground, prepared to receive the good seed. If we would all heed the good admonitions and put them to practice, a great deal of good would be done. Meetings were held over Sunday, when two souls united with the church by baptism.

Bro. G. L. Studebaker went to Bethany, the new church in Boone County, to hold a series of meetings. May the Lord bless his labors!

OUR council, preparatory to our love-feast, occurred Sept. 5. The visiting brethren reported the members to be at peace among themselves, and also with those outside. In my estimation, these visits are a very important factor in our church work, as thereby the official body gets an insight into the standing and disposition of the members that they would not get otherwise.

Our love-feast was truly a feast to the soul, long to be remembered. The weather was delightful, and the attendance large. We think more members participated than at any feast held here before. The ministers from abroad were: John Gable, Geo. Hopwood, I. Barnhizer, H. R. Taylor, John Diehl, A. Sanger, and Wm. Hipes. The latter was, at the time, holding a series of meetings here.

On Sunday morning after our feast we had a children's meeting, at which time brethren Wm. Hipes and H. R. Taylor addressed the children in an impressive manner.

Bro. Hipes continued to wield the sword with zeal and faithfulness night after night, until saints rejoiced and sinners trembled, and three souls were received into the kingdom. A few nights later two dear souls asked for admittance, and when we met in the morning, to perform the sacred rite, two more aged souls came forward, and were also buried with Christ in baptism.

Thus the meetings continued until Sept. 29. Nine souls, in all, were received by baptism. The membership was much encouraged and built up. Bro. William and sister Hipes are faithful workers, and believe in a continued effort of longer duration than one week or two. From here Bro. Hipes goes to the Deep River congregation, after which he expects to return and labor for us at the church in North English. PETER BROWER.

WE, as a congregation, are still trying to do some good, though under adverse circumstances sometimes. Our ministers preach at five different church-houses in our District, so there is no want on that account. We determined, sometime last spring, to hold a series of meetings at the Pike church, and secured the services of Eld. Geo. Rairigh, of Indiana Co., Pa., to do the preaching. On the evening of May 16, when Bro. Rairigh arrived late in the evening, he found a fair congregation of attentive listeners. He continued the meeting until May 29. Thirteen united with the church during these meetings.

On the evening of Sept. 13, Eld. Silas Hoover commenced a series of meetings in the Northern part of the District, in, what is known as, Reiman's church-house, and continued till the evening of Sept. 20. As a result of this meeting four were baptized and three restored. Two of this number (husband and wife) had identified themselves with the so-called Progressive faction for a number of years, but finally returned to the church.

Our quarterly council was held Sept. 26, at which time two more made application for church membership and were baptized. Thus in four months we received nineteen by baptism, and restored four. J. J. BLAUCH.

To the Churches Throughout the Southern District of Iowa.

WE, your Home Mission Board, have some funds in the treasury that should be used for the work for which they were intended. If any of the brethren or sisters, throughout the District, desire some evangelistic work, or know of places where it is needed, they will please correspond with the Board, as we would like to do some active work this winter, that souls may be saved, and God glorified. Those who have contributed to the cause should not become weary in well-doing. In due time you shall reap if you faint not. Let us give liberally as God has prospered us!

Our Visit West.

SEPT. 14, we left home by the request of the Mission Board of South-western Kansas and Colorado, to meet Bro. D. M. Mohler at Progress, Baca Co, Colo, who went there ten days previous, to do some church work which required assistance. After holding some meetings at night and visiting the members in day-time, we succeeded in making arrangements to hold a Communion with the little church, composed of about twelve members. One was baptized; all seemed to be lively stones in the spiritual house. They have a good country and good crops, they having had sufficient rainfall. The acreage of crops is not very large, this being a new country. Some were discouraged by former droughts and hence did not sow as much as they otherwise would have done. We hope that by the care and ministerial aid of Bro. Z. Henricks, of Grant County, Kans, they will succeed in doing a good work.

Sept. 21 I left Bro. Mohler and turned homeward, in order to meet my engagement with the members at Walnut Valley, Barton Co., Kans., where we enjoyed a council and love-feast, at which time and place Bro. M. Keller was ordained to the eldership and Bro. I. Clapper forwarded to the second degree of the ministry.

WE have been having much rain through the last fifteen days of September and the two first days of this month, which is something very unusual here, as September always has been a very dry month. We have never seen such a good time to start our winter gardens.

We had our regular quarterly council Oct. 1. It was a very pleasant one indeed. The members all enjoyed the meeting, and a general good feeling prevailed. Bro. Neher spent some time in admonishing the members to adhere more strictly, and be more conformed to the order of our blessed Fraternity. This admonition was well founded and well said, and, I am sure, did us all much good.

I think very much of Bro. Quinter's book. It should be in every family in the Brotherhood. We held a collection at our council and raised $3.05, which we sent to Bro. Dove, to help purchase a horse for Bro. Geo. A. Branscom, of White Oak Hall, N. C. J. I. MILLER.

Macoupin Creek Notes.

OUR meetings, conducted by Bro. C. S. Holsinger, closed last night. They were the means of building up the members of the church as well as those outside. Nine precious souls made the good confession and were baptized. Five of them, like the jailer, were baptized the self-same hour of the night while the beautiful moon was shining so brightly.

We realize that our responsibilities are enlarging, to care for those tender lambs, and we feel that we need the prayers of all, to keep near our Blessed Savior. Our brother goes from here to Laforge, Mo.

Sept. 12 the writer goes to the District Meeting of Southern Illinois, and from there to the Wakendah church, Ray Co., Mo., to assist in holding a series of meetings. He will possibly remain with them three weeks, and then return home.

I do not expect to work much in the mission field this fall and winter. Our home church requires much of my labor. MICHAEL FLORY.

Girard, Ill., Oct. 1, '91.

From Chesterville, Ill.

WE held an interesting series of meetings at Chesterville, Ill., a distance of twenty miles or more from any organization of the Brethren. I visited this place nearly four years ago, and preached for two weeks, during which time four united with the church. Bro. John Metzger visited them occasionally and baptized two more. Since then, the Brethren at La Place have given them regular meetings once a month and the Mission Board of Southern Illinois has also assisted in holding meetings with them.

I commenced meetings there Sept. 20, and continued for two weeks. The attendance was good, and much interest was manifest. Five united with the church by the holy ordinance of baptism. These were all heads of families, and had been identified with other churches for a number of years. Many more are of the same mind, but did not act at this time. There was some opposition by a few who tried to have the house closed against us, but failed to succeed, the people's sentiment being too strong in favor of continuing the meetings. The Southern District of Illinois should consider this point, and assist these members in building a church-house. We are well convinced that, had the Brethren a church-house here, something might be done for the Lord.

I am, at this writing, at Salem, Ill., where I will remain until Oct. 12. Then I go to Harrison County, Ind., to hold a series of meetings, and from there to Hodgensville, Ky. If the Lord will, I expect to return to the Monticello church, our home, by Nov. 6. A. S. CULP.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

One Added to the Fold.—Bro. Jacob Witmore, of Centre View, Mo., commenced a series of meetings in the Olive Branch meeting-house Sept. 6, and continued the meetings until the evening of the 20th. One was added to our number by baptism. Bro. Witmore's discourses were well suited to our spiritual wants. Long will we remember his love and kindness while among us.—Hannah R. Thomas, Boone, Iowa.

Three Souls for the Lord.—The Upper Stillwater church had a pleasant council-meeting Sept. 11. Thanks to God, there were some made willing to turn in with the offers of mercy. We baptized three since the council. Others say they will come soon.—S. D. Royer, Bradford, Ohio, Sept. 25.

Three Baptized.—Sept. 6, Bro. Henry Brubaker came to the Live Oak church, Texas, to hold a few meetings. All seemed to appreciate his efforts. Bro. J. R. Gish and wife, were also with us. Bro. Gish gave good advice to us all. He is plain in his preaching, and does not shun the Truth. There were three baptized during the progress of the meetings. At our very enjoyable love-feast, about twenty members were present, a part of them from other places. Any ministers, passing this way, are invited to stop with us.—Lizzie M. Snider, Weatherford, Texas, Oct. 6.

Interesting Meetings.—According to a previous arrangement, Bro. Jasper Barnthouse came to our place and began a meeting Sept 12, and continued with increasing interest and attendance until Sept. 20. One was received by baptism, and others are deeply affected. On Saturday evening, Sept. 26, Bro. Noah Pletcher's house took fire and was consumed with nearly all its contents. Bro. Pletcher is a cripple and at times cannot walk, so he can do but little work. At our church, yesterday, $14.25 was collected for him. He has four small children.—G. W. Lowry, Scullton, Pa., Oct. 5.

A Glorious Feast.—Sept. 18, the members of the Pleasant Valley church, Darke Co., Ohio, held their love-feast, at which time over two hundred members communed. Quite a number of ministers from adjoining churches were with us, and labored faithfully for the cause of Christ. Eld. Jacob Garber remained after the feast and preached three sermons for us, which were much enjoyed by all. One was baptized on Sunday before the feast, causing much rejoicing among the saints. Our Sunday-schools are flourishing, and when I behold the anxious desire to come up to the house of the Lord, it seems to me that many precious souls will be gained for the Lord.—Silas Gilbert.

Semi-Annual Council.—The Ridgley church, Md., met in semi-annual council on Saturday, Sept. 19. We had expected Eld. S. R. Zug to be with us, but on account of ill-health he was unable to do so. We decided to hold our lovefeast Nov. 10, beginning at 2 P. M. At this meeting one more was added to our number by letter. It was decided to close our Sunday-school, ere long, for the winter. Much to our regret it seems necessary to do so, on account of our scattered membership. We have had a very fair Sunday-school this summer, and trust that all will see the benefits derived therefrom, and join in, with might and main, in the future. We purpose having a Bible class this winter.—L. R. Brumbaugh, Denton, Md., Oct. 1.

Four Baptized. — The members of the White church, Montgomery Co., Ind., met in council Oct. 7. Only one complaint was brought in, otherwise all were found to be in love and union with one another. We hope that the good Spirit of God may so influence our members that they will always be in union with each other and with God. There have been four baptized since our last report. May they prove faithful and become a light that will lead others to the Great Light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world. We expect Bro. Galen B. Royer, of Mt. Morris, to commence a series of meetings Oct. 10, and continue over our Communion which is to occur Oct. 15. May God add his blessings to the work!—Frank Johnson, Kirkpatrick, Ind., Oct. 7.

Two Baptized.—We have had a pleasant visit from Bro. John M. Mohler, who came to us Sept. 21, and remained till the morning of Sept. 25. He preached four sermons, baptized two, and stirred up quite an interest among the people, who, as a rule, are unacquainted with our faith and practice. I think good could be done here, if we were so situated as to have more preaching. This is the first time that a brother has ever preached in Renovo.—B. Jane Long, Renovo, Clinton Co., Pa.

Pleasant Council.—We met in council on Saturday, Sept. 26, our annual visit having been previously made. According to the report of the brethren who made the visit, we anticipate a Communion indeed. Nothing was brought before the meeting of a personal nature, but a united sentiment, to labor for purity of heart, seemed to prevail. May the Lord help us all! Preparations were made for our feast, after which we again gathered at the river, and a dear sister was baptized.—J. A. Root, Ozawkie, Kans.

Minister Elected.—Sept. 12 occurred the Communion in the Eden Valley church, which was all that could be expected. Several of the Walnut Valley brethren were here and contributed their much-needed help. The ministerial force was the smallest I ever saw at night. Bro. Keller could not remain, for which we were sorry. Brother and sister John Hollinger and daughter were also here. Bro. John and I were the only ministers. At night we held an election. Bro. Jonas Herchler was chosen to the ministry. He is much needed and we believe will do good service. He is young, and has much in his favor to help him to be successful.—Jasper N. Perry, Seward, Kans., Oct. 1.

STOUFFER.—In the Lower Cumberland church, Pa., Sept. 22, 1891, Bro. John Andrew Stouffer, aged 44 years, 7 months and 27 days.

Deceased was a faithful member of the church. He leaves a wife, one daughter and two sons to mourn their loss. One of the sons, whose age is about fifteen years, is an object of pity. He is entirely helpless, unable to speak, and has no more power of mind than an infant. He has been in this condition for several years and there appears to be no perceptible improvement. A few days before Bro. Stouffer's death he said to me, "Why is it that I am taken away and my poor boy is left here." Yes, why is it? The Lord knows what is best, and it is for us to submit meekly to his will.

Bro. Stouffer called for the elders of the church and was anointed with oil according to the instruction in James 5: 14. The bereft companion has our sympathy and prayers, that the Lord may sustain her in her sorrow.

Harvey Estes and in 1890, in company with her husband, removed to Whitman County, Washington, where she died. Sept. 22 she was anointed in the name of the Lord. When asked if she was ready to die, she said she had done all she knew to do. She seemed perfectly satisfied to die. She leaves an affectionate husband, two small children, mother, father, and four sisters to mourn their loss, yet they mourn not as those without hope. Funeral services by Eld. Sidney Hodgden from Amos 4: 12.

Emma Brown.

MELLINGER.—In the Mahoning church, Columbiana Co, Ohio, sister Rebecca Mellinger, wife of Bro. Samuel Mellinger, aged 45 years, 8 months and 15 days.

The deceased was an earnest and faithful worker in the Master's cause. Death came unexpectedly, which renders the home lonely, but we hope the bereft brother and children will be consoled with the reflection that she, whom they loved, is now at home with Christ which is far better. A large number of friends and neighbors attended the funeral. She was laid to rest in the Zion Hill cemetery in the spot selected by herself during her life-time. Services by the writer, assisted by Eld. J. H. Kurtz. John F. Kahler.

STEWART.—In the Urbana church, Ill., Sept. 13, 1891, sister Sarah Ann Stewart, aged 65 years, 2 months and 20 days.

Deceased was called away very suddenly. On the day of her death she arose feeling quite as well as usual, and was very cheerful. Between 8 and 9 o'clock, after having conversed awhile with her son, she arose and went to the door, it is thought to get more air, as she was subject to smothering spells. She suddenly fell in the door and when her friends laid her on a lounge, she only gasped a time or two and was gone. Funeral services by Bro. A. J. Bowers from 2 Tim. 4: 6. Sister Stewart was left a widow early in life with five little children to provide for. She did her part well. Fifteen years ago she united with the Brethren church and has ever since been a consistent member. She will be greatly missed in her neighborhood, as she was ever ready to lend a helping-hand in sickness, or wherever needed.

Mattie A. Lear.

STEWART.—In the Garrison church, Benton Co, Iowa, Sept. 23, 1891, sister Minnie Catharine Stewart, daughter of Eliza and Mary Stewart, aged 17 years, 3 months and 7 days.

She leaves father, mother, four brothers and four sisters to mourn their loss, but they can feel that she is safely resting in the blessed care of Jesus. Funeral services conducted by Bro. Garner from Rev. 14: 13, to many sympathizing friends. Lizzie Johnson.

THORNTON.—At Fredric, Iowa, Sept. 2, 1891, of dropsy, sister Amy Thornton, aged 73 years, 6 months and 4 days.

Sister Amy, daughter of Isaac and Nancy Wagenar, was born in Reliford County, North Carolina, in 1818. In her eleventh year her parents moved to Shelby County, Mo., where, in her eighteenth year, she was united in marriage to Chambers Webb. There were born to them ten children. In 1853 the family moved to Franklin County, Iowa, where she was left a widow with six children. She then moved to Chariton County, Mo, where she was united in marriage to George Thornton in 1859. To them were born two children. In 1861 they moved to Monroe County, Iowa, where she lived until the time of her death.

Previous to her departure she called for the elders and was anointed, after which she fell asleep in Jesus, with strong hopes in her Savior. She said to her husband, "Tell the children not to weep for me, but to follow in my footsteps." The funeral services took place at our meeting-house in the presence of a large number of brethren, children and friends and were conducted by the home ministry.

Hiram Berkman.

WIEDEMAN.—In the Yellow River congregation, Marshall Co., Ind , Sept. 11, 1891, sister Anna Wiedeman, aged 59 years, 8 months and 7 days.

She was born in Logan County, Ohio, and was married to Charley Wiedeman Aug. 10, 1862. In 1866 Bro. Wiedeman moved with his family to Marshall County, Indiana, where they have resided ever since. Sister Anna leaves a bereaved husband, two sons and an invalid daughter to mourn their loss.

The daughter has been afflicted with fits since her childhood and needed the care of a mother very much. To the bereaved family it seems as though any one else could have been taken better than mother, but the Lord's will be done. Funeral services by J. H. Sellers from Rev. 14: 13 Eliza Hale.

BRUMBAUGH.—In the Yellow River congregation, Ind , Sept. 16, 1891, sister Elizabeth Brumbaugh, aged 87 years, 4 months and 15 days.

Deceased was born in Somerset County, Pa., in 1804. The Lord blessed her with good health and strength and a strong mind through life. In the spring of 1890 she united with the church and became very anxious to do all she could for the Master. She had the privilege of communing at three feasts. To one she went nine miles.

In her sickness she bore her afflictions very patiently and called on the Lord to help her. In compliance with her request she was anointed in the name of the Lord. She has buried two husbands, and has been living with her relatives for about twenty-five years. She leaves many friends to mourn their loss.

Funeral services by Bro. J. H. Sellers from 2 Cor. 5: 1. Eliza Hale.

LIFE AND SERMONS

—: OF :—

ELD. JAMES QUINTER.

This is a neatly-printed and well-bound volume of 426 pages, containing a well-written biographical sketch of Eld. James Quinter and forty of his sermons.

The biographical part will be found quite interesting, instructive and impressive. No one can read an account of Bro. Quinter's life without feeling deeply and favorably impressed. The work shows how a poor orphan boy, by hard work, and faithfulness to his religious convictions, rose step by step, until he reached a field of usefulness and honor as broad as the Nation itself. Though dead, his good deeds and the impressive examples in piety, learning and simplicity will follow him for generations to come.

The Sermon Department contains many of his choice sermons, which will prove exceedingly interesting and profitable reading to all, and especially to our ministers and isolated members. We feel that this book will fill a long-felt want in our Brotherhood. Price, post-paid, $1.25.

Gospel Chimes!

BY WM. BEERY.

This little book has been selling more rapidly than the publishers anticipated. The first edition was almost exhausted in the first two months. A second edition is now printed.

Following are a few of the good words received from brethren and other competent judges:

"An Excellent Book for Sunday-schools."

"After having carefully examined "Gospel Chimes" I can pronounce it an excellent book for Sunday-schools, and hope all the schools of the Brethren will adopt the same Our church is conceded to have the best congregational singing of any denomination, and if it is improved, as it can be, by the use of 'Gospel Chimes,' the power for good will be surprising "—GEO. B. HOLSINGER, Teacher of Music, Bridgewater College, Va.

"Fresh and Pleasing Melodies; Thoughtful, Spiritual, and Poetical Words."

"It gives me pleasure to speak in terms of praise of your new book, 'Gospel Chimes.' It contains many fresh and pleasing melodies to which are wedded thoughtful, spiritual and poetical words. I trust it will hold its own in competition with the numerous books now in the market and find a large sale."—T. M. TOWNE, Chicago, Ill., one of America's best writers of Sunday-school music

"Better than Many Similar Publications."

"Copy of your new book received. It contains some very pleasing and useful music, while it is to be commended especially for the selection of hymns. Good Sunday-school hymns are in great demand in Sunday-school work, and in this particular 'Gospel Chimes' is better than many similar publications."—A. J. SHOWALTER, the leading writer and publisher of Sunday-school and church music in the South.

"An Excellent Collection."

"I have carefully examined your late Sunday-school singing book, 'Gospel Chimes' and find it to be an excellent collection for the purpose designed, both in words and music."—S W. STRAUB, Chicago, Ill., the popular Western writer and publisher of Sunday-school music.

Bro. Beery has had a large experience in Sunday-school work, and the book which we offer to the brethren, and the public in general, evinces the exercise of talent as well as good judgment. The religious purity of the hymns contributed by sister Beery adds much to the excellence of the book.

Price per single copy, 30 cts.; per dozen by mail, $3 00; by express, $2.60. Lots of more than a dozen must be sent by express.

THE FOUR PICTURES.

Two on this Side—Two on the Other.

(Concluded from last week.)

Let us look at the picture again. From hunger and disease the condition of Lazarus is growing worse. The dogs having finished eating the leavings of the feast, now come to the gate, and as they see the great sores on the poor man's body, they compassionately lick them, and do we not almost hear the silent prayer as it is breathed from parched lips: "Father, wilt thou not bless even these dogs, seeing that they have compassion on me?" Once more his mind turns to his happy days. He is in his home. Beside him sits his wife with the babe resting on her bosom. All is peace; a new luster fills his eyes; a sweet smile wreathes his face, and the angel of peace comes and lifts the captive soul from its prison of clay. Lazarus is dead, and our second picture ends.

In vain we look for the funeral and the honorable cortege. Only a beggar has died and without the gates the body has been dumped,—anywhere most convenient and out of sight. O, how sad and how great the difference between the rich and the poor! So David thought when he saw the prosperity of the wicked. But when he saw the other picture he was satisfied, and so will we be.

Picture third,—and first on the other side. In our first picture we followed the rich man until "he died and was buried." Then he passed beyond the curtain and the ken of the human. But for a moment this curtain is lifted and a picture of the other side is held up to our view. And there we again see the rich man, but how changed his condition! Not in his magnificent mansion,—not seated with his companions around his heavy-laden table with everything palatable to tempt the appetite and satisfy the taste! O, no, a wonderful change has taken place in the surroundings of this man. As he passed over, suddenly he lifted up his eyes and saw that he was in hell,—a place of terrible torment. All around, every-where, is darkness and misery. Can you see the picture now? We would gladly paint it if we could, but the background is too dark, the outlines too faint. We cannot see it as he feels it but it must be horrible beyond our powers of description. He now has time for thoughts, such as he never entertained before. His mind reverts to the ringing and then unwelcome words of the prophets, as they warned him of the sinful course he was pursuing, of his hardness of heart, and the ultimate of it all. He now thinks of that last feast day and of the beggar that was lying at his gate. He weeps, he gnashes his teeth and says to himself: "Is this a dream,—a nightmare?" That was no unusual thing for him to have after his feasts and nights of revelling. No, not this time, for in this hell of torments he "lifts up his eyes and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom," and here the curtain drops.

Picture fourth, and second on the other side. Again we see Lazarus. This time, however, very different in condition from that in which we saw him before. Now we see him in the Paradise of God, in company with the fathers that long before had passed over and were admitted into the place prepared for them. Here, beside of father Abraham, Lazarus is sitting, leaning his head in his bosom. How changed the condition! The poor beggar on the other side, whose place was by the wayside gate, and whose associates were the poorest of the poor and even dogs were accepted as friends, is now the honored associate of Father Abraham and the good of the past, surrounded with possibilities for enjoyments beyond the power of earth to give. Strange, indeed, but such was the Father's will and so it must be. We now look at the two,—the rich man in a place of torment; the poor man in a heaven of bliss. How gladly the rich man would associate now with the poor beggar that laid at his gate. But no, that cannot be,—the gulf that is impassable lies between, and even the request for a drop of water must be denied. The conditions are now forever changed. In life the rich man had his time of enjoyment and Lazarus his days of sorrow. These conditions were only for this life and soon passed away. The others were for an eternity and will know no change. Both conditions are conditions of choice and the question comes to us: Which will we have now, and which then? Look at these pictures again carefully and decide. So will it be.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

As intimated last week, we are now on a visit among the Eastern churches, being one on a Committee appointed by last District Meeting to visit the Buffalo Valley, the Lost Creek, Lewistown and Spring Run churches for the purpose of ordaining elders and assisting in the election of ministers and deacons. Eld. J. F. Oller was to be with us, but, on account of ill health, could not leave home, so that Eld. Jacob Hollinger was selected as his substitute. Our being three hours late did not, in any way, disappoint in our work, as Bro. Andrew Spanogle, on Friday morning, kindly accompanied us, and although, on our arrival at Middleburg, the hack had left, we succeeded in getting a good team and enjoyed a very pleasant ten-mile ride over a beautiful country, to the home of Bro. Jacob Shively. When we arrived there the family had left for the church-house, but the son very kindly had us conveyed over to the place of meeting, where we arrived in good time for the noon repast. At 1 o'clock there were preaching services, after which we proceeded to the business on hands, which was the election of a minister and the forwarding of one to the eldership. This church is under the eldership of Chas. Royer. But as he is quite old and in ill health, Eld. Howe, of the Lewistown church, was called to assist him. This being inconvenient for Bro. Howe, on account of the distance, etc., it was thought good, on the part of the surrounding elders, to forward one of the home ministers. At the proper time, the voice of the church was taken, which resulted in the election of Bro. David Strickler to the ministry and the forwarding of Bro. John Beaver to the eldership. In the evening a goodly number of members and others assembled, when the ordinances of the Lord's house were attended to and, we believe, greatly appreciated by all the participants.

After the Communion services the installation services were attended to by Eld. Jacob Hollinger and Bro. Beaver was properly installed into his official position. For sufficient cause, Bro. Strickler was not installed at the time, but we hope that, in the near future, he will see his way clear to accept the holy calling whereunto the church has called him, and become an efficient worker for the Master. His services are greatly needed in the church there, and from what we could learn, he has the possibilities of acceptably filling the position.

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

PRAY WITHOUT CEASING.

UNANSWERED yet, the prayer your lips have pleaded,
In agony of heart these many years?
Does faith begin to fail, is hope declining,
And think you all in vain those falling tears?
Say not the Father has not heard your prayer—
You shall have your desire sometime, somewhere.

Unanswered yet? Tho', when you first presented
This one petition at the Father's throne,
It seemed you could not wait the time of asking,
So anxious was your heart to have it done;
If years have passed since then, do not despair,
For God will answer you sometime, somewhere.

Unanswered yet? But you are not unheeded;
The promises of God forever stand;
To him your days and years alike are equal.
Have faith in God! It is your Lord's command—
Hold on to Jacob's angel, and your prayer
Shall bring a blessing down sometime, somewhere.

Unanswered yet? Nay, do not say unanswered—
Perhaps your part is not yet wholly done;
Your work began when first your prayer was uttered.
And God will finish what he has begun;
Keep incense burning at the shrine of prayer,
And glory shall descend sometime, somewhere.

Unanswered yet? Faith cannot be unanswered:
Her feet are firmly planted on the Rock;
Amid the wildest storms she stands undaunted,
Nor quails before the loudest thunder shock;
She knows Omnipotence has heard her prayer,
And cries, It shall be done sometime, somewhere.

A SUBLIME MISSION.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

TO A STEP-MOTHER,

Beloved Sister:—

YOUR recent entrance into the conjugal relation where a large family, needing constant maternal solicitude and sacrifice await your care, awakened great surprise among your friends. They call you reprehensively romantic, or strangely thoughtless, for giving your life to the nurture of those you cannot claim as your own.

But the beauty and glory of your choice is, that it is the result of much prayer and careful deliberation. To be a step-mother in the highest possible sense to those death-bereft children is the grand motive that actuated you in the assumption of this solemn relation. This is Christianity in its most shining and attractive aspect. If it permitted the departed mother to know the Divine Providence on earth, respecting her little orphans, it will doubtless enhance her felicity to witness the goodness of God in selecting you as her maternal substitute.

The crown of creation is woman, and the highest glory of woman is a truly Christian motherhood. The best and divinest thing that God could do for man was to duplicate him in a complementary Eve. And the best possible relation between them was the possibility of multiplying the image of God. The sexual mission, as God instituted it, is altogether holy. No ordinance on earth is so abused as that of generation. It has been degraded into a hot-bed of licentiousness, and a baneful fountain of corruption to body and soul. Christians ought to be as "peculiar" a "people," as "holy a nation," in this particular, as in all else.

Relative impurity is not tolerated in the church, while few consider the etiquette of the Holy Ghost as regards the limitations of 1 Thess. 4: 4, 7. Human fatherhood and motherhood stand next to Godhead. The conjugal conscience is all but an obliterated sense, and the Gospel of conjugal holiness is well nigh obsolete. The sins of parents against unborn children stamps many a soul for a dark career while yet in its antenatal state.

But you have come into a family who can happily claim a pre-eminently holy ancestry. "Train up a child in the way he should go," is a divine injunction that reaches back to the genesis of life. The mystery of our natural generation is only next to the "great mystery of godliness." That a mother should entwine the finest fibres of her soul around her offspring, is natural, sweetly beautifully, divinely natural. But that any woman should become step-mother to a family of small children, impelled by the high sense of sacrifice for the purpose of moulding those young immortals into the glorious ideal of God incarnate,—this is an illustration of the cross which the angels may well contemplate with silent wonder.

The grandest, most heroic, most heavenly characters I have ever known, were such step-mothers. Such a person must be utterly God-possessed, thus to transcend her deepest, natural instincts, and act the part of heaven's deputy in behalf of the orphan. Bad step-mothers no doubt there are, actuated by selfish motives, but the proportion is not larger than bad mothers. But to look upon them as a class with depreciation is far from righteousness or common sense. With inconsiderate or low-graded persons, step-mothers and selfishness may be synonyms; but right thinking and solid facts pronounce emphatically on the side of a nobility in such instances which is the sweetest flavor of redeemed humanity.

Thank God for step-mothers. Without this divine provision the world would be poor. Thousands of orphans have cause to adore the wisdom and goodness of God for such a blessed arrangement. How many souls are thus kept for God, and fashioned by Christian nurture into the beauty of holiness. This is your mission, and a higher one you could not well covet. In sacrificing yourself you will grow larger and more symmetrical, and sweeter and more Godlike as the days roll on.

Burdens and difficulties you will meet, but at every step, and in every emergency you will have the wisdom of God, and the power of God, and the sympathy of God to direct and sustain you. If "fiery trials" penetrate your inmost soul, "think it not strange;" but lean hard on the arm of Omnipotence, and remember "the joy set before you." 1 Pet. 4: 13, 14; Eph. 6: 10; Heb. 12: 2. And especially chew the cud of 1 Cor. 15: 58. Let each separate word be a meal to be eaten over and over. Every mastication will make it richer and sweeter.

BY B. F. MOOMAW.

Chapter Four.

THE war being upon us, it became necessary, for the protection of our Brethren, to see that the necessary provisions should be made to secure the right of exemption from service in the army. To do this I paid a personal visit to our Representative in the Legislature, to get him interested in our favor. In this I succeeded. We then got up a petition, in which the Brethren and Mennonites co-operated, which came before the Legislature in due form, and was supported by some, and opposed by others. Finally it was passed to grant exemption on payment of five hundred dollars each.

We were informed that the chairman of the House, who was acquainted with our people, took the floor, and made a ringing speech in our favor. He spoke of the folly of putting us into the army, because, if we were left at home, we would make provision for the people, but if put into the army, all would be lost and nothing gained, for, if put into the army, "they will fold their arms and take your enemies' fire."

In the fall of 1861, as I now remember, brother Peter Nininger and I made a tour through the lower valley of Virginia, attending meetings, and, returning home, came to Fairfield, and put up for the night. Here we heard that the militia were called out. We had sons who were not members, who must be cared for, and, starting early next morning, we came home that day,—a distance of fifty miles. Next day I spent moving round to see the Brethren who had sons subject to the call, raising what money I could, and getting a letter of introduction to a wealthy firm in Richmond, that I might, if I needed, get financial aid. Next morning I started early, went to Richmond and staid one week, and invested eleven thousand dollars to relieve two of my sons, and the rest for my neighbors.

On my return, upon arriving at our station, there were quite a number of persons present, all in a glee, talking of the easy matter it would be to conquer the enemy and gain Confederate independence. After listening to them awhile, I said, "Gentlemen, you never were more mistaken; it is impossible for you to succeed. The world is against your institutions. There was then no resentment, though afterwards there were threats of violence. Their hands, however, were tied.

Later the conscript law was passed by the Confederate Congress. Then we had a repetition of the same work in part, to get Congress to recognize the exemption law, as passed by the State Legislature. To accomplish this, Bro. James Graybill and I paid a personal visit to our Representative in Congress, to get him to use his influence in our behalf, which he seemed to take a pleasure in doing. To see him, we had to travel about fifty miles, had a pleasant interview with him, and, having his promise to work for us, we felt that we were well paid for our time and expense. He also secured the assistance of a member of the Senate, one of Virginia's ablest men, who, we were informed, made one of the grandest speeches on this case, that ever was delivered in a Legislature. I being anxious to read it, wrote to him afterwards, to send me a duplicate, but he informed me that he had delivered his speech extemporaneously and could not reproduce it.

But the bill was passed, and that was enough, and all brave and honorable officers and men respected it in their administration, though there were some who were not such. One instance I will relate. There was a certain man who refugeed from Maryland, and was here in position of quartermaster, whose duty it was to recognize the certificates of membership, receive the commutation fee, and give the exemption papers. There were four of our young brethren who applied to him, and he refused and abused them, instead of doing what was his duty to do. They were advised to send their papers to the war department at Richmond, which they did, and got their exemption papers, but then the quartermaster learning that they were at home, sent his officers to order them to the camp of instruction at once. They came to me to know what they must do. I said to them, "Appeal to Cesar." I took one of their exemption papers and enclosed it in a letter to President Davis. He wrote to me at once, that he had given my letter to the Secretary of War for attention. The Major was called to Richmond to give an account of himself.

Sometime afterwards, I was at the Salem depot in the waiting-room, when a man whom I did not know, came to the door, and peremptorily demanded that I should come out. I went out, when he met me with an open knife in his hand, and commenced cursing me. Vehemently he said that he would spit in my face if he thought I would resent it, and he also threatened what he would do, if I ever did the like again.

I let him talk on till he became a little more quiet, and then said to him, "Sir, you can curse and swear, and threaten, and take my life, if you will, but one thing you must understand, you are not going to intimidate me, and whenever you interfere with the rights of me or my people, I will attend to you." He then used bad language, calling us hypocrites. "Ah, sir," said I, "that will be decided by a Judge who is greatly your superior." He then started to leave me, saying as he went, "I hold you in perfect contempt," and I said, "All right, sir. I suppose you will allow me the same privilege."

What I said a while ago about Jefferson Davis is an illustration of what I have asserted before, that we are much safer in the hands of great men, than in the power of the lower class.

Permit me to say that this work was done mainly in my own God-given time, and with the means with which he blessed me, and some of our brethren not being able to pay their exemption fee, other brethren and myself furnished the means, which has never been repaid; and I am glad to know that I have nothing to regret concerning it, but thank God that he enabled me to do it in his name and for his children.

THE CHURCH—ITS GOVERNMENT.

BY J. G. ROYER.

Chapter 5.—Officers Continued.

EVERY man is a debtor to his profession. At the outset of the teacher's career, the prevailing methods of teaching are an inheritance left him by his professional ancestry. This, in turn, is to be transmitted to the next generation, with such additions as his own industry, thrift and experience have been able to accumulate during a life devoted to professional labor. This being true of the teacher, I see no good reasons why it should not be true of the minister. It is a consciousness of such indebtedness to my fellow-laborers,—especially the younger, together with a deep concern for the future welfare and prosperity of the church, that prompts me to attempt to write. I dwell upon

THE MINISTRY,

First, because it is the business of the ministry to administer the government and take the spiritual oversight of the church.

Second, because in a majority of cases, where the progress of the church is retarded, the hindrances grow out of government imprudently administered.

The terms elder, bishop, presbyter, and pastor are used interchangeably in Scripture. No distinction is made in the New Testament between bishops and elders, the term bishop simply being the Greek word for designating the person whom the Jews called elder. The term pastor indicated the same persons as one to whom God had given the oversight and directing of the flock. All are included in the ministry, by which Christ meant to establish and build up the church in the knowledge of truth, and in piety.

Among the duties of the minister therefore may be named, The preaching of the Gospel, the administration of the ordinances, and the administering of the government of the church. Inwriting to the elders of Ephesus, Paul plainly intimates that their work was similar to his own, teaching "publicly and from house to house," being prepared "by sound doctrine to exhort and convince the gainsayers." However numerous and responsible other duties of the minister may be, to act as "ambassador for Christ" in proclaiming God's message to man, is his highest work, as presented in the Scriptures. In the great commission to the ministry, Christ commands them to baptize as well as to teach; and the baptizing of the Eunuch by Philip, as also many other New Testament examples are acts performed under this commission.

The meaning of the word elder,—a spiritual ruler,—and bishop,—one having the oversight of others,—and pastor or shepherd,—one who guides, feeds, and protects the flock,—all indicate that the government of the church is administered by the ministry. Hence Paul, referring to their presiding over the church, says, "We beseech you to know them that are over" (preside over) "you in the Lord, and admonish you." 1 Thess. 5: 12. Referring to their leading the action of the church and administering its discipline he says, "Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves: for they watch for your souls, as they that must give account," Heb. 13: 17, and setting forth the duty of instructing the church by "precept" and "example," in doctrine and practice, Peter exhorts the elders to "Feed the flock of God," . . "taking oversight thereof," . . "not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind," . . "being ensamples of the flock. And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." 1 Pet. 5: 1–4. Ministers are therefore the divinely-appointed Executive Officers of the church, and so long as the spirit of their directing and ruling comports with God's Word, the laity are under obligations to submit to them as the flock follow the voice of their shepherds. This authority, however, is not unconditional. Since the minister receives his office through the church, should he abuse the exercise of its functions, the church may take the office from him. Ministers constitute the directing power of the church,—they act as superintendents of the church; and while each lay-member is responsible for what he does, or fails to do, ministers are responsible for the general results. This leads us to consider

MINISTERIAL RESPONSIBILITY.

Entrusted with the care of souls, to be fed, and led, and protected, it is not strange that the true servant of the Lord feels pressing upon him the necessity of "warning every man, and teaching every man," that he "may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus." Col. 1: 28. A realization of such responsibility should lead him daily to seek divine aid to make his personal life a fitting "example of the believers;" and while he shall never be able to point to it as a perfect exemplification of Christian character, he should strive, with Paul, to say, "Those things which ye have both learned and received, and heard and seen in me, do," Philpp. 4, 9, and, "Ye are witnesses, and God also, how holily and justly and unblameably we behaved ourselves among you that believe." 1 Thess. 2: 10. A careless, indifferent life in a minister weakens his ablest efforts in the pulpit, and renders powerless the otherwise more commendable fitness as an executive.

Since the minister's office constitutes him "an example in word, in conversation, in charity, in purity," and renders defects in him peculiarly prominent, his outward life should be a "living epistle" of higher, moral tone than that of the church laity. Hence the plain and emphatic command to be "blameless, vigilant, sober, no striker, not a brawler, not covetous; lest he fall into the snare of the devil." 1 Tim. 3: 2–7. He should exhibit, every-where, that Christian culture and refinement which the precepts of the Gospel invariably develop.

In conversation there should be "neither filthiness,"—that which is shameful,—"nor foolish,"—idle, senseless "talking," "nor jesting,"—giddy, frivolous joking. The minister should aim to be sensible, refined, wholesome, and sincere in conversation, remembering that "every idle word" shall be brought into judgment. To "be courteous," refined and cheerful in our social intercourse is not forbidden, but commanded. Levity and jesting, though often manifested by ministers and other Christians, are as inconsistent with true dignity, as with the Gospel. They were nowhere heard in the conversation of the Redeemer. They are not found in the writings of Paul. They should be studiously avoided by the minister of to-day, together with all coarseness, and whatever suggests impurity.

In personal appearance the Christian minister should certainly avoid any and everything suggestive of vanity or foppishness on the one hand, and "eschew" negligence and slovenliness on the other; ever aiming to be an example of cleanliness and modest, orderly, Gospel plainness. The injunction that he who "strives for the mastery is temperate in all things," should be heeded by the minister in eating. The absence of self-restraint here invariably degrades him in the estimation of all good people. Dullness in the pulpit is too frequently traceable to an overloaded stomach. While "all things are lawful," the minister surely "will not be brought under the power" of tobacco in any form. Paul considered it dangerous for a servant of the Lord to be under bondage to any bodily appetite, "lest by any means when" he had "preached to others," he himself "should be a castaway." 1 Cor. 9: 27. Neither dare the minister make irreligious men his intimate associates. If he does he will suffer for it in his official capacity. While he should show kindness to even the worst men around him, he is to be "a lover of good men," and make them his special friends and associates.

No point in the outer life of a minister needs to be more carefully guarded than his relations with the other sex. He should not only be pure in fact, but also be such as to avoid "all appearance of evil." Suspicion, even if not well founded, commonly proves fatal to usefulness, sometimes throughout the remainder of life. How important that the minister be on his guard at every point of his outward life! To command the respect of those over whom he presides, and to possess genuine, moral power to administer the discipline of the church, he must habitually control self, and hold passion and appetite in subjection. The Lord help his weak servants! Amen.

CHIPS FROM THE WORK-HOUSE.

BY DANIEL VANIMAN.

"The smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace."—Gen. 19: 28.

THESE words, applied to our country, fitly express a curious fact. At least two millions of human mouths and nostrils are daily used as a kind of smoke-stack from which the smoke goes up as the smoke of a furnace. Poisonous nicotine smoke, manufactured and sent up at a cost of say five cents per day, for each smoker, equals one thousand dollars per day. Think of it! Is there no harm in this worse than useless waste of our Lord's money? Is it right to fill rooms and garments with poisonous nicotine fog, where ladies and children are often forced to inhale its sickening fumes?

Two millions of fires are daily run by human lungs. Are you a Christian and still helping to keep up this wasteful, worldly fashion? Are you, perhaps, helping to produce that fetid, black stream, daily issuing from as many human mouths, producing consternation and disgust to finer tastes? Can it be that a cultured Christian will turn the delicate organs, with which he masticates, tastes, talks, and kisses, into a smoke factory or a spring of disgust?

"And the smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace." It is curious to note how selfish the smoke habit makes some men and boys, who, were it not for the deadened sense of propriety, caused by the smoke habit, would be genteel and respectful to others. Often has the writer been compelled to leave depots, and other rooms, where smoking was allowed, or endure the sickening fumes, made by those who had only equal rights with him in those rooms. "And the smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace."

THE MILLENNIUM AGAIN.*

BY CHARLES M. YEAROUT.

IN GOSPEL MESSENGER No. 33, Page 514, I see an article on "Who will be here During the Millennium?" I was much interested in the subject, but think the position taken unscriptural. It is maintained that none will enjoy the millennial reign with Christ excepting the Jews, and that they will all be saved: both dead and living. If that be true, what was the use of presenting the Gospel to them, and asking them to accept of it, when they can all be saved without it?

Christ, in giving his last and great commission says: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark 16: 15, 16; Matt. 24: 14. This certainly embraces both Jew and Gentile. "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." Rom. 1: 16. "But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block, and unto the Greeks foolishness; but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God." 1 Cor. 1: 22, 23, 24.

In Christ the middle wall of partition between Jew and Gentile was broken down, abolished. Eph. 2: 12, 14, 15; Acts 10: 36. There are no more two folds, but one fold, and one shepherd. John 10: 16. "God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." Acts 10: 34, 35; 1 Peter 1: 17. "But tribulation and anguish upon every soul of man that doeth evil; of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile; but glory, honour and peace, to every man that worketh good; to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile: For there is no respect of persons with God." Rom. 2: 9, 10; 3: 9.

In the Gospel dispensation all are placed upon an equality. Eternal life is offered to all, both Jew and Gentile; and "there is no difference." Rom. 3: 22. "Is he the God of the Jews only? Is he not also of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also; seeing it is one God, which shall justify the circumcision by faith, and the uncircumcision through faith." Rom. 3: 29, 30. "For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him." Rom. 10: 12.

The Jews as a nation rejected Christ, and through unbelief were broken off, and cast out; notwithstanding they may again be grafted into Christ if they continue not in unbelief. Rom. 11: 20, 23; Matt. 8: 12.

Our brother says, "All Israel shall be saved; the dead and the living, regardless of their unbelief and disobedience." That certainly would make God a respecter of persons, but perhaps he had the apostle's language in his mind, "For they are not all Israel which are of Israel, neither because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children." For he is not a Jew, which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision, which is outward in the flesh. Rom. 9: 6, 7; 2: 28, 29; John 8: 39, 40. I believe spiritual Israel will all be saved; but not stiff-necked, rebellious, disobedient, fleshly Israel, for the Apostle says, "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe." 2 Thess. 1: 7, 8, 9, 10.

There will be none resurrected at Christ's coming who have rejected him, neither Jew nor Gentile, "But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." 1 Cor. 15: 23. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first." 1 Thess. 4: 16; 1 Cor. 15: 52. "And I saw thrones, and they that sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: (Now notice closely who are now to be judged, for these are the ones that will reign with Christ on this earth) and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. But the rest of the dead lived not again till the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." Rev. 20: 4, 5, 6; 6: 9, 10, 11.

"We which are alive, and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep For those which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." 1 Thess. 4: 14, 15. "Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them (the resurrected saints) in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." Verse 17. This will not be, however, till we are changed and immortalized. "Behold, I shew you a mystery. We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." 1 Cor. 15: 51, 52, 53.

Who is meant by those who are caught up to meet the Lord? Evidently his faithful followers,—his affianced bride that meets him as he comes to receive her unto himself, and set up his millennial reign here on the earth. "I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14: 3. "Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready." Rev. 19: 7.

This millennial season will be the celebration of the marriage of the Lamb. Then the church shall dwell with her Blessed Lord and Savior; and none shall be admitted into the camp of the saints that lived in unbelief, and disobedience to Christ. Rev. 21: 27; Philpp. 4: 3. The Mount of Olives, east of Jerusalem, shall cleave asunder in the midst, and shall become a great valley; and the Lord shall come and all his saints with him, and shall dwell there with the saints during the millennium, and it shall be designated as the "Holy Mountain," or the "Valley of the Mountains," and it shall be one perfect day with the Lord. See Zech. 14: 4, 5, 6, 7.

The Jews that are living when Christ comes will be gathered out of all nations into their own land, and shall safely inhabit Jerusalem, and will constitute one of the nations that occupy the earth during the millennial age. Zech. 14: 11; Isa. 11: 11, 12; 43: 5; 66: 20; Ezek. 37: 21.

The sons and daughters of the Gentile race who have not arrived at the years of accountability when Christ comes, will constitute the other nation that will be on the earth during the millennium. I offer as a proof of this position, (1) that God is no respecter of persons, (2) that all the wicked and disobedient of the Gentile race will be destroyed at Christ's coming; (3) that all that are Christ's will be with him in the camp of the saints; (4) that this earth still remains in tact, (5) and that those sons and daughters have the same chance to accept of Christ that we now have. The same Gospel will be held in force until the general judgment; those children having done neither good nor bad, will remain upon the earth, and become a great nation. There will be no influence, nor desire to sin while Satan is bound, but God is no respecter of persons. We have to endure temptations, and trials, and must "come up through great tribulation." So at the close of the millennial, these nations, Jews and Gentiles, will be sorely tempted and tried, and many of them will be deceived by the arch enemy of man, but all that withstand this temptation and deception of Satan will have their names inscribed in the Book of Life, and will stand approved, saved at the general judgment, while all the wicked dead, both Jew and Gentile, with those that encompassed the camps of the saints round about, shall appear at the last or final judgment, and shall be "cast into the lake of fire where the false prophet and the beast are, and shall be tormented day and night forever and ever." I use the term general or last judgment, to distinguish it from the first. Rev. 20: 4, 11, 12. There will be none present at the first judgment except the children of God, "therefore the ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous." Psa. 1: 5.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us be faithful to our high calling in Christ, that we may be counted worthy to enjoy the millennial reign with Christ.

BAPTISM.

BY D. E. STOVER.

THE following questions on the subject of baptism were asked by Rev. Edwards of the Baptist church through the columns of "The Florida Baptist Witness," Vol. 8, No 30. I waited three weeks, and seeing no answer, I offered one, and, at the same time, asked a few straight questions on the same subject. The editor returned my manuscript, refusing to publish it on the grounds that he did not wish to open the columns of the Witness for a discussion on baptism at that time.

It will be observed that our Baptist friends did not expect to meet a trine immersionist, but a sprinkler when they asked the following questions:

1. What Greek Lexicographers are there who render the primary meaning, or translate baptizo, sprinkle?

Ans.—There are none; all translate the Greek word baptizo, dip, or immerse.

Greek scholars also tell us that the Greek word baptizo is a frequentative verb, and denotes a repetition of actions. Why, then, do Baptists use single immersion in baptism?

2. Is not the word sprinkled in our English Bible a translation of the Greek word Ratizonosa, and is not that word always an equivalent to the English sprinkling, and is it not a fact that this Greek word is not used for baptism?

Ans.—Such is an undeniable fact.

3. Is not baptism an imperative command from God, and does not God require literal obedience to those commands?

Ans.—Our Savior puts baptism on the same basis as faith. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." (See also the commission.) Why, then, claim that baptism is not essential to salvation?

4. Would God give a command to man, couched in such language that they could not construe its meaning?

Ans.—We think not. All must admit that all commands from God to man, as found in the New Testament Scriptures are sufficiently plain, so that all who read can understand.

Why not use that form of baptism which is plainly taught in the commission? If "baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost" does not teach trine immersion, please word it so it will.

5. Do not Greeks undoubtedly understand their own language, and do they not invariably immerse for baptism?

Ans.—The Greeks do yet, and always have, practiced trine immersion, as all Greek historians affirm. We could produce many quotations from Greek authors, proving this fact, but we will give only a few.

Chrysostom, a member of the oriental church, who was born only 247 years after the death of the Apostle John, says: "Christ delivered to his disciples one baptism in three immersions of the body."

Basil, another member of the Greek church, who was born at Cesarea A. D. 328, says, "By three immersions we administer the important ceremony of baptism." (Robinson's History of Baptism, page 89.)

Sir P. Richard says:—"Thrice dipping this (Greek) church holds to be as necessary to the form of baptism as water to the matter." (Hinton on Baptism, page 180.)

Why do you not baptize as did the Greeks, who, you claim, understand their language? True, they are proof in favor of immersion, but trine, and not single immersion is the form of baptism they sustain.

6. Is it not a fact that Novation, A. D. 250, was the first departure from the apostolic mode of immersion, and that water was poured upon him profusely, so as to represent an immersion as nearly as possible under the circumstances? Was he so baptized because he was ill in bed, and sick, nigh unto death?

Ans.—Several of the church historians tell us that such is a fact. We also learn from them that this departure was made from trine, and not single immersion. Forward, single immersion was introduced in the fourth century, and backward single immersion in the sixteenth century.

7. How do you reconcile Rom. 6: 3-6, with your practice of sprinkling? Do you bury by sprinkling?

Ans.—We think not.

If not, how do you reconcile your backward form or posture in baptism since the above Scripture does not say in the likeness of his burial, but in "likeness of his death?" How did he die? Not on his back,—in the grave,—but on the cross. If this English word bury would convey to us the correct idea as to posture in baptism, what would it convey to those nations who do not bury as the English bury? See what one of your learned Historians (Robinson) has written concerning this subject: "The first English Baptists, when they read the phrase, 'buried in baptism,' instantly thought of an English burial, and, therefore, baptized by laying the body (backward) in the form of burying in their own country, but they might have observed that Paul wrote to the Romans, and that the Romans did not bury, but burned the dead, and buried nothing of the dead but their ashes in urns, so that no fair reasoning on the form of baptizing can be drawn from the mode of burying the dead in England." (History of Baptism, page 696.)

Backward single immersion is not yet four hundred years old, which can be proven by your own church historian, while forward trine immersion can be traced in an unbroken line to the days of the apostles. There is not now in existence any church, holding any just claim to antiquity that did not at one time practice trine immersion. On these points we fear no successful contradiction. "Prove all things," etc. 1 Thess. 5: 21.

BIBLE SCHOOLS FOR CHILDREN.

BY JAS H. LARKINS.

On my return from Texas, Oct. 10, I stopped off at Beebe, Arkansas, and while there, I was invited to attend the Bible School for Children in the Methodist church, established July 7, by the liberal and benevolent layman, Judge F. P. Laws, who engaged as teacher, Mrs. Julia A. Clark, a competent instructor, zealous in good works and labors of love. The school is in session one hour or more each morning and afternoon except Sunday. One hundred and twenty-eight voluntary pupils, from three to fourteen years of age have been enrolled. The daily attendance ranges from forty to sixty. Each exercise is opened with prayer, and the pupils are kindly impressed with the duty of reverence for religious worship.

The children are supplied with a small library of suitable books, and many of them have read from two to ten or more of these books. Their interest and improvement are observed by the parents, who have heartily thanked the teacher for the manifest benefits already received. One gentleman,—a merchant,—said that he would not take $100 for the good done to his little boy. Judge Laws, the founder of this school, has lost six children and has but one living,—a daughter now in college. He is profoundly impressed with the importance and duty of educating the children in the vital doctrines of Christianity, and considers this to be the best and speediest way to evangelize the world. This is my mind, and the plan is entirely feasible in cities, towns, villages and thickly-settled districts. It will open up a fruitful field for consecrated Christian women to work.

In the Bible-school children may be so instructed as to insure their early conversion. They may be saved from the evils of intemperance, and made aggressive workers in the church of our Blessed Lord. Christian workers to-day should labor for the early conversion and Scriptural training of the children who are naturally inclined to religion, and may, in nearly every case, be brought from sinful lives to Christian usefulness. Brethren, are we ready and willing to help in the Sunday-school, in the Bible class, in the prayer-meeting, and help our elder who has the care over us? Are we ready for every good work?

A BEAUTIFUL THOUGHT.

BY SOLOMON SCHUBERT.

When the summer of youth is slowly passing away on the night-fall of age, and the shadow of the path becomes deeper, and life wears on to its close, it is pleasant to look through the vista of that upon the sorrows and felicities of our early years. If we have had a home to shelter us, and hearts to rejoice with us, and friends have gathered around our fireside, the rough places of the wayfarer will have been worn and smoothed away in the twilight of life, and many dark spots we have passed through will grow brighter and more beautiful.

Happy, indeed, are those whose intercourse with the world has not changed the tone of their holier feelings, or broken those musical chords of the heart whose vibrations are so melodious, so tender and so touching in the evening of their lives.

YOUR NEIGHBOR.

One of our exchanges gives the Christian (?) advocates of war something to think about.

"How would you like to live in a neighborhood where, whenever one neighbor visited another, the host should spend most of the time in showing his guest his knives, rifles, revolvers, clubs, and other weapons, provided solely for the purpose of slaying his neighbors if they did not carry themselves pretty straight? And suppose this show of deadly weapons was accompanied with a parade of the host's sons, and a scarcely concealed air of, 'You see now what you will get if you meddle with my fences, or throw stones at my dog.' And suppose the whole community was periodically alarmed, and compelled to take sides, by quarrels and rumors of quarrels, beginning nobody knows how. Wouldn't that be a delightful neighborhood to live in? And that is just the condition of that neighborhood of nations known as Europe. We hear often of armed neutrality, but all Europe seems now to be in a state of armed hospitality."

Satan Got Him.—There is an old legend of the Middle Ages to the effect that once upon a time a church member died at a ball. Satan came along and took his soul, and was flying off with it, when St. Peter, finding it out, put after him and demanded restoration. "He was a Christian," said St. Peter, "and you must give him up." "Christian!" exclaimed Satan, "why, I found him on my premises." "If that is the case," said St. Peter, "I give it up." We commend the above to all professing Christians who attend theaters, balls, and other places of questionable amusement.—Sel.

"The child-relationship of the loving, trustful man to God, as an infinitely loving Father, is the first and great revelation which Christianity makes to its disciples. The Golden Rule is the answer of the Christian teaching to the question, How shall I act towards my neighbor? Jesus makes the revelation; he also gives the answer. As he does so, he leads the child to his Father, and teaches him the lesson of love. The fatherhood of God secures the brotherhood of man, and both together secure the consummated blessedness of the kingdom of heaven."

PATIENCE AND ITS WORK.

BY A. HUTCHISON.

"My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations."—James 1: 2.

THIS seems to be one of the difficult places for the Christian to become reconciled to, because his experience, he thinks, does not always harmonize with the apostle's language, but we must hear him a little further, before we pass hasty judgment upon the case. He continues by saying: "Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience." The benefit comes to the one who is exercised thereby, in the trying of the faith which worketh patience. Then the additional instruction is to this effect: "Let patience have her perfect work."

The great benefit is to be derived largely from the exercise of a little patience. When a teamster finds that his wagon is stuck in the mud, he is then, in so far as the case and environments are concerned, in a proper condition to have the benefit of patience in the full force of all its grace. This all depends, however, upon whether he will allow patience to have her perfect work. Patience has no chance to do anything, where there is no provocation to the contrary, and there is something here that I wish to notice a little further. The Savior says, "In your patience possess ye your souls." It would seem from this, that, in the absence of patience, the soul might be lost. If this noble grace were more largely exercised and cultivated, oh, how many bitter tears and sorrows and heart-burnings would be avoided! Many hasty words and violent actions would be entirely avoided, and many hearts would be beating in unison, where sorrow, and grief, and even hatred (in some cases) now reign supreme.

Bitter words are the result of a lack of patience. Hasty words, and words not seasoned with grace, have alienated hearts that otherwise would have been true to each other for life, and this lays the foundation for some very hearty repentance, or if this is not indulged in, then the way is open for the final end, which is destruction. Jesus says, "For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." Matt. 12:37.

I suppose that there are few persons who do not need a little more patience at times than what they find on hand, at the particular time, and the reason it is not found when most needed, is because we do not stop long enough to look for it, or call it in. There is a large supply always at hand, if we will only allow it time to put in its perfect work. This applies even to preachers. Let us see what Jesus has to say about this matter: "Without me ye can do nothing. John 15: 5. Paul says, "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able," etc. 1 Cor. 10: 13. God is always ready, when we are willing to take his counsel.

THE BAPTISM OF FIRE.

BY DANIEL HAYS.

QUERY.—Is the fire of baptism in Luke 3: 16, the same as the unquenchable fire of Luke 3: 17?

FIRE is the result of the combustion, or burning of material bodies, the emblem of fierce destruction, severe trial, or affliction.

The baptism in the Spirit stands related to the baptism in fire as the "wheat" stands related to the "chaff."

The baptism in fire is for the disobedient. Luke 3: 16, 17; Matt. 3: 11, 12. The baptism in the Spirit is for the obedient. Mark 1: 8; Acts 1: 4, 5. Those whom John baptized with water had the promise of the baptism with the Holy Spirit by John in Mark 1: 8, and by the Savior in Acts 1: 5,—while for the disobedient was reserved the baptism with fire—the unquenchable fire of Gehenna.

In Acts 2: 1-4, we have an account of the fulfillment of the baptism of the Holy Spirit. "They are led by sound and not by sense," who interpret the expression in Acts 2: 3, "like as of fire," as the baptism in fire. Matt. 3: 11. These tongues were distributed among the disciples,—a tongue to each, and denoted that the power of the Holy Spirit was to be put forth in words,—in the truth spoken in human tongues, and the likeness of the fire denoted the purifying power of the truth which the apostles were to utter. "Is not my word like as a fire? saith the Lord." Jer. 23: 29.

In 1 Cor. 3: 15, we have in the expression, "yet so as by fire," a symbolic use of the term similar to that of the "fiery trial," mentioned by Peter in 1 Pet. 4: 12. The following facts are given by Paul:

1. "We (Paul and Apollos) are laborers together with God."

2 "Ye (the church at Corinth) are God's building."

3. As a master builder, Paul laid the foundation.

4. That foundation is Jesus Christ.

5. Every minister becomes a builder in God's temple or church.

6. Every child of God becomes a "lively stone" in God's "spiritual house." 1 Pet. 2: 5.

7. Every minister should "take heed how he buildeth thereupon."

8. There are two kinds of material among converts, or professors.

9. One class are true children of God, represented by "gold, silver, precious stones." These will stand fire. The other class are not so. They are compared to "wood, hay, stubble," and will not endure fire.

10. None but the genuine material shall find an abiding place in God's building.

11. Every man's (minister's) work shall be tried of what sort it is, and the "fiery trial" shall make it known.

12. If his work abide, he shall receive a reward. It is so much gain. If his work be burned, all his labor is lost. There is no reward.

13. This will be a "fiery trial" truly for the minister, but it shall be the means of saving him, if he endure, as gold, to the end; so "he himself shall be saved, yet so as by fire."

VANITY.

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

"Vanity of vanities, saith the Preacher; all is vanity."—Eccl. 12: 8.

SOLOMON is designated as the "wise man," and in reading that part of the sacred writings, attributed to him, we become convinced of the fact that he was a remarkable man. In the Proverbs we find that he made use of language calculated to carry with it a "world of meaning," setting forth, in the most unmistakable terms, the difference between wisdom and folly, evil and good.

In the Canticles or Songs of Solomon, we are reminded that he was a poet, or, rather, a musical man, but when we come to the book called Ecclesiastes, we find him termed "the Preacher," and this would mean an expounder of the Word of God, etc.

Solomon appears to be greatly impressed with the foolishness of man, the power and wisdom of God, and the vanity of all terrestrial things. He asserts that all the aspirations, designs and desires of man are vain, and describes his own acquisition of power, might, dominion and wisdom, as all "vanity and vexation of spirit."

"There is nothing new under the sun, the thing that hath been, it is that which shall be; and that which is done is that which shall be done." Eccl. 1: 9. The children of men arise and pass out of the world like blades of grass. One generation passes away and another one comes on the stage of action. The little boys or girls look forward to the time when they will be men and women, and picture to themselves how they will do when they get older.

At the age of twenty-five, life, with its grand possibilities, spreads out before them. They go forth into the great battle of life, full of buoyant hope, and, perhaps, achieve grand and glorious results in their undertakings, but amid the whirl of excitement they forget that time is speeding them along toward the western horizon of life. At the age of fifty years they have gained at least a part of the wisdom of Solomon, inasmuch as they realize their achievements to be quite small, when compared with what they have not reached.

At the age of seventy-five they look back with disgust at their failures and mistakes, and fully realize the words, so often repeated by the preacher, "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity and vexation of spirit." Calmly they look out upon the vast and limitless ocean of ETERNITY, and set out to cross those chilly waters of death. Their departure leaves the same impression as if a man would dip his foot in the sea, and then look for the depression. But the great God, who created all things for himself, holds the reins of government, and his designs shall not fail. He holds the destiny of the worlds in his own right hand, and although man, at his best estate, is weak and puerile, God, in his own appointed way, doeth all things well. He will gather our bitter tears and silent prayers and untold heartaches, and will deal out justice and judgment to all his creatures.

THANKSGIVING MEETINGS.

BY PETER BROWER.

I HAVE noticed recently that several of the brethren advocated changing our thanksgiving or harvest meetings to a later period, when all the crops will be gathered, which would be about the time of the National Thanksgiving Day.

It occurs to me that we, as a people, are too unthankful, and too slow to appreciate God's blessings. I believe it would not be too much to meet at least two days in each season to return thanks to the Great Giver.

On the first day we should have our minds drawn out in thankfulness for the abundant blessing that God has showered upon us through the fruitfulness of the earth. We should also consider the solemn duty of making a proper distribution and use of these blessings.

On the National Thanksgiving Day we should feel like thanking our Heavenly Father for the many blessings daily showered upon us, and especially for national blessings, in that we have freedom to worship unmolested.

BOB INGERSOLL recently was talking with an old colored woman in Washington upon religious matters.

"Do you really believe, aunty," said he, "that people are made out of dust?"

"Yes, sah! the Bible says dey is and so I b'lieves it."

"But what is done in wet weather, when there is nothing but mud?"

"Den I s'pects dey make infiduls an' sich truck."

HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE?

"Every man according to his ability." "Every one as God hath prospered him." "Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not."—2 Cor. 8: 12.

THE CHEERFUL GIVER.

Only a drop in the bucket,
But every drop will tell;
The bucket would soon be empty
Without the drops in the well.

Only a poor little penny,
It was all I had to give;
But as pennies make the guineas,
It may help some cause to live.

A few little bits of ribbon
And some toys—they were not new;
But they made the sick child happy,
Which has made me happy, too.

Only some outgrown garments—
They were all I had to spare;
But they'll help to clothe the needy,
And the poor are every-where.

A word now and then of comfort,
That cost me nothing to say;
But the poor old man died happy,
And it helped him on the way.

God loveth the cheerful giver,
Though the gift be poor and small;
What doth He think of His children
When they never give at all?

THE WATCH TOWER.

BY GALEN B. ROYER.

WHILE it is agreeable to have meetings "in the full moon," in October, or some other time when outside conditions are all favorable, the sentiment growing among us to have our series of meetings under one or more of these conditions, or not at all, is not a good omen. It shows a lack of faith, or a misplaced faith. It is indicative of coldness to the cause and an over-zeal for our own personal comfort in preference to our spiritual welfare. This should not be. While we should be particular about caring for our health, our horses, etc., let us be just as particular in caring for our religion. Then nothing will suffer.

A certain sister in the East, enclosing ten dollars for mission work in a letter, writes thus: "Let us pray and pray earnestly, that God may put it into the hearts of his children to give of their goods to have the Gospel preached. Remember we are stewards and must give an account of our stewardship. Oh, if we would act at all times as though we believed 'that one soul is worth more than the whole world.' Pray for me that I may have a growing interest in the mission work."

There are two points in this letter we wish to call attention to. 1st, that we are stewards and that a stewardship is confided to us. The way some followers of Christ talk and plan about their possessions and their life one would readily conclude that they do not feel they are put here to care for the Lord's, that they themselves are the Lord's, but that this I have gained and this I shall do next year, etc. Hear the Bible on this point: "Go to now, ye that say, To-day or to-morrow we will go into such a city, and continue there a year and buy and sell, and get gain: whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." James 4: 13, 14. "The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein." Psalms 24: 1. If we realized the uncertainty and shortness of life, and the account we shall have to give to God as stewards, I feel assured the Lord would receive his just praise and just share of the fruits of our labors.

2nd, the sister's earnest desire for a "growing interest in the mission work." A growing interest, i. e., continually increasing. Now I sometimes come across brethren and sisters who were once zealous in this great work but for some reason have grown cold. It surely is not because the Bible has changed in the last few years, or the obligation of carrying it to parts unknown has been removed from the shoulders of Christ's disciples; no, it arises from some trivial, selfish source and I would warn all such to awaken, as you are in danger of ruin. Dear ones in Christ, do we desire to grow in the Master's work, or are we satisfied to let good enough alone and sit down in idleness; not idleness as pertains to this world but to the world to come? Let us all pray for an increased interest in the Master's work.

THE MINISTERIAL MEETING OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

BY A. H. PUTERBAUGH.

THE brethren and sisters of Northern Indiana met in the Walnut church, Marshall Co., Ind., Sept. 30, for the purpose of holding their first Ministerial Meeting. The meeting was called to order by Eld. J. H. Miller and opened with the usual devotional exercises, after which 2 Tim. 4 was read. It was decided that the officers of the meeting should be a Moderator and Secretary. Bro. W. R. Deeter was chosen Moderator and A. H. Puterbaugh, Secretary. After the organization of the meeting necessary rules, governing the meeting, were adopted, so that the work could be carried on in systematic order.

The first subject for discussion was, "How can We, as Ministers, make Our Work more Effectual, and What are the Hinderances?" Eld. J. C. Murray led in the discussion and made, in his twenty-minutes' speech some strong and pointed remarks, which cannot fail to have their impression upon the minds of all present. Among other remarks and suggestions we have the following carefully-developed characteristics of an effectual sermon: The necessity of a strong conviction for the Truth, divine enthusiasm, speaking as from authority; the preacher should be a winner of souls,—agreeable and affectionate. He dwelt upon the necessity for a revival in doctrinal preaching. As hinderances we find the following: Lack of interest in the entire work of the church, in prayer-meetings and Sunday-schools. There are too many preachers among us who are not Dunkard preachers. Every minister ought to be himself. There is not enough study of subjects. Other brethren followed with well-timed remarks, touching habits in speech, gesture and apologies; also commenting upon length of sermons and a dozen kindred topics.

Many others were anxious to take part in the discussions but the time had expired.

The afternoon session was opened by Bro. A. H. Puterbaugh presenting the following subject: "How can we, as Ministers, more Fully Carry out the Missionary Work in the Northern District of Indiana and in our Local Churches?" The following points were presented: The importance of the work; the church is the body to push on the work; the necessity of getting the church behind the work; the necessity of teaching the members; the church to look up fertile fields for work; systematic giving; what we most need is sympathy and active co-operation of ministers and laity; the kind of a man to be put into the field and kept continually at the work; use of tracts in the hand of the minister.

Many other suggestions of importance were added by other brethren, whose hearts were in active sympathy with the missionary cause, in fact we had a glorious revival of the work in our hearts, and I predict better results and more work in this field the ensuing year.

The next subject was presented by Eld. Daniel Shively: "What Relation do we, as Ministers, sustain to the Sunday-school?" The speaker made prominent the following suggestions: A minister sustains the relation to the Sunday-school as a teacher,—both of scholars and teachers. He should give his encouragement to the work by his presence and conversation, and should look after the moral training as well as the religious.

The discussion was engaged in by a number of brethren, and all were made to feel the importance of the work. In the evening elders W. R. Deeter and Amos Peters preached on church government. Their efforts were greatly appreciated and the subject ably treated. Space forbids giving an outline of their work. I predict that the meeting will long be remembered and looked back to with great pleasure as the inauguration of a work which, in after years, shall have a telling effect upon the ministry and laity of Northern Indiana. We can never see our faults so plainly nor be so determined to correct them as when they are pointed out to us with no other motive than the glory of God and the advancement of his kingdom. There seemed to be general satisfaction with the results of the meeting. There were present about one hundred ministers and a large number of the laity. We meet again, the Lord willing, the day preceding the first Thursday of October, 1892.

"JESUS Christ did not mean that his followers may have whatever they like. The way to spoil a child is, to give it all it asks; and he does not mean to spoil us. Therefore, he must thwart our wishes till they run parallel with his will, and are fixed on higher good than earth holds. So, of course, this promise is true only in the spiritual realm, or in regard to the development of the Christian character. We may have as much of God as we will. Christ puts the key of the treasure chamber into our hand, and bids us take all that we want. If a man is admitted into the bullion vault of a bank, and told to help himself, and comes out with one cent, whose fault is it that he is poor? Whose fault is it that Christian people generally have such scanty portions of the free riches of God?"

"HAVE the courage to obey your Maker at the risk of being ridiculed by men."

The Gospel Messenger

Is the recognized organ of the German Baptist or Brethren's church, and advocates the form of doctrine taught in the New Testament and pleads for a return to apostolic and primitive Christianity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and maintains that Faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration of the heart and mind, baptism by Trine Immersion for remission of sins unto the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, are the means of adoption into the household of God,—the church militant.

It also maintains that Feet-washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and as universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians, is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, as taught in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ.

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, James 5: 14, is binding upon all Christians.

It also advocates the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, thus giving to the Lord for the spread of the Gospel and for the conversion of sinners.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

Mount Morris, Ill., - - - - Oct. 27, 1891

A RELIGION that does not make a man honest is of no value to humanity so far as the next world is concerned.

WRITING from Duffield, Pa., Bro. Daniel Bittinger says that two united with the Falling Spring congregation recently.

WE regret to learn of the death of Bro. Oliver Clinton Slifer, of Cheyenne County, Kans. He was a promising young minister.

BRO. LEVI H. EBY reports a good feast at Waddam's Grove, and one addition by baptism. The church seems to be in love and union.

THE wife of Eld. G. E. Wise, of Olathe, Kans., went to her long home a few days ago. Sometime ago her mind became unbalanced, and it was necessary to care for her in the asylum, where she died and passed into a world where these misfortunes are unknown.

FOR $1.50 the MESSENGER will be sent from now to the end of 1892. This virtually makes the paper free to the end of the present year, and ought to induce many to send in their names at once.

BRO. JOHN F. CLINE writes that, while with the Brethren in Wallace County, Kansas, one was received into the church by confession and baptism, and there were prospects of still more coming.

IN this issue Bro. W. B. Stover tells us what one stray copy of the MESSENGER accomplished in the way of converting an entire family. This will certainly prove encouraging to those who, after reading their papers, send them to others.

BRO. JOSEPH HOLDER, who is holding meetings at Batavia, Jefferson Co., Iowa, reports a good feast in the Libertyville church, large congregations and excellent interest in his meetings. He expected to continue the meetings at least a week.

BRO. J. H. GARMAN, of Sinking Springs, Ohio, is preparing to move to Keuka, Fla. With his wife he has spent several winters in Keuka, and will now make it his future home. His coming will be very much appreciated by the little band of members in Florida.

BRETHREN T. J. Watkins and G. V. Goshorn, who attended the feast at Franklin Grove from here, report a good meeting, large congregations and excellent order. Bro. Wm. Thomas, of Boone, Iowa, officiated and did some good preaching for the Brethren. He is accompanied by his wife and expects to remain at least one week.

WE have just printed the Minutes of the District Meeting of Oregon, Washington and Idaho. They show that there was considerable business before the Meeting, all of which was disposed of in a commendable manner. The program for their next ministerial meeting is excellent, and we trust that the subjects will be studied and discussed with great care.

TWO years ago a little girl made application for membership. She was objected to by some who thought her too young to be baptized. But she was in deep earnest, and was finally received into the church by baptism. Only a few weeks ago the little sister died happy, feeling that she had done her duty. Let the children come. Whenever they are old enough to apply for membership they know enough to do their duty and ought to be encouraged in it.

BRO. GEORGE L. STUDEBAKER reports an excellent series of meetings in Boone County, Ind., with eleven additions. It is to be regretted that the meetings had to be closed on account of other engagements. It is to be hoped that our ministers will soon see a way of so arranging their work that they need not close a series of meetings in the midst of a great awakening. Much labor is often wasted in this way. If possible, a meeting, once under good headway, ought to be kept up as long as there are prospects of doing good.

THE Committee of Arrangements for our next Annual Meeting, in 1892, to be held at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, has organized by appointing John Zuck, Foreman; J. S. Snyder, Secretary, and G. W. Hopwood, Treasurer. The plans for the buildings have already been formulated, bill of material made out and the cooking arrangements secured. The buildings are to be erected by the Cedar Rapids Commercial Company. We are informed that about twenty-seven acres of ground have been set apart for the Meeting, and other things will be arranged accordingly.

BRO. GEO. W. CRIPE, of Cerro Gordo, Ill., we learn, will hold some meetings in South Dakota this fall.

AT our members' meeting in the Chapel last Tuesday evening, two young men—students—made application for membership.

WRITING from Beatrice, Nebr., under date of Oct. 15, Bro. J. E. Young says that three were received by baptism and two restored to fellowship that day.

IF you differ from everybody else, don't be too sure that you are right. It is possible that you may be mistaken. Such has been the case in the course of human events and may be again.

BRO. SAMUEL MURRAY is now in the vicinity of Lanark, preaching some for the Brethren and visiting relatives with his wife. They are both quite old, and this may, possibly, be their last visit to their children.

BRO. JOHN HECKMAN, of Sabetha, Kans., gave us a pleasant call last week. He will be remembered as one of the graduates of the school here several years ago. He speaks very encouragingly of the cause in the West.

WE are receiving many orders for our Almanac, all of which will be filled in a few days. We feel confident that the work will greatly please our readers. Price, ten cents per copy. Either order from us direct or call on our agents.

WE are in receipt of a card from Bro. D. L. Miller, written on the banks of the River Eder, where the "eight" were baptized in the year 1708. We prize the card highly and shall hold it in memory of that important event. Bro. Miller will doubtless give us an excellent letter from the banks of this historic stream.

BRO. I. J. ROSENBERGER has in the Christian Cynosure an excellent article on secret societies, which will appear in the MESSENGER next week. The evils of secret societies should be held up before the rising generation, and ministers should post themselves on the subject and prepare to warn their members against the tendency of such orders.

WE know a little congregation where the members are so poor in this world's goods that many of our brethren could buy the entire congregation and then have plenty left, and yet that congregation probably raises more money per capita, for the Lord's cause, than any church in our Fraternity. They give and the Lord gives back again. So the work goes on. They trust the Lord and he blesses them the more.

IN company with a number of others from the Mount, we had the pleasure of attending the feast at Pine Creek Oct. 17 and 18. This church still keeps up the old custom of commencing their meeting at 10 A. M. and feeding the multitude both days. It requires a good deal of work, but on this occasion it was real enjoyable and much appreciated. The attendance was very large. The building is quite large, but every part of it was taken up with tables, in order to accommodate the members. Bro. John Heckman, of Kansas, was present, and gave us a good talk on Saturday. Bro. Samuel Murray officiated and also did some good talking. The weather was as nice as it could be, the order excellent, and from beginning to end the feast was a most enjoyable one. One was received into the church by baptism, and one the week previous. Bro. F. Z. Miller, brother to D. L., was installed in the deacon's office. May the Lord bless him in his work.

MINISTERS should not conclude that their sermons are soon forgotten. We often converse with members who outline sermons they heard many years ago, and recall with pleasure the good impressions made upon them by the plainly-delivered discourses. It is encouraging for one to see the bread, he had cast upon the waters twenty years ago, come floating by. A well-prepared and plainly-delivered sermon may continue to do good many years after its delivery. Then, how careful ought ministers to be in regard to what they preach and how they preach.

YOUR SERMON BOOK.

WE are often asked for a good method of preparing sermons. There are many, but the following is very simple, and applicable to our ministers. Almost every issue of the MESSENGER contains articles, in each of which may be found the foundation for a good sermon. To illustrate, we refer to Bro. Hays' article on "The Baptism of Fire," in this issue. Clip out the article and paste it in a blank book you keep on purpose for preparing sermons. Work the article all over carefully, add to it by further searching the Scriptures, making notes of your own. Cut appropriate verses from a cheap Bible and paste them where they belong in your outlines. In this manner you can soon collect considerable information on the subject and will be able to preach an interesting sermon on any of the texts properly connected with the question. You will find many other articles just as well adapted to this purpose as Bro. Hays'. You may also find some good articles in other papers. When you hear a good sermon preached, carefully outline it in your sermon book and work it all over until you make it your own. By following this plan, you may soon acquire a good knowledge of a number of important subjects that will enable you to instruct and entertain an audience in an edifying and profitable manner.

When completed, this book will be of great value to you, as it will enable you to study the subjects to advantage whenever called upon to preach on any of the points therein suggested. This method of preparing sermons was suggested to us, in part, by a very able minister among our people. He has cut up a number of cheap Bibles in arranging his subjects, often spending weeks on one sermon. J. H. M.

FEET-WASHING.

OCTOBER 18th the various Sunday-schools throughout the world had for their lesson, John's account of Jesus washing his disciples' feet. Were we able to collect all that was said before the thousands of classes on that subject we would certainly have a long list of excuses and reasons for not doing what Jesus did, and what he told his disciples they ought to do. Had Jesus given each of his disciples a piece of money, and told them that they should do as he had done to them, what a grand lesson would the popular churches have in support of the missionary cause, which is a cause that should be near the heart of every devoted Christian, but because he did not command them to do some great thing, the example and command are almost universally disregarded.

It is not our intention at this time to write concerning the nature of the command in particular, but to say something concerning the time and place that feet-washing was instituted. A few years ago it was held by many, opposed to feet-washing as a church ordinance, that it took place in Bethany, six days before the passover. This theory is now generally abandoned. Later it was held that it took place the same evening that the Jewish Passover was celebrated. This view is held by some, if not many, late writers, among them the authors of the Eclectic Commentary, published by and for the Disciples at Cincinnati, Ohio. This is the view generally held of late by the leading preachers and writers in the Disciple church. To us it is quite encouraging to see indications of a probable change of sentiment among them on that point of the controversy.

In his Commentary on the International Lessons for 1891, B. W. Johnson, one of the editors of the Christian Evangelist, author of a good commentary on the New Testament, and a very able minister of the Disciple church, takes the same view of this subject that has long been held by our Brethren in their debates and writings in defense of feet-washing. In his comments on John 13: 1 he says:

Now before the feast of the passover. For an account of the institution of the passover, read Ex. 12. The passover lamb was a type of Christ. It was at the last passover that our Lord established the Supper as a bloodless continuation of the memory of "the Lamb that taketh away the sin of the world." The events now recorded were "before the feast of the passover," i. e., before the time when the Jews ate the passover, which was the next day. In my judgment, the Savior, the Paschal Lamb, suffered at the time the Jews ate the passover, and his own feast was the evening before." See "The Christian Lesson Commentary," by Johnson, for 1891, page 291.

On page 289 he gives us to understand that most critics place the crucifixion in A. D. 30, and in that year the passover came on Friday, April 7th, and the Savior washed his disciples' feet on Thursday, April 6th. This is just what our Brethren have been teaching lo these many years, viz., that Christ washed his disciples' feet the evening before the Jews ate the passover.

If it can be demonstrated that the passover did come on Friday, April 7th, in the year A. D. 30, that makes a clear point against the claim that Christ instituted the Lord's Supper at the time of the passover, for we know that the crucifixion took place on Friday. He arose from the dead the third day, i. e., Sunday morning. Reckoning back three days and we have Friday, or the day of the crucifixion, which was also the day the Jews ate the passover. But feet-washing, the Lord's Supper and Communion took place the evening before, April 6th, on Thursday. We repeat that we are glad to see thinkers giving up the old view and accepting that which is certainly more in harmony with the Gospel narratives.

In harmony with the above statements it would appear that on Thursday evening, April 6th, the Savior came to the upper room in Jerusalem with his disciples, and reclined at the tables where the Supper was prepared. Just before eating he arose and washed the feet of his disciples. This completed, the Supper was eaten. Near the close of the meal Judas left the room. Following this the Communion was instituted. After considerable talking he went with his disciples over the brook Cedron into the garden of Gethsemane. Here he was arrested, probably near midnight. The next day being Friday, April 7th, he was crucified about nine o'clock in the morning, and expired on the cross at three in the afternoon, just at the time the Jews killed the lambs for the passover. Christ, our passover, expires on the cross at the same time that the Jews killed their passover. Thus the type and antitype meet in the point of time. J. H. M.

BY D. L. MILLER.

Number Seven.

OUR meetings at Frederickshaven were well attended and the people seemed to be much interested. We spent some time with Bro. Poulson at this place who, with his wife, did all they could to entertain us. Bro. Poulson is a ship carpenter and has been working for more than twenty years in the same ship-yard. He is an expert hand and receives 75 cents per day for his labor, many others receiving only from 30 to 50 cents per day. At these low wages it must be hard to secure a living, but people in this country learn to economize.

At Frederickshaven Pastor Hansen, of the Methodist Mission, invited us to his home where we were pleasantly entertained. He gave us some valuable information as to the working of their mission in Denmark. It was started thirty-five years ago and now numbers about 2,000 members. They have fifteen ministers and nine church houses, and receive annually from the Mission Board in America $8,000.00. They find it exceedingly difficult to work in the large cities, and have had an experience somewhat similar to our own in that respect. Neither are they able to make their mission self-supporting, their membership being composed largely of those who are not wealthy. The Pastor gave us from his own personal knowledge an account of the low state of spiritual life among the priests, or ministers, of the State church. Drinking, smoking, card-playing, and accompanying vices are quite common among them. As illustrative of their lack of care for the spiritual welfare of their flock, he gave the following incident:

A lay-member, on his way to the church on Sunday morning, passed by the minister's house and saw the divine sitting at his window in his dressing-gown. The following conversation took place: Min.—"Where are you going this morning?" L. M.—"Why to church, of course." Min.—"Is this Sunday! Well I forgot all about it, wait until I get my coat; I will walk with you." After walking together a short distance they met a doctor whom the minister had invited to his house to drink and play cards. The minister then turned to the lay-member and said, "The physician has come to see me, I am not feeling well; you go on to the church and tell the people I am unable to attend meeting to-day." The two then went to the minister's house where the day was spent as above indicated. Other instances of the low morals of the State priests were given, even worse than the above, but we are glad to believe that these are extreme cases and that there are many good men in the class referred to.

But there is, after making all due allowance for charity's sake, a sad lack of spirituality among the ministers in the State Church, and when we recall the old proverb, "Like priest like people," we need not wonder at the almost total lack of morality among the laity.

From Frederickshaven we travelled southward, stopping at Hjorring and visiting the home of Eld. Christian Eskildsen. We were made welcome and enjoyed the hospitality of this humble Christian home. Our coming to them was the occasion of much comfort and joy to our dear brother and sister. Bro. Eskildsen is a quiet, unassuming man, with a kind, sympathetic heart and deep religious feelings. He is said to be a good speaker, but his excellent example and daily life and walk speak loudest. He has the confidence of the church and the love and respect of all who know him. We also visited the house where brethren Eby and Fry made their home in 1877 when they spent some time in Denmark and organized the first church in Scandinavia. Bro. Eskildsen was at that time ordained to the eldership, and he continues faithful to the trust reposed in him by the church.

At Hjorring we held a meeting in a large hall and then went to Sindal, where the first meeting-house, built by the Brethren in Denmark, is located. It bears the significant name of "Brödrekjemmet" or, "The Brethren's House." The money for this house was raised at the Annual Meeting at Ashland, Ohio, in 1881. Bro. D. N. Workman and others labored hard to secure the amount needed for that purpose. The house has been, in the broadest sense, a home for the Brethren in North Denmark, and they fully appreciate the kindness of those who gave the money to build it.

In the Brethren's Home at Sindal we held several meetings and a love-feast. The occasion will not soon be forgotten. The services began at 8 A. M., the members singing a hymn of welcome for the strangers from America. We give the first verse with a very literal translation:

"O velkommen vaer, Broder, Soester kjaer
I vor Herres Jesu Navn!
Vi vil synge her Om vor Frelser kjaer,
Som os aabnet har sin Favn."

O welcome brother and sister beloved,
In the name of our Lord Jesus,
Here will we sing of our Savior's love
Who has embraced us in his arms.

The house was full during the services and a good deal of interest was manifested by those who came to see and hear. The members of the church seemed to enjoy the services very much indeed. The feast closed at 10 P. M., but this did not close the meeting. The brethren and sisters remained and they continued with one accord in singing and prayer the greater part of the night. At 3 o'clock in the morning Bro. Hope preached to them on the "Reward of Faithfulness." In the early morning we had a season of prayer together and then left them for other fields of labor.

While at Sindal Bro. Poulson, of Fredrickshaven, was advanced to the full ministry to assist Bro. Eskildsen in the care of the churches. He is fifty-five years old, has been in the ministry about ten years, and whilst he is not a fluent speaker, yet his preaching is effective. That he has the confidence of the church was evidenced by the fact that the elders in the District as well as the local church gave a unanimous request that he should be ordained. One was also added to the fold and arrangements made, by which it is hoped two others, who have wandered away, may be reclaimed. A council, or rather a conversation meeting, was held, in which every one is at liberty, without formality, to ask and discuss questions relative to church work. The members had many things to ask about the church in America and their questions were answered to the best of our ability. They were unanimous in an expression that union of sentiment may prevail in all the churches. A hearty greeting and a vote of thanks was sent to all the brethren and sisters in far-away America.

Our next objective point was Hördum on the north-west coast of Denmark. On the way we stopped at Hjermerslev and Thisted to hold meetings. At Hördum the Brethren own a large, two-story building, fitted up for residences, with rooms for three families and a large hall, in which we held a number of meetings. Bro. Eskildsen has charge of the church and is assisted in the ministry by Bro. N. B. Neilsen, a young man who gives promise of future usefulness, but as he has received notice that he must serve in the army or be imprisoned, he would like to go to America, where he may be free to serve the Lord in peace. The members at Hördum, as at all other places which we have visited, show a deep sense of gratitude for what the church in America has done for them.

From Oregon.

SEPT. 24 was the time set for a ministerial meeting with the Brethren of the Lebanon congregation, Linn County, Oregon.

At 10 A. M. the elders, ministers and members met at the Fairview church-house, and enjoyed a very pleasant meeting. Eld. S. S. Barklow and wife, Dr. D. M. Brower and wife, and others, arrived from Coos County just in time for the meeting, having traveled a distance of 220 miles by private conveyance.

The forenoon was taken up by the ministers, in talking on the best plan for a ministerial meeting, and organizing for a future meeting.

At 1 P. M. we met in church council to dispose of some deferred matters. All was adjusted in love and to the satisfaction of all,—as much so as could be expected, under existing circumstances. Next morning, Sept. 25, at 10 A. M., the elders, ministers and delegates, with others, met in District Meeting and organized by electing Eld. S. S. Barklow, Moderator; David Brower, Reading Clerk; and J. B. Early, Writing Clerk. Six churches were represented by eleven delegates. More business was before this meeting than usual, but all was disposed of in love, and without sending any papers to Annual Meeting. Eld. S. S. Barklow was elected as our delegate on Standing Committee to next Annual Meeting. Bro. P. J. Baltimore was re-elected on our State Mission Board. As the Mission Board was present, and had calls from different parts of the State for preaching, they filled the calls as best they could, sending Bro. David Brower to Union County, to look after the isolated members; J. B. Early to Polk County; S. S. Barklow to Jackson County, and the writer to Coos County.

At 3:30 P. M., Sept. 27, the District Meeting closed, all feeling that it was good for us to be there. Our deacons were then busily engaged in making preparations for the Communion which was appointed for 7:30, the same evening. When the time came, we had a fair attendance of members. On Sunday we had three sermons, at 11 A. M., at 2, and at 7:30 P. M. On the whole, we think we had a profitable meeting. May the Lord bless the work, is our prayer. M. M. BASHOR.

Notes by the Way.

ACCORDING to previous arrangements I met with the saints in the Brothers' Valley congregation, Somerset Co., Pa., on the evening of Sept. 14, and continued until the evening of the 21st. My efforts at that point resulted in four additions by baptism and three who were reclaimed.

Sept. 23, I met with the saints at Uniontown, Pa., in the George's Creek congregation, where I continued over their love-feast, Sept. 26, and closed my meetings on the evening of the 28th. As a result, eight were baptized, and four more applicants to be attended to.

On the evening of Oct. 1, I commenced a series of meetings at Beach Dale, in the Berlin congregation, and was also present at their feast Oct. 3. I closed the meetings at that point on the evening of the 4th. As a result, two were added to the church. May they all prove shining lights in the church, and finally be present at the reunion on the other shore. SILAS HOOVER.

From the Grand Prairie Church, Sidney, Nebr.

BRO. J. E. YOUNG, of Beatrice, just closed an interesting and encouraging series of meetings at this place. He commenced his labor of love on the evening of Sept. 19, and continued until Oct. 4. As an immediate result of his labors two precious souls confessed their Savior, and arose to walk in newness of life.

Bro. Young preached the Word fearlessly, and, we trust, ere long it will accomplish the object for which it was designed, and in due time bring forth fruit meet for the Master's use.

Sept. 27 we were edified by brethren Mohler, Witmer and Shick. All of these brethren delivered discourses on the same day, there being three services on that day, besides a children's meeting. At the latter, Bro. Young, together with the other brethren, addressed the youth, instructing and guiding them on the way to a nobler existence in this life, and a preparation for the life to come.

We appreciate their words very much, in our efforts to labor for our Master on the frontier, and we trust, that, ere long, the Lord will send more laborers into the great harvest-field.

Sidney, Nebr., Oct. 5, 1891.

From Laurens, Iowa.

WE, the members of Pocahontas Co., Iowa, met in church concil with elders John Early and J. W. Trostle Sept. 12, to organize a church. This church is to be called Stony Lake church, and consists of ten members. The writer was chosen Secretary and Treasurer, Eld. Early was chosen to take the oversight of the church. A choice was held for a deacon, which resulted in calling Bro. F. C. Delp to the work. Sister Mary Landner was chosen solicitor.

A love-feast was held in the afternoon. The meeting opened at 3:30 P. M. After preaching, baptism was administered to a dear sister. Others, we think, are not far from the kingdom. This is the first Communion meeting ever held in the County. The members all seemed to enjoy the meeting. Eld. J. W. Trostle did the preaching, and officiated. He also preached on Sunday forenoon and evening to a fair audience. Good impressions were made, which, we trust, will bring forth fruit to God, and eternal blessing to the hearers. J. W. BUTTERBAUGH.

Notes of Travel.

I LAST wrote from Bro. A. W. Austin's in Cook County, Texas. We had seven meetings there. Though the congregations were small, good attention was given and good behavior was the order. This is not the best time for meetings in the South, as all are busy picking cotton. On Monday Bro. Austin brought us a distance of eighteen miles to Gainsville. On our way we crossed the ford where Bro. Jacob Burkey was drowned. As we looked at it, we thought of the great loss to the work in Texas. May God send some one to fill the place, for laborers are much needed.

We left Gainsville via Dallas to Lancaster, Dallas County, and arrived at the home of our niece,—Mrs. Mary Evans,—on Tuesday evening, Sept. 29, where we rested one day. On Thursday evening we commenced meetings. After holding four meetings, we closed on Sunday. There are no members living here, but, like many other places, if they could have preaching regularly, a good work might be done.

But when will the time ever come when the true Gospel will be preached to every creature? As things are now working, the time will never come.

Tuesday, Oct. 6, we left Dallas for Texarkana, where my wife took the Cotton Belt R. R. for Stuttgart, Ark., while I took the Iron Mountain R. R. for Arkadelphia, Ark., where I am now writing, at the home of Bro. J. W. Gephart; but as it does not seem a suitable time for meeting, I leave to-day for Austin, north of Little Rock, where I expect to stay over Sunday and hold some meetings. I hope to get to Stuttgart next week. JAS. R. GISH.

Notes and Jottings of Our Trip to Iowa.

I LEFT home Aug. 15, and next day arrived at State Center church, Marshall Co., Iowa. Eld. A. M. Dickey has charge of the church here. The evening services were well attended. The heavy rains that preceded rendered this a busy season for farmers, hence the afternoon services were not so well attended as desirable. Their feast, Aug. 29 and 30, seemed to be a reunion for this and the adjoining churches. It was a scene of enjoyment to young and old.

This was once one of the flourishing churches of Iowa. The work of the Old Order element marred its peace to some extent, but now all this has about disappeared.

This church is unfortunate in the loss of her ministers. Bro. Joseph Trostle, of Kingsly, Iowa, made his home here for years during her prosperity. Bro. J. C. Seibert, of the Iowa River church, left them within the present year. Bro. Dickey, their only minister, has sold his home and expects to locate elsewhere. The church, however, wishes him to remain.

It was in this church that Bro. —— Garver lived, who, when on a visit to his former home in Tennessee, previous to the war, was arrested for preaching a sermon, bearing on the slavery question. He was summoned on Sunday. To this call he refused to listen, but assured the officer that he would appear on Monday morning. Bro. Garver was relieved by the Brethren, who furnished his bail. He was also advised not to appear at the time of his trial. The Brethren appeared and paid the fine,—five hundred dollars.

On the evening of Sept. 3, I met with the members of the Indian Creek church, in Story County. My stay here was short. A good interest was developed at an early stage of the meeting. One was baptized, while a number were near the kingdom. Their feast, Sept. 12, was one of interest, and the attendance large. I know of no locality or State, where members enjoy the reunion at our feasts better than in Iowa. The roads are delightful; the members drive forty and fifty miles, and they are above the average as singers. They employ most of the hours of intermission in singing. As they provide refreshments for the entire congregation, they have three services on Saturday and Sunday. Bro. Henry Troup is their only minister. Bro. D. E. Brubaker, now of Mt. Morris, made this church his home for years. There are evidences that Bro. Daniel did some good work for the Master in the Indian Creek church, and it looks to me that Bro. Daniel ought to have continued there in well-doing.

On the evening of Sept. 16 I met with the saints at Dry Creek, Linn County. Here I met Bro. Holder, from Ohio, who had come to labor with the Brethren. As we did not think best that both should remain at the same place, the Brethren assigned me to a new point,—Burnett,—eight miles north. The people here knew but little of the tenets of our doctrine. When they heard of our principles, it awakened both interest and surprise, but as Bro. Holder could not remain, I returned to the church on the evening of Sept. 30. By that time the weather was inclement in the extreme. On the day of their feast, Oct. 3, the meeting was not large, yet it was interesting. On Sunday, Oct. 4, the three services were largely attended, and there were marks of deep impression in the congregation. During their meeting one was baptized. Bro. Thomas Snider is the elder here, and has good assistance in the ministry.

It was in this church that the Quinter and McConnell Debate was held. The "Debate" was a victory in that locality for the Brethren's cause,—so much so that a number of the Disciples united with the Brethren, including one or more of their elders. Their house, I was told, never had a sermon preached in it after the Debate, and was afterward sold. The house we occupied was built since by our brethren, within half a mile of where the Disciple house once stood.

While at the new point, north, Eld. McConnell came through there on business, and was present at one of my evening appointments. I had a pleasant little talk with him. He is tall and has a quick, firm step. He is a careful listener, with an undaunting countenance. Under the influence of his age he has lost much of his combative spirit, for which he was once noted. He alluded to Bro. Quinter kindly, and expressed a desire to obtain Bro. Quinter's last work. I made arrangements for him to get the book.

Sept. 24 I was present at the District Meeting of the Middle District of Iowa. The meeting was well represented. It was organized with Bro. Stephen Johnson as Moderator. Bro. Johnson has a very good knowledge of parliamentary rules, which is very necessary for a successful Moderator. The afternoon session was introduced by hearing the report of the Committee on location of Annual Meeting. They simply reported a disagreement of the committee. Upon a vote, the Committee's report was rejected. The Moderator then asked the Committee again to go into session. They did so, and brought in a majority report for Des Moines, and a minority report for Cedar Rapids. A Foreman of each report was appointed who reported to the meeting,—allowing no discussion. Upon a vote, the delegates were a tie. The Moderator then cast the deciding vote for the minority report, hence the next Annual Meeting will be held at Cedar Rapids.

With Bro. Goughenour, one of the Committee on location, I visited the City of Des Moines. We went out to the State Fair Grounds, which they offered for the Meeting. The Grounds have ample, permanent buildings, which they offered to fit free for the Meeting. A number of members live in the City.

Cedar Rapids offered the use of a park or grove. The Commercial Club signed a written agreement to fit up the grounds at their expense, in such a way as a committee of our Brethren may direct, with all minor conveniences for the Meeting. The Committee of Arrangements are elders Jacob Snider, John Zook and G. W. Hopwood, whom we look upon as efficient brethren. In company with Bro. Jacob Snider we called upon Mr. Ely, the president of the Commercial Club, who kindly invited us to take a seat in his carriage, and inspect the grounds offered for the Meeting. The grounds are nicely situated, with a grove adjacent. There are two lines of Electric Street Railways leading to the grounds, and the Milwaukee & St. Paul R. R. is within two blocks. Cedar Rapids is one of Iowa's flourishing cities, of twenty thousand inhabitants. Their packing house has the capacity of handling five to six thousand hogs daily.

We called on Mr. Hanegan, the General Passenger Agent of the B. C. R & N. R. R. Mr. Hanegan obtained from Hagerstown papers an idea of the volume of our Annual Meeting. When he learned its magnitude, he spared no pains or efforts to secure the Meeting. Bro. Tisdale has one of the leading clerkships in Mr. Hanegan's department. We are glad to report that Bro. Tisdale and wife are faithful workers in the church. I can assure our Brethren that the Cedar Rapids Commercial Club and the railroad men will do all they can to make our next Annual Meeting pleasant. Brethren, will we do our part? If so, let us come with proper business and a proper spirit.

On our return I made a short stop at Mt Morris. It is needless to say it was pleasant. The school presents a scene of interest. For the term one hundred and ninety students are enrolled. Their new building is large, substantial and plain. The Mission Board was in session during my short stay. To listen to their reports of aid rendered to weak Districts and weak churches, is encouraging. I was surprised to learn that the list of subscribers to the GOSPEL MESSENGER has grown much recently. A little effort on the part of the agents would increase the list still more.

I. J. ROSENBERGER.

From the George's Creek Congregation, Pa.

Our Communion services, in connection with one week's meeting, in the Uniontown church, Fayette County, Pa., were a large and pleasant gathering. We began our meetings on Sunday evening, Sept. 20, and closed on Monday evening, Sept. 28. Bro. Silas Hoover, of the Elklick congregation, Somerset Co., Pa., came to our assistance on Wednesday evening and continued with us until the close of the meeting. Bro. Guthrie, of the Sandy Creek congregation, W. Va., was with us on Saturday, and gave us help in the ministry. The home ministers and deacons were all present, and participated in the Communion services. The order and attention were excellent, and we felt that we had a refreshing and cheering meeting, and that the Lord was with us. Twelve precious souls were received into the church by baptism. May the Good Lord bless and keep them in the narrow way of holiness that leads to eternal life. JOHN C. JOHNSON.

From Mexico, Ind.

THE brethren and sisters of the Mexico church, Ind., met last Thursday, Oct. 8, for council, preparatory to our Communion. A large number of the brethren and sisters were present, and all business was disposed of in a very agreeable manner. Some very important matters came before the church. The church needed more help in the official body, and decided to elect two ministers and two deacons. Brethren John M. Lair and Erwin Fisher were chosen to the ministry. As this took one of our deacons, we chose three deacons,—brethren Levi Flora, A. D. Lair and Samuel C. Kinzie. They were duly installed and seem to realize their great responsibility. We feel confident that, by the power of God, they will be of much aid to the cause, and bring others into the true fold. We also re-instated three who had wandered away from the fold a few years ago. They confessed their wrongs and were restored to full fellowship. One young sister was received by baptism, and we hope that the Lord will bless our work. J. M. REPLOGLE

Love-Feast Reports.

I NOTICE in the GOSPEL MESSENGER No. 37, 1891, that you wish to have a report from all the love-feasts in the Brotherhood this fall. There was a short report sent in of the Washington church, Kans., which was never published in the MESSENGER. A marriage notice met with a similar disposal. For my part, I cannot see much use in sending news for publication when it is not published. H. TALHELM.

Washington, Kans., Oct. 6.

REMARKS.

We certainly never received the notices referred to above. Our rule is to publish all notices of the kind, and we do not remember to have declined an item of church news this season unless it was when two or more reports were sent in about the same feast. In that case we give preference to the one first received. Occasionally we receive a report without a name. These we always decline. We greatly regret that our brother's report failed to reach us. He will please not become discouraged, but try it again. This is the first and only complaint about the omission of church news that we have received this season. —ED.

What One Copy Did.

LAST Saturday and Sunday we attended the Marsh Creek love-feast, near Gettysburg. We had an excellent time and one was baptized. While there I heard some good words for the MESSENGER, which you will enjoy.

Some time ago a good sister, living in Maryland, sent a crock of apple-butter to a neighbor. The apple-butter crock was wrapped in an old MESSENGER. The neighbor's children read the old paper through curiosity. This soon gave place to conviction. More light with respect to certain truths was sought for and obtained. The children were baptized and, in course of time, were followed by both parents. All are members of the church now, and the first steps of that worthy change were brought about by one MESSENGER, and a crock of apple-butter.

Joy and Sorrow.

OCT. 10, in company with quite a number of our members, we enjoyed the feast with the Wade Branch church, in Forest Park, Ottawa, Kans. In the evening about one hundred and fifty members surrounded the tables, but soon our joy was turned to sorrow, when, during the examination services, a message was handed Eld. G. E. Wise, of Olathe, informing him of the death of his companion.

About 127 members communed at the above feast, and about twenty-five more were deprived for want of room. There were twelve ministers in attendance. Eld. Jesse Studebaker officiated. The meeting was well represented by the citizens of Ottawa, and the best of order was manifested during the meetings.

I returned home on Sunday evening. On Monday morning I went to Olathe, to attend the funeral of sister Wise. The services were held in the Presbyterian house by the Brethren, in the presence of a large congregation. Sister Wise was a sufferer for several years with a complication of diseases, which, about three months ago, unbalanced her mental powers. She died at the asylum and among strangers, at the age of 32 years, 9 months and 10 days. The church has lost a faithful sister, the husband and the three children a kind companion and mother.

To-day wife and self go to the Appanoose church to attend the feast at that place.

Home Mission Work.

THE Mission Board of the Middle District of Indiana met at Mexico and transacted the following: "That the elders of the local churches be reminded of a decision passed at our last District Meeting to aid in building a house of worship near Kewanna, Fulton Co., Ind."

Bro. S. M. Aukerman was selected by the Mission Board on the Building Committee. It was decided to have a series of meetings held at Goodland in the western mission field. As the Secretary intended attending a love-feast north of Winamac, Pulaski Co, Ind., he was instructed to make some investigation in regard to sending missionaries to the northern part of Randolph County and the southern part of Starke County, and, if there is needed encouragement, to make arrangements for mission work. We also made arrangements for an investigation of matters in the eastern mission field.

Much other business was transacted, but to give details of all would make our article too lengthy. Monthly meetings are still kept up at Kewanna. The outlook is good for an ingathering there in the near future. A mistake occurred in the printing of the Minutes of our last District Meeting. The number of trips to mission fields were twenty; number of sermons preached, ninety-eight; two were received by baptism; the receipts for the year were $245.68; expenditures, $181.40.

Our desire is that the good work may go on, that we redouble our diligence until the isolated places in this District may have the Gospel preached in all its fullness. W. S. TONEY,

Sec. of Mission Board.

Wayside Notes.

WE closed our meetings in Boone County, Ind., on the evening of Oct. 5. We felt that the Lord was with us, and blessed our labors. We had intended closing our meeting on the evening of Oct 4, but, on extending an invitation, four came forward and expressed a desire to unite with the church. We, therefore, appointed services for the next day and evening. When we met next day, there were eight present, to be received into the church. After short services at the house, we repaired to the water where eight souls were buried with Christ in baptism.

After the audience was dismissed, another came forward and demanded baptism. The congregation was called to order, and another soul was "born again."

In the evening we had services again, at the close of which one more came forward and expressed a desire to unite with the church. Though we had to close our meetings at this place, on account of other promises, an appointment was made to meet next day, and administer the ordinance of baptism. When we met at the appointed time, another soul had become tired of sin, and, after the necessary arrangements, was baptized, together with the one that had previously applied. This makes eleven, in all, that were baptized.

One old brother, who had been a wanderer for a number of years, returned. Others expressed themselves as intending to come soon. We bespeak a bright future for the church at this place. There were only six members living here. The doctrine of the Brethren is new, and the majority of the people never saw trine immersion administered before.

On the evening of Oct. 8 we had the pleasure of hearing Bro. Bennett Trout, of Ohio, preach a sermon in the Buck Creek church, where he is conducting a series of meetings. May the Lord bless his labors!

Oct. 9, in company with my family and father and mother, I went to the Nettle Creek church, to attend their love-feast, and to hold a series of meetings. Here we had a very pleasant love-feast. Bro. John Smith, of Ohio, officiated.

At this writing we are with the Brethren in the Nettle Creek church, Wayne Co., Ind. May God bless our labors at this place! In reply to calls I am receiving, I will say, No church need apply for my labors this fall or winter, as my time is all engaged.

No one should do without the MESSENGER now. Let all read Bro. D. L. Miller's notes of travel, which alone are well worth the price of the paper. May God bless him and his wife, and the faithful ministers every-where; and may many be added to the fold this fall and winter!

Report of the Summit Sunday-school, Pa.

THIS school was organized April 5, 1891, with Bro. Jno. D. Baer as Superintendent. Afterwards Herman Baer was chosen as Assistant. The school first met for recitation and regular exercises on Sunday, April 19. The Brethren's Quarterly was used in the advanced classes, and in the primary classes the Juvenile Quarterly was used as soon as issued.

The total number of scholars during the term was 45; average attendance for quarter ending June 28, was 29; for quarter ending Sept. 27, was 26; number of classes, 7; average of teachers present each Sunday, 5; amount of penny collections, $5.68, besides a special collection of $3.61, taken June 28, for the benefit of Bro. Quinlan's Bible School, Baltimore.

The officers and teachers were nearly all members of our church, but of the scholars, not more than one-half belonged to Brethren's families. There were at least four other schools within a radius of two and one-half miles from ours. Thus we had only a small territory, which accounts for our small attendance. For several years, preceding the present one, the attendance dwindled down so much toward autumn, that it was necessary to close the school prematurely. In this respect we have made an improvement on former years, and much of it is due to the efforts of Bro. David Blough, our chorister, who earnestly worked to improve the singing exercises.

Let me suggest that the friends of Sunday-schools, and more especially those who have been officers and teachers, assemble at stated times and places, to exchange views regarding methods of Sunday-school work, and all the details that enter into a prosperous and interesting Sunday-school. A meeting for such a purpose should not comprise too much territory, making it inconvenient or expensive for some to attend. Many Counties in which the Brethren are well established, having from five to ten congregations, and perhaps twice as many Sunday-schools, would include sufficient territory to make such a meeting interesting. The most suitable time for such meetings would be early in the spring, before such of the schools open that generally close in the fall, or the meeting might be held at any other time most favorable for a full representation from all the schools entitled to representation.

I approve of the use of lesson helps, or quarterlies. I think the plan of the Juvenile is a good one, though experience will doubtless suggest improvements. So long as the Brethren's Quarterly is intended for classes that are properly of an intermediate grade, the compilers, or editors, should aim to make the matter contained in them (i. e. notes and questions), simple enough for those of this grade, so that they may get the meaning. Long quotations from commentators should be avoided if possible. Questions on the lesson text and explanatory notes should clearly indicate where the answer can be found. All proper names in the Quarterly should be brought together, their correct pronunciation indicated, their meaning given, and a short sketch given of the persons or places. It might also be interesting to many to have the lesson texts given according to the Revised Translation for comparison.

On the Wing.

Eld. M. M. Bashor and I left Oregon for the Atlantic States, to attend the Annual Meeting, April 28. We parted at Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory, I going through Kansas, Iowa and Ohio. We met again at the Annual Meeting and then separated. I visited in Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Iowa and Kansas. I attended meetings in all the above-named States, with excellent attention. I arrived here, at Macleay, Marion Co., Oregon, Sept. 19. During my trip I had good health, and I met with a very kind reception every-where. Besides many other meetings, I attended two Communion meetings in Kansas, and enjoyed my trip very well indeed. I thank the Lord for my safe arrival, thus far on my trip, and all other blessings.

The Mission Board of Oregon, having appointed me as evangelist, I shall go first to Union County, Oregon. I expect to start about Oct. 13. After my return I expect, in company with Eld. S. S. Barklow, of Coos County, Oregon, to go to Jackson County, Oregon. Perhaps I may remain there all winter, owing to circumstances. We want the prayers of our brethren, over the great Brotherhood, in our behalf. My address, for the present, will be Myrtle Point, Coos Co., Oregon, until further notice is given. David Brower.

Macleay, Oregon, Oct. 1.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

Thirteen Baptized.—The series of meetings which began at Bethany, Sept. 19, continued until Oct. 8. There was good attention and large attendance during the meeting, and as an immediate result, thirteen souls were added unto the church by baptism. One who had been a wanderer for about thirty years, was reclaimed. — Charity Himes, Ladoga, Ind.

Flat Rock Love-Feast.—Our Communion, Oct. 10, was in every way a pleasant one. Brethren Benj. Miller, Geo. Wine, Wm. Peters, Michael Cline and J. F. Driver, were present with faithful, earnest service. Some communed for the first time, having but recently entered the service of Christ, while some, perhaps, communed for the last time. Altogether our spiritual outlook is encouraging.—Daniel Hays, Moore's Store, Va., Oct. 12, 1891.

Notice.—The Ministerial Meeting of the Middle District of Pennsylvania will be held in the Clover Creek church Nov. 25, 26 and 27.—James A. Sell, McKee's Gap, Pa., Oct. 16.

Love-feast Deferred.— We, the members of the Camp Creek church, Ill., recall the Communion meeting announced for Oct. 23, as, under present circumstances, the meeting cannot be held.—J. W. Shively, Sect.

Alive to the Work.—A portion of the members of the Mill Creek church, Polk Co., N. C., were seen at our last council-meeting, and seventy dollars was pledged to aid the Mission Board of Eastern Tennessee, in having preaching done for a year in Polk, Henderson and Buncombe Counties, N. C. There is much ministerial work needed here, and much good can be done. We aim to raise, in all, at least $100, to aid in this work. This is quite a sum, considering our circumstances.—J. M. Putnam, Clover, Polk Co., N. C., Oct. 12.

Deacons Elected. The Brethren of the Cedar County church, Iowa, held their love-feast Oct. 17 and 18, and had a very enjoyable meeting. Brethren J. S. Snyder, J. C. Seibert and G. W. Hopwood dealt out to us the Bread of Life, and a deep interest was manifested in the meeting. One old brother was restored, and the following brethren were chosen to the office of deacon, and duly installed: Daniel Dilly, of Bennett, Iowa, and Almer Puterbaugh, of Clarence, Iowa. May God bless, guide and sustain them in their important callings to the increase and purity of the church!—John Zuck.

Interesting Sunday-school.—The St. Joseph Sunday-school commenced its sessions April 12, and closed Sept. 27, 1891. Our Superintendent for six months was Eld. H. W. Kreighbaum. Our school, though not very large, always had a fair attendance. The total number of scholars that attended during the term was 709; total number of officers and teachers, 146; total number of visitors, 174. The entire number that attended was 1,029. The entire collection was $15.63. Our closing day was devoted to the asking of general questions and a song service.—D Adelle Shudebaker, Assistant Secretary, South Bend, Ind.

Minister Elected.—The brethren and sisters of the Deep Water church, Henry Co., Mo., held their love-feast Oct. 14, and we thought it was a very enjoyable feast. One pleasant feature of the meeting was that a number of brethren and sisters from adjoining churches were present. Brethren A. Reese and D. M. Mohler, from the Warrensburgh church, and a number of other ministering brethren were present and gave us much encouragement by their good instruction. Bro. D. M. Mohler officiated at the feast. The church held a choice for a minister, and the lot fell on Bro. William Brey. Our prayer is that he may be faithful to the church and his holy calling, and at last receive a crown that is in reserve for the faithful. —Lizzie Fahnestock, Montrose, Mo.

A Pleasant Visit.—We recently had a visit from Bro. J. H. Beer and wife, of Rockton, Pa. While with us Bro. Beer preached five sermons to fair congregations. Bro. Beer is a young man in years, but is laboring to the best of his ability to prepare for the great work,—preaching the Gospel. He is a plain, practical speaker, and greatly pleased the young people (as such mostly compose the congregations here). The great need in the mission fields is a stationed minister, and we hope some one will feel to move here, to help in the work of saving souls. My wife, who has been sick since some time in July, has so far recovered as to do light house-work, but is not strong.—D. C. Burkholder, Fannettsburgh, Pa.

Pleasant Council.—Sept. 19 the members of the Powell's Valley church, Oregon, met in quarterly council. All business was transacted in a Christian-like manner. At this meeting Bro. H. C. Holcomb and the writer were sent as delegates to District Meeting. Our love-feast will occur Nov. 14, at 2 P. M., at the residence of Bro. J. C. Wakefield, on the writer's farm, four and one-half miles east of Clackamas Station, Oregon; one mile south-west of Damascus. — J. A. Royer, Clackamas, Oregon, Oct. 5

One Reclaimed.—Our love-feast in the Saline Valley church, Kans., was held Oct. 10 and 11. Ministering Brethren from other congregations were Eld. John Humbarger, Eld. John Hollinger, J. M. Snyder and D. W. Stoner. Bro. Hollinger officiated. We had excellent preaching and a good meeting. Two were received by letter and one reclaimed. We also arranged to have a series of meetings at the Tripp school-house, to be conducted by Bro. Humbarger; to commence Nov. 7.—L. W. Fitzwater, Bashan, Kans., Oct. 14.

From the Golden State.—I cannot see how some of our members can do without the paper, when we can get so much good, spiritual food from it. I thank the Good Lord that wife and I are in our usual health. Health generally is good here. We have meetings in the College Building every Lord's Day; Sunday-school at 10 A. M., preaching at 11 A. M. and 7 in the evening, and social meeting every Tuesday evening. Our meetings are all well attended. The school is in good working order. More students are in attendance than were expected. There are now four organized churches in California, and prospects are good for more.—John Metzger, Lordsburg, Cal., Oct. 8.

Fourteen Received by Baptism.—The love-feast in the Lick Creek church, Ind., which occurred Oct. 2, was an enjoyable one. Bro. D. C. Campbell was with us, and commenced meetings on Sunday previous, and continued one week. Bro. William Harshbarger and wife were also with us during the latter part of our meetings. Many good and lasting impressions were made, and the borders of Zion enlarged. Oct. 2 two precious souls were led down to their watery graves, we trust, to walk in newness of life, and on Sunday four more were baptized. On Sunday night our meetings closed, amid general regret that our brethren could not stay with us longer. Oct. 11 six more came forward and expressed a desire to unite with the children of God. This makes fourteen members that were received by baptism this summer. Bro. Campbell, during his short stay with us, gave us an abundance of spiritual food, instructive to both saint and sinner.—Martin Burger.

Alive in the Lord's Work.—The quarterly council in the Blue Ridge church, Ill., occurred Oct. 3. A goodly number were present. Much business came before the meeting, but everything passed off in a Christian-like manner, and, I presume, to the general satisfaction of all. At the harvest-meeting the missionary cause was remembered by a donation of $18.00. Our series of meetings commenced on Saturday night, Oct. 3. Bro. Martin McClure did the preaching, and delivered ten discourses to fair congregations. We think that Bro. McClure has given the people at the above-named place something to think about. Not only were sinners warned, but saints were encouraged and strengthened in the Lord's work. On the evening of the Communion one precious soul became willing to submit to the will of the Lord. This caused great joy among the Father's children here. May the Lord help our dear brother to live faithful, at last to receive a crown in heaven!—Bertha Barnhart.

Enjoyable Harvest-Meeting.—Aug. 29 we held our harvest-meeting. We were ably reminded of our duty to God by Bro. Shroyer, and the sum of $23.45 was collected for the missionary cause. We thank the brethren and sisters from adjoining congregations for their presence and assistance.—A. J. Myers, Maple Grove, Ohio.

Pleasant Love-feast.—The love-feast in the Monroe County congregation was truly a pleasant one. Our help was all that we could desire. The main part of the preaching was done by Bro. G. B. Royer, of Mt. Morris, who came to us in season. He was assisted by Bro. M. Replogle, of Appanoose County. At this meeting we received three by letter.—Hiram Berkman.

Delegate Elected.—The Panther Creek church met in council to-day, Oct. 3. There was little business before the meeting. The annual visit reported all the members to be in love and union with each other. All business was adjusted to the satisfaction of all present. We have appointed our love-feast for Oct. 16, at 10 A. M. Bro. Geo. W. Cripe has promised to be with us at that time. We expect to continue a series of meetings in the village of Roanoke. Our delegate to District Meeting is Bro. T. W. Keiser.—C. T. Eller, Roanoke, Ill., Oct. 3, 1891.

Refreshing Meetings.—On Sunday evening, Oct. 4, was the close of one week's meetings in the Greene church, Iowa. Bro. Joseph Holder, of Deweyville, Ohio, came to us on Monday, Sept. 28, and remained for one week, preaching, in all, eleven sermons. He had good congregations all the time, excepting a few times when it was rainy. Although there were no accessions to the church, we believe there was a great deal of good done, as the members seemed to be encouraged, and very much built up. He preached the Word with great power and reminded the members, as well as others, of their duty toward God, as taught by the Gospel.—J. D. Shook, Greene, Iowa, Oct. 6.

Two Souls on the Lord's Side.—Early in the summer the Sabetha church procured the services of Bro. A. Hutchison for a series of meetings in September. The members made special preparation by prayer and often talking about the meetings, thereby preparing the mind to receive the Word. They also spoke to the people about them and distributed tracts. They aroused an interest by asking and answering questions. There was quite an anxiety for the meetings to begin. There was much strength added to the Sabetha church by the meetings. Two dear souls made the good confession and will receive baptism in a few days. The meetings began Sept. 13 and closed Sept. 29.—John Heckman, Sabetha, Kans., Oct. 3.

One Soul for the Lord.—Bro. F. W. Dove, of Tennessee, has been with the members of the Greenwood church, Texas Co., Mo., during the past week. He preached eight sermons for us. One dear sister was received into the church by baptism, and one was reclaimed. Others were deeply impressed but deferred action for this time. We hope they will not put off coming to Christ until it is forever too late.—J. J. Troxel, Cabool, Mo., Oct. 3.

Rejoice With Us.—The members of the Roann church, Ind., met in church council on Saturday, Oct. 3. The business that came before the meeting passed off very pleasantly. One letter was granted, and one dear brother who had left the flock was again admitted into the fold. Two precious souls made application for membership and were baptized. On Sunday previous to this two others were baptized. Those four are heads of families and range in age from twenty-four to fifty-seven years. May they hold out faithful to the end!—Joseph John.

A Pleasant Council.—On Saturday, Oct. 3, we, the brethren of the Licking Creek church, met in council, preparatory to holding our love-feast, which is to occur, the Lord willing, Nov. 6 and 7. There was quite an amount of business brought before the church, but all was transacted in a Christian-like manner, and we all realized that it was good for us to be there. Our church is small in number, but we were made to rejoice that one dear soul has come out on the Lord's side. Our prayer is that he may hold out faithful!—Jacob S. Keller, Millstone, Md.

Soul-Cheering Meetings.—The members of the Silver Creek church, Ohio, held their Communion meeting Oct. 3, at which time one dear soul was added to the people of God. Ministering brethren from abroad were brethren Jeremiah Gump, Perry McKinney, John Brown, Daniel Snell, George Throne, John Mark. Bro. Daniel Snell officiated. On Sunday morning we held a children's meeting which was very much appreciated by all, especially by the young people and children. Tears were seen to flow down over the cheeks of fathers and mothers as the brethren were admonishing them as to their duties toward their children. We rejoiced to see those little ones pay such good attention while the brethren were addressing them. At 11 A. M. we met for public preaching, at which time Bro. Snell talked to us. His subject was the prayer-covering. Many were the truths drawn out by our brother, concerning that important subject, and we hope that those truths will be laid to heart, and that all may fall in line, and work with such zeal for our Blessed Master that the enemy's ranks be broken and sinners flock home to the Father's house.—J. W. Keiser, Pioneer, Ohio.

Literary Notes.

The Perfect Calendar for Every Year of The Christian Era, Designed for Practical, Every-Day Use. By Henry Fitch. Quarto, 37 pp., 50 cents. New York and London: Funk & Wagnalls.

To provide a Calendar adapted to the needs of mankind in all ages is not an easy task. The number of days in a month or year, or of months in a year, in each case includes a fraction. The Julian Calendar, introduced B. C. 46, has an error amounting to one day in 129 years. Pope Gregory XIII undertook to rectify this error; and the Gregorian Calendar, or New Style is now in use in all Christian countries excepting Russia, where the Julian Calendar is still used, although in all important documents the date of both the Old Style and the New Style is given.

He removed with his parents to Defiance County, and from there, in 1878, to Warren County, Tenn., where he united with the church of the Brethren in 1886. In 1888 he was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. Much of his time, during the five months that he was confined to his bed was spent in communion with his Redeemer, and in talking of the glorious hope of soon going to see his Lord and Savior. Although his sufferings were great, he bore all with the greatest patience until he sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. He leaves a wife and ten children, who earnestly desire the prayers of the church in their sad bereavement. May the children seek the Way of Truth and be found ready when the Lord shall come. J. RICHARDSON.

LIFE AND SERMONS

—: OF :—

ELD. JAMES QUINTER.

This is a neatly-printed and well-bound volume of 426 pages, containing a well-written biographical sketch of Eld James Quinter and forty of his sermons.

The biographical part will be found quite interesting, instructive and impressive. No one can read an account of Bro. Quinter's life without feeling deeply and favorably impressed. The work shows how a poor orphan boy, by hard work, and faithfulness to his religious convictions, rose step by step, until he reached a field of usefulness and honor as broad as the Nation itself. Though dead, his good deeds and the impressive examples in piety, learning and simplicity will follow him for generations to come.

The Sermon Department contains many of his choice sermons, which will prove exceedingly interesting and profitable reading to all, and especially to our ministers and isolated members. We feel that this book will fill a long-felt want in our Brotherhood. Price, post-paid, $1.25.

Gospel Chimes!

BY WM. BEERY.

This little book has been selling more rapidly than the publishers anticipated. The first edition was almost exhausted in the first two months. A second edition is now printed.

Following are a few of the good words received from brethren and other competent judges:

"An Excellent Book for Sunday-schools."

"After having carefully examined "Gospel Chimes" I can pronounce it an excellent book for Sunday-schools, and hope all the schools of the Brethren will adopt the same. Our church is conceded to have the best congregational singing of any denomination, and if it is improved, as it can be, by the use of 'Gospel Chimes,' the power for good will be surprising "—GEO. B. HOLSINGER, Teacher of Music, Bridgewater College, Va.

"Fresh and Pleasing Melodies; Thoughtful, Spiritual, and Poetical Words."

"It gives me pleasure to speak in terms of praise of your new book, 'Gospel Chimes.' It contains many fresh and pleasing melodies to which are wedded thoughtful, spiritual and poetical words. I trust it will hold its own in competition with the numerous books now in the market and find a large sale."—T. M. TOWNE, Chicago, Ill., one of America's best writers of Sunday-school music.

"Better than Many Similar Publications."

"Copy of your new book received. It contains some very pleasing and useful music, while it is to be commended especially for the selection of hymns. Good Sunday-school hymns are in great demand in Sunday-school work, and in this particular 'Gospel Chimes' is better than many similar publications."—A. J. SHOWALTER, the leading writer and publisher of Sunday-school and church music in the South.

"An Excellent Collection."

"I have carefully examined your late Sunday-school singing book, 'Gospel Chimes' and find it to be an excellent collection for the purpose designed, both in words and music."—S. W. STRAUB, Chicago, Ill., the popular Western writer and publisher of Sunday-school music.

Bro. Beery has had a large experience in Sunday-school work, and the book which we offer to the brethren, and the public in general, evinces the exercise of talent as well as good judgment. The religious purity of the hymns contributed by sister Beery adds much to the excellence of the book.

Price per single copy, 30 cts.; per dozen by mail, $3 00; by express, $2 60. Lots of more than a dozen must be sent by express.

"HE who dares to be wicked sometimes for his advantage, will be always so if his interest requires it."

WE have learned lately that two families of brethren have decided to locate in Huntingdon in the coming spring. The heads are both ministers and we will be glad to welcome them among us, and as many more as may decide to come.

WE received a card the other day, written while seated on the banks of the Eder River, at Schwarzenau, Germany, at the place where, it is supposed, our first brethren were baptized. We try not to envy the privileges enjoyed by Bro. D. L. Miller, but we would like to be there.

MAKE preparations now to attend our "Bible Term," which will open Feb. 1 and continue four weeks. Already we are hearing of a number who have decided to come. We will make room to comfortably entertain all who may come. We expect the assistance of some of our able and well-tried brethren.

IF you are in need of good Family Bibles for yourself, your children or your friends, send for our catalogue, which we will be pleased to send to all who may wish it, free of charge. We also furnish our readers with all other good books at publishers' prices. Let us know what you want and we will accommodate you.

BRO. J. B. BRUMBAUGH was with the Clover Creek brethren during their love-feast and reports a large and interesting meeting. He called with Eld. J. W. Brumbaugh and found him improving in health, with good hopes of being well soon. This will be good news to many of our readers, we are sure.

BRO. W. J. SWIGART attended the love-feast at the Fairview church, Blair Co., Pa. This church was formerly a part of the Clover Creek congregation but is now a separate organization. It seems to be prospering, and has a Sunday-school. Jos. S. Snowberger is the only minister and will be very glad to have ministering brethren call and assist. He can be addressed at Williamsburg, Pa.

IT is said that good news makes the soul fat. During our eastern trip we were glad to learn that the GOSPEL MESSENGER, as now conducted, is giving excellent satisfaction, and every-where they said they wanted no change. As to the "no change," we prefer to have nothing to say, but it does make us feel good that our humble efforts seem to be giving general satisfaction.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

After the conclusion of the services, we went to the home of Eld. Chas. Royer, the Brethren's home on such occasions, and while he was still ill, we are glad to say that he was improving in health and may be able to be out again soon. Bro. Charles is an old standard-bearer, and as he is now in his eighty-second year, it is probable that his journey in this life will soon be ended, and that the Master will call him to his reward. May the welcome plaudit, "Well done," be his! In the morning he was quite cheerful and received a large number of the members and friends.

At 9 o'clock on Saturday morning there were preaching services again in the church. In the afternoon Eld. John Beaver kindly took us to his pleasant home just above the town of Mifflinburg, where is had a grand view of the town and the surrounding country for miles around. One of the interesting features of his home is his very pleasant and entertaining blind daughter, Joanna. How the good Lord can blend the five senses into a smaller number and cause a wonderful development in a few, we cannot now explain, but here we have a living evidence of just such a thing. We cannot tell you all that this daughter can do, but we assure you that it is wonderful, if not marvelous. The latter word, we think, expresses it the better. Every-where through the house are seen samples of work executed by her nimble and educated fingers. Flowers of paper, flowers of fine wood and needle-work of the finest execution were shown us as the work of her hands. But the most curious of all is a quilt of crazy patch-work, in which are patches of every shape and form, bedecked with flowers of needlework of every imaginable form, every stitch of which she made with her own hands, unaided. Besides all this, she is entertaining and has a happy and sociable disposition, which has much to do in making her life happy.

Towards evening Bro. John took us up on the hill above his home where we had a very full and grand view of the Buffalo Valley and surrounding hills and mountains. While here he gave me a sketch of the early founders of the church there and pointed out the homes of the old fathers.

At the foot of the hill we were shown where Eld. David Shellenberger first located, he being the first preacher and elder in the Valley. When the country was yet a wilderness of trees he tented beside a small stream and afterwards built the first mill, which has been continued ever since, in its different forms; so, to the country there, he was pioneer in conquering the forests, converting the grain into flour and bread, the people from darkness to light, and was a shepherd to the sheep. We were also shown the former homes of elders Rubsam, Isaac Myers and John Sprogle, who, at one time, lived and labored in this beautiful valley. The order of the ministry in this [illegible], as given, is as follows: David Shellenberger, John Royer, Henry Rubsam, Isaac Myers, John Sprogle, Charles Royer, John Bryanreif, Robert Badger, John Beaver, Adam Beaver, P. H. Beaver, Simon Showalter and Isaiah Beaver. While some of the first ones lived and died there, others moved west, so that at the present time they have the following: Charles Royer,—their aged elder, John and Adam Beaver, Isaiah Beaver and David Strickler,—the young brother elected at this meeting.

Our visit at the home of Bro. John was a pleasant one and we enjoyed it much. In the evening there were preaching services, after which we were taken to the kind home of Bro. Isaac Heddings and cared for during the night. On Sunday morning, bright and early, we were invited to take a seat in Bro. Henry Shellenberger's carriage for a twenty-mile ride to Richfield, where there was an appointment for preaching at 10 o'clock. The morning was cool, but the air was fresh and bracing and we greatly enjoyed both the company and the ride, as there were six of us. The roads were good and the scenery was grand, so that our eyes and soul were feasted with an inspiration that can be had only in a drive over a beautiful country on a fine autumn day.

We reached Richfield, where Bro. Hollinger gave the waiting people one of his practical talks on Christian duties. From here we were taken to the home of Bro. Bender, and from thence on up through the Lost Creek Valley, passing through the growing peach belt of the State. On the ridge to the right, as we passed along, was seen orchard after orchard, with their hundreds of trees from which were shipped this season thousands of crates of this delicious fruit. Red Ridge

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

MISSIONARY HYMN.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

The Light of the World.

THE Lord is the light of the world,
To strangers in darkness below,
The banner of light has unfurled,
And onward its glory still flows.
On Galilee's beautiful shore,
Its glimmering light was first seen,
But darkness so gross, that hung o'er
The way, would obscure its bright beam.

In many a battle it fought,
With darkness, gross darkness on earth,
To banish the monster far off—
And freedom and vict'ry bring forth.
In rivers of blood the light shone,
And driving dense darkness away,
Its glory shines steadily on—
Till merging in heaven's bright day.

Lord help us to carry the light
To regions of darkness and sin;
Put bondage and darkness to flight,
And aid the pure light to shine in.
Till nations from north and the south,
From India to China's fair land,
The islands in vict'ry come forth,
A free and a heavenly band

In words and in charity's deeds,
Lord help us to shine as we go,
In aiding humanity's needs,
As lamps in the darkness below.
May beams from our lamps light the way,
For brother more clearly to see
The dangers encountered each day,
A star in bright glory to be.

BY B. F. MOOMAW.

Chapter Five.

HAVING formed the acquaintance of our Representative in Congress, in our intercourse, in securing the exemption, I met with him occasionally, and talking of those things after the publication of my discussion with Dr. Jackson, I spoke to him of the book, and he asked me to send him a copy. I did so, and after reading it, he wrote to me, saying that he had no idea that our practice in baptism could be so well sustained. On the war question he asked me some questions like this: "Do you regard war under all circumstances to be wrong? Do you not think that the American Revolution for our independence and relief from British oppression was justifiable, or do you hold that those engaged in it sacrificed their Christian character? But I don't propose to enter into a discussion on the subject, for if I did, you would beat me as you did Dr. Jackson."

In July, 1861, the Fifty-first Regiment of Virginia, numbering eight or nine hundred men, under the command of Col. Whorton, came into this vicinity, proposing to remain awhile for the purpose of military training. Some of our neighbors, thinking it a good opportunity to inflict a punishment on me for my anti-war proclivities, piloted some of the officers to my place, where there was a nice grove with a stream of water passing through it, which was indeed a very suitable place for the occasion. Of course I consented, and anticipating the situation, I commenced at once to get into the good graces of the officers and men by kindness in every way, yet not so as to compromise my Christian principles. Pretty soon after they were situated, we prepared a dinner and invited the officers, about twenty in number, all of whom came and seemed to enjoy it very much, and I soon discovered that I had succeeded in getting their good feelings toward me. I learned through them that they were approached by some of my neighbors, who tried to influence them not to spare me, but having succeeded with them as above stated, orders were at once issued that no damage should be done me in any way, nor should there be any intrusion upon my premises, which was strictly observed, so that in the two months that they remained, there was nothing disturbed, but, instead thereof, they were ever ready to give us any needed protection.

During this time two of my sons, J. C. and D. C., owning a separating thrashing-machine, took it to the railroad station, intending to remove it to Tennessee and use it there, but during the night our opponents broke it, damaging it badly, but they shipped it notwithstanding. The threat was then made public that if any one would undertake to thrash my wheat, the machine and wheat would be burned. But the wheat must be thrashed, and the machine came and men were detailed from the camp to guard it at night, and help to thrash during the day; so my wheat was thrashed and no damage done.

By special request I preached for them in the camp, and I never felt more solemn, standing alone, and the soldiers seated around me on the ground, and I certainly never preached Christ, a peaceable Savior, a needed Savior, a suitable Savior, an efficient Savior, the Prince of Peace, with more earnestness than then and there.

During the time of their stay, the measles broke out in the camp in a malignant form. We took many of their sick men into our house, and one of them,—Charley Ross,—a nephew of Captain Ross, spoken of in a former chapter, and one other died, while here.

A strange circumstance occurred in this part of our history. There were three or four of our children, little ones, then with us, who were continually with the sick soldiers, ate with them, slept on their laps for weeks together, and none of them took the disease, and years afterwards they all took the measles from much slighter causes.

The time finally came that the regiment was ordered to the front, leaving about the middle of September, 1861. For the good feeling toward me and for my protection against expected slander, they left with me voluntarily the following testimony:

CAMP JO. JOHNSTON, Sept. 18, 1861.

We, whose names are hereunto assigned, do take pleasure in testifying that the Rev. B. F. Moomaw has used every exertion in his power to render the invalid soldiers comfortable during our stay at this place, all free of charge for what he or his family did for us. Some of us have been at his home six weeks, and, of course, have been a great deal of trouble, for which he would not accept any remuneration. And, furthermore, we certify that the above-named B. F. Moomaw would not accept any pay of our friends who visited us while there, but was thankful for having it in his power to relieve our sufferings, which he cheerfully did in an eminent degree.

And now we are surprised and troubled to hear that some vile and unprincipled wretch, or wretches, have circulated the report that he charged us for all he did for us. We emphatically, peremptorily and flatly deny it to the fullest extent.

This testimonial is signed by over one hundred names, headed by Capt. Ross, spoken of in a former chapter. After the close of the war he settled in South-eastern Virginia, married and raised a family, and some of his relatives are now living in our new and prosperous city, Roanoke, five miles from here. His daughter of nineteen summers recently visited them, and being especially directed by her father to pay us a visit, she came here on Saturday before the second Sunday in July. When meeting her I was strangely affected, recalling the intercourse with her father, and the circumstances connected therewith. She appeared to me as one of my own children, and not at all as a stranger. I took her in my buggy, and drove to the camping ground in which she seemed much interested. She told me that her father was not a member of any church, but inclined to the doctrine of the German Baptist Brethren, and, since our mission field is extending in that direction, a meeting-house being built in his County, not very far from his home, may we not hope that the good seed, sown thirty years ago, may bring forth fruit in the near future? The young lady was with us at meeting on Sunday, and in my discourse I related some of incidents of the past, which were brought to my mind by her presence. The remarks appeared to interest the congregation considerably.

FROM SISTER MILLER.

To the Sisters of the Messenger Family:—

SINCE I have been in this foreign land, many times have I thought of you all in your pleasant homes, and very often of our own home too. My desire to be at home with those we love is so great that I feel at times as though I could stay away no longer; but when I think of the object of our trip, my heart goes up in silent prayer to the Giver of all Good, asking him to give me strength and courage for the remainder of our long journey. Danger has been on every hand, but we have come through it all safely. The Lord has blessed us with reasonably good health thus far, and we thank him for it and all other blessings.

We are now in Sweden. The country reminds us very much of Northern Illinois. A great deal of the country is level land, some parts of it are hilly, with plenty of stones. Orchards are to be seen here and there, with trees loaded down with fruit, a beautiful picture to look at, especially after having been in North Denmark where fruit-trees are a rarity.

The people here, as well as in Denmark, are pleasant. Wherever we go we find good, kind-hearted people. I am not able to talk to them, for I understand but a few words of their language, not enough to carry on a conversation with them. Occasionally we meet some who speak English very well, and we are glad indeed to meet them, for it is quite a satisfaction to be able to talk to those we meet.

We are making our home for a few days with brother and sister Olsson, and we are very thankful to them for this chance of resting before we start to Germany. Visiting churches in North Denmark and Sweden has been very tiresome. We had scarcely time to rest. I have gone the whole round, even to the riding of forty miles in one day to a place of meeting. Many times I have been so tired that it seemed hardly possible to sit up during services, but strength was given me from above, and I would get along all right. It makes no difference what we do, whether working at home, or traveling, we are sure to get tired, if not able to get the proper amount of rest when it is needed.

The brethren and sisters are rejoiced to have us with them; even those who are not members of the church seem glad. Many of them shake hands with us, and, with a good deal of feeling, ask the blessing of the Lord to go with us. A few evenings ago an elderly man shook my hand heartily, and, without saying one word, pointed with his other hand up to heaven, his head bowed down, and tears in his eyes. Even though he said not a word, I knew what he meant. I said to him, "Yes, yes." He wanted me to know that when we all get home to heaven, we would understand each other. The Lord knows all languages as well as what is in our hearts. What a comforting thought! Is it not well for us to keep our hearts pure and free from sin?

The Swedish people are quite religious. It is very interesting to watch their faces during services. They are so eager to hear every word that is said. Many of them rise from their seats, incline their bodies forward, looking intently into the face of the speaker, fearful a word may be said and they not hear it. Men and women who do not belong to our mission are also very anxious to hear the Word of God preached. It is nothing uncommon to see tears streaming down their cheeks. All of this is certainly an inspiration to the speaker. I am glad to be here; that does not mean just here in "Vanneberge," but glad I have been permitted to visit all of the churches in Denmark and Sweden. I am glad to see the love they manifest for Jesus, and for each other. I have learned many good lessons on this trip, which I shall carry with me through the rest of my life.

Sweden seems to be a good place for mission work, especially at this point. The waters are now being troubled, and the right way sought for. This morning, while in my room, writing, an elderly sister came in. After the accustomed salutation she began talking to me very earnestly in Swedish. I understood a little of what she was saying, but not enough for it to be satisfactory. I called Bro. Hope into my room to interpret. She said, "In the other room is a young girl who was at meeting all day yesterday and last night. She wants to talk to the brethren about baptism. She cannot rest easy, nor does she want to go to her home without talking to them." We invited her in my room, and there Bro. Hope and Bro. Jensen talked to her, asked her some questions, and read passages of Scripture to her from the New Testament. She shed many tears, and, indeed, we mingled our tears with hers. Bro. Olsson and Daniel were not at home, but when they came home, the family was called in and we had a season of prayer together, after which the young girl felt better satisfied; gradually her face grew brighter.

Still she was distressed. Why? She knew her parents would not allow her to unite with the church, and to go against their wish was a hard thing for her to decide to do. She studied the matter over, and finally decided to follow Christ in all things, even if she had to give up father, mother,—all,—and that afternoon she was taken down into the water.

Dear sisters, if you could hear the sorrowful experiences of many of the sisters, your hearts would ache for them. Many of them are driven from home, and compelled to make their living the best way they can. One sister told us that when she went home after having been baptized, her brothers abused her in many ways. Her father and mother treated her very unkindly, and finally cast her off from home. She said, "I treat them kindly and try to be patient, but I have never been allowed to go home up to this time, but they are better to me now than they used to be." Leaving father, mother,—all for Christ's sake,—means something.

When she told us this sorrowful story, I thought of our young sisters at home, how sad and distressed they feel when asked to make a sacrifice of fashionable dress. My dear sisters, be thankful it is only the sacrifice of fashionable apparel you have been called upon to make. How would you feel if it were to be with you as with these sisters,—the giving up of home, father and mother? The sister I speak of is about twenty-three years old. She is zealous and quite a worker in the church. Sisters, we have much to bear, —more than the brethren can ever know. We are called upon to be self-sacrificing; let us be brave, and bear all willingly for Christ's sake. He knows all, and he will reward us accordingly.

Fashionable people are to be met with in this country as well as at home. I have noticed though, that they are not so extravagantly dressed as in America. Silks and velvets are not worn by them on the streets, but are kept for indoor wear. There are plenty of poor people here. One thing I admire about them is that they do not seem to be ashamed of their poverty. We have been invited into some very poor homes; many of them have not chairs enough for a half dozen people to sit upon. It is the custom here to give coffee to visitors almost as soon as they enter the house. If one visits two or three places in a day, it is hard work to drink coffee with all of them, especially if you are not fond of it. One place we visited they were so poor the wife had to make coffee in an iron pot, and use a bottle to serve it from. After the coffee was poured into the bottle, it was placed in a basket, and flannel cloths packed closely around the bottle, to keep the coffee warm. The cork was crocheted of yarn, and all this looked odd enough to us, and we learned a good lesson in economy. There was not one word of apology offered for the scanty meal that was set before us.

Sisters, if you want to know how to appreciate the blessings of a good home, you should visit among the poor. You need not come to this country. There are plenty of poor at home, in our own towns and cities. Poor people enjoy company; they like encouragement. Give it to them by your presence in their homes. Dollars and cents come very good to them, but kind, sympathetic words are needed sometimes more than money. When their hearts are heavy with trouble, a cheerful word will go farther than we can imagine. At a meeting, the other day, a brother thanked us because we visited them even though they were poor. Brethren and sisters, do we visit the poor as much as we ought? Each one may answer this question for himself.

Many sisters throughout the Brotherhood have asked me to write a letter to them, through the MESSENGER, while in Denmark and Sweden. I have done as you desired, sisters, and now I ask you to feel that this is a letter to each one who asked me to write, and if at any time you should feel like writing to me, your letters will be thankfully received.*

May the Lord bless you all, and may he keep us safe till we meet again!

Practical Questions on Lesson II.

1. WHAT kingdom followed the Babylonian? How long did it last?
2. By what symbols is it described?
3. Who was the last Babylonian King?
4. Under what circumstances did he lose his life?
5. Describe the City of Babylon.
6. Describe the manner in which the City was taken.
7. What remarkable feature of prophecy do we find in the prophecy of Daniel that illustrates its divinity?

Lesson III.

Our last lesson ended with the close of the second, or Persian kingdom, which came to an end about 331 B. C., at which time the third kingdom comes upon the scene. This third kingdom came into existence about 200 years after the prophecy was written, and brings out in detail some remarkable features.

The kingdom, now under consideration, was the Grecian, of which Alexander the Great was the principal figure. His movements were so rapid and his conquests so successful, that he fulfilled the description of the he-goat. He so successfully conquered the world that it is said he wept because he had not other worlds to conquer.

It is related of him that on his way east, toward Babylon, he stopped at Jerusalem, and was shown the prophecy concerning himself, and went forward, fully confident of success.

After having conquered the Persians, he looked about for a place to build his capital, which he designed should exceed in splendor anything ever known. He selected Babylon as this place. Babylon had, for two hundred years previous, been in course of entire destruction, and Alexander proposed to rebuild it. While he in his conquering career was fulfilling one notable prophecy, he in his attempt to rebuild that City, run contrary to another, older and fully as explicit, which will be found in Isaiah 13: 20. "It shall never be inhabited, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation." This was a prophecy by Isaiah, and when even the so-called "Alexander the Great" came in opposition thereto, he suffered the consequences. Before he had proceeded far, he died in a drunken debauch at the age of thirty-two, and the work ceased, thus again vindicating God's Word.

We now come to the second stage in the history of the he-goat:—the one notable horn is broken off, and four others come up in its stead. After Alexander's death his kingdom was divided among his four generals,—Ptolemy, Seleucus, Lysimachus and Cassander. Thus, to the very letter, was fulfilled the prophecy of the four-headed leopard and four horns of the he-goat. Ask the skeptic how such a prophecy could be written two hundred years before it happened.

Another remarkable prophecy uttered in Daniel's time, was the time of the coming of the Messiah, which is found recorded in the ninth chapter, where the angel tells Daniel that from the time the decree should go forth to rebuild Jerusalem, it should be seventy weeks until the Messiah should come. In prophetic time a day represents a year. Seventy weeks is 490 days, representing 490 years. We find that in the midst of the seventieth week the Messiah was to be cut off, and cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease. By turning to the seventh chapter of Ezra, we find how and when the decree went forth to rebuild Jerusalem. When we compute the years, we find it to fulfill the prophecy. Jesus, after preaching one-half week (three and one-half years), suffered death and caused the sacrifice to cease; the vail of the temple having been rent from top to bottom. Thus was fulfilled a prophecy over five hundred years after it was written.

"CHARITY ENVIETH NOT."—1 Cor. 13: 4.

BY GEO. L. STUDEBAKER.

WE believe envy to be one of the greatest evils that exist, and we should pray God to deliver us from this feeling. It differs from all other vices, in that it was born in heaven,—in the breast of an archangel. This angel, no doubt, envied God, and desired that some of the honor and adoration that was given to God should be given to him, hence there was "war in heaven."

Envy is the mother of wars, murders, adulteries, thieving, etc. It caused Cain to slay his brother Abel (because God had respect to Abel's offering) and sent the first soul to cry for vengeance at the bar of God. Envy caused Saul to so hate David that he would gladly have taken his life, yea, even the life of his own son, and this because David was praised for doing a greater work than did Saul.

When we see some one that can do more good than we can, or perform a certain work better than we can, why should we envy them? The world is before us. The field for doing good is unlimited. It has been said by a certain writer, that "he who envies another one's production, will never have one of his own to produce."

Envy is of the devil. We can see its mark every-where. Charity is its sternest foe, for charity envieth not. Where charity is, envy cannot dwell. Charity drives all such away. It sees some one trying to shape some great thought into usefulness, and bids him Godspeed. It sees the young man climbing the hill of usefulness, and reaches out its hand and gives aid. It sees the young lady making progress and bidding fair to lead a life of usefulness and says, "Amen!" Oh for more charity!

Why should we be envious of our neighbor? If he can succeed better in this life, financially, than we, let us not envy.

Envy among neighbors and families is bad enough, but when it gets among God's people, how sad it is! They are expected to be in possession of charity, and charity envieth not.

Why is it we can discern the faults of others so readily? Possibly it is because we are envious. Envy and jealousy are twin sisters, and are traveling the same road, and will arrive at the same destination. May God free us from both!

Envy often gets into neighborhoods and sets them into an uproar. Oh, may we all cultivate the spirit of charity, which envieth not, and if we cannot give very much to our fellow-men, let us try to give a "cup of cold water." If we are not able to carry sheaves and lay them down at the feet of our Master, let us try to do a little, and lay it at the feet of Jesus. The one that can do more than we can, we should not envy, but bid them Godspeed, so that when Jesus comes to make up his jewels, we may be accounted one of them, and hear it said, "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter into the joy of thy Lord."

LIFE LESSONS.

BY M. M. SHERRICK.

—LEAVE-TAKING of friends and loved ones, is one of the inherited sorrows of the human race. It is fraught with hopes and fears, and these are not confined to any circle in life. All are on an equality. Jacob, the patriarch, must send his beloved son Benjamin into far-away Egypt. David, the king, must bow to the decree of Heaven, arise from his low position and weep no more. Mary and the beloved disciple must say farewell at the foot of the cross. For the millions who had lived to say that same word while weeping bitterly, this was to be an after-cure; for the millions yet unborn it should be a soothing balm. But Mary was sad, and why should she not be? Was it not her son who was made a mute sacrifice for the guilt of others? Was he not dearer to her than her own life? Was there no other remedy? There was none. He, only, could sufficiently atone. That withering ordeal of parting must be experienced, that the world might have a precedent. Then get ready the snowy napkins, and prepare the white linen shroud, the perfumes and sweet spices against his burial, and while he is being taken from the cross, and the last ministrations to the dead are being performed, let the world stand by and, in its little trials and crosses, feel like praising God for this divine-human parting scene.

How often is the vision of angels seen, when, instead of deploring our losses, we look deep into the sepulchre of our woe! How often, as we prayerfully lay down our weary, over-worked body with a stone for a pillow, have not the doors of heaven swung ajar, and from them issued beings all divine, visiting the earth, and, departing, left an everlasting glory behind! Christian brother, did you ever wrestle, Jacob-like, with angels at Penuel? If not, you have missed a blessing intended for every tried soldier of the cross. Angels sometimes come to us in disguise, and appear to our distorted imaginations as spirits from the lower worlds. Long days and nights we wrestle with them, sometimes on one knee, then on the other, often on both, and yet we know not till years are gone how much stronger we are for that wrestling and persisting. Thank God for the sepulchres of the loved, the Bethels and the Peniels, which we pass on our journey heavenward!

—There are many things in which we have no choice in this world. You and I are not consulted as to what the weather shall be to-morrow,—whether shade or shine; but we do have power to say whether there will be sunshine in our hearts. We have power so to speak, to regulate the spiritual temperature of the inner life. We are not consulted as to the movement of the stars or the laws of gravitation, but it does remain for us to say whether the laws of our inner life shall work in harmony, and whether we shall stand plumb with the spiritual world. God has always given to men the keeping of their souls, so if we cannot regulate the laws of nature, we may apply spiritual laws which bring a result infinitely grander and more blessed.

ENTERTAIN STRANGERS.

BY N. D. UNDERHILL.

SOME of the brethren are urging "private Communion," and I don't wonder! I know just how they feel, longing to be alone in communion with God and his family, to worship with those whose sympathies are in harmony with the Word and spirit of God, yet they are gazed upon by a curious, prying, critical, worldly throng. But, dearly beloved, there are two sides to every picture,—a pleasant and an unpleasant one usually. Let us look at the other side of this one.

One says, "Other denominations do not have such a crowd; why should we?" For answer, please read Matt. 5: 14. Another says, "Christ did not invite the multitude to that service," referring to the love-feast. No, brother, and so far as we know, he did not invite all the disciples. Nor were all the disciples there, for he had, even then, many disciples besides his apostles. Let us not forget that among those present was one who really did not belong to God's family, but was a thief and a traitor, whom Christ treated kindly, even washing his feet, yet knowing that he possessed a devil.

We also have a beautiful example set by our Savior, and recorded in Mark 6: 31–44, when the apostles returned from a tour of preaching, teaching, casting out devils, healing sick folks, etc., weary and anxious to converse with the Master. He said, "Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place and rest awhile." But when they started, great crowds came to them from all cities. And Jesus (that ever kind, loving and merciful host) had compassion on them, for they were as sheep without a shepherd. So he taught them, talked to and entertained them, and would not let them go away hungry, but bade his disciples to "feed them." Collecting the meager supply of provisions, he looked up to heaven, blessed, gave to his disciples, and they to the multitude. All were filled, though they numbered about five thousand.

What a delightful repast! A vast multitude of followers gathered about the Good Master who is feeding their hungry souls, both with spiritual and temporal blessings! How lovely it would be if his disciples to-day were as obedient and faithful to entertain the multitude as they were then!

But they are still heard to say: "Such a crowd takes away all the solemnity," etc. Jesus says: "My grace is sufficient for thee." Then, why not look up to God as did our Master, and receive sufficient grace, strength and wisdom to spiritually feed and entertain the crowd? While we long for private Communion with those whom we know as God's children, let us still consider it a blessed privilege to entertain so many strangers in his dear name, "for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

Appearances are deceitful. Christ may, in some way, be in the midst of that crowd, despite their worldly appearance, and surely many will be surprised one of these days when he says, "I was a stranger and ye took me in." Let us hope that the reverse may never be uttered to one of us. When strangers gather about us, let us greet them with a smile and a few kind words, at the same time extending our right hand as a symbol of our willingness to lead the blind, help the weak and lift up the fallen. Many strangers have thus been led into the fold of God, while, by cold indifference, none have ever been led to Christ, but many have been driven away from him. The writer at one time was one of these curious strangers who had long been gazing at the "Brethren" from a distance, until finally she obtained a nearer view.

QUOTATIONS FROM JENNIE SMITH'S BOOKS.

SELECTED BY ALBERT P. REED.

—How much can we do to please God?

—An unconscious influence goes out from song.

—How much may be accomplished by a little act of kindness! The result will be known only in eternity.

—We cannot always depend upon our feelings as a criterion of our actions.

—O my Father, give me wisdom, power and physical strength to do all thy will. Thou knowest I must be clothed; direct us in all our purchasing to-day! May even my garments please thee!

—Would that all whose names are upon the church record, knew more of the love and peace of Christ!

—How precious to be able to carry even our petty trials in household cares to the Father!

—Eternity alone will reveal the results of meetings attended through severe storms, and sometimes under discouraging circumstances.

—How sad that so many are not alive to the interest of their children's salvation!

—Let a blessing rest upon each soul that enters our home!

—Free from debt! I desire this above all temporal things.

—Our home may be very humble, yet we may make it one of the happiest spots on earth. It should be a little paradise to us.

—When suffering intensely, I have begged those around me to sing softly, for it helped me to bear my pain.

—There is service even in breathing a prayer for the passing stranger.

—Faith is as necessary to the soul as the sun is to the world.

—A package of tracts! May a blessing rest upon each one of them! I will read and apply them to my own heart before I give to others.

—Committing every morning, for the day's meditation, a verse of Scripture, proved of untold value to me in gaining strength. I placed the verse each day at the head of my journal, which served to refresh and strengthen my memory.

—All nature is clothed in a mantle of white. How beautiful it looks without a foot-print to mar its beauty! Oh, for a heart as clean and pure! Yet the Psalmist says, "Wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow."

VOICES OF HEAVEN.

BY SOLOMON SCHUBERT.

THE land of silence surely extends no farther than to the gates of the heavenly city. All is life and activity within, but from that world, so populous with thoughts and words and songs, no revelation penetrates the dark, silent land which lies between us and them.

Stars so distant from us that their light, which began its travel ages since, has not reached us, are none the less worlds, performing their revolutions, and occupied by their busy populations of intelligent spirits, whose history is full of wonders. Yet the first ray, denoting the existence of them, has never met the eye of the astronomer. The silence of the departed will, for each of us, soon, very soon, be interrupted.

Entering among breaking shadows and softly unfolding light,—the border land,—we shall gradually awake to the opening visions of things unseen and eternal, all so kindly revealing themselves to our unaccustomed senses, as to make us say, "How beautiful," and, instead of exciting fear, leading us almost to hasten the hand which is removing the veil,—some well-known voice, so long silent, may be the first to utter our name; we are recognized, we are safe.

A face,—a dear, dear face,—breaks forth 'mid the crowded lines of the dissolving light; a form, an embrace, assures us that faith has not deceived us, but has delivered us up to the objects hoped for,—the things not seen. O beatific moment, awaiting every follower of them who, by faith and patience, inherit the promised dwelling, "whither the forerunner is for us entered."

TWENTY MILLION RUSSIANS WITHOUT FOOD.

THE St. Petersburg correspondent of the Standard says that the approach of frost has caused a renewal of the cries of distress. The Novosti estimates that twenty millions of people are without food. Statistics prove conclusively that in many places speculators get extortionate prices. Corn merchants and village koolaks, or usurers, are charged with responsibility for the extortion. A Samara paper declares that Jews are angels compared with the koolaks, who are in the habit of reducing those in their power to the lowest stage of poverty. Incidents showing the terrible distress of the people, continue to be recorded. A poor woman of Ratchino, on returning home from a neighboring village, whither she had gone to try to purchase food, found all her children dead, and a post mortem examination being made, their stomachs were found filled with rags and earth. Many villages are completely deserted in the district of Porm. One-half of the population of Reasan has died of hunger or disease. An odious traffic is carried on in women's hair, the best heads realizing a crown apiece.—Sel.

WHAT little time we live in this world it amounts to nothing whether we are rich, poor or great, but it is a matter of the greatest importance that we love Jesus and keep his commandments.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

land that, years ago, was considered almost worthless, is now utilized in the peach industry and is bringing rich returns, as it seems to be especially adapted to the growth of this fruit. Brethren Smith, Shellenberger and others, have embarked largely in the business and are doing well. This year the crop was immense, considering the acreage, and the growers are correspondingly happy. We are glad that the business is a commendable one and that men can engage in it with a good conscience. This cannot be said of everything in which some of our brethren are engaged.

As the evening shadows lengthened, we reached the pleasant home of Bro. Henry Shellenberger, from whence we were taken to the Free Spring church, where we were entertained by Bro. J. M. Mohler, of Lewistown, and then were taken back again to Bro. Shellenberger's for the night. This is also the home of sister Mary Shellenberger,—mother of Henry. Sister Mary is every-where known as the Lord's handmaiden,—full of good works.

Next day we were again taken to the church, where there were services, followed by an election for two deacons, one minister and the forwarding of one to the eldership. Deacons elected were Joseph Smith and Henry Shellenberger; minister, C. G. Winey. Bro. Spencer Beaver was forwarded to the second degree, and Bro. Andrew Bashor, to the eldership. Following this were regular Communion services which were well attended and interesting. From here we were taken to the home of Andrew Bashor, where we spent a very pleasant night. Again we were taken to the church for 9 o'clock services, which consisted in setting forth the Scriptural requirements of the church officials, after which those who had been elected and forwarded, were properly installed, followed by preaching services.

These after-services are always especially interesting to us, as it seems that all must feel a fuller consecration to the Master after enjoying the Communion. The nearness to Christ that we must experience on these occasions, cannot help but make us better and more devoted. This increased devotedness is especially felt in these after-meetings, which gives unusual inspiration to those who participate, and the meetings are correspondingly impressive and comforting.

In the afternoon we were taken to the very pleasant home of Bro. David Bashor. These brethren here have a goodly earthly heritage and live on the fat of the land. They are excellent farmers, and by judicious economy have gained a competence which places them in pleasant and easy circumstances. This is all right if they can feel, as we all should, that they are only stewards over that which the Lord has given, and that there will be a day of reckoning. May the Lord make us all good stewards!

In the evening we were taken to Mifflintown. From thence we went to Lewistown and to the home of Andrew Spanogle, whose door is always open to the Brethren. The next day, Wednesday, we were taken to the home of Eld. Wm. Howe, and in the afternoon to the church, which is near by, to attend to the business of our mission. The voice of the church was taken for the election of two deacons and the forwarding of one brother to the eldership. The deacons elected were brethren J. S. Mohler and John Shellenberger. Bro. Samuel J. Swigart was forwarded to the eldership. This was done by the request of Eld. Howe, who has charge of the church, because he felt that he needed help. This work was followed by the usual religious services and the Communion.

On the next forenoon we again met at the church when the installation was attended to, followed by preaching. This was another of those impressive meetings that afford so much comfort to those who participate in the ordinances of the Lord's house. In the afternoon we were taken to the home of Andrew Spanogle, where there was an appointment for a meeting of the Committee on the Old Folks' Home. Members present were: Andrew Spanogle, Michael Bashor, Jacob Hollinger (substitute for Eld. J. F. Oller), and the writer. After discussing the work, plans and needs, the meeting adjourned to meet at Clover Creek on Wednesday, at 2 P. M., Nov. 25. The meeting will be in the Clover Creek church at the above-named time, when all the members of the Committee will try to be present. We also note right here that if any of the churches of the District have a suitable location to offer for the Home, they will do so at once or before the time of the meeting named. Please attend to this, stating name of the place, railroad facilities, number of acres that can be had, kind of buildings, if any, and the price. Address: Andrew Spanogle, Lewistown, Pa.

In the evening we took the train for McVeytown (Spring Run church) and stopped with Reuben Myers, one of the resident ministers. On Friday, at 2 P. M., we met at the church and took the voice of the membership as to forwarding one minister from the first to the second degree and one to the eldership. Bro. J. Allen Myers was forwarded and Abram Myers ordained. After this was preaching, examination services and the Communion. The evening was fine and the attendance quite large. After church we were taken to the home of Eld. Abram Myers, and the next morning returned to the church, where the installation services were attended to, followed by a service of exhortation, after which the meetings closed.

Thus ended our work as a committee, during which time we assisted in ordaining four elders, forwarding two ministers, electing two ministers and four deacons. All this work was done by the voice and assent of the different churches, and, as far as we could learn, gave general satisfaction,—better really than was expected. We fondly hope the blessing of the Lord may attend it all, and that the churches may now go forth with renewed determination to build up and do good work for the Master.

We must yet add that we received a most kindly reception by all the churches visited and that everything possible was done to make our work and stay with them pleasant, for which we feel to be very grateful. Our co-laborer, Eld. Jacob Hollinger, was a very pleasant companion indeed, so that our attachment for each other grew with our days of companionship, and, as remarked by himself, our being and laboring together will be long and pleasantly remembered.

There is much more that we feel like saying, but we have already said so much that we ask the pardon of our readers for thus occupying space that should be used for more interesting reading. We close by praying God's blessing upon his church.

SECRECY INCOMPATIBLE WITH CHRISTIANITY.

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER.

THE rapid growth of the various alliances under the different badges of secrecy, when summed up, is simply astonishing.

While each and all seem to hold up some feature of plausible good, yet there is a principle underlying them all that renders them incompatible with Christianity. For the above our reasons are as follows:

1. "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? What communion hath light with darkness?" 2 Cor. 6: 14. In secrecy there is a union, and that in worship,—of the Jew and the Christian, the unbeliever and the infidel. This holy alliance, this impious blending, is a clear violation of the text just quoted; for "he which is joined to a harlot is one body." 1 Cor. 6: 16.

2. The wants of the Christian are all fully provided for in the church; hence he has no need of the benefits of a second organization. "All Scripture is given by inspiration; . . . that the man of God might be thoroughly furnished unto every good work." 2 Tim 3: 17. When an individual professes Christianity, and then steps aside to join a secret order, with a view to secure a good that his religion does not furnish, it is evident his system is defective, and hence he has not the religion that the Scriptures provide. The Apostle clearly sets forth the high standard of good works in Christianity, when he says: "Make you perfect in every good work to do his will." Heb. 13: 21. The Apostle Paul, alluding to Christ, adds: "Comfort your hearts, and establish you in every good word and work." 2 Thess. 2: 17. This is done by the Scriptures, through the organization of the church.

3. Much of the work of secrecy is a manifest species of "robbing God." The yearly reports of the various secret orders show that millions of dollars are annually spent for the support of the poor and needy. The truth of these reports we do not doubt; but the good that individuals do through these orders in caring for the needy, ought to be done through the church, for it is a work that belongs to the church. The evidence is abundant that all these were works of the early apostolic church. These are among the things that evidence the practical good in Christianity. Visible present good is a powerful incentive to the growth of Christianity. Many of the secret orders of to-day are but rival institutions to the church, in which thousands spend their millions in doing a work that can be done through the church, and rightly belongs to the church, and ought to be done in the name of Christ. Many of the patrons of secrecy spend more of their time and money in support of their order than they do in support of their church; because their order is doing the greatest amount of seeming good. Hence much of the work of secrecy is a pure species of "robbing God."

4. Much of the work of secrecy is called charity, but when tested, fails to be charity. For instance, the widows they support, the orphans they feed and clothe, their so-called deeds of charity, are all done by actual contract. To explain: I join a secret band. I pay my initiation fee and my monthly dues, with the contract that, in the event of my sickness or my death, certain services shall be rendered me. If my widow and my children come to want, certain aid shall be rendered them. Hence the aid and the service rendered are by contract; they are paid for, and that in advance. Besides, a non-payment at any time renders all claims void. Hence the claim of charity on the part of secrecy, when examined, vanishes; is found not true.

5. Real objects of charity, secret orders will not receive. As a test case, let some poor, penniless pauper present himself at the door of one of these institutions for admittance. It is a fact, not a door will open for his reception. To whom will admittance be granted? Simply to those sound in body and mind, and who have money. In short, secrecy simply proffers help to those who need no help Hence secrecy is a union, a league, for mutual benefit, whose aims are to fortify against the liability of future want; all within their own numbers. The Bible does not teach such doctrine.

6. Professor O. S. Fowler says: "No man should go where his wife cannot be admitted." The fact that men—fathers and husbands—leave their homes, night after night, often until a late hour, meeting with their respective orders in secret session in some chamber, with doors closed and guarded, and curtains drawn; while the dear, lonely wife or mother is at home, caring for the children all alone, knowing she would not be allowed to join her husband! All this, and much more, surely has a chilly, severing tendency on the affection between husband and wife.

Another source of dissatisfaction is that money is being constantly paid out, time and service rendered, and so little visible good is manifest. Society is not improved. No reforms, no conversions: all the visible good is in the selfish line under contract.

7. The burial service of secret orders is vain, unintelligent, and not orthodox. In the final prayer at the open grave, the Odd-fellows pray thus: "May this, our brother, be borne from the lodge below to the Grand Lodge above." In point of intelligence, the foregoing sentiment is a striking parallel with the prevailing sentiment of the poor Indian, who earnestly prays that the Great Spirit may have borne their deceased brother from the hunting ground below to "the happy hunting ground above." "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus," is a divine teaching. In the Masonic ritual the name of Christ is omitted. Think of professed ministers, elders, and bishops, prominent divines, leaders of the people, offering up prayers, leaving Christ, their only advocate, not once named! To us it looks like a species of sacrilege.

8. The teachings of Christ and the apostles stand opposed to the principles of secrecy. Christ, when in the world, taught both in public and in private, but says, "In secret have I said nothing." "What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in the light; and what ye hear in the ear, that publish ye on the housetop." Matt. 10: 27. "God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing." Eccl. 12: 14. Secrecy is evidently works of darkness, for "whatsoever doth make manifest is light." We are warned to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather to reprove them; for it is a shame even to speak of those things done of them in secret. Eph. 5: 12. To love secrecy is to love darkness; and it must be "because their deeds are evil."

9. Secrecy binds its subjects to take upon them an unknown obligation, which is a grave sin. Moses defined this sin thus: "If a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips to do evil or to do good, whatsoever it be that a man shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty in one of those. And it shall be when he shall be guilty in one of these things, that he shall confess that he hath sinned in that thing." Lev. 5: 4, 5. The Gospel enjoins that faith precede; for "whatsoever is not of faith is sin." Wisdom and prudence dictate that we ought to see before we step; to know before we speak. But here is a system, a something, that only proffers to acquaint its coming inmates with the facts after they enter within the bars of their sunless walls. Hence many, when they come to the verge of initiation, in sight of the dark picture, decline to take upon them the obligation; while others, under the bitter pangs of the remorse of a guilty conscience, quietly withdraw after taking the obligation. How can such a system be made to harmonize with the high standard of honor, set forth in the religion of Jesus?

10. The present great threatening storm-cloud, both in Europe and America, is secrecy; before which empires and republics are made to tremble. Masonry, Odd-fellowship, Knights of Pythias, with the various labor organizations whose "name is legion," including the Anarchists, Nihilists and Mafias, are all boats in the same broad channel; branches of the same tree; whose objects and aims are self. Many of them are monopolies fitted up to fight monopolies; a clear case of seeking to overcome evil with evil instead of overcoming evil with good. It is a "doing evil that good may abound." The sad occurrence of paralyzing the New Orleans court by the Mafia society in the case of the murder trial of the Chief of Police Hennessy, has been oft repeated all over this broad land, by different secret organizations. Judges and juries have been rendered powerless, unable to render justice, or rather unwilling, in view of their obligation to their brother in secrecy. As a result, the guilty have gone free unpunished. The only difference between the case under notice and many others is, that, in this case, the ends were secured by money and threats of vengeance, whereas secrecy usually secures the same ends, by secret signs, grips and passwords. Therefore, in view of the foregoing facts, we conclude as we began, that secrecy is wholly incompatible with Christianity.—Christian Cynosure.

IF one hundred thousand individuals of the Hebrew faith were born upon the same day, say in the year 1891, and one hundred thousand individuals other than Hebrews were born on the same day and year, and these two classes were inhabitants of a country allotted to them, and all procreation should cease, we would find that in less than half a century, or say after the forty-seventh year, one-half of those who are non-Hebrews would be dead, while the death of one-half of the Hebrews would not take place until after the seventy-first year. This demonstrates most forcibly the staying qualities of the Hebrew race.—William A. Gans.

SPEAKING of a writer, Bro. Balsbaugh says, "He needs drilling and chipping, and he counts his chips too dear. Is not this the fault of us all? Some are so diffuse that after they are clipped they fail to recognize themselves. Much writing, and much suffering, and a sharp economy of time and vitality, have driven me to undue concentration. I have become so seminal and epigrammatic, that some readers are perhaps puzzled at some things I say. You will please always bear this in mind. I purposely leave much room for suggestion in the line of thought I express, or only intimate."

"THERE is often a great difference between what we do think on a given subject, and what we ought to think on that subject. We can find what we do think by looking into our own minds carefully. We can find what we ought to think by studying the Bible intelligently. And here is one of the advantages and one of the discomforts of Bible study. It shows how different what we do think is from what we ought to think."

THE CHILDREN'S MISSION.

BY MARY M. GIDEON.

Dear Children:—

THINKING that, perhaps, you would like to hear from me again, I feel like writing these few lines this afternoon, as I am all alone with my Creator. It gives me a good opportunity to put my mind where I love to have it dwell,—among the children. Usually some of my children are in the room where I am writing, and I miss them while away at school. Nevertheless I am consoled by the thought that they are gaining knowledge, and I hope that some day they may be of great use to their Creator who made them, and is preserving their lives for a noble purpose, if they will only be his own dear children.

Parents that love their children have great concern for their welfare. They are continually watching for their good, although the child cannot see it thus.

May I ask you a question? When you have the care of brothers or sisters, do you not watch over them faithfully? Yes, and how quick you will take them out of danger, with much love and even force. Sometimes they become angry with you, but you well know you are on the right side, and can bear with their folly.

So it is with those loving fathers and mothers, who have you to obey their commands. They should never be grievous to you, for you know not how soon they might be taken to a far better world than this, and then you would grieve to think of the bitter pang that is throbbing in your bosom, because of your disobedience.

With deep regret I call to my mind one very naughty thing I did in childhood to my dear, loving mother, who has been dead now for about twenty-five years. My mother told me to do something,—I do not remember just what,—but I do remember with sadness, that when I started to do what she had told me to do, I "slapped back" at her and said, "Oh, shucks," very naughtily and saucily. My mother checked me and corrected me quickly, and made me promise that I would never do so again. For her correction I shall always be glad.

Children have very naughty tempers to control sometimes, and they should ever be on their guard. If you let it run as you are in your rage, now and then, you may depend upon it, it will stick very close, and is almost a master of your better judgment. In youth is the time to begin to sow the good seed if you want to be a clear, cool-headed person, who is able to rule the world with true nobility and manliness. Let each little boy show that he has in him the elements of a man. One of the most lovely things that we can behold is a manly boy, and a lady-like girl. In such persons courtesy and politeness will surely manifest themselves, and they will find friends in any society. When we love the Lord as we really ought, we will be courteous, as we are commanded to be in his Word, and in being courteous to our Divine Father, we are always ready and willing to do all the good we can for fallen man to upbuild his glorious kingdom on earth.

As Jesus gave the example himself, and is our guide and protector in his work, we should grasp all opportunity with reverence and love, as his obedient children. Christ went about doing good. We, that cannot go about as he did, must do something for his goodness shown toward us poor, weak, unworthy creatures. If we cannot give money, we can give our love in sympathy, good deeds, kind words, pleasant faces, happy hearts, ready hands, swift feet, willing minds, cheerful tempers, pure thoughts for his reception. All this will be a constant help to us.

I am glad to tell you that I am still hearing from different ones who have been at work for the glorious cause of Christ. Oh, how glad the writer would be, could she get more laborers into the fields! Those of the solicitors who have worked steadily, are greatly enjoying their work, and why can we not have more co-laborers? Thanksgiving will soon be here. Will you agree to bring in a goodly sum for the Lord? A good way is to ask your ministers to hold a children's meeting. Then the children will donate, if told to come prepared. They will do it with happy hearts, too. Dear brethren, give the children a chance to give for the Lord's sake, and he will glorify you. If we remind children often, they are apt to think and act seriously.

So wake up, loved ones, and let us be about our Master's business while it is day with us, for soon the "night cometh, wherein no man can work."

LET THE LORD BE REMEMBERED.

BY J. E. YOUNG.

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."—Mal. 3: 10.

GOD always comes up to his part of the work. Man is generally behind. A glance at the past year may be a good reminder.

At this time last year there was great anxiety through a large section of country in the West. The people knew that before another harvest there would be a great cry for bread. The cry was heard all over the land. Filled boxes and barrels, gold and silver, came to supply what was lacking. This pleased the Lord, at least we have an evidence that he was pleased, as seen in the blessing that rests on the land this year. "The harvest truly is great," there is an abundance of fruit, vegetables and grain. Dr. Talmage says, "I have traveled over eighteen of the States, and never before has there been such an abundant harvest!"

To whom does this great harvest belong? "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof." Ought not the Lord have at least one-tenth for his kingdom and glory? "Bring in all the tithes," he said to Israel, and to us he says, "Give as the Lord has prospered you."

How great are the evidences of prosperity! Perhaps the Lord is trying the people this year, to see whether they will render to him his dues. God is willing to bless the land every year, but when the people forget him, how can he? What a great spiritual work could be done with one-tenth of the increase! Who will get the glory for the harvest,—the Lord or Satan? Surely, the Lord deserves it, for he gave it! Satan had no part in the giving. Brother, what are you going to do? Hoard it up? Jesus says, Do not do so.

Show your faith by your works, for the kingdom of Christ, like the political man, should show itself in that way. The politician sometimes spends all for his party. God does not ask that much of us.

If you do not happen to like our mission plan, and do not care to give money as suggested, you can at least help some poor struggling church or minister. At any rate, give for the Lord's cause. There is abundant opportunity when there is a willing mind.

Beatrice, Nebr.

A GREAT EVIL.

"THERE is one great evil in this country," forcibly remarks the Christian Observer, "which we think the pulpit and press ought to denounce more frequently than they do—that is, the habit of getting into debt and making no effort to pay. Can a man be a consistent Christian and not strive to pay all his debts? Can a man be a Christian and not be honest? Is a man who does not try to live within his means and pay his debts an honest man? If so, we do not understand the Bible. Should men who habitually disregard their financial obligations be allowed to remain in the church? We think not, and think that a man's being a member of the church ought to be a letter of credit in any part of the globe where the Christian religion prevails. But it is not the case; far from it; and there are even some ministers whose sermons do no good because they are preached by men who are not considered honest by even men of the world. Whiskey is pronounced the great evil of the day, and it is a great curse; but we doubt whether it does more harm to the cause of the church than the lying and dishonesty of the sober church member, whose promise to pay is not worth the paper it is written on. The church is not the place for fraud and dishonesty."

THE late Mr. Henry Hull, when on a railway journey, saw a young Jew sitting before him. Mr. Hull said to him, "You are a Jew, are you not?" "I am," was the reply. 'Jesus, my Savior, was a Jew; I love the Jew," said Henry Hull. The young man burst into tears. There was an opening once for the Gospel. Oh, for the tender compassion of Christ! "I long after you all in the bowels of Jesus Christ," wrote Paul to the Philippians. Let us seek to be possessed with the same yearnings for the salvation of the Jew; let us continue, not this week only, but this year, to be the Lord's remembrancers on behalf of his people Israel.—Selected

"THE weak sinews become strong by their conflict with difficulties. Hope is born in the long night of watching and tears. Faith visits us in defeat and disappointment, amid the consciousness of earthly frailty and the crumbling tombstones of morality."

"ONE should study to present truth in lively and interesting forms."

BRO. I. J. ROSENBERGER is booked for a few weeks' preaching in Northern Indiana.

SUNDAY, Oct. 25, three of the students were received into the church here by confession and baptism.

BRO. DOVE'S mission to South-western Missouri seems to have resulted in a very large ingathering of souls.

ACCOMPANYING an article for publication Bro. M. J. McClure says: "I write at midnight by the bedside of my oldest son, who is very sick of the typhoid fever."

BRO. ANDREW HUTCHISON, we presume, is now at home with his family at McPherson, Kans. He is preparing to spend the winter in California, thinking that it may be for the benefit of his health.

BRO. S. B. SHIRKEY writes that Bro. M. Flory is engaged in a series of meetings at Plattsburgh, Mo. Five had been baptized, and one more applicant, making eleven in all that have united with the church this fall. Four had also been received by letter.

ALL orders for the Brethren's Almanac have now been filled. Where fifty or more copies were ordered they were sent by express. The parties who have ordered that number will please call at their express office. All other orders were filled by mail.

IT is altogether likely that we made a mistake in admitting the Kickapoo advertisement into our columns a few weeks ago. While there may possibly be some good in the remedies they sell, still we are confident that their entertainments ought to be avoided by all of our members.

WITHIN the last two months we have printed 335,000 copies of pamplets, tracts and leaflets for the Brethren's Tract Work, Dayton, Ohio. This shows that the brethren managing that institution are far from being idle. We have nearly 200,000 more pages to print for them this month.

BRO. Z. ANNON has been selected to represent the Second District of Virginia at the Annual Meeting for 1892.

A MILLION and a half copies of the "Pilgrim's Progress" have been sold in China. Wherever sold it does a good work. The book ought to be read by every child.

A SPECIAL correspondent from Russia to the London Standard reports that there are 20,000,000 Russians without food. Their condition is becoming heart-rending.

THE Appanoose church, Kans., has reasons to rejoice. At a recent series of meetings twenty united with the church; all by confession and baptism save one, who was reclaimed. Bro. I. H. Crist conducted the meeting.

A MAN, judged by his friends to be insane, recently said, "All I want is to be protected against my friends, I can take care of my enemies." Not so insane after all. There may be others whose friends may, at times, be more of a terror to them than their enemies.

SOME of our troubled readers may be able to gather some consolation from this: An old couple who greatly glorified God by their glad lives were asked, "And have you never any clouds?" "Clouds," said the woman,—"clouds; why, yes, sir; else where would all the blessed showers come from?"

BRO. D. M. MILLER, of Milledgeville, Ill., has returned to Wisconsin to do more work in the mission field. We are glad to know that Bro. Miller's efforts are much appreciated. As an expounder of our doctrine he is a man of more than ordinary ability, and we have only to regret that he cannot be induced to do more preaching.

WE regret several mistakes in Bro. S. H. Myers' article on page 635. J. R. Zug should have been S. R. Zug; D. Long should have been I. Long, I. Brindle instead of I. Brice. S. A. Shaver was not ordained, but assisted in the ordination of one whose name was not given in the communication referred to. We always regret mistakes of this kind, but Bro. Myers' article was written on, and then in between, the lines, and had to be copied before it went into the hands of the printers. The mistakes were made in copying the article.

RAILROAD accidents seldom happen to any of our Brethren. Several weeks ago, however, Bro. Samuel Herrington, of Milledgeville, Ill., was badly bruised in a railroad accident at Savanna, this State. He is recovering very slowly. Week before last Bro. John Burner, of the West Branch church, while on his way to Nebraska, had the misfortune to lose his left arm in the disastrous wreck at Monmouth, Ill., where several were killed and a number wounded. The accident to Bro. Burner was a severe one, but he is likely to recover.

THE Russian Government has issued orders forbidding her bankers from doing business with the Rothschilds, the great Jewish bankers of Europe. This is done to retaliate for the opposition of the Rothschilds to a loan which Russia has succeeded in negotiating, however, without the aid of the Rothschilds. The Rothschilds have espoused the cause of the persecuted Jews, and are, perhaps, the greatest money power in the world. The steps which Russia has taken may yet cost her some humiliation, for she is enormously in debt, and her persecution of the Jews has, in a measure, arrayed the civilized world against her.

UNDER date of October 22nd, writing from the Bunker Hill church, Ohio, sister Sarah Middaugh says, "Three more have been added to the fold since our last report, making in all thirty-three."

A FEW days ago Bro. J. G. Royer showed us a mastadon tooth, sent him by Eld. John Caylor, of Noblesville, Ind. Around the crown it measured over twenty inches in circumference, and must have belonged to an animal much larger than the largest elephant now in existence. This tooth, with many other bones of the same animal, was found imbedded in the blue clay on Bro. Caylor's farm. It is quite a curiosity to the student of Natural History, and seems to show what enormous animals must at one time have existed on this globe.

UP to this time we are still having the very finest of weather in Northern Illinois and we certainly appreciate it very much. The farmers have also raised good crops and are receiving remunerative prices for what they have produced. Health also seems to be generally good, and so far as we know, the spiritual condition of the churches is encouraging. The love-feast season is over, and it was a very refreshing season indeed. We now look forward to the winter as a season for the ingathering of souls and the renewal of spiritual strength. May the Lord prepare all of us for the good work and help us!

The advocates of sprinkling and pouring have no reason for censuring the young Methodist minister who recently said, in one of the city pulpits of Illinois, that he would baptize applicants by trine immersion if they would request it, for John Wesley preferred to baptize by that mode, believing it to have been the apostolic method. The intelligent readers are not ridiculing trine immersion as much as they did a few years ago, and the day is probably coming when they will regard it with still more respect. A mode of baptizing whose origin cannot be found this side the apostolic age is entitled to more than ordinary respect.

TO OUR CONTRIBUTORS.

LONG evenings are now approaching, when our contributors will have time to prepare good articles for the MESSENGER. Permit us to suggest that, in preparing an article, you take your time to it and do your best, remembering that, when speaking to the MESSENGER family, you are addressing a larger audience than any minister has ever had the privilege of instructing at the Annual Meeting. Do not write long articles. They are seldom read. There are about 600 words in a column, and an article of from 900 to 1800 words will give much better satisfaction than one that is longer. Long articles are laid to one side to be examined at our leisure, while short ones are quickly read and decided upon at once.

There are a few things which all writers for publications should avoid:

1. Never write on both sides of the paper.

2. Never write between the lines and thus crowd the matter so close together as to leave no room for corrections, for most articles need more or less correcting before going into the hands of the printers.

3. Do not write with pencil, or use pale red or blue ink. They soon fade and become very hard on the eyes of our compositors. Always use good, black ink on white paper.

4. Never write business matters on the sheet containing matter for publication, for the reason that all letters are opened by the Business Manager, and that which pertains to business is turned over to his clerks, while that intended for the paper is placed in the editor's drawer. If a sheet should happen to contain matter for publication and also business matter it has to be separated, and that takes time, and often causes delays and mistakes.

We do not write complainingly, for we are getting along very pleasantly with our contributors. They will, however, find the above suggestions for their own good as well as ours.

Furthermore, do not become discouraged if your articles do not appear in print. We aim to keep constantly in view the wants of the general Brotherhood, and publish only that which will, in some way, help along the cause of Christianity and prove both interesting and instructive to our readers. We labor to be absolutely impartial with our contributors, and in deciding on articles are governed solely by the merits of the articles and the good of the Brotherhood.

Church news, and even correspondence, we seldom decline unless there happen to be two or more reports of the same meeting. In that case we generally make use of the first one received. All reports of church news ought to be short and to the point. Weave in as few comments as possible. Correspondence should also be made as brief and clear as practicable. We want to crowd as much as we can into our Correspondence Department, and during the coming season make that part of the paper exceedingly interesting. We will cheerfully aid the aged and those deficient in scholarship, to get their reports of church news in good, readable shape if they will have the kindness to make them short. Let us unite in seeing what an interesting paper we can make.

WHERE TO LOOK FOR BLESSINGS.

MANY a poor preacher has been led to ask, "Why is it that the Lord does not bless me financially when I spend my time and means preaching the Gospel to a lost world?" The minister looks to the wrong place for his blessing. His work is to minister about holy things, and his blessings should be spiritual, in order that he may be properly qualified for his duties. Rich men seldom make good preachers, at least they do not often consecrate themselves to the work; it requires too much of their time to attend to their secular business. It will be of no great advantage for a minister to receive an abundance of means and then have to spend all his time looking after it and neglect his duties as a minister. It is more in keeping with the constitution of things for the Lord to bless the laity financially, for they have time to study finance and accumulate in harmony with the laws that govern such things.

We want to remember that this is not an age when the Lord performs miracles in order to make rich preachers. The preacher has an equal chance with others to accumulate in proportion to the time, ability and surroundings that may be at his service. But if his time and talent must be taken up in preaching he cannot, and ought not, to expect the blessings that come to his brother who can use the means of acquiring property to better advantage.

The Lord blesses men in their working channels. The preacher is steadily improving in knowledge and grace. In this line the Lord blesses him far above his fellow-man, who is engaged in another line of work. Probably the Lord is blessing him and he does not know it. He does not consider how he is gaining in knowledge, wisdom, piety and spiritual power. When elected to the ministry he perhaps knew but little, and could scarcely command courage enough to open an ordinary meeting. But after years of patient, prayerful and hard labor and study he can preach the Word with gratifying ability. Certainly the Lord has blessed this man and made him rich in spiritual things. He possesses a great store-house of knowledge and experience that is of much value to the cause of religion. True, the Lord may not have blessed him financially, but be it remembered that the man did not turn his attention to finance, but to something higher, and he has been correspondingly blessed.

In early life another man may have turned his entire attention to the question of finance. He succeeds in accumulating quite a fortune. We say the Lord has blessed him, but the blessings came through the channel in which the man worked. He has not been blessed with great spiritual knowledge, wisdom or religious power. Probably he could not deliver an address of ten minutes on any public question. In that respect the man has not been blessed. His blessings have been confined to his line of work.

Occasionally a man has the ability to work successfully in several channels, and the Lord blesses him in each one. He may increase in knowledge and wealth at the same time. But this attainment is rare.

The man who has been blessed mentally and spiritually with much knowledge and spiritual power should instruct and edify those who are less blessed in this direction. Then he, who has much of this world's goods, should, in turn, administer to the comfort of the one who is abundantly able to impart spiritual food, but has neither time nor talent to accumulate property. God has blessed both of them with an abundance, and it becomes their duty to help each other, and each should be contented in his calling. Instead of complaining about the poor preacher, who can hardly make a living, it is far better to help him in his temporal matters, so he can do more and better work for the Lord's cause.

The preacher may sometimes suffer for the want of food and raiment because he does not properly teach his members what their duty is towards those who minister about holy things. God never intended that the church should be burdened with an idle ministry. It is the duty of the minister to work with his own hands as much as circumstances will prudently permit, but he has a higher calling than the making of money. If his higher calling, properly pursued, prevents him from providing for his family it becomes the duty of those whom God has blessed with plenty to come to the aid of their ministering brother. They have no more right to neglect his temporal wants than he has to disregard their spiritual wants. God has blessed the minister in his calling to fit him for guiding and comforting those who need his spiritual help in this life. He has also blessed others financially, in order that they, in turn, may assist those who need temporal aid. And one is just as responsible to God for what he has received as the other.

But these things must be taught the people in order that they may know their duty. God is blessing all of us if we will only look to the right place for the blessings.

BY D. L. MILLER.

LEAVING Hördum at noon, an all-night's ride on the cars and steamer, and we are again in Copenhagen. An unusual bustle and stir at the depot when we arrived was caused by the fact that the Czar of Russia was to take the next train. Fine carpet was laid from the street to the royal entrance to the depot. Officers and high state officials, in showy uniforms, were to be seen on all sides. The Czar, a fine-looking man, and his father-in-law, Christian IX, King of Denmark, passed in and took their places in the king's private car. Royalty is much respected here, but we would not exchange the humblest home in America for the place held by the Czar of all Russia. He is in constant dread of assassination, and the greatest precaution is always taken when he travels, to keep the Nihilist from meting out the same fate to him that befell his father. He spends some time each summer in his father-in-law's palace at Copenhagen.

Our stop at Copenhagen is but for a single night. Bro. Olsson, who has arranged the appointments, is one of those pushing, energetic Swedes and he has not put much time in the program for rest. He says our stay here is short and work is the order of the day. After holding one meeting and taking part of a night's rest, we again leave the capital of Denmark early in the morning for Malmo, Sweden. As our steamer passed out of the harbor we had a fine view of a part of the Russian fleet. Several large ships of war, with the royal iron-clad that brought the Czar to Denmark, were anchored in the harbor. We reached Malmo in time to fill an appointment at 10:30 A. M., and then went to Limhamn, where a love-feast was held. The entire service was an enjoyable one. The Brethren's meeting-house was well filled and the best of order prevailed. The next day a drive of twenty miles across the country brought us to a meeting at Jislof, which was largely attended. After services we return again to Malmo, reaching the latter place late in the night.

Kjeflinge, with a Brethren's meeting-house built of brick, at the very moderate cost of 950 kroners, was our next stopping-place. Here we lodged with Bro. O. P. Olin, a minister in the second degree. He owns a house and lot, and labors in a large planing-mill, three miles from his home. He walks to and from his work every day and receives fifteen kroners per week, equal to $4.05 of our money. On this sum our brother supports his family and spends some time in the ministry. He also gave the ground on which the meeting-house stands. He told us that he was especially blessed of the Lord, that he received good wages and that he was getting along very well. Here there is a very comfortable little house of worship 24x30, well and substantially built of brick. It is a model of neatness and cheapness. Bro. Olin took the contract for 950 kroners, $256.50, and completed it, put in seats, table and stove, without an additional cent of expense to the committee. Some of our building committees should come to Sweden to learn economy, and some of us who think we are doing much for the missionary cause, can learn a lesson from Bro. Olin.

From Kjeflinge we went to Eslof, where a meeting was held and where we had an illustration of the difficulties and of the discouragement to be met with by our brethren in the mission field in Scandinavia. A large hall had been secured and it was crowded to its utmost capacity. A large number of the audience came to hear and were interested, but there was also a large number who came to disturb the meeting. Before speaking began, they showed that they had come to make a noise and they kept it up until the close of the services. Many of them were partly intoxicated and we had our first trial of speaking to a noisy, turbulent mob, and the experience was worth something to us. It has increased our sympathy for our missionaries and it gave us an insight into the character of the opposition to be met with from those who belong to the State church. Every one of these drunken brawlers was in full communion in a Christian (?) church. They, however belong to a church managed on the principle that the tares and wheat should grow together. The result has been that the wheat is choked out and the tares have full sway. Think of a church opening her Communion to adulterers, drunkards, brawlers, gamblers, and those guilty of all other kindred vices. Moral suasion is good and should be used to the entire limit, but there comes a time when the whip of cords must be used to cleanse the house of the Lord. At Eslof, when the confusion was at its height, wife sang one of the beautiful songs of Zion, and the result was that the turbulent throng became quiet in a few moments. From that time to the close of the singing all was quiet.

At the close of the Eslof meeting we took a train from Hesselholm, arriving at midnight, and then drove to Bro. Olsson's home, a distance of nine miles, reaching the latter place at two o'clock in the morning. The next day a twenty-mile drive to an evening meeting at Christianstad was taken, but, owing to an unfortunate error in the advertisement as to time, but few people came. On Sunday, Sept. 27, we attended a very enjoyable feast at B. O. Olsson's home in Wanneberga. Meeting opened at 10 A. M. After preaching liberty was given to ask questions, and several persons inquired as to the origin and the faith and practice of the church.

In the afternoon the meeting was held in Bro. Olsson's threshing-floor, but the place was too small to hold the people and a large number stood in the yard during the entire service, although it rained part of the time. A house of worship is much needed at this place. Our Brethren here lay claim to Bro. John Metzger's offer to assist in building a meeting-house in any congregation where a house is needed and where all the members are free from the use of tobacco. None of the members in Sweden or Denmark are addicted to this habit. Two were baptized,—one on Sunday, and the other on the following day; two applied for baptism, and a number of others were deeply impressed.

The meeting closed at 10:30 P. M., and then an election was held and Bro. John Swenson was called to the ministry, and Bro. Per Jönson to the deacon's office. Both were duly installed in their respective offices.

Meetings were held at other places, but our letter is growing too long. Here our work in Scandinavia closes for this time. We feel strongly impressed with the importance of the work and were it not for other pressing duties, and the promised series of letters for the MESSENGER, we would remain and labor in the mission field here for some time, but for the present, at least, this cannot be done. Bro. Hope remains and will hold series of meetings at a number of places.

We have spent nearly two months in Scandinavia, and in that time have travelled by rail and steamer about 3,000 miles. We have driven about the country some 200 miles and have had a good deal of walking to do. Our mission was to visit all the churches, and this we have done, and we believe the members have been much encouraged by our coming to them. We have also had an excellent opportunity to study the manners and customs of the country people. We came in contact with the farmers and laborers in their homes, and we learned more of the people in these two months than we could have learned in years by following the beaten tracks of travel and living in hotels. We will have something in our next letter on these topics. We go from here to Germany, stopping a few days at Halle, our old German home of eight years ago, and then go to Wittgenstein and the Eder; thence we journey through Belgium and Holland to London, England, reaching the latter city early in October.

From the Churches in Europe.

AUG. 12 was the day when we had the blessed privilege of meeting our dear brethren Miller and Hope and sister Miller in Copenhagen. We had longed and prayed very much for that day and finally it came. I was very glad to see Bro. Miller, with whom I had corresponded for some years, and I found him as I had thought him to be,—willing to do all he could for Christ's sake.

Our dear brethren's coming here has been a great blessing to the church. We were very glad to see our dear Bro. Hope among us again. He has always been a good father to the church, and the church thinks it would be well if he could stay all the time, because there is plenty to do and not many are able to do what he can.

As soon as our dear ones came among us, they commenced preaching the Word and conversing with the members about our beloved Brotherhood and the church order.

We held some very good meetings in Copenhagen, Limhamn, Wanneberga, Bokeberg, Golshute and Wislanda. The mode of speaking by interpreter seems to be very interesting indeed to the people. I think much good would come if a brother from America could come here and preach and work all his time in this great field. We have lost the help of one of our elders in this end of the kingdom, because Eld. Hans Olsson, who is working for the railroad company, has been moved by the company to a place named Lules, in the Northern part of Sweden, 1,100 miles from Malmo. May the good Lord help him that he may be able to build up a church there, and we hope you will assist him with your united prayers.

Aug. 17 Bro. Miller and wife, Bro. Hope and Bro. Christian Hansen went their way to Norway, and I went home. We had some good meetings there until Sept. 7, when I went to Limhamn and Copenhagen, to hold some meetings, and from there I went to Frederickshaven in Northern Denmark, to assist our dear brethren on their tour through Denmark and Sweden. I was glad to find them well and happy, and now we have commenced our work together with the members here. We had a very good meeting in Sindal, Sept. 13, and we had a council-meeting, attended to a baptism, and enjoyed a good love-feast in the afternoon. Bro. T. C. Paulsen was advanced to the eldership, as a help to Bro. Eskildsen, and we trust he will be a good and faithful servant to the end.

Sept. 15 we started for the church in Thyland. In that church we held six public meetings and a good council-meeting. All the members seemed to be full of joy, and they thanked the Lord for his goodness in sending our dear brother and sister Miller and Bro. Hope to us. When our brethren addressed the people, the tears ran down their cheeks and we were reminded of the blessed day when we, at last, are to meet, never to part any more. After three days' meetings in Thyland we went to Copenhagen and held a meeting in the evening in the church there.

Sept. 20 we went to Malmo and had a meeting there at 10 A. M. From there we went by rail to Limhamn and held a meeting at 2 P. M., a social meeting in the afternoon, and a good love-feast in the evening. From there, the next day, we took a wagon to Gislof and held a good meeting in our rented hall there. Sept. 22 we had a meeting in Kjeflinge in our own house. The members there expressed their heartiest thanks to our dear Brethren in America for the house of worship which was built for them.

The next day, Sept. 23, we went to Eslof and held a meeting, which was largely attended, but we learned there that it is not the largest meetings which are the best. The people made so much noise that it was quite impossible to keep up good order. Thus our brethren could see some of our trials in the mission here.

From there we went the same night to my home, where we held some meetings in several places around Wanneberga. Sept. 27 we had meeting in my house the whole day, which was closed with a very good love-feast, at which twenty-one communed. Two were baptized there and it looks as though more would come in the future.

Oct. 2 we said farewell to our beloved brother and sister Miller. In looking over what has been done during the time these, our dear ones, have been here, we are glad to say that the churches have been much strengthened in their faith both by the good, sound and practical sermons that were given, as well as by their consistent life. The church has also gained much credit by showing that we have some able men among us. This cannot fail to give the people respect for the church.

Now that our brother and sister have gone on their long journey east, our united prayers will always follow them, and we will always cherish their visit of sacrificing love.

Bro. Hope and I will now try to work together for about six weeks in Copenhagen, Limhamn, Kjeflinge and Wanneberga, and we ask to be included in your united prayers. JOHN OLSSON.

The Children's Hosanna.

OCT. 11 we celebrated our Annual Sunday-school Children's Meeting. God gave us a lovely day, and a concourse equal to a love-feast. The music was under the supervision of Bro. John A. Landis, and was a conspicuous feature of the occasion. The first speaker was Bro. Joseph A. Long, of Adams County, son of Eld. David Long, of the Manor church, Md. Beautifully, graphically, affectionately he developed the three leading ideas in Eccl. 12: 13,—the finality of all study, the filial relation to God, and the all-inclusive character of obedience. His expositions were clear and tender, his illustrations pertinent and vivid, and his applications rigid and pathetic.

He was followed by Bro. Samuel H. Hertzler, of Elizabethtown, Lancaster Co., son of Eld. William Hertzler. He dwelt mainly on the classification of conduct. Good for good is man-like; evil for evil is beast-like; evil for good is Satan-like; good for evil is God-like. He adduced a variety of illustrations to illuminate and impress his separate points, and made not a few feel uneasy in seeing themselves photographed in the likeness of tigers and dogs and the horning and kicking species, and even the devil himself. Some of the representations were somewhat humorous and grotesque, but they went to the mark with fine precision. His object was, by contrast, to show the beauty of a God-like life.

Lastly came our home minister, John H. Witmer, pressing on the conscience the solemn responsibility of parents, the susceptibility of the child-mind, and the inevitable bias of the unfolding nature of children by the surroundings and influences of home. His remarks were like appeals from the upper world, and were a fitting close to the services.

The introductory and opening prayer were given by Bro. Adam Shope, and supplied the key-note to the meeting—the children for Jesus. It was a solemn, edifying occasion, and may well be termed JEHOVAH SHAMMAH—the Lord is there.

THE above congregation held her Communion meeting Oct. 17. Though the weather was inclement, the large house was nearly filled. Ministers from other fields with us were, brethren W. R. Deeter, A. L. Neff, William Buzzard, Alexander Miller and others.

At this meeting one was reclaimed who had strayed away from the fold. We were also called to the river-side to administer baptism. Six have been added to the church by baptism since our last report. One of them is a little maid, not quite eight years old.

Oct. 15, one of our ministers, Daniel Hartsaugh, was called to his long home, aged about sixty-six years.

On Sunday morning we had an excellent children's meeting, conducted by brethren W. R. Deeter, W. Buzzard, and others. At 10:30 the whole assembly was addressed by Bro. Lemuel Hillery. We have three Sunday-schools in this congregation, which are kept up the year around.

Notes of Travel.

I HAVE just returned from my trip to the Kaskaskia church, Fayette Co., Ill. Having received an invitation from Eld. Granville Nevinger who has the care of the church, I stopped off at that place while on my way to District Meeting, and preached two sermons in their school-house. I then went to the Hogg school-house, preached eight sermons, and baptized two. At this place the Brethren are alive to the cause. They have cleared off some ground which was donated for the purpose of building a house of worship. We assisted them in their plans, etc., and I suppose that ere this reaches the readers, they will have the work fairly under headway. Timber at this place is plenty and good, and they can get it sawed at a small expense. They have a sufficient amount now subscribed to enclose a good building, 30 by 40 feet, but not enough to fully complete the house. At this place much good may be done, if some minister will pass by that way and hold a series of meetings for them.

From the above place I went to the District Meeting of Southern Illinois, where we had a very pleasant and agreeable Conference. Not much business came before the Meeting. The Spirit of Christ seemed to prevail throughout.

When I returned home, I found my family all well, and the brethren in the midst of a good meeting, conducted by the home ministers and Eld. T. B. Digman. To-morrow evening, Oct. 16, the Lord willing, I shall start to Madison, Monroe Co., Mo., to preach at that point for two or three weeks, after which I have promised to spend a few weeks with the Brethren at Cherry Box. I will be ready to fill other calls after Dec. 10, should any of the churches desire my assistance.

Any one addressing me at home will receive due attention, as my mail is forwarded to me when necessary. H. W. STRICKLER.

From Glen Rock, Nebr.

I HAVE been taking the MESSENGER for nearly two years and am well pleased with it. I do not see how any member can afford to do without it. I have been in this State for six years, and attended but one Dunkard meeting in this town. I have gone thirty miles to meeting. There are six members within three miles of here, and two more are coming from Virginia, my brother and his companion. That will make eight members living near by. We have no preacher, so I think some good brother ought to come here, organize us into a church and put us all to work. This is a good place for the Brethren to build up a church. Those who have heard the Brethren preach, like them. I pray that this County may not be neglected any longer. Please send us a brother to hold some meetings. I will keep a minister free of charge, just as long as he will hold meetings, and I will also pay my part toward his expenses. There is a Methodist church here that we can get any time. This village is three miles north-west of North Auburn, the County-seat of Nemaha County. JAMES D. MACEY.

Glen Rock, Nebr.

*The above was not written for publication, but we publish it nevertheless, trusting that it may be the means of building up a church in that section of the West. If any one knows of other bands of isolated members, we will be pleased to learn of them, for they should certainly be looked after.—ED.

The Botetourt Church and its Branches.

No. 1. During the war this church was chiefly under the care of Bro. Peter Nininger and myself as elders. There were calls for preaching from the West, North and East, in sections where the Brethren were very little known. We went and sowed the precious seed, awakened an interest in Alleghany County, organized a church, built a good meeting-house, elected ministers and deacons, and later ordained elders. Now there is a respectable congregation at that place, with whom we are requested to be at the Communion service, on the third Saturday of this month.

No. 2. What is known as the Rockbridge County church, commenced about the same time and moved on in the same way. The first minister elected was Bro. John Pursley, who had been a class leader in the Methodist church. At his election, which was held rather private, on account of the supposed unsafety in those war times, owing to our peace principles, there were only eight members present. He became an efficient worker,—a man of untarnished reputation, only known to be loved. Under his large influence and faithful work a large congregation was built up and an excellent meeting-house built. His brother William also came in and was called to the ministry. Both were ordained, and both have now gone to the beautiful beyond. Each of them left a son to fill their places in the eldership, and another son of Bro. William is in the ministry.

Next Saturday we are requested to be with them at their Communion. The Rockbridge County church has now a branch organized at the City of Buena Vista, with a good meeting-house completed, and a congregation of twenty-five members.

We have also three organized churches in the eastern part of Bedford County, Va., one of which is under the care of elders H. A. Beahm, J. A. B. Hershberger and James Leftwich. The other two are under the care of the parent church, and Communions have been held lately with those two branches, and with one week's meetings at each place there have been about twenty-five accessions and two prodigals returned. In these congregations we have built two meeting-houses, and now two more are in contemplation. Altogether they number about 200 members.

Another, which we may call No. 6, is situated in Cumberland County, 140 miles east, a small, but exemplary congregation with a good meeting-house, now the home of Bro. Wm. Bowser,—a minister in the second degree, and hopes of success are entertained for them. This church is the home of sister Florida Etter, known by all the readers of the MESSENGER, and also of Bro. Myers and family. Bro. Wm. Mallory and family are members of advanced age.

No. 7. The church in Lunenburg County, in the eastern part of Virginia, was organized with eight members, after one week's meeting, about three years ago. Bro. S. H. Love was called to the ministry and Bro. Joseph Oliver, to the deacon's office. They now number about eighty members, have an ordinary meeting-house, and are preparing to build a better one. This is a plant of the Lord's planting, by the instrumentality of D. C. Moomaw and myself in a small way. With the efficient work of the officers and members there, the prospects for doing much good are encouraging. It is a source of pleasure to me, in my advanced age, and the trials of my faith, to know that these several churches respect me as a father in Israel and especially so to see the flourishing condition of the mother church, now numbering about 300 members, with brotherly love prevailing,—and in the main co-workers together with Christ, contributing spiritually and financially for the support and advancement of the cause of our common Master. We have twelve regular meetings each month. The ministers take their regular turn at each place, or see that it is supplied.

Our visit meeting was held Sept. 4, with a full house of members. No serious complaints were offered, but some admonitions to guard against drifting into modern Christianity, and to keep away from the danger line, so as to preserve the identity of the church. Contributions for the uses of the church were called for, resulting in the sum of $138.55 being collected, besides what was then needed to meet the expenses of the Communion, which will be held on Saturday before the fourth Sunday of this month, if no preventing Providence.

Bro. I. N. H. Beahm has his building for the Botetourt Normal nearly completed. It is an excellent home, suitable for the school. The chapel was furnished by voluntary contributions for Sunday-school and devotional exercises. All included, there are eight rooms in the building and suitable halls, well arranged and neatly finished. It is to be dedicated on the 15th, and opened with encouraging prospects. B. F. MOOMAW.

McPherson Notes.

LAST Sunday we had an interesting sermon by Daniel Vaniman on the qualifications of church officers. It is important that the members of the church be well instructed on this point before an election is held, for when a mistake is once made in a choice, it is hard to correct. A rehearsal of the qualifications for a church officer revealed the fact that they are all proper for private members as well.

We are now in the midst of our love-feast season. It has become customary to hold our Communions on Saturday and Sunday. This makes it necessary for quite a number of churches to hold their meetings on the same day. On Oct. 17 three of our adjoining churches held their love-feasts.

Our school work is progressing very satisfactorily, with an increased enrollment over last year. We are glad to welcome our brethren, who are locating here on account of the school, and trust they may feel pleased with the change. Noah Kuns, of Cerro Gordo, Ill., and David Bowers, of Great Bend, Kans., bought property in McPherson a few days ago, and will move their families here shortly. S. Z. SHARP.

Notes from the Field.

I SPENT ten days preaching at Ash Ridge, Wis., beginning Oct. 9, and closing on the 18th. The meetings were very largely attended throughout. At several meetings, unfortunately, many of the people could not find even standing room in the meeting-house. We were especially pained on the evening of our last meeting to learn that fully one hundred could not find room in the house. The interest was all that could be desired, and a great amount of good might be accomplished in this section with proper efforts.

Some eight, at least, during the meetings, seemed very near the kingdom, and expressed the desire to unite with the church in the near future. O, may they not grow cold and indifferent again, and lose eternal life!

D. E. BRUBAKER.

Maxwell, Iowa, Oct. 21.

From the Wakendah Church, Mo.

THE Wakendah love-feast occurred, as announced, Oct. 14, and was attended by many of the members, and those from other congregations. Ministering brethren present were J. E. Ellenberger and Peter Oaks. Bro. Michael Flory, of Indiana, was also with us, to commence a series of meetings immediately after the Communion. He also officiated at the Communion services. The feast passed off pleasantly, and, we trust, with much spiritual profit to all.

Next day we were addressed by Bro. Flory, after which most of our visitors and our elder,—Bro. Shirkey,—left for Plattsburg, to attend the Smith Fork Communion. Bro. Flory remained and preached again last night, at which date this report closes. The visible results of the meetings were two additions. This, with four additions before the meeting makes six since last report. On Sunday, Oct. 17, the meeting will be moved to the Wakendah meeting-house, there to be continued indefinitely. The prospect seems to be good for an ingathering. LOUIS MACEY.

Millville, Mo., Oct. 16.

From Rock Falls, Wisconsin.

AGAIN we feel to thank God and take courage. Bro. D. M. Miller, of Illinois, came among us Sept. 8. He held forth the Word in the church at Rock Falls until Friday evening. Saturday evening was the time appointed for the love-feast at Bro. Jacob Wheeler's,—one and a half miles south-east of Rock Falls. Thirty members surrounded the tables and partook of the sacred emblems. Bro. Miller officiated. The next morning an old brother was anointed. At eleven o'clock Bro. Miller again addressed an attentive audience in the church. The same evening a love-feast was held at Bro. H. E. Baker's, for the benefit of his aged and afflicted mother. The week following Bro. Miller preached at the Stanton school-house until Thursday evening, when he took the train to be with the Irvin Creek Brethren at their love-feast.

He returned on Monday, preaching that evening at the Hart school-house. Next day he went to assist Bro. H. E. Baker, who had begun a series of meetings in the neighborhood where he now lives. Here the doctrine of the Brethren had never been preached. They continued the meetings until Friday evening.

On Saturday evening a love-feast was held at Magdalene Keeks'. Next day Bro. Miller again commenced his labors at the Stanton school-house, and continued until Thursday evening, when he preached his farewell sermon. Although there were no accessions to the church, yet we feel that much good was done. The cause has been much strengthened, members are built up, and everything is moving along nicely. Bro. Miller was kept quite busy during his stay with us. He preached twenty-four sermons and officiated at four love-feasts, besides visiting among the people and adjusting matters generally. One sister remarked to him "that he was surely a peace-maker." KATIE JOYCE.

Oct. 18.

From the Brownsville Church, Washington Co., Md.

WE held our council-meeting Oct. 3, preparatory to our love-feast, which occurred Oct. 10. Our council was the most pleasant one we ever attended. Not an unkind word was expressed. The visiting brethren made their report, which showed that there was nothing to interfere with our Communion. One dear brother, who had been disowned, was restored.

At our love-feast, now in the past, some communed for the first time, and some, no doubt, for the last. Altogether it was a peaceful, pleasant meeting, at which about 175 members communed. Bro. Silas Hoover, of Pennsylvania, officiated. Brethren David Long, D. F. Stouffer and P. D. Fahrney, were present, and assisted in the work.

We noticed in the MESSENGER that there were thirty-nine love-feasts announced for the same date. We thought, What a blessed privilege, that we can meet together and enjoy a sacred Communion with each other and our God, and have our spiritual strength renewed! God pity the dear, isolated members, who cannot enjoy the sanctifying means of grace, but if we are faithful until death, we shall all meet at the Marriage Supper of the Lamb. GEO. W. KAETZEL.

Claggetts, Md., Oct. 15.

Notes from the Second District of West Virginia.

OUR love-feast at Ross's Chapel, near Nuzum's Mill, Marion Co., was held Oct. 10 and 11. The only ministers present were G. W. Annon and the writer. Though we felt somewhat disappointed because no one came to help us, yet our meeting was a pleasant one. One commendable feature was that all the members present communed,—twenty-four in all. The weather was delightful, and the attention and order were good. The large audience in attendance made us feel that it was good to be there. On Sunday evening we gathered at the river "where prayer was wont to be made," and one precious soul was baptized into Christ.

OUR DISTRICT MEETING.

According to a fixed time by the District, we met on Friday and Saturday before the third Sunday in October for District Meeting, which was held in the Nicklow Chapel, Barbour Co., W. Va. The Meeting was organized by electing Bro. D. J. Miller, Moderator; Bro. G. W. Annon, Reading Clerk, and Bro. W. R. Murphy, Writing Clerk. The Meeting was fairly represented, and considerable business was transacted, seemingly to general satisfaction. The weather was fine. This, with good roads and moonlight nights, had a tendency to make the Meeting very enjoyable. There seemed to be a greater zeal manifested, and a better representation than formerly. This is as it should be. No papers go to Annual Meeting, but a committee of three brethren were chosen to communicate with the General Mission Board, to aid us in our home mission. The writer will represent this District at next Annual Meeting.

At the close we had a Communion, and all seemed glad to enjoy it. The ordinances, as held by the Brethren, were ably defended.

On Sunday morning there was an election held for one speaker and two deacons. The lot fell on Bro. C. B. Nicola; for deacons on brethren S. M. Annon and Samuel Ball. May the brethren discharge their duties faithfully, and may God bless them and their work! Many tears were seen to fall during the installation services which were conducted by Eld. W. A. Gaunt. After the forenoon services Bro. G. W. Annon and the writer left for home, but the brethren had services again in the evening. Thus another record was made, and our prayer is that it will stand in our favor, and that the fruit will be enjoyed in the great morning of eternity, after we have all crossed the cold Jordan.

One feature I forgot to mention at the proper place,—the poor were not forgotten. A handsome sum was raised for their relief. "The poor you have with you always and whensoever you will you may do them good." Z. ANNON.

A Glorious Feast and Ingathering.

ON Wednesday morning, Oct. 14, the members of the Appanoose church, with many others, met for public preaching. It was announced that there was an applicant for baptism. His wants were attended to immediately after services. On returning from the water it was ascertained that there were others who wished to be baptized, and by evening there were six more that desired to unite with us; so we again repaired to the water, where baptism was administered. The members (about 146) then surrounded the tables of the Lord, and we can truly say, "It was a feast of love." Elders from adjoining congregations were, brethren George Myers, J. H. Crist, James Hilkey and Peter Brubaker. The best of order prevailed, while our brethren dealt out to us the Word with power. Next morning it was announced that there was another applicant for baptism. This call was immediately responded to, and at 10 A. M. we met once more for public preaching. The brethren preached with power, and in the afternoon six more came forward, and were buried with Christ in baptism. Bro. Crist then agreed to remain over Sunday and preach each evening. On Sunday six more came forward and were received by baptism. Many rejoiced to see those, near and dear to them, come home, while others were weeping because their children would not accept Christ. One young sister, who had wandered away from Christ, returned, and expressed a desire to be again united with the church. She was gladly accepted. This makes nineteen in all that were baptized, and one reclaimed. Surely we have reason to thank the good Lord.

District Meeting.

THE District Meeting for Southern Illinois convened Oct. 13, in the Big church, Richland Co., Ill., and organized by electing M. J. McClure, Moderator, Granville Nevinger, Writing Clerk, and John Harshbarger Reading Clerk. Everything passed off nicely. We send two queries to the Annual Meeting, and one request for the Annual Meeting in 1893, or as soon thereafter as convenient. We also appointed a committee to confer with the Northern District of Illinois in regard to uniting in an Old People's Home. The District Meeting for 1892 is to be held in the Cole's Creek church, Fulton Co., Ill. GRANVILLE NEVINGER.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

One Added to the Fold.—Our love-feast was held in the Exeter church, York Co., Nebr., Oct. 10 and 11. We had a good meeting. One young brother was baptized. Bro. William Meck, from Butler Co., was the only minister present, outside of our own congregation.—D. B. Heiny, McCool, Nebr., Oct. 18.

Visit to Chicago.—Oct. 25 I visited Chicago to fill the regular appointment, making the second call in the last five weeks. I met with the Brethren in the Sunday-school and preaching service, and found them earnestly working for the Lord, and laboring to strengthen one another. I also visited several sick members for their encouragement. May God's grace sustain them, and may much good be accomplished in this great city.—J. C. Lahman, Mount Morris, Ill.

A Soul-refreshing Meeting.—We, the members of the Walnut Level church, Ind., held our Communion meeting on the evening of Oct. 16. Our feast was an enjoyable one, and though our number was small, yet we rejoiced in our Savior's promise of being with us. There were many brethren and sisters from neighboring churches at the feast, and their presence was highly appreciated by us. Bro. Lewis Huffman, from the Prairie Creek church, Wells County, Ind., was with us. He did not shun to declare the Truth in its primitive purity.—Malinda S. Studebaker.

Messages Dropped by the Way.—Oct. 9 Eld. D. B. Gibson came to us, according to former announcement, and up to this date, Oct. 18, has daily held forth the Word in his usual earnest and powerful manner. On the third day of the meeting three souls were baptized, and one more will be baptized later on. Two wandering ones have also returned to the fold and others are seriously counting the cost. The attendance is steadily increasing. Last night our house, 40 x 60 feet in size, was well filled and the order and attention are remarkably good.—C. C. Root, Ozawkie, Kans.

Pleasant Love-feast.—The Middle Fork church, Clinton Co., Ind., held a Communion Oct. 17. The meeting was an excellent one. The attendance was good and we had good order. Quite a number of members from other congregations and even a few from California were present. Eld. Joseph Amick officiated. Brethren Fox, Hester, Arnold, Bridge and Campbell, labored for us and we had good preaching. I believe it was as interesting a meeting as I ever attended anywhere, and I believe much good will result from it.—John E. Metzger, Edna Mills, Clinton Co., Ind., Oct. 19.

Pleasant Council.—The New Haven church, Mich., enjoyed a very pleasant council Oct. 12. All business was transacted in a Christian-like manner, and arrangements were made for the coming feast, which will occur Oct. 31. We expect Bro. John Felthouse, from Indiana, to be with us and continue the meetings for ten days or two weeks.—E. Bosserman, Middleton, Mich.

One Added by Baptism.—Our feast of Oct. 14 was a pleasant one. We had a large attendance and good behavior. We think lasting impressions were made by some of the ministers who were with us. We received one by baptism at our council-meeting Oct. 8. May the Lord enable him to hold out faithful, and to be a shining light! We desire the prayers of all God's people.—Elias Smeltzer, Arcadia, Ind., Oct. 18.

Good Location for Brethren.—I have often thought of telling you something about our country and what a delightful place it would be for our Brethren. The country is all one could wish for, if there were only some members. I am the only one in the immediate vicinity, though I have heard there are several families about twenty-five miles from here. I seldom hear any preaching here by our people. I visited in Michigan four weeks this fall and heard two sermons by Bro. John Smith. I enjoy reading Bro. D. L. Miller's letters from the East.—Carrie M. Hoover, Goldfield, Iowa.

Three on the Lord's Side.—The members of the Falling Spring congregation, Franklin Co., Pa., held their love-feast Oct. 15. The day was beautiful and there was a very large attendance of both spectators and members. Bro. J. F. Oller officiated, assisted by the adjoining ministers. One dear soul united with the church by baptism on the day of our feast: also a young man and his wife united with us on the Sunday previous. Many others are counting the cost. We intend holding a series of meetings, commencing Jan. 4, conducted by Eld. S. R. Zug, of Lancaster Co.—Wm. A. Anthony, Clay Hill, Pa.

Pleasant Meetings.—Last night closed a series of very enjoyable meetings in the Lower Deer Creek church, Middle Indiana. Our love-feast was held Oct. 17. Our series of meetings, which was conducted by Bro. D. P. Shively, of Peru, Ind., commenced Oct. 8 and closed the night after our Communion. The ministerial force at our love-feast was not as large as on some former occasions, but we had excellent order and good preaching. Bro. Shively preached with power to attentive congregations, and closed with increasing interest. The immediate results of his labors were three additions by baptism. Others, we think, are counting the cost and we hope they will yet, with a Mary of old, choose that good part.—S. H. Bechtelheimer, Camden, Ind.

At Work for the Lord.—I am now in the midst of a very interesting series of meetings, at the Forest Grove meeting-house near here. The attention is fair, and the congregations are increasing. Four years ago Bro. Andrew Hutchison preached one sermon here. The inquiries after the Truth are so great that I think I will remain here three weeks, if the Lord will permit. There are about twelve members here, and they expect to hold a love-feast before I go away. They have been holding their meetings at the Mount Pleasant church, south of Salt River. Mrs. Margaret Large, who lives in Jacksonville, Ill., near the large, red barn between the Jacksonville depot and the Jacksonville junction, requests that any members, living in or near Jacksonville, in passing that way, stop at her house. Ministers calling might find an opening for preaching.—H. W. Strickler, Madison, Mo., Oct. 21.

Two Souls for the Lord.—Yesterday, Oct. 15, was the time appointed for our love-feast. Though we had but a small attendance of members, yet we truly had a love-feast. The ministers present were brethren John Replogle, Joseph Snowbarger, and D. R. Snyder. We rejoiced to see two dear sisters come out on the Lord's side, to walk with God's people.—Daniel Ritchey, Tatesville, Pa., Oct. 16.

Notice.—I see in the last issue of GOSPEL MESSENGER that I am expected to go to Northern Michigan this fall to engage in missionary work. While I should like to do so, yet my wife's ill health will not allow me to go now. I may go later on, if her health improves and the Mission Board still desires my service there. I am not doing much preaching now, as I cannot leave an invalid wife. I hope she may soon gain her health, so I can minister in holy things, is my prayer.—J. H. Miller, Goshen, Ind.

Alive to the Work.—The Grundy County church, Iowa, met in quarterly council, Oct. 12. Bro. Stephen Johnson, our elder, was present and presided over the meeting. Considerable business came before the meeting and, I hope, was adjusted in the spirit of love. It being our preparatory meeting for our District Meeting, Bro. William Albright was chosen delegate to represent the church at that Meeting. Bro Hawbaker and wife handed in their letters of membership. Bro. Hawbaker is a minister and we hope his labors will be appreciated among us. The report of the solicitors showed they are alive to the work. About $24 was raised by subscription for this quarter. We thank the brethren and sisters for their liberal donations, and trust they will be amply rewarded.—Alda E. Albright, Steamboat Rock, Iowa, Oct. 23.

Interesting Meetings.—Oct. 13 Bro. A. Hutchison closed an interesting and profitable series of meetings at Yale. Oct. 14 and 15 we had our love-feast. The attendance of members was large, and comparatively few, not members, were present. This made the meeting one of the most quiet and enjoyable feasts we ever attended. Bro. Hutchison's pathetic words in his last discourse will not soon be forgotten. Oct. 17 and 18 we had the pleasure of attending the feast at Dallas Center. Here the membership is large and the many from surrounding churches filled their spacious house to overflowing. How great the contrast, when we look back to the time when there were but about a dozen members in Middle Iowa, west of Des Moines. We have much to be thankful for and also much to be accountable for. Oh that we may be faithful!—J. D. Haughtelin, Panora, Iowa, Oct. 20.

Sunday-school Organized.—According to previous arrangements I met with the Brethren near Starkey, Union Co., Oregon. They reside in Starkey Prairie, about seventeen or twenty miles southwest of Hilgard, and about twenty-five or more miles from La Grande, west by south-west. We held nine meetings while with them. In consequence of throat disease in the neighborhood, our meetings were small, but the Lord opened the hearts of two sisters who were received into the church by baptism Oct. 15. There are now seven members residing in said locality. Yesterday, at our last meeting, we organized a Brethren's Sunday-school, by electing Bro. O. M. Burnett, Superintendent and Bro. Wm. F. Burnett, Assistant. Not finding Bro. Jonas Dickey, of this place, at home, I expect, the Lord willing, to start westward in the morning, to other fields of labor. If any ministering brethren pass through this country, it would be well to visit the Brethren at Starkey, and hold some meetings.—David Brower, La Grande, Ore., Oct. 19.

Six Additions.—The love-feast of the Plum Creek congregation, Pa., was one of the best meetings we have ever had. One week's meeting, previous to the feast, resulted in six additions by baptism, one restored, and two by letter. Eld. J. C. Johnson, of Uniontown, labored for us. We feel to thank God and take courage. —Lewis Kimmel, Elderton, Pa.

Harmonious Council.—Our council-meeting was held at Bro. Allen Cripe's, Oct. 5. All business was disposed of in a brotherly way. Our ministers were forwarded to the second degree. Our love-feast was held Oct. 15, at Bro. Allen Cripe's house, it being the largest house in our district. The meeting was one of the most pleasant I ever attended. Our elder, Bro. David Bechtelheimer, cheered us by his presence.—Allen Cripe, Wallace, Kans., Oct. 17.

Six Additions.—Oct. 3, Bro. Samuel Montis commenced a series of meetings in the Owl Creek church, Ohio. Bro. I. D Parker came on Monday evening and continued the meetings till Friday, when Bro. Noah Longanecker came and stayed until Sunday morning. On Saturday evening we held our love-feast. We had enjoyable meetings all through. Brethren C. J. Workman and Tulla Mockerman were also present at our Communion, in addition to the abovenamed. Six dear souls have been added to our church by baptism and two by letter. One has left us since our last report.—S. J. Workman, Oct 16.

Two Baptized.—Oct. 8, brethren Isaac Myers and Fred Wampler came to the Rough Run church and were with us at our love-feast, which was truly a feast to the soul. Oct. 10 two,—a brother and his companion,—were buried in holy baptism and arose, we hope, to walk in newness of life. Brethren, remember them at a Throne of Grace! The same evening was the love-feast at the Bethel church, North Mill Creek. The next day, Sunday, after appropriate addresses by the brethren to the Sunday-school, Eld. Geo. S. Arnold, of Burlington, W. Va, preached the dedicatory sermon to a full house.—A. L. Cook, Masonville, W. Va., Oct. 16.

Two Additions by Baptism.—The members of the Salimony congregation, Huntington Co., Ind., held their love-feast Oct. 14. It was a glorious feast to the soul and a refreshing season from the Lord. Bro. Reuben Binkley, from the Huntington congregation, and Bro. Huffman, from the Prairie Creek church were with us, and they and the home ministers entered into the work with a zeal worthy of the cause. As a result, we had a glorious feast to the soul. Two dear souls made the good confession and united with the church. A number of members from neighboring congregations were with us and at our morning meeting after the feast, instead of regular preaching services we had a general, social meeting at which many brethren and sisters rose and spoke to our comfort and edification. A. H. Snowberger.

Literary Notes.

Is Man Too Prolific? The So-called Malthusian Idea. By H. S. Pomeroy, A. M., M. D. 12mo, Leatherette, 54 pp., 35 cents. New York: Funk & Wagnalls.

An answer to the Malthusian doctrine, and designed to allay the fears of those who are troubled about the over population of the world.

The author make a strong case against the presumption to over-population. He points to the facts of a high mortality and low birth-rate at the two extremes of the social scale, and a growing tendency of the hand workers to be absorbed into the ranks of the brain-workers, and predicts that this will go on until, in spite of all improvements, the supply of labor will fall short of the demand.

In reference to the fear of over population he protests that Florida is large enough to provide comfortable homes for the present population of the globe, and that Texas is big enough for a grave-yard for all who have lived.

MRS. HENRY WARD BEECHER'S personal memoirs of her husband, under the title of "Mr. Beecher as I Knew Him," will begin in the October issue of The Ladies' Home Journal. The article will be found exceedingly interesting and profitable.

I baptized the little sister nearly two years ago, when some rather opposed her, thinking she was too young yet. She has lived an exemplary life and we have every reason to believe that our loss is her eternal gain. JOHN F. CLINE.

She leaves an aged husband and six children to mourn their loss, which is her eternal gain. The funeral was conducted by the writer to a large congregation of relatives and friends. DAVID TROXEL.

OVERHOLSER.—In the Swamp Creek church, Darke Co., Ohio, Sept. 9, 1891, Levi W. Overholser, aged 30 years, 10 months and 22 days.

Funeral services improved by Bro. Henry Longanecker, to a large concourse of sympathizing friends from the words, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." Bro. Levi lived a consistent Christian life for several years. He leaves a kind companion and two small children to endure the battles of life. His little daughter, Olive May, preceded him to her heavenly home about nine months. He suffered intense pain for several weeks but seemed to bear all with Christian fortitude, and so resigned himself to the will of God, that he called for the elders of the church to be anointed with oil as the Bible directs. May the widow's God and the children's Heavenly Father sustain and lead them through life, that they may again meet their best earthly friend where parting will be known no more. I. B. MILLER.

In his death the church has lost a devoted member, the vicinity a worthy citizen, the widow a kind husband and the children an affectionate father. I. B. MILLER.

She was a Bible reader and a faithful Sunday-school scholar. Her piety was manifest to all, and the loss is deeply felt in the family and among her youthful friends. The funeral services were conducted by Bro. John Lehner, and Rev. Gordon of the Presbyterian church. D. C. BURKHOLDER.

-:- -:- Again!

OF the large number of students now enrolled, we know of but one or two who will go away at the end of this Term. This is so, not because all who are here intended to remain longer than to the close of this Term, but because those who intended to go out to teach, have decided to remain. One lady who had an offer of $40 per month, replied that she had decided to remain at school. Now her father writes: "I believe they will give you $50 per month, if you will come;" but she will remain at school. Six weeks ago we had several applications for teachers for eight months at good wages, but we could find none among our students, willing to take those schools. We remember that last spring, one of our lady students quit school to teach at $60 per Month.

Some schools promise to secure positions for their students. It looks as if positions were seeking our students. Of course we have some in our school who do not have such good positions offered them. It is because they are not prepared to fill them. Those who are properly qualified, always find positions waiting for them.

Many new students will enter at the beginning of the Winter Term (Nov. 25); some to prepare to teach, others to study Bookkeeping and Shorthand. All should at once arrange to come.

LIFE AND SERMONS

—: OF :—

ELD. JAMES QUINTER.

THIS is a neatly-printed and well-bound volume of 426 pages, containing a well-written biographical sketch of Eld. James Quinter and forty of his sermons.

The biographical part will be found quite interesting, instructive and impressive. No one can read an account of Bro. Quinter's life without feeling deeply and favorably impressed. The work shows how a poor orphan boy, by hard work, and faithfulness to his religious convictions, rose step by step, until he reached a field of usefulness and honor as broad as the Nation itself. Though dead, his good deeds and the impressive examples in piety, learning and simplicity will follow him for generations to come.

The Sermon Department contains many of his choice sermons, which will prove exceedingly interesting and profitable reading to all, and especially to our ministers and isolated members. We feel that this book will fill a long-felt want in our Brotherhood. Price, post-paid, $1.25.

Gospel Chimes!

BY WM. BEERY.

THIS little book has been selling more rapidly than the publishers anticipated. The first edition was almost exhausted in the first two months. A second edition is now printed.

Following are a few of the good words received from brethren and other competent judges:

"An Excellent Book for Sunday-schools."

"After having carefully examined "Gospel Chimes" I can pronounce it an excellent book for Sunday-schools, and hope all the schools of the Brethren will adopt the same. Our church is conceded to have the best congregational singing of any denomination, and if it is improved, as it can be, by the use of 'Gospel Chimes,' the power for good will be surprising."—GEO. B. HOLSINGER, Teacher of Music, Bridgewater College, Va.

"Fresh and Pleasing Melodies; Thoughtful, Spiritual, and Poetical Words."

"It gives me pleasure to speak in terms of praise of your new book, 'Gospel Chimes.' It contains many fresh and pleasing melodies to which are wedded thoughtful, spiritual and poetical words. I trust it will hold its own in competition with the numerous books now in the market and find a large sale."—T. M. TOWNE, Chicago, Ill., one of America's best writers of Sunday-school music.

"Better than Many Similar Publications."

"Copy of your new book received. It contains some very pleasing and useful music, while it is to be commended especially for the selection of hymns. Good Sunday-school hymns are in great demand in Sunday-school work, and in this particular 'Gospel Chimes' is better than many similar publications."—A. J. SHOWALTER, the leading writer and publisher of Sunday-school and church music in the South.

"An Excellent Collection."

"I have carefully examined your late Sunday-school singing book, 'Gospel Chimes' and find it to be an excellent collection for the purpose designed, both in words and music."—S. W. STRAUB, Chicago, Ill., the popular Western writer and publisher of Sunday-school music.

Bro. Beery has had a large experience in Sunday-school work, and the book which we offer to the brethren, and the public in general, evinces the exercise of talent as well as good judgment. The religious purity of the hymns contributed by sister Beery adds much to the excellence of the book.

Price per single copy, 30 cts.; per dozen by mail, $3.00; by express, $2.60. Lots of more than a dozen must be sent by express.

THE James Creek, Pa., Brethren have arranged to commence a series of meetings in their Bethel church-house Nov. 7, and continue for several weeks. Bro. Michael Claar is to do the preaching.

OUR ministers and others should arrange to attend the ministerial meeting to be held at Clover Creek, Pa., commencing Nov. 24. Ample provisions will be made to entertain all who may attend.

JUST now we have a good opening for some brother who would be prepared to run a general store on a small scale. A furnished store-room, also a dining-room and kitchen on the first floor, with three good rooms on the second floor, can be had, and are ready for occupancy, at a very reasonable rate.

THE time for holding our Communion meeting is Saturday, Nov. 14. Preparatory services are to commence at 2 P. M. Those coming on the "Broad Top" will arrive here at 12:05. From the East on the Pennsylvania Central, at 12:17, and from the West at 12:58, all between 1 and 2 o'clock in the afternoon. We will be glad to welcome our brethren and sisters among us at this time.

AVOID hobbies, because to ride them and ride them hard seems to be the natural bent of many minds. We meet hobby riders almost everywhere and sometimes a whole church gets astride of one special hobby and it is ridden until it becomes raw, sore, festered and nauseous. It is sometimes said that when saints get to fighting, the devil goes free. Just so it is in hobby-riding. Concentrate on some one thing and everything else is allowed to run loose and go wild.

BIBLE work will be continued during the school year and we shall be pleased to have a number of our ministers and Bible workers with us. Come, and you will receive a hearty welcome.

BRO. JONATHAN DAVIS and wife, who have been residents of our town for some fifteen years, have left us and located in Fredericksburg, Blair Co., Pa. We wish them success in their new field of labor.

WE have had a number of inquiries about some notes that Bro. Quinter was supposed to have had and used in his debate on secret societies, and because we were supposed to have access to these notes we have been requested to prepare a tract on the subject for publication. As we do not wish to have people entertain wrong notions as to such notes, we here state that we never saw them neither do we know that such notes are in existence. If they are, we do not know who has them.

"THERE is a sense in which the present moment is to every one an end of life. It is that to which we have been tending from the beginning of our days. We cannot afford, like certain tourists, to move along our way with head down, and with eyes and ears closed to all that is about us, as if there were nothing to us in the wayside, simply because we are trying to reach a farther goal. Not merely what lies at the end of the road, but the road itself, is the Christian's destination. The best way to live for the future is to live the best way for the present. Heaven begins on the road heavenward."

"IT is as easy to work hard as it is to half work. Having steam up, it is no more difficult to run forty miles an hour than to run twenty. Doubled speed does not necessarily involve double energy. We should count on the force of momentum, in all our plans of Christian work, in ordinary business or study, as truly as in the world of physics. The saying is familiar, that, if you want a piece of work done, you will do well to ask a busy man to do it. Probably, if you are a busy man, you will do your extra work yourself. When once the steam is up to carry you over the rails, the number of cars you have to draw is a minor matter."

OUR experience has been, in traveling some through the churches, that those members who do not read the MESSENGER, don't have much interest in the welfare of the church. This can be put down as an almost universal truth. Even the very poorest among us who have a zeal for the cause, always find a way of getting the church paper. Those who love the church are anxious to be kept posted in its workings and if they cannot find enough money to subscribe for the paper, somebody will do it for them if their wants and wishes are properly made known. Some one in every congregation should be interested enough in the welfare of the members to see that all are supplied with the church paper, and as for the coming year the MESSENGER will be sent only to those who subscribe, we hope that this matter will be attended to.

WE are having two large classes in Bible Study this Term,—one in the book of Genesis, and the other in Luke's Gospel. We are glad to know that the interest in this study is increasing and we hope that the time will soon come when no course of education will be considered complete without a thorough study of the Bible.

BRO. J. H. KURTZ, of near Waynesborough, Pa., stopped over with us last Sunday and attended our services. He had been identified with the Old Order brethren, but has come back again and is now working with his old-time zeal for the good cause. We would hail with joy the time when all those who have separated from us could feel to do the same thing, so that among us there would be but one shepherd and one fold. By being together we can do more effective work for the Master and a better light would be given to the world.

AT this time several brethren can buy themselves very desirable homes in the James Creek, Pa., congregation. The one farm joins the plot on which the church is built and has a railroad station within two hundred yards of the buildings. The other farm adjoins this one, making them both convenient to church and railroad. They are limestone farms, good quality of land, good buildings and large orchards of carefully-selected fruit. The one was supposed to have two thousand bushels of winter apples this fall. These farms can be had at a bargain, and we make this note of them because it is the place where our home church is located and we want the farms to remain in the hands of the Brethren. It is a pleasant place to live and if any of our Brethren wish to buy farms of this kind, we will be pleased to give any information that may be desired. The one has been named as a location for the Old Folks' Home, and we know of no more suitable place in the District. Any one thinking of buying should write or come and see soon. The farms are located along the H. & B. T. Railroad, ten miles south of Huntingdon.

AN eastern sister asks us if it is right for members of our church to take part in the prayer-meetings of other churches. This depends somewhat on who the members are, the manner in which they take a part and the character of the meetings. For such things it is a very difficult matter to lay down arbitrary rules. There is one thing that we should never do, — to compromise our principles or the Truth. And then there is one thing we always should do,—speak and do for Christ wherever and whenever an opportunity is afforded. Note carefully these two things and you always have the question answered. The places to which we go should not be so much a consideration as the motives that lead us to go and what we do when we get there. Christ came not to call the righteous, but to save sinners. That was his mission and should be ours. Go where you feel that you can do good—where the sinners are. There is no use of casting nets where there are no fish. "On the other side," are the words of Christ, and the nets were filled. We often toil and labor and catch nothing because we don't do it at the right place. Look and then work.

ESSAYS.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

BY AND BY.

By and by when flowers have faded,
And the summer days have gone,
When the heart's best love is shaded,
As you wait in tears alone;
Let the rays of sunshine cheer you,
While the birds sing songs of glee,
Keep life's roses ever near you,
And the future bright shall be.

By and by, when friends have left you,
With the warm, true love they gave,—
It may be that death has bereft you,
And you stand beside their grave,—
Do not let your heart grow weary,
In the gloom of earth's dark night,
Look beyond those hours so dreary,
And behold the dawn of light.

By and by when age is nearing,
And your hair has turned to gray,
When earth's prospects are not cheering,
As you dream of childhood's day,
Do not turn away in sorrow,
With a heart grown cold through care;
Watch and wait the coming morrow,
When the sky is bright and fair.

By and by when love is bringing,
You so near the heavenly throne,
And you hear the angels singing,
While a low, sweet voice says, Come,
Do not wait this side the river,
Through the long, dark hours of night,
Go to One who is life's Giver,
In the world of fadeless light.

A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

BY B. F. MOOMAW.

Chapter Six.

LATER on in the war period a young man, a distant relative of mine,—Jacob P. Moomaw, now an elder in the church, then in the army in Eastern Virginia, asked me to assist him in getting a substitute. I left my home and business, and went fifty miles to Lynchburg. Here I contracted with an Irishman, to take the place of the aforesaid person. I then took the train to Orange court-house, about fifty miles farther on. Then, with the substitute, I started on foot, early in the morning, and about noon overtook the army marching eastward. We could get no dinner, and marched with the army till late in the evening. When we went into camp, there was no supper for the soldiers, but a friend of mine, Captain S., from Craig County, Va., kindly procured some rations for me and the Irishman, and I certainly appreciated it after the distance of nearly thirty miles' walk. The soldiers shared their blankets with me, and I rested on the ground with them. We had in the evening applied to the officers in command to put in the substitute, but all in vain,—"Too late now: the struggle too great!"

Some time before day the scouts came in with the report of the advance of the enemy. Orders were given to be ready to march by sun-rise. Then there was hustling, all astir! Breakfast was prepared; the Irishman and I took breakfast with the company to which my friend belonged. The army started on their way to the expected battle; we took the parting hand with sorrow and tears, and started on our way homeward. Returning after we had walked twenty-one miles, we became very hungry and stopped on the porch of a house, belonging to a seemingly well-to-do family. The landlord came to the door. We asked him for something to eat. He says, "We have no meal in the house." The Irishman replied, "Faith, and have you not got a little flour," but all to no purpose. When I asked for a drink of water, he turned and walked into the room. I followed and as I walked in, I said, "I have one thing to be glad of, that I never turned a hungry man away from my door," and took a chair. The lady and another man were in the room. I took a drink and sat still. Presently the lady went into an adjoining room. We waited and watched. Presently she appeared at the door and signaled. The gentleman went to her. They went together into the back room, and pretty soon the door was opened, and we were invited in. We beheld a table with a fair supply of the much-needed refreshments, and after taking a square meal, and resting a little while, asked for the bill. No charge was made, but I did not want it that way, and having some specie, which was a rarity then, I paid him seventy-five cents and we went on our way rejoicing. We walked eight or nine miles to the railroad and came to Lynchburg. There I left the Irishman and came home.

Shortly after, the question was moved in Congress to repeal the substitute law, upon which another brother and myself went to Richmond, to get up an influence against its repeal. This we attempted by getting some of the members of the house, who were our friends, to try to prevent its its passage, but the advocates of the bill were too many, and our cause failed. Then the only alternative was for the boys to refugee, and they went over the line by the hundreds.

It was at the time that we were in Richmond on this business, that the eighteen (?) young brethren, spoken of in the MESSENGER No. 34, page 534, were arrested while attempting to leave the country, and imprisoned in Castle Thunder, of which we were informed, and immediately we sought an interview with Col. J. B. Baldwin, an eminent lawyer, and member of the Confederate Congress, and got him to appear for them in their behalf, which resulted in their being rescued and allowed to return to their homes in the lower valley of Virginia, and provided for as seen in Stonewall Jackson's letter, published in that paper. The refugees had to be cared for and fed, and in those times we had to feed many persons in our house, living near the railroad station. The soldiers, their relations and friends, going backward and forward, had to be entertained, and finally the burden became so great, that we concluded to take out entertainment license, to legalize a charge, which we fixed according to the value of the money, and so placed an advertisement on the front door as follows: For meals, one shilling in specie, and ten dollars in Confederate money. In this way Confederate money accumulated rapidly, and went the same way. Near the close of the war I went to the city of Lynchburg to invest about $3,000 dollars which I did at $10 a pound for common brown sugar, $12 per yard for cotton cloth, and $40 dollars for a wool hat, now worth 75 cents, and other things in proportion. Shortly after this the Government took from me a horse for which it gave me a note for $700, but the war closed, and the note is worthless; I still have on hand some Confederate money, on which I wrote, "Beware of Rebellion."

SANCTIFICATION.

BY LEWIS W. TEETER.

WE are requested to write on the above subject under the following heads: viz:

1. "What is sanctification?"
2. "Is it an act of man or God?"
3. "What place does it occupy in the plan of salvation?"

1. What is Sanctification?—Santification, as applied to persons in the religious sense, according to the New Testament is, to be cleansed from all sin and guilt, by the Gospel of Jesus Christ, which is accomplished by obeying the Gospel. 1 Pet. 1: 22.

The literal meaning of sanctification is (a) to cleanse from impurities; (b) to set apart for holy or sacred use.

In the Old Testament, not only persons, but, anything that was used in the religious services was to be sanctified; such as altars, vessels, garments, etc., Ex. 40: 9–13, which was accomplished by observing certain ordinances, appointed for that purpose, and without the observance of the specific ordinances, in the proper manner, time and place, there could be no sanctification.

UNDER THE GOSPEL

There is nothing to sanctify but persons. The Father has sanctified the Son, John 10: 36, hence all that Jesus did, is already sanctified by him, and for the disciples' sakes he sanctified himself, that they also might be sanctified through the Truth. John 17: 19. "For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh, how much more shall the blood of Christ, who, through the eternal Spirit, offered himself without spot to God, purge your consciences from dead works to serve the living God?" Heb. 9: 13, 14. "And for this cause he is the Mediator of the New Testament," and since a testament requires the death of the Testator to give it power, and since, without the shedding of blood there is no remission, therefore Jesus was not fully sanctified in the secondary sense until he had passed through death, nor until he rose for our justification, (Rom. 4: 25), by which he is made unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption (1 Cor. 1: 30).

Christ, in giving himself as a ransom for our sins, atoned for the Adamic sin, by which we all have redemption through his blood, which was the essential step toward the complete sanctification of his followers. During his life and ministry he gave form to his Gospel. Through his death and resurrection he secured all requisite power for his Gospel, hence the principal characteristics of his Gospel are (a) form, and (b) power.

THE GOSPEL HAS FORM

Because it is designed to be the medium through which its power is transmitted to the disciple, i. e., the power which was first in Christ, while he was here among men, and was afterward infused into his Gospel through the Holy Spirit. Acts 1: 8. Whoever will now obey that form of doctrine from the heart, shall be made free from sin, and become the servant of God, and have his spirit unto holiness, and the end unto everlasting life. (See Rom. 6: 17–22; compare 1 Pet. 1: 22.) For this purpose, Jesus took upon himself the form of a servant, that he might give such a form to his doctrine, and incorporate such services in his Gospel that would finally bring his servants into his holy form, by faith and perseverance in that doctrine. (Eph. 4: 11–13.) For Jesus humbled himself as a Savior until he came on a level with man, whom he came to save, and while in humiliation, he taught and exemplified a system of services which were, to a great extent, observed by himself, and which, therefore, after his death, resurrection and ascension, became the outfit of services for his followers, that they might be made partakers of the Divine nature that was in him, "having escaped the corruption that is in the world." (Compare 2 Pet. 1: 2–9.) Therefore we conclude this branch of our subject by saying, that to be purged from our old sins we must become possessors of the Christian graces, alluded to by Peter, namely, faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity. These can only be secured by carefully complying with all the commandments of Jesus in his Gospel, which were confirmed by the Holy Ghost through the apostles, and which are now embraced in the volume called "The New Testament." This he established as his will through his death, and resurrection; by the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all. Heb. 10: 10.

2. Is it an act of man, or of God?—Sanctification is the result of strict obedience to God, according to his divine will, as taught in the Gospel of Jesus Christ. See 1 Pet. 1: 22-25. It can therefore only be considered as an act of God, and not of man.

God formulated through his Son the conditions which will sanctify men, as soon as they comply with them. Man's part in the work of sanctification is to repent, believe the Gospel, love God, and observe all things else that God has commanded him in his Gospel. Matt. 28: 20. God's part is to confer the blessings through the Holy Spirit, upon the compliance with the conditions of sanctification.

3. What place does it occupy in the Plan of Salvation?—Sanctification occupies the place of "blessings," in the plan of salvation. Wherever a blessing is promised in the Gospel, there is an advancement in sanctification. For instance, hungering and thirsting after righteousness secures the blessing of being filled. Matt. 5: 6. Repenting, believing, and being baptized secures (a) the remission of sins; (b) the gift of the Holy Ghost (Acts 2: 38); (c) adoption into the family of God (Rom. 8: 14-16); and (d) salvation (Mark 16: 16.)

"Secret praying," secures open rewards. (Matt. 6: 6.) Meeting in the name of Jesus, even to the number of two or three, secures his presence. Matt. 18: 20. Washing each other's feet, secures our "part in heaven," John 13: 8-14, of which, with the eating of the Lord's Supper and the Communion, Jesus says: If ye know these things, happy (blessed) are ye if ye do them. John 13: 17.

Lastly, including all,—doing the commandments of Jesus secures (a) a right to the Tree of Life; (b) the ability to enter in through the gates into the city, Rev. 22: 14, which completes sanctification.

FRIENDSHIP.

BY MRS. SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

THERE may exist a business or a "speaking" acquaintance between persons of different social standing, or occupying widely differing stations in life. But friendship,—real, true friendship,—comprehends vastly more than mere passing acquaintance. It embraces, in its fullest sense, the sweet communion of kindred souls. The Creator wisely implanted in the human heart a yearning for friendship. The patriarch Abraham was called "the FRIEND of God." The wild, uncivilized red man of the forest recognizes the difference between a friend and a foe. The "man of the world" realizes the need of friends in sickness and health, in poverty or wealth, but the best type of friendship is found among the true followers of the meek and lowly Lamb of God, who is represented as being a friend who "sticketh closer than a brother." It is a friendship that is both seen and felt, whose soothing influence is manifested not only in the word, but also in deed. It is the affectionate regard for each other's welfare, the readiness to render any little service for each other's comfort, and a willingness to throw the mantle of charity over the defects of others.

Friendship naturally instils into the human soul a sociability or blending together of our interests, and thus, by a social greeting, an inquiry into each other's welfare, a cheerful smile often imparts hope and new life and energy into the desponding heart, oppressed with the corroding cares and vicissitudes of this mortal life.

A lack of true, Christian sociability is becoming alarmingly prevalent in the churches of to-day, and is one great cause of the growth of infidelity to the cause of Christ, and is, in some instances, bringing distrust and disregard for law and order in social life.

In the popular churches of our cities, where wealth and caste rule, we may get a view of this decline in friendship and sociability. The sexton prepares the spacious auditorium for the comfort of the members of the congregation, a handsome young lady,—a butterfly of fashion,—glides in and takes a seat in front of a costly pipe organ, with a mirror in front of her. After the chiming of the bells in the lofty tower, she deftly manipulates the keys of the musical instrument with her shapely fingers, to some appropriate (?) "march." Immediately the worshipers (of fashion) file up the long aisle, the gentleman in each case in advance of a lady, attired in rich and costly silks and satins. The gentleman selects a pew, all richly upholstered, politely steps aside while she precedes her escort into the seat. Both simultaneously sink into the repose of magnificent elegance, all unconscious of the existence of any one but themselves. Their coachman, perched upon his seat outside, patiently awaits their re-appearance.

The Rev. arises amid the rumbling of the organ and the screeching of hired operatic singers, and when silence is restored he sails away into a grand flow of oratory and modern theology, and, after a brief lecture, he pronounces a benediction and sinks into a luxurious seat. The organ again pours fourth its melodious strains in another "march," and all quietly pass down the aisle out into the street, and are hurried away to their homes, perhaps without even one thought for the lowly Nazarene, whom they blindly imagine they have worshiped, and without having made the heart of one fellow-mortal happier or better by manifesting a sociable, friendly feeling for even their equals in rank and social position. How do such "performances," exemplify the Savior of mankind, who went about doing good to the poor and afflicted? He was a friend to the friendless, and a comforter of those who were cast down.

Though this is but the picture of thousands of persons who are worshiping Mammon, yet the influence of such is being silently and surely carried into the less pretentious churches and, little by little, is gnawing the vitals from the true Christian religion by sapping the life out of friendship.

Though the church of the Brethren has not yet so far departed from its ancient purity, and primitive principles of the true humility and warm, unfeigned love for God, and unalloyed friendship and Christian sociability, there is still great room for improvement in the way we manifest a friendliness for strangers who come into at least some of our congregations. Sometimes members move from one congregation to another. At the former place, perhaps, the members manifested a kindly regard and appreciation of each other, in visiting, socially and officially, "endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace," while at the latter place they show little or no concern for the well-being of their members, either in sickness or health, adversity or prosperity. Such conduct, though not the result of unkind feelings, may be the result of training, or, rather, lack of training, on the part of those in an official capacity.

More especially is this failure to be sociable, to be guarded against with those who are not members, and only transient visitors to our meetings. Many an earnest, seeking soul may thus be unintentionally driven away from Christ and his church, and eventually drift into infidelity by our seeming indifference. Dear brethren, these things ought not so to be! Let us endeavor to cultivate true Christian friendship and sociability at all times, thus proving to a gainsaying world by the genuineness of our faith and practice that we have been with Jesus and learned of him, and that we are indeed and in truth followers of him who said, "Come unto me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden."

Practical Questions on Lesson III.

1. WHAT kingdom followed the Persian?
2. By what symbols is it represented?
3. Who was the central figure of this kingdom?
4. Where did Alexander design to build his Capital?
5. How was he prevented from so doing?
6. What prophecy was he opposing in this attempt?
7. What became of Alexander's kingdom after his death?
8. How did this division directly fulfill a prophecy?
9. What remarkable prophecy, concerning Christ, did Daniel write?

Lesson IV.

In the preceding lessons we have been studying the fulfillment of prophecy, covering the Babylonian, Persian, and Grecian kingdom. Daniel also saw a fourth beast which represented Rome in its two forms, first in its political, and secondly its papal form when it was ruled by a Pope. The Roman empire practically controlled the world at the time of Christ.

We now return to the history of God's people,—the Jews. From the time the Jews were carried away to Babylon, they were most of the time under the rule of some other nation, and paid tribute although they made some show of a government of their own. However, for about 100 years they were, to a great extent, free and independent.

As previously stated, there is a gap of about 400 years between the last book of the Old Testament and the coming of Christ. During these 400 years, the Jews were under the Persian rule until 331 B. C., when the Greeks, under Alexander, became the ruling power. Through the Grecian conquests and rule the Greek language was spread far and wide, and is the language principally used in the time of Christ among the Jews, as the New Testament was written in Greek. During this space of 400 years the Jews kept up their forms of religion. The High-Priesthood was considered the most important position, and it began to be considered both religious and civil, or a union of church and state. This brought about rivalry and treachery as in most political governments. The most noted of the High-priests during this period was Simon I, the Just, who lived about 300 years B. C. He was succeeded by his brother Eleazar, about 292 B. C. During the reign of Eleazar, which lasted about forty years, it is claimed that the Septuagint came into existence.

This was the translating of the Bible (the Old Testament) from the original Hebrew into the Greek. It is called Septuagint from the fact that there were seventy translators, the word being from the Greek word meaning seventy. This translation was made by authority of Ptolemy II, Philadelphus, king of Egypt. As the Greek language was becoming so universal, it was considered necessary to have the Bible in Greek for the Jews, as they were widely scattered, and under the influence of the Greek language. This version of the Old Testament is of great value in many ways, and especially in establishing the authenticity of the Bible and the time of its writing.

In the conflicts between different kings, Palestine was usually disputed territory, and the Jews in Palestine were thus often placed in an unpleasant situation, and suffered greatly many times. In the year 217 B. C., a great battle was fought near Gaza, between the king of Egypt and king of Syria in which the King of Egypt was the victor. He went to Jerusalem, and, not content with offering sacrifices, he entered the Holy of Holies, but is said to have been driven out by some supernatural terror. Being angered at this, he began a cruel persecution of the Jews at Alexandria in Egypt. This was the first persecution of the Jews for nearly 200 years. The result of this was to alienate the Jews from their allegiance to Egypt. In 198 B. C., in another war between Syria and Egypt, Palestine fell under control of Syria. For a number of years following this there were different parties among the Jews in Palestine. Men would hold the High-priesthood by consent of the ruling king. Flattery, bribes, and false accusations against others were the means used to secure the position.

FOR WHAT ARE WE LIVING?

BY A. HUTCHISON.

LIFE as we now have it, as a whole, is very much mixed with alloy, and it sometimes happens that the alloy gains the ascendency, so that we are in a strait,—finding that when we would do good, evil is present with us. This has been known to be the case, at least in one instance, to such an extent, that the individual said, "Wherefore hast thou made all men in vain?" Ps. 89: 47, and another said, "It is vain to serve God; and what profit is it that we have kept his ordinance." Mal. 3: 14. In each of these cases, it is plainly seen that those persons had a very poor and low conception of the object of life, and of the design of God's disciplinary measures, as these are applied to man here.

In God's dealings with man, he does not let the chastening rod fall upon him by chance. We must accept of it as a fact, that the purpose of God does not change, and his justice and judgment do not vary. His purpose is like a straight line running through the center of an even plane. On one side of that line, the mercies of God come down, and on the other side, the judgments fall.

These two never vary, nor does one take the place of the other. When man was created, he was placed on the mercy side of the line, and plainly told that, if he crossed to the other side, the judgment would surely come upon him. Man, then, had discretionary powers and privileges the same as he has now, and in the exercise of these, his responsibility comes in. The Lord gave Adam much liberty, and but one restriction was placed upon him. To us it seems as if that was a very trifling offense, that was committed by our fore-parents, but we must not forget, that when God speaks, it stands fast, and they were living under, and dealing with, the same God then, that we are now claiming to serve. The apostle tells us how it will be with us, for he says, "If we believe not, yet he abideth faithful: he cannot deny himself." 2 Tim. 2: 13. Hence, we can plainly see, that he cannot change this thing, so as to let the mercies fall upon us, if we have placed ourselves on the judgment side of the line.

When that primeval pair was placed in the Garden of Eden, their business was to "dress it, and to keep it." We have their business specifically stated. Now, just as long as they remained faithful to their post, they were honoring God. While they did that, they remained on the mercy side of the line of justice, and no judgment could come upon them. While we are talking up this question, let us make an application of it to ourselves. We owe something to God too, as well as did Adam and Eve. They committed one error. Have we not done equally as much, if not more? Adam had a law delivered to him direct from the Lord. He could converse with the Law-giver face to face. The Israelites had a law from the same Author, but delivered unto them by the mouth of Moses. We have a law, emanating from the same source, who is the Father of us all. That law comes to us through the medium of his Son, and he gave his life that salvation might come to each of us, for he "tasted death for every man."

Now we have already noticed what was the consequence when Adam and Eve disobeyed the law given to them. Let us see how it went with those who violated the law in the time of Moses. Paul tells it in the following words: "He that despised Moses' law, died without mercy under two or three witnesses." Heb. 10: 28.

We might inquire, Why no mercy? There is but one answer. Simply because they, having disobeyed that law, placed themselves thereby on the judgment side of the line, and the mercy is all on the other side; therefore it is easy to see why they must die without mercy. Therefore we hear Paul saying to us: "See that ye refuse not him that speaketh: for if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven." Heb. 12: 25.

I presume we all agree that Christ is the one who is referred to here, as speaking from heaven, and also the one to whom Moses was referring when he said to the fathers: "A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me." Acts 3: 22 Here we have it plainly set forth, in the above, and that which follows, not only that Christ was that prophet, but that we were to hear him, and not merely to hear him in what suits us, but to hear him in all things whatsoever he shall say unto us. Not only that, but he says, "It shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people."

Now, are we living to the glorifying of that prophet? If we are, and from our hearts obey him in all things,—that will place us on the mercy side of the line, and if we are on that side, we are with Jesus also. Christ has said, "If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be." John 12: 26. We surely could not ask for more. When we look at the great blessings which our God is so richly lavishing upon us here, and then look into his Book, and see what rich and grand blessings he has in store for us hereafter, and then think how anxious he is to give them to us, and how he sends the Holy Spirit to woo us, and to hold out to us the hand of mercy, and to tell us what we are to do to get on the mercy side, and how to continue on that side,—are not our hearts filled with joyful emotions, and could we live for aught else but to glorify God, and to be saved?

MINISTERS' EDUCATION AND SCHOOLS.

BY A. I. MOW.

LET us emphasize the importance of ministerial education. Ministers properly always have been, are, and will be, teachers. Matt. 25: 19; 1 Cor. 4: 17; 1 Tim. 3: 2; 2 Tim. 2: 2.

Teaching is an act of cultivating the mind. The teacher must direct the thoughts. In all cases he is required to do skillfully what he would direct others to do. He must think. It is necessary that he thinks so that he may discover thoughts in others,—that he may set others to thinking. Thinking is enriched and strengthened by the proper grasping of the manifold relations, affecting the thought-object. Thus organization is essential, and the teacher, to have his thoughts and the thoughts of others clear and impressive, must be an organizer of thought.

In the work which the religious teacher has to do, his thoughts are not spontaneous, and made at one sudden bound, but item by item. Ideas, one after another, are collected, pondered and then used in their order. Many thoughts are of little value to the teacher until he conceives in himself their character and use,—interprets them. The teacher must be an interpreter of thought. It is through his ability to interpret thought and the discourse of others that he gains the profound and true meaning of the Holy Scriptures, and also enters into the field of universal thought. I believe that the faculty of thought, systematic, thorough thought, is what, more than all else, makes man divine. Thought seeks means of transmission. It frames language.

Ideas are incarnate in words, thoughts or judgments in sentences, and related series of thoughts in discourse. The teacher must be sufficiently conversant with the language of his people that he may appropriately clothe his ideas.

The mind of man is calculated to be the architect, the husbandman. It plans, directs and cultivates. The heart of man is the soil and coincides with conscience. It may be sterile, new or unbroken, or it may be friable and productive. Conscience is a creature of education, so also is the heart. Heart religion therefore may be very low and impulsive, giving occasion for the three religious states in man,—the imaginative, the feeling and the thoughtful.

The imaginative is that child state of religion in which the imagination pictures deities, and peoples the universe with gods, as did the oriental nations. The feeling is that religious state in which one feels all he has, regardless of judgment or truth. In that condition the person says many strange things. The heart expresses emotions, and with no other ground the individual says, "I know I am saved because I feel it. The thoughtful is the highest, and is the state which carefully corrects and directs the former two by well-matured and evenly-balanced judgment.

God has a reason in all things. He is the best teacher who can present facts with their reasons. In this last state the man quietly believes that he is in a saved condition because the sum of facts in God's Word makes it evident to him. This is the condition into which the teacher must needs come and remain. It does not discard imagination and feeling, but elevates them and controls their workings.

The earth is larger than it was a thousand years ago. Humanity has grown amazingly in the last five hundred years. During the last three and a half centuries religious excitement has developed into a hurricane. In America, three score years ago, the preacher was a general purpose man. Then the people were isolated, worked hard, read little and thought less. To-day children at twelve read the news, study the Scriptures, and have a very liberal store of general information. Then the preacher could give news and incidents, recite Scriptures, dwell on touching stories and give fervent admonition. Thus he more than satisfied every expectation. Now those things are supplied by educational provisions. Now people want the ground thoughts,—a "reason of the hope that is in you."

Every department of life is now calling out specialists, who are thoroughly conversant with its needs and workings. The doctor, mechanic and school teacher are examples. Their schools are exacting in proportion to their growing importance.

The minister, in importance, must head the list, as he is "debtor both to the Greek and to the barbarian, both to the wise and to the unwise." He should not always be a novice. We all serve in the novitiate degree, but this should be a period of zealous, vigorous study and of short duration. Men who have surmounted this period regret that their apprenticeship has detained them so long and that, when once they are skilled, their vitality is scarcely equal to the work they need to do.

There are not commonly so many things new now as there used to be. The press keeps the people informed. The minister must be able to cope with the controversies which arise in men's minds regarding what they read and hear. He must make special investigation, use time which others apply to other affairs of life. Then he may rightly apply the Word.

Common schools are common to all, and leave all virtually on an even basis. With only the advantage they give, the minister must be well talented and studious if he can lead his class in his time. Give him a liberal education in high-schools and he will be better prepared to meet demands.

The preacher must have his special school, as the school-teacher has his normal, the handicrafts man his polytechnic, and the surgeon his institute.

The modern preacher must needs learn well the language of his country. He must be able to form a sentence correctly, and to construct a discourse in that language. He need not concern himself much about translating Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, as better translations are already given than he would likely be able to make. He needs thorough drill in interpreting Scripture and discussing it. He must be acquainted with geography generally, and especially that pertaining to Bible Lands. He should be well informed in history. It will correct and enliven his interpretation of the Bible. He should understand the nature and possibilities of the human mind. He needs supervision in the outlining of subjects until he is able to systematically write up notes with references, on any topic of the Bible.

Then he needs opportunity to engage in free, oral discussion with others on these subjects. This will destroy bias and give liberality of thought. He must have opportunities to study and discuss freely ideas of church government, that he may gain power to treat practically cases on their merits. Each such department should have a competent teacher, under whose guidance all these things may be well accomplished.

No other than a special school for ministers can give these advantages effectively. The demand of the age will call forth such an institution, and it will not be for the education of boys up to the ministry, but for the training of men already chosen, who need this teaching cheaply and quickly. In such a school a year's work could go far in starting a minister correctly. The course, however, should be extended, so that those with time and money could acquire a high degree of training.

The church might call on a few of her servants, who are divinely fitted to occupy these places in her nursery. I for one have many times wished that I might, for one year, if not longer, be permitted to enjoy such instruction and training from the older brethren of skill and experience. O, why cannot some men inherit the mantle of the tried man of God, as did Elisha that of Elijah? 2 Kings 2: 11–13.

REMARKS.—We are glad that we can say to Bro. Mow and others, that our Bible Departments in the Brethren's schools are intended to meet this growing demand among our ministers, and a year of study in one of these departments will be a great help to any young minister who can afford it. Like Bro. Mow we have often wished for an opportunity to attend a Bible school conducted by an experienced brother, but we were called to the ministry when high-schools were unknown among our Brethren. Those called to the work now have many advantages, not possessed by our ministers years ago, and we trust that they will not only appreciate these advantages, but will use them in maintaining the land-marks set by our fathers. These Bible Departments are meeting at least the present demands, and will improve as the Brotherhood demands a more thorough course.—ED.

COVETOUSNESS.

BY ROSEANN READ.

TAKE heed and beware of covetousness. Why? Because of the deceitfulness of the sin. He who steals, gets intoxicated, or commits adultery, knows he is guilty, but as we learn from the Divine Record that our hearts are deceitful, may we not covet and yet have no suspicion of our guilt? I believe all will bear testimony with me that the Scriptures do not say in vain, "The spirit that dwelleth in us lusteth to envy."

When this evil root springs up in our hearts, we get an eager desire for gain. Like King Ahab, we may see a desirable piece of land near to our house, and although we may not be in possession of the required payments, we judge by past experience that if we throw all our energy in that direction we may be safe in purchasing. Thereby we may so entangle ourselves with the affairs of this life, that we have but little time, money or intellect to please him who hath chosen us to be his soldiers. And why? Because of a covetous desire for the root of all evil. Thus we prove to the world that we love that for which we show so great a concern. The world loves its own. The desires indicate the character. "As he thinketh in his heart, so is he." "Labor not for the meat that perisheth." "With food and raiment let us be therewith content." Christ did not mean here that men were not to labor. The Master set the example in laboring as a carpenter at Nazareth and taught that work is a part of the divine plan of man. But notwithstanding this, there are too many who put all their energy into their daily work, to the neglect of their souls. God alone can tell the true spiritual condition of the heart, and he can see the many souls who will lose a mansion over there because the goddess of fashion or the pleasures of this world have blinded them.

We should, to some extent, be able to judge the tree by its fruit,—in finance as in conversation and other things. None of us are, perhaps, entirely exempt from this sin. Minister and laity, rich and poor, are tried by it. Preachers often pass by opportunities of doing good through the chilling influence of covetousness. We, the laity, err as often in not giving of our means to send the Gospel to all nations, and in not doing unto others as we would have them do to us. If we allow the cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches to take root in our hearts in youth, old age will find them reigning supreme. Like the Ethiopian's skin or the leopard's spots, they will be hard to remove. Let us covet earnestly the best gifts and say with one of old, "If I have taken anything from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold."

PEACE, BE STILL.

BY W. W. CUPP.

PAINTINGS have been made to illustrate Christ stilling the tempest while out on the sea, but who can give a painting to represent Christ stilling the great tempest within us when we are out on the great "Ocean of Faith!"

How often weariness overtakes us and our faith begins to waver! We are then tossed to and fro by the winds and waves.

Sometimes we feel as though we would sink and no one could help us. We feel lost and think that no one is able to aid us. All this time Christ is standing willing and ready to say, "Peace, be still." Standing with outstretched arms, he is only waiting for us to be willing to come to him. Yet how far we sometimes wander away!

We allow the tempest to roar and try hard and long to keep afloat by our own strength. We are only rescued from the immeasurable depths at the last moment.

We must not wait so long. Had the disciples waited too long, they would have been lost in the sea on account of their wavering faith. Christ reproves us for our own good, but he is always willing to help if we only put our trust in him.

At another time, when Peter was near Christ, he thought himself strong enough to walk on the water, but when he saw the great waves, his faith wavered and he began to sink. He prided himself in his strong faith but soon found how weak he was. In order that we may see how weak we are, Christ sometimes lets us sink very low, and it is surely trying to us. If we have that confidence in Christ that we should have, we will not lose faith though afflictions surround us on every hand. Christ is willing to help all those who trust him. We should take all to him and he will always help us in time of need.

Griffin, Pa., Sept. 11.

"RESTING is as important in its place as working, and he whose present duty it is to rest has no right to be at work. And here is where many a summer rest-seeker misuses his vacation time. He taxes his strength by long walks and hard climbs and fatiguing amusements, or he wastes his vital forces by late hours and social excitements, so that when the autumn comes he is lacking in vigor for the routine labors to which he returns, and he can do only half work all winter because of his failing to get more than half rested in the summer. In work-time, it is work that is in order; in rest time, it is rest."

"MAN has an inward voice as well as an 'inward eye,' a voice distinct from that of conscience. It is the companion, if not 'the bliss of solitude;' and though he sometimes employs it to deceive himself, it gives him good counsel, perhaps, quite as often, calls him to account, reproves him for having left unsaid what he ought to have said, or for having said what he ought not to have said, and reprehends or approves, admonishes or encourages.'"

GALEN B. ROYER, Sec.

Bro. D. L Miller's Departure from Sweden.

WHEN the morning of Sept. 29, 1891, dawned on Vanneberga, Sweden, the members had already arranged for a meeting in John Olsson's room, for it was not only the day for the departure of brother and sister Miller, but also sister Miller's forty-third birthday. Like children for a dear mother, so the members also thought of making the day a pleasant one. The time was spent in devotion and useful work until noon, when the time for parting came. The writer of these lines will, in this, his first communication from Europe, give a short report of the parting words, thinking it may be useful to members every-where.

Bro. D. L. Miller said: "Dear brethren and sisters, there are many things not easily forgotten. The Lord grants us many joys in life, and I assure you we shall never forget this moment. We thank you all for your kindness and love. On our travels we will always remember you, and pray for you that you may be kept faithful till we meet again.

"I thought as we rose from the table, recalling the fact of our beginning a new year of our life, that it is short and that we soon shall go home. I thought of the necessity of preparing for the change. I know when we gather there we shall have a happy reunion. I hope God will bless you all. Last Sunday, when we saw the congregation not able to get room in Bro. Olsson's barn, but standing out in the yard (where the rain made it very uncomfortable), listening to the Word of God, I thought how necessary it is that you should have a meeting-house, and if you all will be faithful, I will try to secure you a house, so much the more as I am sure that this will be a stronghold from which we may conquer Sweden.

May God bless you all! I can assure you that on our travels in Egypt and Palestine, we shall remember you in love, and shall be glad to return to you when God will."

Sister Miller said: "I am thankful to the brethren and sisters for their signs of love to us. We are far from home and friends, and your kindness sinks down with strong force into our hearts. I am glad God gave us a chance to meet. Though I have not been able to talk to you, still I have received much strength and comfort by mingling with you, and I have learned to be more prayerful, and that it is good even for sisters to stand up and bear testimony to God's love in Christ Jesus. I have learned of the Swedish and Danish sisters to be more fearless in our meetings, and though naturally quiet, I have now learned that it is needful even for sisters, to open their hearts and use their talents for the edification and comfort of all. I shall, for the rest of my life, be profited by this, and use it for the comfort of others. I find, too, that little deeds of kindness are useful, and can never be forgotten. It is hard to leave home, and only those that do, can realize the magnitude of it. The Lord called us; we went, and when we come home to our Heavenly Father, he will reward even the smallest deed of kindness done. I pray the Lord will keep all faithful, not only here, but even in America."

Bro. John Olsson remarked: "We are all glad to see that you could sacrifice home comforts to come to seek the poor,—that you mingle with them, and help and encourage them. May God ever bless brother and sister Miller, that they may accomplish their work and soon return to Sweden, and help to build up the cause in Europe!"

Every brother and sister made a similar little talk, thanking brother and sister Miller, and expressing thanks to the Brotherhood at large, for sending the pure Gospel, and still assisting and holding up the work. All referred to Bro. Miller's desire to return to them again, and never before was a stronger appeal or call made by a whole church to any minister, to return again, than was done here in this parting moment, to Bro. D. L. Miller and wife. We venture to say, too, that perhaps never any man felt more keenly than did Bro. Miller, how necessary and strengthening to the work it would be if some good elder were occasionally sent over to inspect the work, encourage it, and, by visits, and preaching through an interpreter, build up the cause that is so well started now.

The meeting was closed by the remarks of a brother, who called to mind the fact that God had once used Bro. D. L. Miller and wife, though not then in official position, to save the mission from threatening destruction. He thanked them for that, and told them now they had come a second time as officials, had seen all the perfections and imperfections in the work, and its future wants. He made an earnest appeal to them never to forget this mission, whose life they had saved for healthy development. The result of their present visit of love, time would develop and facts tell in plain language, but he saw plainly the urgent need for brother and sister Miller to return again, and do for Europe what they, in their present condition, could do better than any one else. In reply both said the Lord's will should be theirs.

Next we had a season of fervent prayer, and on closing, Bro. Miller stood up and said: "While praying, I was strongly impressed we should go out and locate the meeting-house, and drive the stakes for it at a suitable place. I feel confident you will get the house, and on this, our birth-day and parting moment, we will dedicate the place."

Accordingly all went out to Bro. John Olsson's field, not far from his home in Vanneberga, close to the main road, in a little grove, on which all united that the stakes should be driven. This was done by brother and sister Miller, and the place dedicated by prayer of Bro. D. L. Miller and the writer. CHR. HOPE.

Brethren's Ministerial Meeting of Western Maryland.

THE above meeting will convene in the Beaver Creek church, Mt. Zion meeting-house, Dec. 29 and 30, 1891. The order of exercises will be as follows, after the opening at 9 A. M. by singing and prayer:

1. "What is the Duty of the Church to the Ministry and the Duty of the Ministry to the Church, that more Consecration may be Procured to the Ministry?" Introduced by Eld. David Long and Dr. Pollard.

2. "Will the Brethren Tell us what Portion of the Scriptures Justifies the Brethren in Preaching that Feet-washing is an After-washing for Sins; or that in the Act of Feet-washing at our Communion Meetings, our Sins (if we have any) are Pardoned?" Introduced by D. F. Stouffer and Abram Rowland.

3. "What is the most Successful Way to Proceed in Making a Pastoral Visit, and is it a Matter of Necessity for the Accomplishment of Good?" Introduced by Barton Shoop and Abram Barnhart.

4. "Who are the Elders Spoken of in James 5: 14, as the Proper Persons to be Sent for, to Anoint the Sick?" Introduced by Eli Yourtee and W. S. Reichard.

5. "What is the Prayer-covering and the Signification of it, as set forth in 1 Cor. 11: 5, 6?" Introduced by David Ausherman and D. V. Long.

6. "Did Jephthah Carry out the Vow which he Made (Judges 11: 30, 31) in Taking the Life of his Daughter and Offering her up for a Burnt Offering, as Burnt Offerings were made as directed by the Law of Moses?" Introduced by Jacob Oller and Daniel Wolf.

7. Explain 1 Cor. 15: 29. Introduced by Jacob Bricker and Samuel Foltz.

8. Explain 1 Cor. 3: 15, "If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire." Introduced by H. F. Neikirk and Joseph Thomas.

Home Again.

MY last was written from Arkadelphia, Ark., Oct. 8. From there I went to Austin, about twenty-five miles north of Little Rock, where I was called to preach the funeral of a child of brother and sister Valentine. This is a place where the Brethren never preached. We continued the meetings for several evenings,—eight meetings in all, resulting in four additions. There are six members there now, and prospects seem excellent to do a good work, if we had any one there to do it, but there is no one to heed the call. Thus the lambs are left to be devoured by the wolves. Any of the ministering brethren, passing from St. Louis to Little Rock, should write to Bro. John Valentine, Austin, Ark. He will meet you any time when he has timely notice. They will be glad to have some meetings, and you will have an opportunity to feed the hungry. We live at a distance of about fifty or sixty miles from them across the country, and have to go either by private conveyance, or a long way around by rail.

I arrived home Oct. 15, after being out about two months and a half. My wife was with me most of the time. I traveled about 2,005 miles by rail at a cost of $157.00; attended sixty-eight meetings and preached about fifty-eight times from Aug. 3 to Oct. 13, at a net cost of a little over $2.72 per sermon. The only financial aid I got was a ticket for twenty-five miles on the road, which was worth about seventy-five cents.

During our trip we formed the acquaintance of many kind brethren and sisters who treated us very kindly, and who will please accept our warmest thanks. While we ever will hold you in grateful remembrance, the sad thought comes to us that we will see your faces no more, but hope, by the grace of God, to meet you in that other world, where parting will be no more. Farewell!

To-day we again leave our home for a trip north. Our first stop will be about eighty miles from here, where we shall visit some scattered members. Our next stop will be about 120 miles further on, to hold some meetings where there are no members; but where a call has been made for meeting. JAMES R. GISH.

From Lincoln, Nebr.

THE members of the Lincoln church met in quarterly council Aug. 15, 1891. All business that came before the meeting was disposed of, we trust, to the edification of all present. As Bro. L. H. Eby was going away, two sisters were appointed in his place to go on with the work of soliciting money to build a church-house in Lincoln. Sister Trillie Rouch solicited the sister churches north and west of here, while I solicited south and east. Sept. 7 I started, soliciting, in turn, the North and South Beatrice churches, Falls City, Nebr., Sabetha, Kans., and the Bethel church, Mo. At each church there was a feast, and love and union seemed to prevail.

A feast was held in the Turkey Creek church, the accommodation being a corn-crib. Some may think that a queer place, but all those present felt it was good to be there. It would do a great many much good to get away from their large churches for awhile, and see the enjoyment of a little band who meet under adversities to participate in the ordinances of the Lord's house. The greater the effort, the more enjoyment is realized.

To the dear brethren and sisters whose hospitality I shared, and whose kindness was shown in so many ways, I extend my thanks. May you all strive to win the prize! We are endeavoring to build a house in the City, but so far have not secured sufficient means.

My address is changed from Thirty-third and Star to Thirty-second and Vine Street.

At Work for the Master.

I HAVE labored at Ozawkie, Kans., a little over two weeks, and thus far eleven souls have come out on the Lord's side, asking for baptism. The meetings will continue a few days longer. I go to McLouth on Friday, Oct. 30, to the love-feast, but will be home to the dedication of the meeting-house at Bement, in our own congregation, Nov. 8.

Nov. 9 I go to Flora, Carroll Co., Ind., to hold a series of meetings, which will require nearly all of my time for the remaining part of the month.

From there I intend to go to the town of Mulberry Grove, Bond Co., Ill., to dedicate a new house of worship, erected by the liberality of Bro. J. O. Lilligh, after which I shall hold a series of meetings. This will require my time until the Holidays. After that I shall hold a series of meetings in Bement. I publish this program, so that no church need call for me before the Middle of January, 1892.

I held a short series of meetings in the Mulberry Grove congregation in September, during which time two souls came out and were baptized.

BRO. S. Z. SHARP reports two received by baptism at McPherson, Kans., Nov. 1.

ALL new subscribers for 1892 will receive the MESSENGER free the remainder of this year.

BRO. DAVID TROXEL is the delegate to represent Southern Illinois on the Standing Committee this year.

BRO. PAUL WETZEL may now be addressed at McPherson, Kans., to which place he has already moved.

BRO. R. H. MILLER writes that his health is improving. We hope to have some articles from his pen shortly.

UNTIL further notice Bro. Stephen Yoder, of Holmesville, Nebr., may be addressed at Wooster, Wayne Co., Ohio.

MINUTES of the last Annual Meeting, in the German language, may be had by addressing S. R. Zug, Mastersonville, Pa.

WEEK before last mention was made that three had united with the Beatrice church, Nebr. It should have been Bethel church.

THE ministerial meeting for North-eastern Ohio will be held in the Wooster church, Wayne Co., Ohio, Nov. 24. The programme will appear next week.

WE learn that Bro. John Forney is engaged in a series of meetings in Olathe, Kans. The old brother is by no means ready to give up the battle yet.

THE Society of Friends (Quakers), though numbering only about 100,000, contribute to foreign missions $10,000, annually. That is certainly better than we are doing.

WE are asked to say where we get our Sunday law. We keep Sunday as a sacred day in memory of Christ's resurrection from the dead. He who is truly converted and loves Christ as a Christian ought to love him, will always hold this day sacred in harmony with the great law of love.

NOT all the Jews in the world reject Christ, for it is said that nearly 1,200 are annually gathered into Christian churches, and the Jews are now beginning to examine more fully the claims of Christ as being the Messiah.

THE Brethren at Lanark have appointed a love-feast for next Saturday, Nov. 14, commencing at 3 P. M. A general invitation is extended. This is probably the last feast in Northern Illinois for this season. Let there be a good attendance from all the churches. The Lanark brethren have big hearts and plenty of room.

UNDER date of Oct. 29, Bro. Andrew Hutchison writes: "I am now in Harlan, Iowa. This evening will be my last meeting here. To-morrow I am to start for home. God's Word must be offered to the people of the cities and towns for a witness, for it is to be preached in all the world for that purpose. See Matt. 24: 14. And if we fail, it may witness against us."

BISHOP FOSS says: "One of the greatest sources of weakness in the church of to-day is unconverted church members. They dilute its energy, fill it with a spirit of worldliness, and act as perpetual drags on the whole of its progress." The Bishop is right. Jesus once said to Peter, "When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren." There are people in the church to-day who need to be converted over thoroughly.

THERE always seems to be plenty of money for worldly operations and self-gratification, but only a small amount for the cause of religion. It is said that the last political campaign cost the country $500,000,000. The United States, who paid this enormous sum to elect a President, pays $3,000,000 a year for Christian missions! But in the United States $900,000,000 is spent annually on liquor, $600,000,000 on tobacco, $100,000,000 on popular amusements, and $5,500,000 is given for the support of Home and Foreign Missions.

As an illustration of the perishable nature of the theories of the critics of the Bible, Dr. Mendenhall is quoted as saying that he had counted 747 theories as to the date, composition and authorship of the books of the Bible between 1850 and 1891, and adds: "Of these 747 theories 603 are defunct, and many of the remaining 144 are in the last stages of degeneration and dissolution." And it will not be long until the learned must settle down to the old theory, viz., that "holy men of old wrote as they were moved by the Spirit." That is the beginning and must also be the ending of the inspiration theory.

IN a well-arranged dwelling we saw a large picture hanging upon the wall. We could see nothing very attractive about the picture, save that the artist had displayed more skill as a painter than knowledge of the scene he desired to represent. Around the picture was a massive, costly frame. We would judge that the frame cost many times more than the engraving; we are sure that it was more beautiful. Lovers of the beautiful would admire the frame, but think the engraving rather ordinary. As we pondered we thought of people of only ordinary development robed in costly garments. The contrast is too great to commend itself to people of good judgment. Christians, who are modest in their deportment, will seem far more consistent adorned in the modest apparel which becometh those professing godliness. Men and women who presume to gain influence by real worth, have little or no use for the costly adorning to which the inferior think they must resort in order to attract attention. The pure and beautiful need no costly adorning in any department of life.

THE Royal Volunteers is the name of a secular society, lately started in Washington City, having for its object a very commendable undertaking. It is believed that thousands of soldiers receive pensions to which they are not entitled according to law, and the object of the society is to remedy this defect and pay more to those who are actually disabled. One writer says he is receiving a pension of ten dollars a month and yet he is able to make a good living without aid from the Government. An honest confession. Then, why not decline the pension?

IN the last issue we published an exceedingly interesting communication from sister Lizzie Miller, who is now traveling with her husband in the Old World. The letter is addressed to the sisters, but has probably been read by every reader of the MESSENGER and all feel the better for it. We think that we voice the mind of our subscribers when we suggest that sister Miller write often for the MESSENGER during her travels. She has a way of writing about the common things of life that will cause her letters to be very highly prized by our sisters especially. Let us have more of these letters.

ELDER Miles Grant, a noted preacher and lecturer, who has been traveling in Ireland and is now on his way to Australia, has ordered of Bro. Ernest Hopkins, Dayton, Washington, one hundred copies of his "Law and Sabbath," to be sent to Belfast, Ireland, to counteract a Sabbatarian movement. Elder Grant says, "It is the best thing I have seen on that subject." There may be others who would like copies of this tract. And, by the way, the Tract Work, at Dayton, Ohio, has some literature on the Sabbath question. Bro. I. J. Rosenberger's tract, "The Lord's Day and the Sabbath," will be found quite useful to distribute in localities where we are troubled about the Jewish Sabbath.

THE temperance people of Ogle County, Ill., held a meeting in Polo last week. J. H. Moore, of Mt. Morris, was present and was chosen as President of the meeting. A rallying committee of fifteen of the most enthusiastic temperance workers was appointed to visit the people and encourage them to attend a general mass meeting, which was held on Thursday evening of this week.

We copy the above from the Educator and Companion, of McPherson, Kans. We regret that Bro. Snyder should make such a mistake. If he will look at the printed report of the meeting referred to he will discover that it reads "J. H. More," instead of "J. H. Moore." J. H. More is known all over this country as a wide-awake Methodist preacher, and this is the first time that the one name has been taken for the other to our knowledge. So far as we are concerned there is all the temperance society in the Brethren's church that we have any use for. There is not much danger of us uniting with a temperance movement outside of the church as long as there are two o's in our name.

IT might be well for everybody to stop and think before casting the first stone. If stones must be cast at evil-doers, let it be done by those who are as free as possible from sin. We do not mean to tolerate sin in the church, but we do say that those who make so many mistakes themselves ought not to talk too freely about the missteps of others. Let those who show a better light speak first. If those who cast the first stone are to be without sin there would probably be more than one room vacated at a council-meeting. We suggest that it might be well for some people to undergo a self-examination before even attending a council-meeting, in order that they may determine for themselves whether they should cast any stone at all.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

According to a decision of our last Conference, it is made the duty of Clerks of the various District Meetings to forward to the Writing Clerk of Annual Meeting certified copies of all queries sent by their respective Districts to that body, to be published for the benefit of the delegates to Annual Meeting. In my absence from home Bro. J. H. Moore has kindly consented to attend to this matter. Please take notice that printed copies of the Minutes of District Meeting are not what is wanted, but a written copy of all queries sent to Annual Meeting, signed by the officers of the Meeting. And this copy should be sent to Bro. Moore immediately after the close of the District Meeting, so that he may have time to have them printed in proper order, in time for the Conference at Cedar Rapids, Iowa. As this is an official action of our Annual Meeting, certified or signed copies of the queries are requested, so that no mistakes may occur. The importance of this matter will be apparent to all, and our brethren concerned will, we trust, attend to it promptly.

Writing Clerk A. M. 1891.

HOME MISSION WORK.

There is no greater question before our people to-day than that which pertains to home or local missionary work. To put it plainly and forcibly, it is a question of life or death, — a question that should come home to every earnest member of the church, for it involves the future of the Brotherhood.

It is concerning this home work that we feel impressed to write, for we have long felt, that our people are not accomplishing, in the local field, what they are abundantly able to perform. By no means should our home interest be neglected in the least, for it is upon the home churches that we must depend for whatever may be needed to carry the Gospel into other fields. Too many of our elders are neglecting their own flocks in order to do work in other localities. Years of experience and an extensive observation have convinced us that an elder's place is with the flock over which the Holy Ghost has made him overseer, and whenever he leaves his post of duty for any length of time, the flock is almost certain to suffer more or less. Unless he gives every part of the home field the most careful attention, little foxes will creep in and destroy the tender plants, while, in other instances, grievous wolves enter the church and scatter the flock.

We understand that an elder is a local church overseer. He has been appointed to preside over a local congregation, to preach the Word and care for the church as a shepherd careth for his flock. It is to him that the members must look for spiritual food and Christian guidance. He ought therefore to feel that he should be a father to them, and one with whom they can counsel in every time of trouble. His work is a noble one, and fortunate indeed is the church, where the elder properly magnifies his office, and duly considers the great responsibility resting upon him, and consecrates himself fully to that part of the work over which the Holy Ghost, through the church, has appointed him.

Every elder ought to be profoundly interested in the welfare of his own congregation, and not neglect his members on account of other fields. He is responsible to God for the oversight of that congregation, and he ought to realize it. It becomes his duty to see that the church is properly fed with healthy spiritual food, that it may be for the strengthening and edification of the members in general. To do this successfully he must make the wants of his congregation a study, in connection with his study of the Bible.

He must have his assistants in the ministry as well as in other departments of church work, but he ought to take the general oversight of the work, not as one who rules with authority, but as one who can preside with Christian gravity. He ought to be on good terms with all of his officials; at least he ought so to conduct himself that it becomes their duty to respect him. As a minister he may not be a man of more than ordinary ability. It is not necessary for him to be a gifted preacher. Some of the best housekeepers we have in the church are very ordinary speakers. But he has probably helpers in the ministry who have the ability to instruct and edify the people. If so, let him aid them in properly laying out their work, so that each one knows just what is expected of him. There is nothing like system in work, and this is especially true respecting the work of the ministry. Every minister ought to know just when his turn comes to preach so that he can prepare his mind for it. He must study, in order to be able rightly to divide the Word of Truth. That is what Timothy was required to do, and it becomes the imperative duty of every minister to do likewise in this age. If each minister knows his place, and understands his duties, the meetings will move off smoothly. As a minister we have never lived in a congregation any great length of time, where that was not done, and we have always found it to work well.

It will be needful for the elder to carefully watch his ministers and to advise them for their good as well as for the good of the cause. There is always a kind, fatherly way of approaching our brethren, that commands respect. This is the way to approach younger ministers and remind them of any unbecoming habits into which they may happen to fall. If elders would take upon themselves the liberty of training the young ministers in this respect they would certainly confer a blessing upon the ministry in general. It is so easy to form unbecoming habits, and yet very difficult to get rid of them after they have become a part of us. Instead of permitting ministers to form these habits, and then have people talk about them, let the elder kindly aid the ministers to overcome any obstacle of the kind that may be a hindrance to their work. In this line it is needful to notice the manner of opening and closing the services, the conduct of the minister while preaching, the class of subjects he treats, the length of his sermons and many other things that go to make up a good minister. Let an elder feel as much interested in the training of his assistants as he does concerning the education of his sons. If the minister falls into the habit of preaching too long, so as to weary the congregation, it is but just that the elder have a talk with him, not with a view of criticising or discouraging him in the least, but for the purpose of aiding him to become more useful to the church. The more elders can help their ministers in this respect, the more the church becomes edified and profited thereby.

All of these things help in the spreading of the Gospel in every locality and deserve the closest attention. Next week we have still other points of equal interest for consideration. J. H. M.

EDITORIAL WANDERINGS IN THE OLD WORLD.

BY D. L. MILLER.

Number Eight.—Home Life in Scandinavia.

The home life of the farmers and laborers of any country is an interesting and instructive study. Since the days of Bayard Taylor's incomparable books of travel, Europe has been written over and over, again and again, and yet but little has been said about the home life of the country people, the bone and sinew of the civilized world. Even Taylor fails to give more than a mere glimpse at the inner life of the masses, and we may search in vain for books of travel that tell us how the people live. The reason for this is obvious. Travelers pursue the beaten track, they go from city to city, live in hotels, and only see the country from the car window. Palaces, picture-galleries, fine works of art, great buildings, architecture, old ruins and places of historical interest, royalty, notable men and women, politics and kindred topics form the staples from which most writers draw their materials. If they go into the country at all they are met with a natural reserve which total strangers receive the world over, and cannot see the people at their best. They fail to give the home life of the country because they do not see it.

We do not claim to be more observant than others, neither can we give in the limited scope of these letters more than a brief sketch of what we have seen. If we have observed more than others, it is because we have had better opportunities for seeing. Speaking publicly to the people in villages and in farm-houses, we come in close contact with them. The members of our mission churches belong to the country. We were cordially invited into the houses of the country people, and they gave us such a warm welcome and received us with such a kindly spirit, that we met and parted, not as strangers, but as warm-hearted friends; and this not only among our own people, but it was with few exceptions quite general.

The Danish people have a rough exterior, and unless one learns to know them well, they are apt to appear harsh. The rough, guttural sounds in their language adds to the first impression. Such words as Skall, Ickke, Pige, Selskab, sound harshly to the ear. But we found that beneath the rough exterior were warm, sympathetic, loving hearts, and we were led to the conclusion that the worst side of the Danes is the outside. The Swedes, on the other hand, are more cultured and refined, their language is smoother and much more musical than the Danish. As a rule, they are cheerful and happy and make a favorable impression at once upon the stranger. They are exceedingly fond of music and sing well. Sweden has produced some notable singers, prominent among them may be mentioned Jenny Lind, "the Swedish Nightingale," as she was appropriately called. We found the people, as a rule, open-hearted, kind and hospitable, and we were made to feel very much at home among them.

Farm houses are generally but one story high, and often the living apartments of the family and the stables for horses and cattle are found under the same straw roof. The stories are low, from six to eight feet high. The doors are not high enough to allow a man of medium height to enter without stooping. On several occasions we were made sensible of this fact, and we learned to take the advice of the old philosopher who said to his boy,

"My son, if you learn to stoop as you go through the world, you will escape many hard knocks." On some of the large farms the stables are built at right angles with the house, forming an open square, thus:

At other places the buildings form a square with a drive-way between the stables and the farm-house, thus:

Others still, having caught the spirit of modern improvement, build fine, two-story farm-houses in the midst of beautiful grounds, and the barns are a considerable distance from the house. These are, however, the exception, the rule being as given above.

The interior of many of the houses is devoid of comfort. Cooking-stoves are rarely found among the poorer class of farmers. The kitchen, paved with brick, or stone, and in some cases with a door opening directly into the stable, where the cows are kept, is supplied with a large, open fire-place, with a raised hearth, two feet higher than the floor. Here the fire is built, and pots, kettles and spiders are set, and the cooking is done. The first meal of the day is coffee and black bread, served, as we found at one place in North Denmark, before we were out of bed. The coffee and bread were brought to us at a very early hour and we were invited to sit up in bed and eat and drink. Wife said: "I can never drink coffee in this place," but a desire to accept the hospitality so generously offered overcame her and we partook of the proffered refreshments. Breakfast follows and the kind of food depends upon the pocket-book of your entertainer. Among the poor, black bread with lard to spread on it, is the staple article of food. Butter is a luxury, almost unknown to them, and often they must be content to eat their bread without lard.

Black bread, made from unbolted rye flour, about as dark in color as the old-fashioned gingerbread, made with dark molasses, which we relished so much in our boyhood days, is found on every table. Sour leaven is used in making the bread and it is just sour enough to make it very unpalatable to those who are used to eating sweet bread. When it can be found sweet and fresh it is not unpleasant to the taste. Bolted rye flour is also used by those who can afford it and it makes an excellent quality of dark bread which is healthy and very palatable.

Horse meat is used quite extensively and in all the larger towns and cities shops are licensed for the sale of Hestekiöd, horse meat. It is much cheaper than beef or pork and is often found on the tables of the well-to-do people. Since the removal of the prohibition against American pork meats will doubtless be cheaper here.

The following incident may illustrate the truth of the old proverb, "Where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise." We were very kindly and hospitably entertained in the home of a prosperous and well-to-do merchant. The good wife had prepared coffee for us. The neat little table, with snowy white linen and delicate china, white bread, butter, cheese and dried meat presented a very tempting appearance to the hungry travelers. The dried meat, which looked very much like the home-made dried beef, of such excellent quality one finds in Pennsylvania and Maryland, was very tempting to the appetite. We have a weakness in that direction. We ate some of it and it tasted very good. We ate more and gave it a favorable recommendation to wife, who also ate and pronounced it good. Our Bro. Olsson, who sat by our side, said: "You seem to be very fond of horse meat." Our readers may imagine the result: our entire internal anatomy rebelled, and it was only by the most persistent effort that we remained at the table and completed our meal with due dignity and propriety. We have no appetite for horse meat, but it did taste good.

Women work indoors and out and their lot is a hard one. All kinds of hard labor is imposed upon her. She works in the field, mowing, making hay, binding grain, hauling and spreading the contents of the barn-yard on the land, in fact she does about all kinds of farm work. She must often be the house-keeper, the mother of the family and the field laborer. As a result, she cannot pay much attention to her household duties, and, from our stand-point, the home is often of necessity sadly neglected.

Men, women and children wear the universal wooden shoe, with heavy woolen stockings. When they go into the house the shoes are taken off and it is not an unusual thing to see a large number of wooden shoes of various sizes at the door as you enter the farm-house. The wooden shoe-maker flourishes in every village. For men's shoes he gets one and one-half kroners, or forty cents a pair, and smaller ones in like proportion. His tools consist of several augur-like gouges with which he makes the inner shape of the foot. A common drawing-knife, with a "shaving-horse" completes the outfit, and the shoe-maker prides himself upon the neat shape he can give the footwear he turns out. We tried our hand at the work but found that even making wooden shoes is a trade that must be learned.

Wages are very low, as may have been gathered from preceding letters. At Hordum we met a strong, healthy-looking girl of sixteen who told us that she was employed on a farm by the year, the owner of which was also a fisherman. Her work was indoors and out, as her services were needed. Cleaning fish, helping with nets and lines, working on the farm, she labored from twelve to fifteen hours a day, Sunday included, and she received only thirty kroners, $8.10 per year for her hard work. The highest wages paid to girls on the farms is ninety kroners, $24.30 per year. We interviewed laboring men and women in the fields and found that they were working at starvation wages. At one place we talked with a man who was cutting rye. After trying his scythe, and proving to our satisfaction that the work was not easy, we asked him what wages he received and could scarcely believe him when he said fifty ore, thirteen and one-half cents per day. He explained that his health was poor, and not being strong he could not get higher wages. The women, who bound the grain after him, received the same wages. The wages for farm laborers vary in different localities; but one kroner, twenty seven cents a day, is considered fair wages. We notice advertisements in the newspapers in which servant girls offer to work for sixty kroners per year, or about thirty-one cents a week.

In conversation with some of the girls we told them of two dollars a week in America and it seemed like a fairy tale to them. When we told them that our women, as a rule, did not work in the fields, and in the West did not milk, neither did they blacken boots, one old woman in the company said, in much apparent surprise: "Well, what do your women do? They must be lazy." We were not willing to admit the impeachment and explained that our women paid much more attention to house-keeping and indoor work than was done in Denmark. We might have added that some of the work, such as crocheting and fancy needle work did not seem to have much practical value, but we simply made a mental note of the fact. We also noted the fact that if some of our people at home, who are dissatisfied with their lot, could live here awhile they would learn some lessons in economy that would be helpful to them and would be glad to go back again to America, where the conditions are so much more favorable for the laboring classes than they are here.

The custom prevails in Sweden for every one to help himself at the table. At the eating-houses a large table is found in the center of the room on which is placed soup, meats, vegetables, bread, butter, cheese, etc., etc. Plates, knives, forks and spoons are placed at one end of the table. Those who dine take a plate, knife and fork and then march around the table, taking what they want, and then retire to small tables and eat. In this way soup, fish, meats and dessert are served, a clean plate being taken with each course. It looked singular enough to us to see twenty or thirty men and women marching around the great center table, helping themselves to the tempting viands. The same custom prevails in the private family.

Whether the Danes, or Dans, as the old name runs, and which is yet to be found in old manuscript and inscriptions, are, as some writers seem to think, the descendants of the lost tribe of Dan or not, we shall not pretend to say, but we were struck by the similarity of some things we saw here with those to be found in Palestine. The one-handled plow is used here quite extensively, and the old-fashioned hand-mill, so common in Palestine, has been so recently in use here that we saw many discarded millstones. The women did much of the grinding here not many years ago. A sister told us that when she was young she often helped to grind at the mill, and before her conversion, remembering Christ's words, "Two women shall be grinding at the mill, one shall be taken and the other left," she always dreaded to assist at the grinding.

The windmill and in many places the water-mill have superseded the old hand-mills. The former, with its great arms spread out to catch the wind is to be seen every-where. The arrangement for turning the wheel when the wind changes is quite in keeping with the primitive character of the country. The mill is built on a central pivot and a large, bent arm reaches to the ground. When the wind changes, as it does quite frequently, the miller by the use of a chain, a windlass and a long lever, turns the entire mill around. Some of the modern mills are arranged so that only the top is turned.

In some parts of Sweden the ground is covered with large boulders. The farmer ploughs up the soil among the boulders, pulverizes it and then sows the rye. In sowing, some of the grain falls upon the rocks, but it is not left there for the fowls of the air. We noticed women with brooms, made of brush, sweeping the top of the stones, and upon inquiry learned that they were sweeping the seed and the little soil off the rocks so that it might not be wasted. Some of the fields that we passed had more than two-thirds of their surface covered with large boulders.

Our note-book is teeming with observations and we have culled but a few here and there, and already this letter is too long. We are, at this writing, in Halle, Germany. A slight sprain of the back causes an old injury to re-assert itself, and enforces a few days' rest at this place. We are reminded to-day, as we enter upon the fiftieth year of our life, that time is rapidly passing away. It is hard to realize that we have lived so many years. So much time spent and so little accomplished! May the Lord help us to give the remaining days of our life more fully to his service.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER visits us weekly, and we hail its coming. As the children love to read it as well as the parents, therefore it makes it doubly interesting to the family. It is certainly well filled with interesting and edifying productions from the minds and pens of our dear Brethren. The article of Eld. Eby, on sending out committees from Annual Meeting, when such difficulties should be adjusted by committees sent by District Meeting, meets my approbation. If we all had the mind and spirit of Jesus, we would have no need even to go there. We could settle and reconcile any difficulty if we were lovers of peace, and would subject our will to the will of Christ. There is so much self in us that must be denied.

The cause of much of our troubles may be that we need to be reconverted. Many of us, that profess to be Christians, attend church meetings, attend and participate in our Communion services, and yet neglect some of the most important means of grace which are positively enjoined upon every Christian man and woman. Without them we cannot live the life of a Christian, and will necessarily get cold and indifferent. No wonder we get crooked and weak. Oh, my brother and sister, all these means of grace God has furnished us by Jesus Christ, so that we may grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth. As a child grows in favor with its earthly parents by obedience and love, so we should grow in our Heavenly Father's divine favor by obeying his sayings. May God give us, as his dear children, praying minds and hearts, to love our Blessed Savior above every object in this life!

Our love-feast was one of the largest ever held at the Welty meeting-house, in the Antietam congregation. We could not seat all the members, after using every means to do so. The best of order prevailed. Our ministerial force was not large,—only four being present,—but they divided the work very nicely. Eld. D. F. Stouffer officiated. On the second day, in the morning, we held a children's meeting,—the first one ever held in the district. It was a grand success. The house was crowded to overflowing. Everybody was interested, even our Old Order Brethren were deeply affected. All were pleased, and the Brethren's minds were awakened so much as to say, "We must build a larger house to accommodate the people." The impressions that our Annual Meeting made upon the people during the Conference, are not confined to Hagerstown, but extend everywhere. Should we not all let our light shine wherever we go? Let the principles of our religion, the profession of our religion, and practice of our religion be carried with us wherever we go.

After services last evening a worthy young man made application for membership. Our young brother, Wilbur Stover, preached for us a very feeling sermon on "The Love of God," which aroused the young man referred to.

We have two Sunday-schools in this congregation. The one in the country will shortly close for the winter. Both schools are in good working order, and conducted by our young brethren and sisters. Older brethren are helpers, and take part in teaching, opening and closing the school, as well as in speaking words of encouragement. Our Bible class has been one of interest this fall. Let none of us get weary in well-doing.

At the Eleventh Hour.

A FEW of the brethren and sisters of this vicinity were called to-day to witness a solemn service. The aged father of our brother, Frank Rea, has, for the past few weeks, been almost on the verge of eternity. So feeble and helpless is he that he must be handled like a little child. He has arrived at the advanced age of eighty-eight years, and all these years he has spent outside of the church. When the subject of salvation was mentioned, he replied, "I will have to be contented, for there is no hope for me now." Bro. John D. Bell was at his bedside last night and, while with him, the conversation of Christ and Nicodemus was related to him, and the great necessity of being born again, in order to see the kingdom of heaven, was pointed out.

Before Bro. Bell left for his home, the sick man requested baptism. The brethren and sisters met, and he was taken in an arm-chair to the West Fork,—a stream about eighty rods from the house. He was carried into the water, and there buried with Christ in baptism.

Surely he was strengthened by the strong arm of God. Everything went well and he is now rejoicing in God's love.

About three weeks before our feast two more (husband and wife) were made willing to enter into covenant relationship with Christ. One week passed and six more were made to see the necessity of securing a shelter from the storm to come.

On our feast day, which was truly a feast of love, another precious one (a young sister), entered the service of the Lord. Truly the Lord is blessing this part of his vineyard!

I HAVE just arrived home from a preaching tour in South-western Missouri. I left my home Sept. 24, for Cabool, Texas Co., Mo., where I arrived on the night of Sept. 25. On the morning of Sept. 27 I commenced meetings at the Greenwood church, where I held meetings until Oct. 2. One was baptized and one reclaimed. Bro. J. T. Mason is the elder in charge of this church. He is assisted by J. J. Troxel, J. P. Harris, S. M. Stevens, J. Atkins and D. Prough,—all in the second degree. From here I went to the Cornelius school-house, in Wright County, and had five meetings with five additions. Two of them formerly belonged to the Methodist church. From here I went to Calhoun's school-house, where I had several meetings, resulting in three additions to the church.

Next I went to Douglas County, to the Fairview church, to attend a love-feast Oct. 10. I continued meetings at that point for over one week. The result was thirteen additions by confession and one reclaimed. The ministers of this church are, brethren A. T. Tyson, S. D. Rothrock, B. B. Hylton, Joseph Hylton and James Robertson. Bro. Mason is also the elder of this church. I found many warm hearts to welcome me in their midst. A number of those brethren moved from Virginia, and united with the church at the time when Bro. J. Crosswhite and I held a meeting in Floyd County, Va., about seven years ago, and when about 123 united with the church. May the Good Lord prosper them in their new home in Missouri, both spiritually and temporally, that their light may go out to their neighbors, and much good may be done to the glory of God. I left the Brethren in Missouri Oct. 20, for my home in Tennessee, where I arrived in safety and found all well.

OUR feast was held Oct. 10 and 11. Just before examination services we held a choice for a deacon. Bro. J. P. Begal was chosen, and installed on Sunday morning after preaching. May God help him in his calling!

In the evening the little band of members, with a fair number from adjoining churches, surrounded the tables of the Lord. Ministers present were brethren H. Frantz, S. Driver, H. Baker, C. Wilkins, David Barley, and our home ministers. Bro. Henry Frantz came to us Oct. 6. He preached six sermons which were much appreciated by all. They will no doubt prove a great auxiliary to the future work of the church. May the Lord ever bless our dear brother as a faithful laborer in the vineyard!

From the Union Church, Marshall Co, Ind.

OUR love-feast took place Oct. 9 and 10. The weather being pleasant a large number assembled. There was sufficient ministerial help. Bro. Hiram Kreighbaum, of South Bend, officiated. On Saturday morning Bro. John Joseph was elected to the ministry, and brethren George Long, James Lark and Jacob Seider to the deacon's office. Brethren J. F. Appleman, Eli Gable, and John Hartsough were advanced to the full ministry.

On Sunday, Oct. 11, we met at 10 A. M., for the purpose of closing our Sunday-school for this year. A large number was present upon this occasion, and a number of good addresses were made. Bro Alex. Miller, of Nappanee, Ind., also addressed the school in a very winning and earnest manner, and in such a way as to interest both old and young.

We expect to hold a series of meetings sometime in January. Bro. Daniel Snell, of Sidney, Ind., is expected to do the preaching.

LAURA APPELMAN.

Notes and Jottings.

SEPT. 19 the members of the Donald's Creek church, Ohio, held their love-feast. It seemed to be the best meeting we have ever had, and more communicants were present than ever before. Our ministerial force was ample, and Bro. W. K. Simmons officiated.

On Sunday morning after the feast brethren D. Replogle and A. G. Crosswhite addressed the Sunday-school; afterwards we had addresses from a number of the ministers.

Sept. 24 the writer and Bro. Jonas Horning went to Oak Shade. We had several meetings and one council-meeting,—the first one ever held at this point, as it is a new place and much teaching is needed. Our duty is not only to get men and women into the church, but to teach them.

This requires much labor. If we could only have a faithful minister at all of these isolated places to preach and take care of the flock, it would be a blessing indeed.

After being home two days, I went to Lower Fall Creek, Ind., to attend their feast Oct. 2. This was my first visit to this church, and it was a pleasant one. I preached five sermons with the best of attention and interest. Next I visited Lima, Ohio, where I spent part of a day with the Brethren at their ministerial meeting, which I enjoyed very much.

On the evening of Oct. 6, I commenced with the Brethren at the County Line church, Ohio, where I remained till the evening of Oct. 11. On the 10th was their feast. We had a very pleasant meeting though the membership here is small. Bro. John Beegle was elected to the deacon's office at this meeting.

Much to my regret I had to close these meetings on account of other promises, though the interest was most excellent.

Oct. 15 I left home for Indiana to attend four feasts. The first was at Colfax, Ind., where I met Bro. Galen B. Royer and many others, with whom I have worshiped before. I held a series of meetings here last winter.

My next point was Mexico, Ind., where I had enjoyed a feast twice before, but it made my heart rejoice to meet once more with the dear members of that church.

While I would like to describe at length these different feasts, space forbids. The Mexico feast was the largest I ever attended anywhere in the Brotherhood, yet with all this great crowd they had to set the tables the second time at supper. The meetings closed at 10 o'clock, which was later than we liked, but could not well be avoided. We also visited the Old Folks' Home of Middle Indiana, which is in good condition and under the the charge of brother and sister Frank Fisher, who seem to be fitted for this grand work.

On Monday I came to Gilman, Ind., to attend the feast, Oct. 20, with the brethren and sisters of the Hillbrick church. This was not so large, but a very good one.

Bro. D. Hoover brought me over with him from Hillbrick, to attend their feast, Oct. 22. Brother Hoover's church is called the Upper Fall Creek. Here we had another feast of good things, another grand reunion around the Lord's table. We had been here on similar occasions, but never at any better meetings.

In this church is the Old Folks' Home of Southern Indiana. I did not get to stop at the Home this time, but visited it twice on former occasions. I returned home Friday night, Oct. 23, at 8 o'clock, and found all well, thank the Lord! The duties of home and a few appointments here, will take my time this week. Then I expect to go out into the field again. One was baptized in the Donald's Creek church yesterday.

From the Prairie View Church, Mo.

THE brethren and sisters of the Prairie View church have, for the past four months, had in contemplation a series of meetings, closing with Communion services. Eld. Jacob Witmore, of Centre View, came to labor for us Oct. 10, and remained until after the love-feast which occurred on the 20th. He held forth the Word in its purity and power, and as a result we had five accessions to the church by baptism, and there are others who, we believe, are near the kingdom.

We had our council, preparatory to love-feast, on Friday, Oct. 16. Everything passed off pleasantly. We had an enjoyable Communion on the Tuesday night following. On Sunday, Oct. 18, we met at the water-side where the five dear souls were buried with Christ in baptism, in the presence of a large concourse of witnesses.

Bro. Witmore, in company with Bro. David Bowman and family, started for Florence, a point about fifteen miles distant, on the 21st, where they expect to hold some meetings, and, according to previous arrangements, to have a council and organize a church; also to hold a love-feast.

OCT. 10 we had the pleasure of being at the love-feast at Valley Pike, Shenandoah County. The meeting was a pleasant one. Just before examination services one young sister was buried in the liquid grave, and, we trust, arose to walk with Jesus. The meetings were continued until the evening of Oct. 21. Thirteen sermons were preached, and four more persons made willing to follow Jesus in "all things."

On the evenings of Oct. 22 and 23 we preached for the Brethren at Houck's school-house in Frederick County, four miles south-west of Winchester. Oct. 25 we had the pleasure of meeting with the Brethren at the Fort, Shenandoah County, at their love-feast. They had an excellent meeting. We were sorry that we had to leave them on the morning of Oct. 26, as they greatly desired some one to hold some meetings for them.

OUR series of meetings closed with one dear soul returning to the fold. Bro. Teeter did some excellent preaching. At the close we had one of the most enjoyable Communion services we have ever enjoyed. We rejoiced to see our old brother, Stephen Shively, and his dear companion with us again. They had just returned from Lordsburg, Cal., with brother and sister Wrightsman. This made us glad for several reasons, especially since Bro. Stephen has been one of our active deacons in this church. Bro. Geo. Ullery and wife are returning also. We are all anxiously awaiting their coming, and wish that others might return also. This is a goodly land.

I am at present at Roanoke, Ill., trying to preach to this dear people. This is the home of Bro. Rufus Gish. Bro. Rufus, we think, could do much good, right here. From here we go to Fulton County, this State. May the Good Lord bless the labors of his children every-where!

OUR Communion meeting, held Oct. 17, was attended by about four hundred members. All were seated at the tables except a few. Many other persons could not find room in the house. There were three other feasts not far off, but all were well attended. We are always glad to see our members avail themselves of these feasts, as they are means of grace that should not be neglected. The ministerial force from other congregations consisted of elders D. Hays, A. D. Garber, Samuel Petry, J. A. Garber, Tyler Wright, Peter Garber, and others, who fed us with the Word of Life. Our esteemed elder, Solomon Garber, now over eighty-three years of age, enjoyed the meeting with us, much to the delight of his flock. While many of us enjoyed the services of the sanctuary together, yet we were made to feel sad at the absence of our co-laborer, — Bro. John Flory,—who was once an active worker in the field, at home and abroad, but has been more or less afflicted for nearly one year, and is now unable to leave his room. As he has been partially paralyzed for several months, he is scarcely able to sit up, and can speak only with great difficulty. He seems to realize that his end is nigh, and he is waiting patiently for the call. His earnest labors were much appreciated in his large field of labor.

Bro. D. Hays preached in the College Chapel on Sunday evening, to a large and appreciative audience. The students, as well as others, enjoy these visits from our ministering brethren. They should come often and see for themselves. Then they will be enabled to more fully appreciate the efforts that are being put forth by the teachers and students of our colleges for the higher attainments in life. The Bible Term will begin Jan. 5, and continue four weeks. Full particulars can be obtained with reference to terms, etc., by addressing the Principal. A good attendance is hoped for.

I REACHED my home Oct. 27, from my trip to Iowa, and found all well. The six weeks which I spent with the members in Iowa were enjoyable, especially the feast in the Libertyville church. Here is where I spent my boyhood days, but thirty-five years have elapsed since then, and very few of my old school-mates are left. Here is where mother was buried about thirty-nine years ago. Many of the old fathers and mothers in Israel have gone to their home beyond since I left. A visit to the "City of the Dead" brought many solemn thoughts to the mind.

Some things I saw on my visit are commendable. The nearer a church lives up to the order and rules of the Brotherhood, the more influence and prosperity will be hers. The church near Libertyville has still more than an ordinary amount of opposition, yet four dear souls were made willing to come and identify themselves with the people of God, and were baptized on the last day of the meeting. Others said they would come soon. May the Good Spirit continue to strive with them, till they yield! I had forty-six meetings while in Iowa, and five were received into the church.

On my return home, I met at Deshler, Ohio, Bro. I. J. Rosenberger who was waiting the arrival of a belated train on the Baltimore and Ohio road, to go to Nappanee, Ind., to hold a series of meetings.

MY last was written while laboring near Laddonia, a mission-point. There are two members living here, Bro. Joel Moomaw and wife. We commenced meetings in a large school-house, as the church was occupied, but the congregation grew too large for the school-house, so the church was offered us the second week. We labored at that place for two weeks with an excellent interest and attendance, but we had no additions.

Here is an excellent place for a minister to locate. The society is excellent. Good schools, fine roads and a rich farming country make it attractive to all. The people here are willing to help a minister that will locate with them. Any one desiring further information will write to Bro. Joel Moomaw, Laddonia, Mo.

Brethren in full sympathy with the order of our Brotherhood will receive a hearty welcome. There are two members living near Mexico in the same County, and sixteen members about thirty miles from there, at another mission post. There would be enough work here for one minister nearly all the time. The brethren at the last-named point are anxious to have a minister to locate among them. Write Bro. C. B. Nelson, Middletown, Montgomery Co., Mo. DAVID BOWMAN.

HAVING just completed the work assigned me by the Board of Trustees as solicitor for the erection of the buildings, I hereby tender my thanks to all who have aided the good work. I would respectfully ask those who were not fully prepared at the time of my visit, to respond as soon as possible, as there is yet money needed to complete the furnishing, etc. The building is under contract. I hope that all may see the necessity of helping to further the good work, and contributing by either note or cash, which may be sent to the Treasurer, Edmund Forney, by either post-office orders or drafts, at Polo, Ill.

J. C. LAHMAN.

From the Lost River Church, W. Va.

ON Saturday, Sept. 5, the members of the Lost River church assembled in church council, preparatory to the love-feast. Love and union seemed to be the prevailing sentiment.

Oct. 15 we held our love-feast. It was largely attended. Ministering brethren from abroad were brethren S. H. Myers, Jno. Ellis, F. A. Yankey and Addison Dove,—all of Virginia. Bro. Ellis officiated.

These meetings are great incentives for good. They give us a prospective view of the Great Supper, in the evening of this world, when the Lord Jesus Christ shall gird himself, and come forth and serve us. It seems that the influence of these meetings upon the world could be made much more impressive, if all the members were to conform to the rules of the church. When brethren follow the fashions of the world, and even puff away at a cigar, they certainly do not show the best influence. Who is responsible? Is it the ministry or the laity? Let us all work together, as one common family, for in unity there is strength. Let us put forth our renewed energies, and let the ensuing year mark an epoch in the history of our beloved Fraternity.

PERRY B. FITZWATER.

From Boon's Creek, Washington Co., Tenn.

I LEFT my home on Monday, Oct. 5, and reached McKenzie at midnight, where I was met by Bro. Vance and conveyed to Bro. John G. Davis's, eight miles from McKenzie.

I commenced meetings on Wednesday night at the Slate school-house, and continued till Sunday night. I visited all the members, and found them in the faith and in peace, laboring for an increase of holiness in themselves and others.

During our stay with them we had one church-meeting, and elected two deacons,—brethren J. G. Davis and R. Vance. May they and their wives be faithful, and purchase to themselves a good degree of faith, and great boldness in Christ Jesus. We also had a love-feast on Saturday night at friend Gaunt's house. Oct. 17 we enjoyed a well-attended and pleasant love-feast. Better attention and behavior I never saw at a Communion. May God bless them for the respect shown the Brethren. Two were received by baptism and there were two applicants for baptism. The prospects are good for an increase in the church.

I left Oct. 12 for McMinnville, after only one meeting with the Brethren in Warren County. I had written them, but they did not get my letter, so there were no arrangements made for meetings. After one meeting at Wilson's school-house, I left for Knox Co., where I met with the Choto Falls church. Here we had a good meeting and a love-feast, and I was pleased to meet with brethren J. B. Pence and E. Newcomer.

Remaining with them over Sunday, I started for home on Monday, Oct. 19, and found all well, thank the Lord. I hereby thank the brethren and sisters for their kindness to me. I am also under obligations to the E. T. V. and G, and the Chattanooga and Nashville railroads for favors over their roads.

If any ministering brethren should pass through Western Tennessee, the brethren and sisters would be glad to have them stop and preach for them. They will be met at McKenzie, by writing to John G. Davis at McKenzie, or Chas. W. Davis at Lankford, Carroll Co., Tenn.

GEORGE C. BOWMAN.

From the Botetourt Church, Pa.

OUR annual Communion meeting is now among the things that were. We met on Saturday afternoon, and, after the introductory service, the audience repaired to the water where there were three baptized. Returning, the examination services were opened by reading and then speaking on the subject,—mainly on self-examination. It is an essential feature that we examine ourselves and not others.

We frequently hear brethren say that they will not commune if such and such are at the table. In my opinion the condition of the complainant is more unsafe than that of the one complained of, and we might profit by the lesson in the institution of this sacrament. Jesus knew that Judas Iscariot was at the table, and that he was a devil from the beginning. The disciples knew that a very bad man was at the table, yet neither Christ nor any of the disciples left the table, but Judas left, as it is supposed by some, before the partaking of the Eucharist.

There were present at our feast about three hundred members. Though the entire room was filled with spectators, yet the order was excellent, and the meeting very enjoyable, apart from some loud talking outside of the house. The meeting on Sunday was large. Nearly, if not quite, one thousand persons were present. The preaching was fairly good and the deportment and attention very good. B. F. MOOMAW.

From White Church, Montgomery Co., Ind.

OCT. 10 Bro. Galen B. Royer commenced a series of meetings for us and held forth the Word until Oct. 15,—the time of our Communion. The Communion was an enjoyable one and all felt it was good to be there. Ministers present were brethren Henry Frantz, of Ohio; A. J. Bowers and Galen B. Royer, of Illinois; William Harshbarger, of Ladoga; Jacob Frederick, of West Lebanon, and Amos Neher, of Mulberry, Indiana. The brethren dealt out the Word of Life in such a way that saints were encouraged and sinners made to tremble.

A minister of the Presbyterian church, from Danville, Ill., came to witness the Communion, for he had never seen the like before. He was well pleased and said, "It is no use to say anything against these people, for they quote Scripture for everything." He left with the promise that he would come again.

Bro. Royer continued holding up the banner of the Blessed Master till Oct. 25. The immediate results of the meetings were, one applicant, to be re-instated, three baptized, and at the close of the last meeting, two more applicants for baptism. One of these had not the opportunity of attending the meetings. The three baptized are young in years, and two of them the daughters of the writer. While we have often received the children of other parents into the church, we never knew before what was the joy of parents whose children come to Christ. Heretofore all this was only imagination; now it is reality. May our Father bless all with peace and the power and influence of the Holy Spirit! D. C. CAMPBELL.

From Rockton, Iowa.

I RECEIVED a call from Bro. Bowles to come to Jasper County, Iowa, and hold some meetings at a place where there are but few members. They have been having meetings once a month, part of the time, at a school-house, two miles south of the present place of meeting, but there has never been any preaching at this place by the Brethren until last Tuesday evening, Oct. 20. Being quite young in the ministry I did not feel able to go alone and conduct a week's meeting; consequently Bro. Cakerice accompanied me. We commenced meetings Oct. 20, and continued until last night, Oct. 25. We preached seven sermons in all, with the best attention and a growing congregation. Last evening the house would not hold the people. As an immediate result a brother and sister confessed Christ in baptism. There were a number who had never heard the Brethren preach nor seen any one baptized by trine immersion. Many good impressions were made and I truly think the seed sown will spring up not many days hence. Perhaps we are, to some extent, neglecting these outposts. Here we found members who had belonged to the church three years and had never attended a council-meeting, as they are living fourteen miles away. I think that, with the proper efforts, there could be an ingathering of quite a number of souls. We closed our meetings too soon. F. M. WHEELER.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

Soul-cheering Love-feast.—The Communion of the Upper Stillwater church, Ohio, was one long to be remembered. The weather was pleasant and the congregations large. At least five hundred communed. The order, notwithstanding the densely crowded house, was good, and the ministerial force strong. All seemed to enjoy the feast.—S. D. Royer, Bradford, Ohio.

Nine Additions.—According to previous arrangements, Bro. P. R. Wrightsman came to the North Morrill church, Brown Co., Kans., Oct. 9, and preached in all twenty-one discourses. As an immediate result the church was much encouraged, and nine precious souls made choice of that good part which shall never be taken from them. May they, with us all, live such lives as will be pleasing in the sight of him in whose name we labor.—T. A. Eisenbise.

Hudson Happenings.—Our love-feast occurred Oct. 24, and while the number of communicants was not as large as at some of our former feasts, yet a more enjoyable meeting we do not remember to have passed through. The weather was all that could be desired, and the order of the spectators was never better. Eld. P. A. Moore,—the only minister that responded to our invitation,—officiated. Next day we listened to a most soul-refreshing sermon. While it is a fact that on the day following the meeting was small, yet we were more than compensated by the assurance, that it was among the best, and it was good to be there. —Thos. D. Lyon, Oct. 28.

In a Critical Condition.—We regret to learn that Eld. John Flory, of Virginia, is in a very critical condition. He was once a man of rare Christian activity, but it seems that his race is well nigh run, and he is liable to be called hence any day.

Refreshing Meetings.—The meetings I held at Sidney, Nebr., resulted in two additions. I just closed a series of meetings on Sunday night at the Bethel Church. The interest was of the deepest, with both members and aliens. Seven were baptized. Several times the house would not accommodate the people.—J. E. Young.

Cannot Do Without the "Messenger."—Bro. C. D. Rasp, of Rising City, Nebr., says he cannot do without the MESSENGER, as he is much isolated and seldom has an opportunity of attending any of our meetings. After reading the papers, they are handed around among the neighbors and carefully read by them. That is the way to prepare the hearts of the people for preaching and lay the foundation for building up a church.

Refreshing Meetings.—Bro. Miller came to us on Oct. 10 and fed us richly from the Word of God until the 17th, when our meetings were closed by a love feast. Many dear brethren and sisters were with us during the meetings and the feast from adjoining churches. While it is enjoyable for us thus to meet here on earth, how much more so will it be in that glory world above!—Ella Royer, Dallas Centre, Iowa, Oct. 24

Enjoyable Love-feast.—The feast at the Monitor church is now past and a very enjoyable feast we had. The ministers from other congregations were brethren F. H. Bradley, David Puterbaugh, —— Frantz, from McPherson, and Henry Brubaker. Some of our brethren are young in the ministry, but the Bread of Life was dealt out richly and to the point. Bro. Bradley officiated. Next morning brethren Frantz and Bradley spoke to the children, after which they preached for us. Some good impressions were made, as several were made to weep and realize their condition. We feel strengthened and built up.—S. E. Lantz, McPherson, Kans., Oct. 21.

Two Added by Baptism.—Oct. 20 occurred the love-feast in the Killbuck church, Ind. Although the attendance was not so large as on former occasions, we are glad that most of our neighboring churches were represented. Ministerial help from other churches consisted of brethren John Caylor, Henry Frantz, D. F. Hoover, Jacob Barick, Levi Holder and Chas. Wood. Bro. Frantz officiated. Next morning we were permitted to listen to some very encouraging farewell addresses. Since our last writing we have received two into the fold by baptism. May the Lord help them to be bright and shining lights in the church! We expect to hold a series of meetings commencing Nov. 20, to be conducted by Bro. D. Replogle.—Henry E. Millspaugh, Gilman, Ind., Oct. 27.

Refreshing Meetings.—The members of Fredric, Iowa, recently held an enjoyable love-feast. Nearly all the members were at the table, and all pronounced it the most pleasant meeting they ever attended. Ministers present from abroad were brethren G. B. Royer and Martin Replogle. Their labors were highly appreciated, and the order was commendable. At this feast we received three by letter. The church in Marion County met on the evening of Oct. 17 and held an enjoyable feast at the house of Bro. J. Erbs, in Pleasantville, at which occasion twenty members communed. The best of order prevailed and good attention was given the Word preached. Little Willie, son of John and Lydia Miller, died of sore throat and diphtheria Oct. 9, aged about six years. —Hiram Berkman.

Pleasant Love-feast.—The members of the Rock Grove church, Iowa, held their Communion Sept. 26. About forty members were present. Our meeting was well attended by those not members. Bro. H. Kepler, of Chickasaw County, was with us and also many others. The ministerial help at the meeting were brethren Wm. Ikenberry, G. Ashenbrenner, and John Shank. Eld. Wm. Ikenberry and G. Ashenbrenner did most of the preaching.—G. M. Noah, Nora Springs, Iowa, Oct. 25.

A Profitable Meeting.—Our love-feast, of Oct. 17 and 18, was a pleasant and profitable one. Ministering brethren present from abroad were Eld. Joseph Ogg, J. Broadwater and O. J. Beaver. The latter came to us by private conveyance, accompanied by brethren L. Pratt and S. Shook, and sister Hyle. There was also a good delegation of members present from the Root River church. Meetings were held during the week previous to the feast and closed on Sunday evening. Our duties were made plain and it now remains with us to give the more earnest heed.—J. H. Wirt, Lewistown, Minn.

A Good Work.—A few weeks ago Bro. Levi S. Mohler and the writer were called to hold several meetings at the village of Marysville, along the Susquehanna River. We took with us some GOSPEL MESSENGERS and tracts for distribution, and after the meeting closed, we could hardly hand them out fast enough, nor did we have near enough to supply the demand. Bro. G. B. Garber was there on the evening of Oct. 29, to hold meetings, and Nov. 28 some of the Brethren will hold a short series of meetings at the same place. The Bethel, or "Church of God" house of worship is offered for our use, free of charge, whenever we want it.—Daniel Landis, Shiremanstown, Pa.

Deacon Elected.—Our Communion in the Round Mountain church, Ark., was a very pleasant one. Elders C. Holderman and J. P. Harris, from Missouri, were with us and preached for us. At this meeting Bro. James Krouse was elected to the office of deacon. May he be faithful! We received four members by letter and two more are to be received that were not present. We need more help in the ministry, as the calls are more than we can fill. We have received five dollars from Eld. Wm. George, of Grant County, W. Va., for our church-house since my last report. We are truly thankful to the donors for helping us. If we can get about seven dollars more, besides what we can raise here, we will have enough to finish the house. —Samuel Weimer, Wyman, Ark., Oct. 24

Two Additions.—Since I left Chesterville, Ill., I was with the church at Salem, Ill., where I remained one week and had meetings each evening, in Salem, until Oct. 10, the evening of their feast, which was a pleasant one. On the evening of Oct. 11 I left for the Harrison County church, Ind., where I arrived on the evening of Oct. 13. We had meetings the same evening and continued until the evening of Oct. 21. Their feast was on the evening of Oct. 16. The house was crowded but good order prevailed. There was a good interest in our meetings. Two young sisters united with the church by baptism. May they be faithful! I was in this church about six years ago, and remember of having a children's meeting at that time. Many of those children have now grown up, and two of that number have united with the family of God. There is a strong desire on the part of these dear members that I should move among them. I am prayerfully considering a change of location, but, owing to financial reasons, will be obliged to go where land is cheap. The Lord's will be done in helping me to make the choice!—A. S. Culp.

Four Souls for Christ.—I left home Oct. 10, and began my labors for the Grenola church, Kans., next day. I continued the meetings until the evening of Oct. 18, with increasing interest and attendance. I preached ten sermons in all, and baptized four. Others promised to come soon. This church is without a minister. Brethren, remember them!—J. R. Frantz, Fredonia, Kans.

One Baptized.—The members of the Salem church, Montgomery Co., Ohio, held their love-feast Oct. 14 and 15, and a very pleasant one it was indeed. More members communed than ever before at this place,—between four and five hundred. Our dear brother, Abraham Deitrick, who had his home in this church years ago, was with us and officiated in the evening services. Brethren Longanecker, Hendrickson, Bagwell, Brumbaugh, and others, assisted. One was baptized just before the meeting.—Jesse K. Brumbaugh, Union, Ohio, Oct. 20

Another Sad Accident.—About five weeks ago the youngest son of sister Sarah A. Davis went out to shoot a chicken in the yard, with a small rifle. While adjusting the cartridge, the hammer slipped, thus discharging the gun and shooting his little sister, a child about seven years old, through the bowels. Little Lottie screamed and fell, mortally wounded. She lived amid great suffering for about four weeks, and then closed her eyes in death. This should be another warning to boys handling guns carelessly. Funeral services by the writer from 1 Pet. 1: 24.—Jas. R. Gish, Stuttgart, Ark., Oct. 27.

Enjoyable Love-feast.—On Oct. 24, the Brethren of the Berrien congregation, Mich., held their love-feast, which was well attended. The Brethren there feel much encouraged, having just obtained the use of their house again. Quite a number from adjoining congregations were present at the feast and many could find no seats. Ministering brethren present were James Miller, Thurston Miller, John Stretch, H. W. Krieghbaum, Daniel Whitmer, Isaac Early, Joseph Kulp, R. J. Shreeve, William Borough. Bro. Joseph Kulp officiated. Next day we listened to short but very good speeches by several of the above ministers from Gal. 6: 7. Quite a number of old brethren and sisters were in attendance.—Ida Stretch, Dowagiac, Cass Co, Mich.

The Gospel Messenger

Is the recognized organ of the German Baptist or Brethren's church, and advocates the form of doctrine taught in the New Testament and pleads for a return to apostolic and primitive Christianity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and maintains that Faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration of the heart and mind, baptism by Trine Immersion for remission of sins unto the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, are the means of adoption into the household of God,—the church militant.

It also maintains that Feet-washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and as universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians, is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, as taught in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ.

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, James 5: 14, is binding upon all Christians.

It also advocates the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, thus giving to the Lord for the spread of the Gospel and for the conversion of sinners.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

☞The above principles of our Fraternity are set forth on our "Brethren's Envelopes." Use them! Price, 15 cents per package; 40 cents per hundred.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

MYERS. June 29, 1891, Lloydie A. Myers, son of Albert and Clara Myers, aged 6 years, 4 months and 20 days.

MYERS.—June 4, 1891, Nellie Ray, daughter of the same parents, aged 2 years, 8 months and 12 days.

These two children were taken sick May 30 with a fever, which resulted in diphtheria. Nellie grew worse rapidly. All was done that loving hands could do but nothing would avail and on Thursday evening her spirit took its flight.

Lloydie, at one time during his sickness, seemed to gain strength and improve greatly, but the continuation of the disease weakened his heart and prevented it from performing its proper functions, which was the immediate cause of death. He was very lively a few moments before he died, as he was always of a sunny disposition. At the time of his death his father had just left the room, and before he reached his bedside again, life was extinct.

This visitation of God's providence has cast a shadow over our pathway, but we can console ourselves by the saying of One who said: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." Their bodies were interred in the Chelsea cemetery, where they will rest free from pain until the bright morn of the resurrection.

Lena Myers.

FINK.—In Mechanicsburg, Pa., Oct. 8, 1891, Joseph Fink, aged 80 years, 5 months and 19 days.

Deceased made choice of the latter part of Matt. 26: 42, as a text of his funeral. Services were held in the Union church in Mechanicsburg, by the undersigned. Deceased leaves several brothers and sisters and a number of grandchildren and friends. May he rest in peace. Daniel Landis.

HOLCOMB.—At Topeka, Kans., Sept. 27, 1891, Alonzo Holcomb, aged 92 years, 11 months and 7 days.

Father was born in Western Connecticut, Oct. 20, 1798. He came to Greene County, Ohio, in his youth, where he married Lucy Morgan, April 20, 1824. He, with family, moved to Illinois in 1830, where they lived till the summer of 1869, when they quit housekeeping and came to Kansas, to live with their children. There mother died July 10, 1888. They loved the Brethren but were not members of the church.

Henry C. Holcomb.

KEEFER.—At Greenwood, Nuh., Oct. 15, 1891, Thomas Roland, son of Bro. Moses and sister Mary Keefer, aged 17 years, 6 months and 13 days.

Thus an obedient youth has passed away. Not realizing his condition until near his end, he requested to be baptized, but it was too late. Funeral discourse to a large concourse of people by the writer, from John 11: 23.

S. M. Gochnour.

MISHLER.—In the Lower Cumberland congregation, Pa., Oct. 13, 1891, sister Maria Mishler, wife of friend Henry Mishler, aged 65 years, 11 months and 19 days.

Deceased was a faithful sister for many years. She had several attacks of paralysis and finally lost her speech, so that she could only say, "Going home; want to go home and be at rest." She leaves a kind husband one daughter and son in law (a brother), three grandchildren and many other relatives and friends to mourn their loss. Services and burial at the Mohler meeting-house by the writer, assisted by Bro. Henry Beelman and Levi S. Mohler from Rev. 14: 12, 13.

Daniel Landis.

PLOWMAN.—At her home in Montgomery County, Iowa, Oct. 22, 1891, sister Susan Plowman, aged 71 years, 2 months and 11 days.

Her maiden name was Bower. She was married to C. C. Plowman Dec. 22, 1849, in Carroll County, Md. She moved to Lee County, Ill., in 1865, and to Montgomery County, Iowa, in 1870. She was a member of the Brethren church for about thirty-two years, and, as a good Christian, had no fears of death. Funeral services were conducted by Eld. Isaac Barto, from Rev. 14: 13, to a very large audience. D. S. McDannel.

HESS.—In the Maple Grove church, Ashland Co., Ohio, sister Elizabeth Hess, aged 85 years, 2 months and 15 days.

Deceased was born in Fayette County, Pa. She was the mother of twelve children, of whom eight preceded her to the spirit land. She faithfully endured the hardships and privations of pioneer life. In April and May, 1845, she was called upon to bury seven of her children within a period of twenty three days, all of them dying with putrid sore throat, now known as diphtheria. In the fall of 1864 she and her husband went to Iowa to visit his brother. While there the husband took sick and died and she returned home a widow. She has lived on the farm on which she died since 1853. She was for many years a member of the Brethren church, and was buried in the Maple Grove cemetery, followed by a number of relatives and friends.

She was in good health generally, until a year before her death, when, through a fall, she was considerably shocked and her general health impaired. Like a ripe shock of grain, she has been gathered to the fathers. Funeral services by Bro. William Dissenberg.

Jesse and Susannah Jacobs.

NISWANDER.—In Bairnfield, Noble Co., Ind., Oct. 15, 1891, Bro. Isaac Niswander, aged 77 years, 1 month and 1 day.

Bro. Isaac was a member of the Brethren church. I was not acquainted with his early life, but for the last fifteen or twenty years I have been personally acquainted with him. He met with some sad misfortunes during the last part of his life, but, like gold tried in the fire, his Christian meekness, mildness, and virtuous character preserved his moral life. In his sickness patience had a perfect work. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn their loss. Services by the writer from Luke 10: 30. John Crume.

One Sister Writes

"I would like to come to your school, but I am not advanced, and could not recite my lessons in the presence of so many advanced students;" another writes, "I would come to Mt. Morris to school but it costs so much railroad fare." In answer to the first, we say that beginners do not recite in the presence of advanced students. Those who are not advanced, are put into a class with others who are not far advanced, and no one but their teacher is present when they recite. Students study their lessons in their own rooms, then meet their class and teacher to recite, after which they return to their own room again. This is much more pleasant than to sit in a room where some study while others recite.

As to the second, we say that to know how to travel is an important part of an education, and parents should give due attention to it in the education of their children. Youth is the time when the usages of travel are most readily learned, and to go a long distance to school, therefore, may not prove so great a disadvantage and unnecessary expense, since students may receive very valuable returns for the money paid to railroads.

Many new students will enter at the beginning of the Winter Term (Nov. 25); some to prepare to teach, others to study Bookkeeping and Shorthand. All should at once arrange to come.

LIFE AND SERMONS

—: OF :—

ELD. JAMES QUINTER.

This is a neatly-printed and well-bound volume of 426 pages, containing a well-written biographical sketch of Eld. James Quinter and forty of his sermons.

The biographical part will be found quite interesting, instructive and impressive. No one can read an account of Bro. Quinter's life without feeling deeply and favorably impressed. The work shows how a poor orphan boy, by hard work, and faithfulness to his religious convictions, rose step by step, until he reached a field of usefulness and honor as broad as the Nation itself. Though dead, his good deeds and the impressive examples in piety, learning and simplicity will follow him for generations to come.

The Sermon Department contains many of his choice sermons, which will prove exceedingly interesting and profitable reading to all, and especially to our ministers and isolated members. We feel that this book will fill a long-felt want in our Brotherhood. Price, post-paid, $1.25.

Gospel Chimes!

BY WM. BEERY.

This little book has been selling more rapidly than the publishers anticipated. The first edition was almost exhausted in the first two months. A second edition is now printed.

Following are a few of the good words received from brethren and other competent judges:

"An Excellent Book for Sunday-schools."

"After having carefully examined "Gospel Chimes" I can pronounce it an excellent book for Sunday-schools, and hope all the schools of the Brethren will adopt the same Our church is conceded to have the best congregational singing of any denomination, and if it is improved, as it can be, by the use of 'Gospel Chimes,' the power for good will be surprising "—GEO. B. HOLSINGER, Teacher of Music, Bridgewater College, Va.

"Fresh and Pleasing Melodies; Thoughtful, Spiritual, and Poetical Words."

"It gives me pleasure to speak in terms of praise of your new book, 'Gospel Chimes.' It contains many fresh and pleasing melodies to which are wedded thoughtful, spiritual and poetical words. I trust it will hold its own in competition with the numerous books now in the market and find a large sale."—T. M. TOWNE, Chicago, Ill., one of America's best writers of Sunday-school music.

"Better than Many Similar Publications."

"Copy of your new book received. It contains some very pleasing and useful music, while it is to be commended especially for the selection of hymns. Good Sunday-school hymns are in great demand in Sunday-school work, and in this particular 'Gospel Chimes' is better than many similar publications."—A. J. SHOWALTER, the leading writer and publisher of Sunday-school and church music in the South.

"An Excellent Collection."

"I have carefully examined your late Sunday-school singing book, 'Gospel Chimes' and find it to be an excellent collection for the purpose designed, both in words and music "—S. W. STRAUB, Chicago, Ill., the popular Western writer and publisher of Sunday-school music.

Bro. Beery has had a large experience in Sunday-school work, and the book which we offer to the brethren, and the public in general, evinces the exercise of talent as well as good judgment. The religious purity of the hymns contributed by sister Beery adds much to the excellence of the book.

WE should be pleased to get the address of some brother, living in or near Pratt, Kansas, or, if no brethren are living in Pratt County, we will be glad to get the address of some one living nearest to the place named. An immediate reply will much oblige.

THE late frosts have spoiled much of the autumnal beauty of our surrounding hills and mountains. The colors have faded and the leaves are dropping to the ground, reminding us that we, too, do fade as the leaf and will soon pass away.

BRO. W. J. SWIGART is now holding a series of meetings with the Altoona brethren, which will be closed with a love-feast. These brethren have seated their main audience room, which never, as yet, had been completed, and repainted the outside, so that they now have a very nice and comfortable house of worship, and the church seems to be in a prosperous condition.

ON the morning of Nov. 5 we had the first snow of the season. The trees and bushes every-where were decorated in a mantle of white. Though it looked very pretty, our farmers, who had part of their corn yet in the shocks in the fields, had no expressions of admiration for such beauty. Our notions of beauty are governed largely by the feelings which the things seen produce towards our bodily comforts.

THE FOOLISH VIRGINS.

TWO querists want to know who the foolish virgins were, or what lesson the parable was intended to teach. One wants to know whether the Jews and the Gentiles are meant, and the other thinks it means those who make no profession and base their salvation on their good works. Their loss will be a denial of enjoying the thousand year reign,—the Millennium,—but they will come in all right after the close of this eventful period. He feels quite certain that he is right, and we suppose that he expects us to simply "bear a word of testimony" in his favor as our faithful deacons are called upon to do in some of our churches.

No, we prefer not to bear testimony to either of the opinions given. The parable has a more simple interpretation in our estimation, and in interpreting the Scriptures it is best to always grasp the most simple truth that the language can convey. Because the narration is a parable is no reason why we should put on our theological spectacles and peer away down to see something very mysterious.

The two parties both started out alike,—both had received and accepted the invitation to attend the wedding, and both were supplied with lamps. The only difference seems to be in the supply of oil. The lamps may very properly represent our profession, while the oil represents our doing or growing in grace and knowledge. In this the five foolish virgins were deficient, and when the wedding party came, it was too late to go and buy.

The great lesson to be taught is, to be supplied and ready when the Master comes, and as we know not the hour of his coming, we are to be always ready,—our lamps are to be trimmed and filled, so that, when the call comes, we may be ready to enter in and enjoy the feast.

THE WHISKEY FIEND.

IT is wondered, on the part of some, why it is that in the pictures we see of the bottle, and the spirits that come from them, they are represented as devils. And yet it is a true representation, because those who imbibe these spirits are themselves transformed into fiends. Of this we have frequent and numerous illustrations. Men who are addicted to drinking, who, when sober, are gentle, kind-hearted and pleasant in their families, are, when intoxicated, maddened fiends, and are not only abusive to their families, but, in their madness, destroy their own household property. We have men of this kind in our own town, who, in their fits of drunkenness, have broken their furniture, their stoves, and thrown their glasses out of the windows. And then, not satisfied with this, they will turn on their wives, whom, at the marriage altar, they pledged to love, respect, cherish and protect as long as life would last. Of course, nothing but the promptings of the devil can cause men to do this, and as these promptings come through the whiskey cup, we can very naturally conclude that if the devil is not directly in the intoxicating cup, he uses it as a vehicle through which he gains entrance into the heart, feelings and actions of men, and therefore it is very properly named the "whiskey fiend."

Notwithstanding the terrible results of this fiend are seen and felt in thousands of our homes to-day, yet there are men of intelligence, and some, to their shame, profess to be followers of the Blessed Jesus who went about doing good, who claim that men should be protected by law to deal out this curse of our American homes, and why? Because there is money in it. They want protection to the men who, for the sake of money, deal out this curse that maddens the brain of the husband to destroy his property, abuse his wife and children and desolate their homes,—and no protection to the wife who is disgraced, clubbed and beaten. Will not our Christian people arise in their strength and say that the whiskey fiend must go down,—that his power shall be broken and that the thousands of women who are now being crushed under his iron heel shall be liberated and their wrongs avenged? We believe, at least we hope, they will. At the late election of our own country the people have given their verdict in unmistakable language. They have plainly said that this monstrous evil shall no more be licensed by our voice and we believe that in this case the voice of the people is the voice of God.

Professing Christians have the power to steer the Ship of State, and we believe that, as soon as our churches become fully awakened to their duty in this great struggle for the right and against the wrong, the license power at least will be swept from our land. That this evil will be entirely banished we don't expect, more than we expect that sin will be destroyed. This will not be as long as Satan is left loose, and, as a roaring lion, is going about seeking to destroy, but, because we cannot entirely destroy the effects of either, is no reason that we should cease fighting. This fact should the more energize us in the work because an evil suppressed is better than an evil unbridled, and eternal vigilance must be the Christian's watchword.

If this rum power is to be kept in check, there is but one way to do it and that is, "Watch and pray." The watching here means a vast deal more than some would have us believe. It means more than to simply look on without making any effort to meet the foe when it comes. Such a watchman would not be worth much. The true watchman stands guard with the determination to protect his master's interests, and so must we, and if we do it in the "All-Prevailing Name," we will receive the needed strength to overcome the enemy and keep sure the trust placed in our care. We are all watchmen for God. He has given us a sacred trust, our young people and their homes are to be guarded against the invading foe,—the whiskey fiend,—and if we do not watch aright, there is no use in praying, as prayer means asking God to help us do that which we cannot do ourselves.

May the Good Lord help us to successfully fight not only this but every other evil that is now threatening the world and causing the misery and degradation of our people.

THANKSGIVING.—L. M.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

With thankful hearts, O Lord we come
To praise thy name in grateful song;
Accept the offering, Lord, we bring,
And help us loud thy praises sing.

We thank thee, Lord, for daily food,
For plenteous store of earthly good;
For life, and health, we still possess,
With house and home so richly blest.

We thank thee for this goodly land,
Where freedom reigns on every hand;
Do thou, O Lord, our country bless
With heav'nly peace and righteousness!

We thank thee for thy blessed Word,
That to our souls doth life afford;
Help us its message to receive,
And from the heart its truth believe.

May all the nations learn to know
The God of heaven and earth below,
And walk in light, and truth, and love,
And praise the Lord who reigns above.

WHICH? WHY?

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

My Dear Sister:—

THE Holy Oracles embody divine principles which are designed to apply to all the details of life. If God had given us a Bible of specifications, covering every expression of life in all relations and emergencies, "the world itself could not contain the books that should be written." John 21: 25. In such a case each individual soul would need a larger Bible than any one would have time to read. That the church has always been wise in the establishment of specific rules, cannot be claimed. Ecclesiastical history proves far otherwise.

But your letter evinces a state of mind in relation to the cross and the world, which calls me to deal with your difficulty wholly apart from church authority or regulations. "Why am I required to lay aside my hat when there is not a single bonnet worn in the town where I live?" You say, "you could not pass along the streets, or enter church, without having every one gazing at you, and making you an object of ridicule?" You want Scripture for the obligation of a bonnet as the divinely-approved head-wear of a Christian woman. No such literal requirement can be designated, and I thank God that he has not burdened his Revelation with such et ceteras. He has done far better in giving us his own perfect life in the flesh, and revealing the motives by which the Christ was actuated with unmistakable distinctness and emphasis.

If you fairly apprehend this truth, and place yourself unqualifiedly under its regnancy, your question will be settled, your trouble cease, and nothing remain but the immutable devotion to the divine glory so graphically, and yet so practically, delineated in Rom. 8: 35–39. Christ had but one motive, one end, one joy,—"I do always those things that please God." John 8: 29.

The substance and sum of Christianity is this: "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." Philpp. 2: 5. What cared Jesus for the opinions of the world? He met with hostility and scorn and persecution every-where. He did not shrink from faithfully exemplifying the uniqueness of God incarnate, because "every body was gaping" at him, and tittering or fulminating at his peculiarities. There was such a whole-hearted wedlock to the glory of his Father and the interests of his government, that with joy "he endured the cross, despising the shame." Heb. 12: 2.

Please, dear sister, "CONSIDER HIM that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, LEST YOU BE WEARIED AND FAINT IN YOUR MIND." "You have not yet RESISTED UNTO BLOOD, striving against sin," AS HE DID. Heb. 12: 3, 4. The bonnet is nothing, and the hat is nothing, but fidelity to the Crucified is everything. 1 Cor. 7: 19. You may so connect either hat or bonnet with the central principle of your being as to render them "the savor of life unto life, or the savor of death unto death."

Which are you doing? Are you so identified with your Redeemer that Acts 2: 25, and 20: 23, 24, is the core and rind and flavor of your autobiography? What you do, gets its character from why? Far be it from me to say thus or so, save as the crucified, resumed life of Christ in you essentially dictates. "Not as the world giveth, give I unto you; LET NOT YOUR HEART BE TROUBLED, NEITHER LET IT BE AFRAID." John 14: 27.

Nothing will settle your questions and dissolve your doubts like a warm, personal love to Jesus. Suppose you take them to him with the most absolute sincerity to abide by his verdict. Contemplate his life and ponder his words, and bring your motives under the blazing focus of his holiness and utter self-renunciation, and then interrogate your inmost soul thus: Is my life's centre and expression in accord with his? I never stop to inquire what the church says about certain modes of apparel, or certain relative proprieties.

"Looking unto Jesus" is the all-inclusive commandment. The church has no right to enact laws or concoct principles. But it has authority to unfold and enforce what God has embodied in the Head of the church. The hand cannot say to the foot, "I am thy master." The church does not mean a certain order of men lording it over the rest, but it means the little finger and the little toe quite as much as it means the thigh and shoulder and spinal column. Bishops and deacons and moderators and counselors and editors and authors—all fallible, and not to be regarded as ultimate umpires of truth.

"I AM THE TRUTH." "The WORD was made flesh," and all that God has to say to man or angel is found in that mouth-piece of Jehovah. Eph. 1: 20, 21, 22; Heb. 1: 6; Matt. 17: 5. If you desire your life direct from the head through the artery of the atonement and the nerve of the Spirit, you will be in perfect sympathy with God in all that he means by his Incarnation, and you will be knit to all the elect, and you will not be abashed or upset if the world "gapes and stares" at your diverseness from popular customs. There is no doubt much formalism in the church, not only in the adoption of undeniable principles to perplexing problems, but in the very ordinances which he has given us as symbols of the highest verities; but the authority of God to live only to HIM who died for us and rose again, is eternally irrevocable. Rom. 6: 11; 2 Cor. 5: 14, 15; Gal. 2: 20.

Connect the following passages in their logical sequence, and see if your dress problem will not be solved. 1 John 2: 20; Heb. 8: 11; 1 John 5: 20. So much as to a real knowing of God. And then as to power. 2 Cor. 12: 9, 10; Luke 10: 19; Acts 1: 8; Philpp. 4: 13; 2 Cor. 4: 7. Is not this enough to make you bold in the presence of scoffers and maligners? Acts 4: 13.

Any one that dare be bold before the very face of Jehovah, need surely not shrivel before the glance of a sinful mortal. Heb. 4: 16, and 10: 19, and 1 John 4: 17. Now connect the following, and see what God is willing to do for you, and what he asks you to do for yourself. 1 Pet. 1: 5; Jude 24. This is God's part. Now yours. 1 John 2: 15, 16, and 5: 18. God-kept, self-kept, well-kept, in time and eternity.

A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

BY B. F. MOOMAW.

Chapter Seven.

ABOUT one year before the close of the war, the call was made for all the young men of seventeen years and the old men up to fifty, to be put into the army. Reading the papers, and watching the movements day and night, I left home to attend a meeting, about thirty miles from home, a brother, living with us, remaining. I instructed him to watch the papers, and if the bill should pass, to lose no time in bringing my seventeen-year-old boy to me. This he did, arriving on Sunday evening. I then put the boy in the care of a brother living about fifty miles from our home. He took him with him, and he being small, was not suspected to be so old. He remained away in safety one year, and came home at the close of the war.

Just a short time before that time two men came to my house, pretending to be Union men, and drew me into a conversation on the subject of the possibilities and probabilities of the final issues. I suspected them as being spies, and was careful in what I said, but remember saying, as I always believed, that the Confederacy could not succeed; that, while the people were in the army by compulsion, their hearts were not in the matter; that I had the opportunity of knowing that such were the facts, saying, however, that I was not a partisan in the war, but religiously opposed to war under all circumstances. After giving them a good breakfast, they started away, bidding me good-by, and, with a peculiar pressure of the hand, said, "We will see you again."

This struck me like a flash of electricity, and I could not get it off my mind, and suspected something severely wrong. Being about to leave home on a ministerial tour down the valley, I started in a few days, J. C. and D. C. accompanying me. I left directions that if anything should appear, of a suspicious character, to send a messenger at once.

We traveled on horseback, and the third morning, starting early, a little after sunrise, we came to a fine home, a beautiful yard extending from the house about fifty yards. As we came near, a fine-looking man came out of the house, bareheaded. He came near and spoke to us, and looked as if he was deeply concerned. He then said, "Good morning, gentlemen, have you any news?"

"Nothing of interest, sir."

He then said, "It is reported that General Lee has surrendered."

I said, "It may not be true. There are so many reports these days that we cannot rely on what we hear."

"O, but this report has come pretty straight. I fear it is true."

We tried still to give him some comfort. He then drew a long breath, and repeated, "I'm afraid it is too true."

I then believed it, and bidding him farewell, started on our way, and when getting a little distance from him, I said to the boys, "Well, I can draw a long breath once more." The burden of four years was suddenly removed from my mind. All can easily know how I felt,—not so much because the Confederacy had failed, but because of the prospect of peace once more.

A year later, returning from a tour north, I met, on my arrival at the railway station in the City of Washington, a man who recognized me, and told me that he was one of the men that were at my house, and that if the war had not ended, I would have gotten into trouble. He refused to tell me his name, and I confess that I felt as I do not like to feel. I felt very indignant, but it is enough for me to know that the Good Lord preserved me through all these trials for his own purpose. Perhaps he desired me to labor in his vineyard, and endure other trials and tribulations, with many blessings too numerous to mention, all of which I have reason to believe are intended for my benefit, and for the glory of his name.

In the latter period of the war, Gen. Hunter with his army came East. We heard of his approach, and determined to get our horses out of the way, and hide our provisions. This we did successfully by taking our stock out of their line of march. They, however, passed us by about twelve miles north, and went on into Eastern Virginia, and we supposed that we were now safe; so we brought our horses home, but Gen. Hunter with his brigade met a division of the Southern army near Lynchburgh, and not willing to take the chances of a battle, retreated, and on Monday morning early was in our neighborhood. Some of their scouts had found our horses in the field, and taken two of them away before we knew they were near. To save the rest we at once hurried them away into the mountain. After a while one of their men came rushing towards our place, riding one of the horses taken. I being some distance away from the house, met him. He asked me where my horses were. I told him I had sent them away. He then asked, "Where is your barn?" and going there and not finding the horses, he drew a navy pistol, presented it and said, "I will give you ten minutes to tell me where those horses are." I told him that I had given all the information I could about them, and presently he said he would excuse me if I would give him something to eat, which I agreed to do. He came with me to the house, and, seated on the porch, he ate what we gave him. He being intoxicated, we saw the danger we were in.

Later in the day a company of light-horsemen came riding through the farm. Tearing down the fences, they rode into the yard, dismounted, and demanded provisions. They made a rush towards the meat-house, and commenced trying to break the door. I told them to hold on. I had the key, opened the door, and said to them, "Go in, but you will find nothing. We knew you were coming and are fixed for you." They then pillaged the house from the garret to the cellar, but found very little, we having securely hid nearly all away, by cutting a hole in the floor under the table in the dining room, under which there was no cellar, but room in the dark for what we wanted to put away. One man demanded that I open my secretary, which I did, with the words, "You don't suppose that I would leave anything in here that you would want." After looking through the drawers and finding nothing, he turned away. In the meantime our women were in the kitchen, giving them something to eat. Finally they left, saying that they spared us, because they knew we were taking no part in the war against them, but they were obliged to live, and their only chance was to take provisions where they could find them. In some cases with our neighbors, who had not hid away their provisions, they were left without anything to eat, until they could get it elsewhere.

"It is something to be good: but it is far better to be good for something."

HOMES OR SALOONS?

BY SADIE BRALLIER NOFFSINGER.

This is a question that has been agitating the minds of the people of our country for many years, but has never yet been satisfactorily settled.

A great multitude of voices cry out: "The home!" while a still greater multitude plead for protection of the saloon. Hence the conflict which is now existing, and from which arises so much anxiety and distress.

Which shall it be? Let every man hearken and know that it is the counsel of his fraternity that shall decide and seal the question; therefore each one who is in any degree interested, must take his stand upon one of the two sides,—for this question has but two sides,—and work accordingly; and if he has taken the proper stand, "God is on his side," and the question shall be settled honestly and well.

The majority of men, it seems, hold that the saloon is a good thing for our country, inasmuch as it helps to bear the burden of public expense, National, State and municipal. This is the main point argued in favor of the saloon. Let us investigate.

It is true, the saloon tax does aid in the building and supporting of our public institutions, such as county jails, lock-ups, penitentiaries, reformatories, poor-houses, insane asylums, etc. But supposing there were no saloons, how many such institutions would there be to support and build? Verily, not one-tenth.

Then, too, it is argued by the advocates of the liquor traffic, that, because of the extensive trade in intoxicants, our country is made more wealthy. But this seems hardly plausible, since statistics show that, among the sixty-five millions inhabitants of the United States, there are at present nine million mortgages existing, or one mortgage to every seven persons. Fifty years ago saloons were not near so numerous as they now are, and statistics also show that at one time, mortgages were fewer by more than seventy-five per cent. This alone should be sufficient to convince any thinking person upon the financial side of the question.

We will now notice the benefit which individuals derive from the liquor trade. We can see but two classes of individuals who are benefited, namely the manufacturer and the dealer. It is a well-known fact that there is a large margin in liquors, which makes the business a paying one to the manufacturer, and, because of the extensive patronage, doubly paying to the dealer. But what of the patron? One thing is certain,—his money is invested, but does he in his purchase receive "value received?"

When we look around us and see the poverty and destitution that are born of that monster,—the "Liquor Traffic,"—and hear the cries of suffering and want, which are bitter enough to blister the tongues of drunkards' children and drunkards' wives, it seems that no man who has the welfare of humanity at heart, if he votes at all, could cast his vote otherwise than for protection for the home. Why should he, when, while so doing, he only engages in the destructive work of lowering the condition of our people, financially, physically and morally?

Go to our jails, and you will find that nine-tenths of the prisoners are confined there because of some offense they committed while intoxicated. Go to our State Prisons, and you will learn that the great majority of crimes, for which the convicts were sentenced, can be traced to the accursed saloon. Yes, this is the infamous school where they received their first lessons in sin; and in its dazzling walls, unless they are overthrown, will the minds of thousands yet unborn, be educated in "the way that leads to death." Go to our poor-houses. What class of people populate them, principally? Are they not the drunkards' children and the drunkards' wives? And within the scores of mad-houses, throughout our land, think you that Rum could enumerate his victims? Verily no! Only he, by whom the hairs of our heads are numbered, can count the mighty host.

These, then, are the institutions which the saloon is helping to support and populate. How much better it would be if the saloon were abolished, and the majority of these institutions with it! Then the millions of dollars which are spent in their support, could be used to support the homes that are now desolate, and the over-plus might be applied to building church-houses and Christianizing the heathen. O, for shame, that a land which boasts of Christian civilization, should stain itself with a crime that is worse than barbarous, and bring other nations, also, under bondage of the cruel tyrant, Rum.

The rate at which the United States is trafficking with heathen lands, in intoxicants, is both dreadful and alarming. Each year the trade grows more and more. This year, it is said, a ship bound for African shores, left the Boston harbor, laden with a cargo of seventy thousand gallons of rum,—the largest cargo ever sent to heathen shores. Aboard this same ship, bound for the same heathen land, was one missionary. One missionary on one side of the heathen, and seventy thousand gallons of rum on the other! Just think of it!

Not Africa alone, but China also, is stricken with this galling power. Not long since, in her Assembly, she petitioned our Government to withhold from her shores the intoxicant which was slaying her people by the thousands. What! Heathen China upon her knees, pleading with a Christian nation to send no longer to her a deadly evil? And still the dreadful curse goes forth! O men! hearken every one of you, and blush for very shame!

It had been better, had the light of civilization (?) never dawned upon these heathen lands, —a light that is tenfold worse than darkness!

Is it not high time, then, that we unite our strength and efforts to abolish the destructive liquor power from our land forever, and bring about a reformation in the minds and morals of our people?

But how is this grand work to be accomplished? Most emphatically we answer, that, under the existing circumstances, there is no plan by which it can be effected, save through Prohibition only. Since this is true, it is appalling to behold the multitude of men, even professors of Christianity, who ignore the right, and deliberately vote for protection for the saloon. Thus the saloon is protected, and vice of the darkest dye is sanctioned, while the mass of the political world moves on, with triumph in their voices and murder in their hearts! But above their shouts of victory can be heard the cries of distracted children and the wails of despairing wives. Yet they heed them not.

The saloon is verily a source of the most dreadful crimes,—crimes from the portrayal of which the pure mind would shrink in horror and disgust; a school of perdition in which the most heinous evils arise; the origin of sins of such a disgraceful character that even the pen must refuse to trace them. Ah, there are things which cannot be recorded; facts too startling and altogether too horribly vile to meet the public gaze. And yet these dens of iniquity are permitted to stand, even when about their doors the very atmosphere seems black with the breath of hell.

We do not think that the majority of the populace of the United States are friends to the saloon; but it must be borne in mind that the greater portion of said populace are women, and consequently not voters. Had woman an equal chance with man on this question, I venture to say that every saloon would be effectually abolished.

We are told that man represents woman at the ballot,—an assertion, which, on this question, is as bold as it is false and hurtful. Every time man votes for protection for the saloon, or, in other words, destruction of the home, we are cruelly, fearfully misrepresented, and in anguish that knows no words, we cry out to God against the infamous falsehood! By this we do not mean to advocate woman's suffrage. Our intention is far from that. Whether or not the ballot would be purer and the laws better for woman's suffrage, we shall not stop to discuss. We simply want to expose the mistake and say to our brothers: If you do go to the polls, be careful that you represent us truthfully, for there is a day when you must meet us in judgment.

We are commanded to be subject to the powers that be, and so we should. But since Christian people may have a voice in the making of laws, is it not their Christian privilege to select for legislators such men as will act with righteous judgment? Let all keep this in mind, and the result will be a better class of laws.

All over this broad land a cry of supplication, like unto a wail of woe goes forth, while a multitude of bleeding hearts are awaiting the decision. Which shall it be,—homes or saloons?

THE PIONEER PREACHER.

Fifty years ago the pioneer preacher, who made a success of his work, had to be a good deal better posted than some of the polished preachers of to-day, who preach smooth sermons to contented congregations. In the Standard Almon B. Green, a Disciple minister, is telling some of his early experience. We clip the following interesting narrative:

Ravenna and Shalersville, at that time, were cursed with more infidelity than any other section of country; and they were very bold in attacking Christians wherever they met them. One Lord's Day when Ebenezer Williams was preaching in the town hall at Shalersville, I sat on the steps of the hall and heard loud talking out on the square. I looked and saw two men in very earnest conversation. One of them was Bro. Snell, of Wadsworth, the other an infidel by name of Burroughs. I went to see what was up. As I came near I heard Mr. Burroughs ask:

"What is your God? Your creed says he is a being without body, parts or passions. Now I cannot conceive of such a being—no body, no parts, no passions! What is he?"

Bro. Snell had become disgusted and said he would not talk with him any longer. Mr. Burroughs seemed gratified that he had triumphed, for he gloried in his fancied victory. I said:

"Friend, I will answer your question."

"Well, sir," with a very self-important air; "answer it if you can."

"The Bible says God is a spirit."

"A spirit! a spirit! Now I know as well as I did before. What is a spirit?"

I replied: "If you will tell me what a corn stalk is I will tell you what a spirit is."

"A corn stalk—a corn stalk—why—humph! it's a corn stalk."

"Well, then, a spirit—a spirit—why—humph! it's a spirit."

He was bright enough to see that I had defined spirit just as he had defined a corn stalk. He dropped his head and repeated it in an undertone. "A corn stalk—a corn -stalk—I vow I can't tell."

"Now, sir," said I, "if I could tell you what a spirit is you would say there is not as much of my God as there is of a corn stalk. For I can define spirit, but a corn stalk is a great mystery. Yet you know, sir, there is a corn stalk, and yet you cannot define it. And yet you ridicule the idea of a God because you cannot comprehend him."

"Well, I can't believe in a God no way."

"I think I can make you believe, in spite of you, if you will answer me a few questions."

"I will answer your questions. What are they?"

I replied: "You profess to be governed by facts and reason. It is a fact that as we go forward in time the human family increases; therefore, if we go back, the number must decrease. There was a time when there were only five thousand people, then five hundred, then one hundred, and so on till we come to one. Now how came that person into existence? Did he grow up like a plant? or was he made and placed here by some being superior to nature? How do you answer?"

After a long pause he said:

"It is one thing to puzzle a man and another to convince him."

"Very true, but you glory in the work when you put puzzling questions to others. I am not seeking to puzzle you. I simply want to know how you can answer the question in any other way than by saying, There is a God, a Creator of all things—and I insist on an answer."

"Oh, well, said he, "your question goes back of all history to the field of mere conjecture."

"Give me, then, your conjecture and your reason for it. You are a lover of reason and facts. I have given you the facts for your reason."

"I have no reason to give. Of course I cannot answer such a question."

"Then let me ask another. Can man originate an idea?"

"Of course—for we get new ideas every day."

"You mistake me. Let me illustrate: We have the idea of three worlds,—heaven, earth, hell,—and these distinct from each other. We have this idea, or notion you may call it, no matter whether true or false. We have the idea of this world for men in the flesh, heaven for glorified humanity, and hell for the punishment of evil-doers. Now please give me the idea of a fourth world, entirely distinct from any of these, and tell me what it is and the use of it?"

"If I cannot tell you of a fourth world I can tell you of other new things."

"Let us have them then. We have five senses, hearing, seeing, feeling, tasting, smelling. Now originate a sixth sense, and tell us what it is and what it is for."

"Well, suppose I can't originate an idea, what then?"

"Why this: You say neither reason nor nature gives us evidence that there is a God. And yet the idea that there is a God is in existence. Now if man cannot originate an idea, I want you to tell me how the idea of a God has become so common in all lands, in all climes, and among all people save infants, idiots and mutes?"

"Why priests invented it, of course."

"Then you must admit, sir, that priests are a superior order of people, in that you believe they have done what you can't do,—originate an idea."

"No, sir; I won't admit any such thing."

"Then answer my question. How came the idea of God into existence?"

"I can't answer your question, but I tell you plainly I cannot believe in anything I cannot test with my senses."

"Have you a mind of your own?"

"Yes, sir, I have an independent mind that cannot be duped by any of you priests. You may be sure of that."

"That is right. Please let me see it. How does it look? Is it white or black? Let me feel it. Is it hard or soft? Let me taste it. Is it sweet or sour? Let me smell it. Has it a pleasant odor? Hark! Let me hear it sound."

"What do you mean, sir? Do you mean to say I have no mind?"

"Yes, sir, I begin to think you are a fool and have no mind. Please relieve me and hand out your mind and let me examine it."

"Why, I can let you have a piece of my mind if that is what you want. It is this: The Bible is fiction, and you priests know it—"

"That is your voice that I hear. I knew you had a voice; I heard it before. But it is your mind I want to get hold of, that I may test it with one of my senses. Don't keep me waiting. I want to go back to the meeting. I must set you down as a fool if you don't come to terms and let me hear, taste, smell or feel your mind."

By this time there had gathered a large crowd, mostly infidels; but all joined in a hearty laugh at the predicament of their friend Burroughs, except a man by the name of Sturdevant, who wanted to discuss the question of mind in the Ohio Watchman, an infidel paper, published in Ravenna. But I told him it was not a question to be argued, but rather to be tested by my senses, and if I could not do this I would set them all down as fools, and so the controversy ended.

It was very common for us to get into face-to-face controversies with sectarians, infidels and Universalists.

A maiden sister B—— was in love with a young Universalist preacher. She sometimes tried to make herself believe Universalism was true. Indeed she often told me she wished it was true. She lived with a Mr. Davis, editor of The Glad Tidings, and a Universalist minister of high rank among them. She sent me word that she wanted me to visit her and stay over night as she wanted to talk with me. I saw that her plan was to get Mr. Davis and me together, so she could hear us talk, as talk we always did under such circumstances. Mr. Davis received me very kindly, and in the course of the evening introduced several questions as feelers. After awhile he said:

"Mr. Green, what makes you believe in a devil?"

"I don't," said I. "He is a lying old scamp. I don't believe in him at all."

He smiled and asked:

"What makes you believe there is a devil?"

"Because the Bible speaks of him and tells us what he does. What makes you believe there is a God?"

"Because reason teaches it."

"Reason does not give you the first letter in the alphabet on that subject. All you know of God, of Christ, of heaven and hell you learn from the Bible. Shut that book and forget your knowledge of its contents and you are a heathen."

"Well, I don't believe in any devil except a devilish disposition."

"If I should say of a man 'he has a hoggish disposition,' what would you think I meant by hoggish?"

"I suppose you mean he partakes of a disposition of a hog."

"Well, then, if hoggish is being like the hog in disposition, what am I to infer from 'devilish disposition,' if there is no devil?"

"And I would like to know who made the devil, and what he was made for."

"I will tell you if you will tell me who made a sinner, and what he was made for."

"Nobody made a sinner. God made a man, and he became a sinner."

"Just so. Nobody made the devil. God made a being, and that being became a devil,—liar, traducer, deceiver."

"What kind of a being was he, and how did he make himself a devil?"

"I think I can answer you if you will answer me. Can you transform a man into a horse, or a horse into a man?"

"No, sir."

"Why not?"

"Because no being can be made to act out of his sphere. You can transform a good horse into a bad horse; but he remains a horse."

"Very well. Paul says Satan transforms himself into an angel of light—and unless he is an exception to the rule, he must be an angel of darkness."

"What made a devil of him?"

"Paul says, 'Put not a novice into the bishop's office lest being lifted up with pride he fall into the condemnation of the devil.' Pride is a terrible fault whether in man or angel."

There was a long pause, for there has been no reply since.

Wayside Gleanings.

Oct. 10 wife and I attended the love-feast at the Salem church, Marion Co., Ill. Bro. Culp, of Indiana, officiated, and we felt that it was good to be there. The late District Meeting appointed Bro. M. Stoufer, of Champaign County, Ill., to be the elder of this church.

Eld. H. W. Strickler, of Loraine, Adams Co., Ill., came to us Oct. 3, and held meetings one week, with two additions by baptism. Many good impressions were made on the minds of his hearers.

Oct. 13, in company with some of the Salem members, we attended the District Meeting in the Big Creek church, Richland County. The meeting was a very pleasant one, and good accommodations were given to all. Four papers go to Annual Meeting instead of three, as reported in my other report. I wrote from memory. I sent the full quota of Minutes to each church or their elder, and if any fail to get them, they will please let me know, as I have a few copies on hand yet.

I returned home Oct. 14, and early on the morning of the 16th, I bade farewell to wife and family, to labor for the cause of Zion in the West Otter Creek church, Macoupin Co., Ill. Our meetings began by holding a love-feast, and I continued to labor for them until Oct. 31. During my absence from home my wife suffered from ill health, but is better at this writing. Ministers' wives should not be forgotten when they bravely shoulder the responsibility of caring for the family, and are spending many lonely hours while their husbands are out in the field, breaking the Bread of Life to the hungry souls. I thank the dear members of the West Otter Creek church for their kind remembrance of our temporal needs, and for presenting my wife with a token of love, that I was permitted to carry to her. May God bless you all, is our prayer! The Lord willing, I aim to commence my school work again Nov. 9. The members of the Kaskaskia church do not aim to hold their love-feast before spring.

OUR love-feast, which occurred Oct. 10 and 11, will not soon be forgotten. Ministering brethren from other congregations were W. H. Eisenbise, S. M. Miller, Jonas Lichty, O. J. Beaver, Jacob Wirt, and J. Shank. One pleasant feature of the meeting was that so many brethren and sisters from adjoining churches were present Bro. Eisenbise officiated. On Saturday one dear sister was baptized. She was not willing to let this season go by without casting her lot with the children of God.

On Sunday Bro. Eisenbise addressed a large congregation. Many good and lasting impressions were made, and the borders of Zion enlarged. Oct. 12 four precious souls were led down to their watery graves, we trust, to walk in newness of life. May they all prove faithful to the end! There were others almost persuaded. May they not put off coming to Christ until it is forever too late! This makes nine that were received by baptism this summer. The brethren, during their short stay with us, gave us an abundance of spiritual food,—instructive to both saint and sinner. Brethren Jonathan Broadwater and John W. Sadler were forwarded to the second degree of the ministry. May they realize their responsibilities, and press forward toward the mark of the prize of their high calling in Christ Jesus!

At Home Again.

HOME is a short word, but carries with it a very extensive meaning. It has been my privilege to dwell in many pleasant homes. It is useless to mention names, for they are many, and I hope all feel that I did appreciate their kindness. I arrived home Oct. 31, and, instead of resting, as many said they thought I would do, I found the field was white to harvest here at home. The brethren requested me to preach in the College, and so I tried to preach twice that day, Nov. 1, and once each evening since. This evening, Nov. 5, I am to commence work in the East McPherson church.

The meetings at Yale, and in the Panora church, Iowa, were well attended and full of interest. The next stop was in Shelby County, Iowa, where Bro. Washington Wyland lives. The attendance there was not large, but the interest was increasing steadily. The last three meetings were in the Christian church at Harlan. The congregations were not large, but those who attended were good listeners. From Harlan my ticket read to McPherson, Kans.,—a distance of 340 miles, and in traveling that distance, I had to lay over nineteen hours and twenty minutes, and as much the largest portion of the time was at Belleville, Kans., I concluded to try a new way of laying over,—I went to bed and had a good rest. I arrived home in safety. The Lord be praised for his great mercy unto his unworthy servant! Many thanks to the brethren, sisters, and friends. I aim to start to California Dec. 2.

Notes from the Conestoga Church, Pa.

ON Saturday evening, Oct. 17, we commenced a series of meetings at Bareville, Pa. Bro. J. M. Mohler, of Lewistown, Pa., delivered in all nineteen sermons with good results.

At the close of the meetings, Nov. 1, fourteen precious souls had made application to be buried with Christ in baptism. One young brother, who had wandered away from Christ, felt his undone condition, and, like the prodigal son, expressed a desire to again unite with the church, and was gladly received into the fold. Another young brother also expressed a great desire to be reclaimed, and is laboring hard to that end. May the Good Lord help him to renounce Satan in all his pernicious ways, and may he fully determine to labor with the Brethren in the vineyard of the Lord!

Since the meetings closed, four more came out on the Lord's side. Many rejoiced to see those near and dear to them come home, while others were weeping because their children and friends would not accept Christ. Others are counting the cost, and some are almost persuaded to step over on the Lord's side. The church also has been greatly revived, for surely we had a feast of good things.

Nov. 2 we held our quarterly council, which passed off in harmony and love. We have decided to hold a love-feast at the Bird-in-hand meeting-house Nov. 16 and 17, commencing at 1 P. M. This is the first feast ever held by this congregation in the fall of the year.

Ministerial Meetings.

THE ministers in and around Mt. Morris hold a ministerial meeting the first Monday evening of each month for the purpose of talking on subjects that concern the work of the ministry. Our rule is to devote one hour to these talks. The subject before the meeting for November was the "Opening and Closing of Meetings." A number of valuable suggestions were made. We mention a few of them:

1. Open services promptly on time. A minister who is prompt is almost certain to have a prompt congregation.

2. Make the opening services devotional and earnest. Cold, formal opening exercises throw a chill over the whole meeting.

3. Every minister ought to come to meeting prepared to open the services. If he is called upon he will then be ready. It is not good to keep a congregation waiting on a minister who has to look through his book for a suitable opening hymn. Let him select his hymn before he leaves home, and if he does not happen to be called upon to open the services, the good he derives from selecting the hymn, and meditations thereon, will be a blessing to his soul anyhow.

4. It is well to sing several spirited hymns while the congregation is collecting. The members should be also encouraged to come to meeting with hymns selected for this song service.

5. Either just before, or directly after singing the opening hymn, it will be well to read a portion of Scripture of a devotional nature. The selection should be short, perhaps not to exceed twenty verses, and should be very carefully read, so that the congregation will get the full meaning of it as near as possible.

6. Remarks before prayer, if at all, should be very brief and to the point. By no means should these remarks be cold and formal.

7. The prayer should be earnest, and full of meaning, but never formal. We should not have a certain form of prayer to repeat on every occasion, but make the subject of prayer a study, so as to include the general wants of the people, the church and the world, as well as our personal wants.

8. We should not repeat the Lord's prayer indifferently. It is full of meaning, and we should try to feel the full force of it in our hearts. Learn to pray this prayer reverently, and not hurry over it.

CLOSING MEETING.

1. The closing services should always be short and earnest.

2. Some one ought to be prepared to close the meeting when the sermon is completed. Waiting and urging one another to close will chill a congregation, and destroy the force of the best sermon preached.

3. If any remarks are made they should be brief and to the point. Never spoil a good sermon by telling the same story over again. We are not likely to make a mistake by promptly closing the meeting immediately after the sermon is completed.

4. Never use a long hymn for closing. It should be full of meaning, familiar and impressive.

5. By all means let the prayer be short, earnest and appropriate. Thus let the service be brought to a close with a warm, earnest, Christian feeling.

ADDITIONAL SUGGESTIONS.

Never lean on the desk, or do anything to attract undue attention while conducting these services. Let everything be done to induce the people to think of Christ.

Practice reading hymns and Scripture at home, in order to acquire the ability to read well before an audience.

Do not conduct the opening and closing services in a noisy tone. Speak deliberately, clearly and reverently, but not too loud, and yet forcibly enough to be heard distinctly.

Many other good things were said, but the above will suffice to show how a number of home ministers may spend an hour together for each others' benefit and edification.

Our next subject is "How a Minister ought to Conduct Himself at the Meeting."

J. H. M.

The Watch Tower.

ONE of the things to be regretted in the present day in our ranks is that we have so many brethren called to the ministry who are not at all active in it. Their inactivity may arise from various causes, some justifiable, but the most not. The best reason that can be assigned is "They will not." They will not make the sacrifice of home, money, comfort, etc. We are living in a day when few ministers and few lay-members seek first the kingdom, and depend on God to have these other things added.

TWO LETTERS.—Upon returning home, sometime since, I found in my mail two letters, part of which I give here because of their peculiar import:

LETTER NO. 1.

——, Oct. 9, 1891.

Dear Brother:—

Enclosed please find $5.35 from —— church for the mission work. Fraternally,

LETTER NO. 2.

——, Oct. 9, 1891

Dear Brother in Christ:—

Enclosed you will find $5.00 to be used as per Bro. Sharp's proposition. May the Lord bless the effort. I am alone at this place, and have had no preaching for the last four years. Your brother,

The congregation referred to in Letter No. 1 is in one of the States where our Brethren are the most numerous, and among the wealthiest; and, comparing her donations and numerical strength with her sister congregations in the same State, she is to be commended for her liberality. The brother in Letter No. 2 lives in one of the frontier States.

Now, these letters, and their circumstances connected with them, gave rise to the following questions. Who will answer them?

Why is it that the isolated brother is willing to give nearly as much as a whole congregation of well-to-do members, about seventy in number?

Why is it that the isolated brother is willing to help to give the Gospel to other people, when he himself does not hear it preached?

Why is it that congregations, having preaching every Lord's Day, Sunday-school a half or more of each year, one to three series of meetings each year, an abundance of this world's goods, and under no circumstances would desire to be deprived of these, are so indifferent to giving liberally that others, less fortunate, may enjoy the same blessings?

On what basis do followers of Christ place their word when they promise to help the work of the church along, and then, without any good reason, refuse to do so? We hear sometimes of members agreeing to pay a certain sum yearly, or more frequently, to help bear church expenses at home, or for the spread of the Gospel, and then, without seeing any decrease in their wealth, they blankly refuse to fulfill their promise. How must God view such? We should all remember that such promises are not to individual members of the church, but to the prosperity of the cause, and to the same God who gives us all things.

Notes and Jottings.

IT is the wishes of the brethren of the Middle District of Iowa, in which next Annual Meeting is to be held, to utilize the attending ministry to their advantage. It is their purpose to invite brethren to preach in various parts of their District, both before and after Annual Meeting. We hope that brethren who can, will respond to these calls. The churches in Iowa are in general under a very fair discipline, but are in need of more evangelists. Their country is fine and productive, and inviting to home seekers. During the famine cries of want from States west, Iowa has all the time had enough and to spare. Ministering brethren, seeking homes, may obtain further information by addressing Henry H. Troup, Maxwell, Iowa; Eld. A. M. Dickey, Melbourne, Iowa; Eld. John Zuck, Clarence, Iowa, and others whose addresses may be found in the Almanac.

The objects of a protracted meeting range about as follows:

1. To encourage the membership, and aid in building them up in their most holy faith.

2. To mould sentiment in the community. It is an important auxiliary to have scattered sentiment to back up the work.

3. To gather wandering souls into the fold.

I have known what were called successful meetings, but they proved a misfortune, simply because the last object named was the only one sought. I care not how many may join the church, if the weak are not made strong, the sickly restored, and sentiment moulded, the meeting will eventually result in a collapse of the cause, and injury will be the result. It is a mistake to measure the good done in a meeting by the number of accessions.

It is a mistake to call a brother, perhaps a long distance, to hold a meeting, and then for members not to support the meeting. If members are not interested in a meeting, it is certain that their neighbors will not be interested; hence no good can be done. What can be done in a meeting depends in a measure upon the man holding the meeting, but results depend more largely upon the surroundings.

There are two ways of reporting the results of a meeting. One is, to report that a certain number joined the church. Another method is, to report the number that were converted. It is certain that all who are converted join the church, but we have reasons to fear that not all who join the church are converted.

Years ago, when Eld. Albright was refused a German Conference by the Episcopal Methodists, he withdrew and organized what was then called the Albright, now Evangelical church. In numbers they prospered and now report a membership of 150,000.

For years a growing, hostile feeling has existed between their bishops. During the past year, bishops Esher and Bowman, in charge of their publishing interests at Cleveland, Ohio, were tried before a Conference of their elders, found guilty and suspended until next General Conference. They refused to attend their trial, and rejected the decision in their case.

Bishop Dubbs was given a similar trial; but regarded the proceedings so unjust that he refused to remain for his trial. Bishop Dubbs was found guilty by the trial conference, and was also suspended until next General Conference. After a long trial before Judge Hamilton at the court at Cleveland, Ohio, a decision was rendered that Esher and Bowman were legally suspended, hence should receive no more of the publishing interest funds in payment of their services.

The Dubbs element held their Conference in Philadelphia, and they sustained Bishop Dubbs, and expelled Esher and Bowman. At the same time the Esher and Bowman element held their Conference in Indianapolis, and, of course, sustained their bishops, and expelled Dubbs.

Judge Hamilton's decision is a clear and able document, and shows conclusively the inconsistency of Esher and Bowman. The Philadelphia Conference sent a most touching appeal to the Indianapolis Conference, to settle their trouble by a committee of disinterested divines, but their offer was rejected.

It is praiseworthy of Bishop Dubbs, that, while he regarded his trial unjust and partial, so much so that he did not remain, yet he meekly abided their decision until General Conference, and did not act in his office. It is loyal, hence right, to abide a legal action of the church of which we are members, and, if unjust, await the time for an appeal to Conference.

SOME OBSERVATIONS ON THE FOREGOING.

1. It is painful to witness a difficulty, of the above extent, grow out of such a small matter, seemingly a personal matter. "Behold what a great matter a little fire kindleth."

2. The foregoing is another proof, that the leading troubles of the churches to-day originate with the officials.

3. The foregoing is another proof that if the heads are divided, the body is sure to be divided.

4. That instead of church union, or a union of the churches; divisions are yet going on. The Church of God and the United Brethren have just recently divided on secrecy. And it is remarkable that the line of these divisions is, as Paul names, first, "envy;" second, "strife;" third, "divisions." I. J. ROSENBERGER.

Glorious Feasts.

THE first of our series of love-feasts was the Tearcoat feast. Brethren Jonas and Tobias Fike, of Preston Co., W. Va., occupied the sacred desk and did good work. This church is in a thriving condition, having had quite a revival during the year. Four have been baptized in this church since our last report. Next came the feast at Pine church. Here brethren Jonas and Tobias Fike held a series of meetings, lasting about ten days. At the feast our ministerial force was increased by the coming of Bro. Robert Hull, of Bakersville, Pa. Five were added to the church during the meetings, and at this writing we have several more applicants for baptism. An election was held at this place for a minister, and the lot fell on Bro. Jas. Fleming. We fondly hope he may be a workman, approved of God. This church is in a thriving condition.

Next came the feast at Beaver Run. Here we had the above-named ministers and several others from adjoining congregations. This meeting was enjoyable in the highest degree, and although we have no additions to report, we think much good was done. Our dear brethren, that labored so faithfully for us, now bade us farewell and returned to their homes, and we hope the blessings of God may rest upon them. They made many friends while with us.

We expect to hold a series of meetings at Beaver Run in the near future. Bro. Gaunt, of West Virginia, is to do the preaching. We hope to send you some good news then.

The last of our feasts was the one at the Bean settlement. It was well attended by the ministers of our home churches and one of the most pleasant feasts I ever attended. A series of meetings will also be held in this church shortly, and we hope to report good results. D. B. ARNOLD.

Burlington, W. Va., Oct. 23.

To the Southern District of Iowa.

THERE are six isolated members at this place, and the nearest church is at a distance of twenty-five miles. Bro. Lewis Kob held a few meetings for us last spring, but he has more calls than he can fill, and we would like if some one would come and hold some meetings for us. There can a great deal of good be done here. The people are anxious to hear more of the Brethren. If any one can come, the best time will be from the last of November to the Holidays. After the Holidays the other denominations hold protracted meetings which generally last till spring. Still, we do not desire to dictate in this matter. Come when you can and write me in time, as I am four and a half miles from the post-office, and get my mail only once a week. MARTIN HELSEL.

Our Indiana Trip.

WE (including wife and child) started for a visit among some of our relatives and some of the churches of Indiana, Oct. 13. The pleasant weather made traveling very agreeable. On our train were persons traveling to Oregon, Texas, California and Iowa, all anxious to reach the points for which they started. We wondered how many had started for heaven, and were as desirous to reach that "sweet home."

We had a delay in Richmond, "the Quaker City of the West." This City is headquarters, west of Philadelphia, for that noble sect. They have become wealthy and educated, and have lost much of their proverbial simplicity of dress. One of their number remarked that they were more liberal on this question than formerly, with no increase in any other way to make up the change, but rather to the contrary. Query: Will our beloved Brotherhood follow the footsteps of various sects who, as wealth and education increased, declined in simplicity only to gain in worldliness and fashion; or will modest apparel, along with the other Gospel peculiarities, always prevail? Let us hope and pray and labor for the latter!

We first visited our friends in Hamilton County, and attended the feast in the Arcadia church Oct. 14. This meeting was largely attended and seemed to give the membership much encouragement. Brethren Eby, Holsinger, Caylor, Shepler, Smeltzer and Burcham labored earnestly to promote the Master's cause. Bro. Holsinger suffered from an attack of hoarseness, which interfered with his labors during the feast, but the evening following he gave us a grand lesson of mortality and the resurrection. 2 Cor. 5.

We visited through Howard and Carroll Counties and attended several meetings, one of which was that of the Progressive Brethren in Flora. Our church-house in that place being under repair, our friends insisted on us preaching in their house. Bro. Amick, the "Business Manager" of the Brethren's Publishing Co., called in and lent a helping hand. We had a pleasant waiting on the Lord.

We enjoyed a morning call on our aged elder, Hiel Hamilton, of Flora. He has passed his four-score years, but his years have only added zeal and strength in the cause of his Master. The hour spent with him will be long remembered.

We also had the pleasure of a visit to our dear young sister, Josephine Hanna, whose pen contributions, both in verse and prose, are much appreciated by all readers of the Young Disciple. She writes under the signature of "A True Friend," and an acquaintance with her will prove to all that it is no misnomer.

We went to Markle, Wells Co., to see wife's sister, and found, as we did several times on our visit, that we were just too late for the feast. This causes me to suggest that, in giving the time and the church in which feasts are to be held, the name of the County be also given, as it will be a help to traveling brethren, and may also be a profit to the churches. JNO. CALVIN BRIGHT.

From a Western Outpost.

THE members of the Moscow congregation met at the church at 6: 30 P. M., on Saturday, Oct. 24, to engage in the love-feast exercises. This was a feast of love to all that surrounded the tables,—forty in number. The weather was unfavorable all evening, but the rain did not keep the people away. The church was well filled, and the best of order prevailed during the entire evening. On Sunday morning we met at 10 A. M., for social meeting. Our subject was: "The Evidences of Christianity." There were some good points brought out by the Brethren. We had preaching at 11 A. M., and 3 P. M. Eld. Sidney Hodgden conducted the meetings, assisted by Bro. Gwin. The meetings were profitable to all, and, I think, brought us all one step nearer to our Blessed Redeemer.

Bro. J. J. Bebee left to-day for his home in Iowa, having been with us a little over a year. Sister S. E. Renner leaves us next Thursday for Kansas. While we regret to part with brethren and sisters, we are made glad by extending a welcome hand to others that are coming into our midst. Quite a number were received by letter during the past year. One man said after the Saturday evening meeting, "Well, I am glad I am here. This is the first Communion of the Brethren I ever attended, but all is according to the teaching of the Gospel." What grand sermons are preached by simply obeying our Savior!

BRO. SAMUEL MURRAY writes us of his safe arrival at home in reasonably good health.

THE Occident, a leading Jewish paper, says that electric light has just been introduced into the City of Jerusalem.

BRO. DAVID BECHTELHEIMER, of Nebraska, has arranged to spend the winter in Indiana. His address will be Sevastopol.

BRO. C. S. HOLSINGER, of Pigeon Creek, Illinois, has arranged to spend some time preaching for the Brethren in Jewell County, Kans.

ON account of getting as much in the missionary number as possible, some of our contributors may possibly find their reports of church news reduced to editorial items in next issue.

UNDER date of Nov. 5 Bro. S. Z. Sharp writes that since last report five more students have been baptized at McPherson College. This makes six so far, the present month. Later reports give four more applicants.

THE Brethren in Chicago had decided to hold their love-feast on Thanksgiving, but not being able to get the house at that time, in which they have been holding meetings, they are therefore compelled to postpone the feast indefinitely.

BRO. I. J. ROSENBERGER, who is holding a series of meetings at Nappanee, Ind., writes that Bro. Daniel Wysong met with a very serious accident Nov. 5. He was on his barn roof, doing some repairing, and, attempting to change his position, he slipped and fell eighteen feet, resulting in a serious injury to his hip-joint. Bro. Wysong is one of our efficient ministers, who spends much of his time in the field. The churches where he had intended to labor will understand by this that he may not be able to resume his work for some time.

BRO. W. H. H. SAWYER and wife, of Kansas, are now at Keuka, Fla., and may possibly spend the winter there. The church at that place seems to be moving along cheerfully. Bro. E. J. Neher is the elder.

BRO. D. E. BRUBAKER, who is now at work in Canada, reports prospects encouraging. He had just closed a meeting at Hespeler with two additions by confession and baptism, and is arranging to continue at other points.

OUR lives are very much as we make them. True, others may help, but may we not encourage those who work for our good, and avoid those who seek our injury? By cleaving to those who make us better, and fleeing from the ones who would damage us, we certainly improve our condition.

WE are asked to state whether a minister can be charged and tried for an offense in the absence of an elder. It is a well-established rule among the Brethren that no officer of the church should be tried, before the church, in the absence of an elder to preside over the council. All officials are installed by elders, and no official can be relieved of either his membership or office in the absence of an elder, if it be possible to procure one.

ELD. JAMES QUINTER'S "Life and Sermons" is meeting with quite a sale. The first edition was exhausted some weeks ago and a second edition had to be printed, which we are now using to fill orders. We recommend the work to our Brethren. They will find it an excellent companion during these long winter evenings. Price, $1.25 postpaid. Send for our new Special Terms to Agents. The book sells well and we would like an agent in every congregation.

WHY should not each congregation have a correspondent to report the church news? There are perhaps hundreds of churches from which we never receive one word of news. If our agents can not report the news, let arrangements be made with some one else. Some churches appoint correspondents. The idea is not a bad one. We want to make the church news department of the MESSENGER interesting. This we cannot do without the help of those who send in the news. Let us have all the news early and briefly.

A BROTHER tells how twenty-five cents burned his conscience all through a literary entertainment. As he laid down fifty cents to pay for two tickets, one for himself and the other for his wife, a friend handed him a quarter, sent by old sister —— for the missionary fund. Fearing that if he placed it in his pocket he might forget what it was intended for, he concluded to hold it in his hand, and it burned clear to the heart. He did not enjoy the exercises. He could not help thinking about that poor sister doing more for the cause of Christ than any one in the room.

DURING their passage from France to England brother and sister Miller had the misfortune to encounter one of the most severe storms that it has fallen to their lot to experience in any of their travels. Many vessels were completely wrecked during the storm and a number of lives lost. After many hours of suffering, in the midst of constant danger, our brother and sister finally succeeded in landing in a blinding sheet of water and spray. And when they reached the cars, which were also flooded with water from the storm, they were completely exhausted, having passed through the most exciting scenes of their lives. It required several days for sister Miller to recover from the nervous prostration. A later letter informs us that they were in their usual health and prepared to continue their journey.

A GENTLEMAN, who has seen much of this world, and knows much of what is in most men, recently said: "The more quietly and peaceably we get on, the better for ourselves and our neighbors. In nine cases out of ten the better course is, if a man cheats you, to quit dealing with him; if he is abusive, to quit his company; and if he slanders you, to take care to live so that nobody will believe it. Whoever he is or however he misuses you, the wisest way is to let him alone; for there is nothing better than this quiet way of dealing with the wrongs we meet.

THE Lord is blessing our aged fathers. One of them, David Peebler, of Oregon, writes thus: "We have received Bro. Quinter's "Sermons" and take great pleasure in reading them, as we are deprived of going to meeting on account of sickness and the infirmities of age. If I go to meeting, I can't enjoy preaching on account of my deafness, so we have the pleasure of reading Bro. Quinter's sermons. I have read some of them four or five times. I am in my eighty-ninth year. My wife is in her eighty-fifth." This is the brother who, years ago, while living in a part of the West where the crops failed, made a host of friends that will never forget him. His crib was full of old corn, and when a man came with money, he sent him to his neighbor who had corn to sell also, but if he was poor and had no money he sold him corn on time.

WE are now mailing the "Brethren's Almanac" as fast as the orders are received. In addition to the calendar, usually found in almanacs, it contains a revised list of all our ministers, giving the names and address of over 2,000 ministers. Quinter's Discussion on Freemasonry" is a valuable article. Following this is an article on "Rocking Babies" that ought to be read by all of our mothers. "How We Spend our Money" is a startling comparison. "A Sketch of the Life of Eld. Samuel Mohler," who so recently passed away, is followed by a well-written article, giving the history of Eld. Hiel Hamilton, who is still waiting for the call to come up higher. "Every Tongue shall Confess" is the title of an article on baptism as ingenious as it is truthful. The article headed, "The Shermanites," is one of those articles that after once being read is never forgotten. In fact the whole make-up of the work is both interesting and instructive and is worth any one's ten cents. Send that amount and we will mail you a copy, or call on our agents who will be prepared to supply you; or if you wish to act as agent, write us for terms.

The spirit of that undefinable thing called enterprise has invaded Palestine, that sleepiest of all historic hollows, the Jordan Valley. Youssef Effendi Navon, of Jerusalem, has projected three railroad lines from that city, leading respectively to Jaffa, Gaza, and Samaria. Another Oriental, Y. E. Elias, proposes to connect Damascus with the Mediterranean by rail, and to put a line of steamers upon the Sea of Galilee. Others are planning other lines in this country and Syria, and Loutfey Bey, of Cairo, proposes to run a line connecting this system with the Suez Canal. This will bring Jerusalem within eight hours of the Red Sea—a considerable reduction from the forty years of the Exodus.

THE above is clipped from the Christian Standard. It is cheering news to those interested in the development of Bible Lands, but of late we have reasons for doubting many of the statements made in regard to the building of railroads in Palestine. Several weeks ago a writer, living in the City of Jerusalem, wrote to one of the journals in this country that work had actually commenced on the railroad at Joppa. We learn from reliable sources that nothing has yet been done in that direction, and that the reports, published by us or others, concerning railroad undertakings, are as yet without foundation. We hope to get hold of the real facts after awhile.

For the present we are out of the Revised Minutes, and can fill no more orders for the work.

MISSIONARY NUMBER.

The next issue of the Messenger will be a missionary number, prepared especially for use on mission fields. It will contain well-written articles on various points of our doctrine, and will therefore set forth our claims in a very clear manner. The General Mission Board will take several thousand copies, to be distributed among those who are not members of the church, and especially on mission fields and at isolated points. Those wishing copies for this purpose may send their orders to Galen B. Royer, of Mt. Morris, stating how many copies they can use to good advantage. Try to place every copy where it will do good. We will also print a number of extra copies for the use of our agents, to aid them in procuring new subscribers. Agents who can use samples to good advantage in this way, will please write us, stating how many copies are desired.

HOME MISSION WORK.

Last week we called attention to some important considerations in regard to local mission work. Next to good, appropriate preaching is good singing. This can be had only by proper encouragement. Those who can sing well ought to be encouraged to lead out in that part of the church work, while efforts might be made to have such singing exercises as will tend to develop the musical talent of the church. Encouragement from the elder in this department will prove very valuable, and he ought to understand that, in order to keep the necessary interest in these religious services, good music is indispensable. In short, we think that the elder ought to be interested in every department of his church work.

He will also find it a great help to his mission if he will give considerable attention to the Sunday-school work within the bounds of his flock. He may not be able, on account of other duties, to take an active part in the work, but he can encourage the Sunday-school leaders and counsel them in anything pertaining to their work that will prove valuable to the church. It is useless to oppose these schools, for they have come to stay, and it becomes our duty to make them subservient to the will of the church.

Then there are the poor, the sick and erring ones to look after. What a field for usefulness the elder has! His local congregation can be made a little world to him, sufficient to command the best of ability. Let him, therefore, consecrate himself to the work and demonstrate his fitness for that particular calling. His work is a noble one and of immense value to the church, locally as well as in general. The elders are the pillars of the Brotherhood. "Like priest, like people" is no less true than "Like elders, like congregation." The growing want of our Brotherhood to-day is faithful, intelligent and prudent elders.

But while he should consecrate himself fully to the care of the flock he should, by no means, undertake to perform all the labor himself. There are elders who do about all the preaching, lead the singing, do all the public praying, look after the wants of the sick and poor, and at the time of feasts assist in serving the tables, etc., while around them are many brethren and sisters well fitted for most of these duties. He has his helpers among ministers and deacons, to say nothing of useful material among the laity. Let him see that all of his helpers do their duty and keep their part of the work moving along as smoothly as possible. It is not wisdom for an elder to permit his official helpers, or even the laity, to pass their sojourn here on earth without making themselves useful. The elder who presumes to perform all the duties, pertaining to the different departments of church work, displays about as much wisdom as do parents who work themselves almost to death, while bringing up their children in idleness. It is just as needful to train church members to work in the vineyard of the Lord as it is to teach our children to attend to their different departments of work at home, and the elder who neglects this is disregarding the very thing on which the future of the church largely depends. Not only so, but in a measure, at least, he becomes responsible for the cold and idle condition of his members. In bringing up a congregation of non-working members he commits a wrong against the church at large, similar to the one committed by the father who raises his children in idleness. The wrong is not against the church alone, but it is against God himself who designs that every member should work out his own salvation with fear and trembling, and become a lively stone in the church. Let the elder, therefore, see that the ministers and deacons, under his care, perform the labors their official positions demand, and also encourage the laity to make themselves useful in every line of Christian usefulness within their reach.

When Moses, in the wilderness, was wearing himself out, trying to do the work of many, his father-in-law, Jethro, gave him some good advice, telling him how to divide the work up among others and he look after only the more important parts. Moses profited by the advice, and was enabled to retain his mental and physical strength to a ripe old age. (Ex. 18: 13.) Others may profit by Moses' experience. The elder of a large congregation should devote much of his energies to keeping others at work. This he can do, not as lording it over God's heritage, but in an earnest, fatherly manner that will inspire others and command their respect.

But he must not expect his helpers in the Gospel to rightly perform their duties without proper instruction, training and encouragement. There is much for the deacons to look after and they should be instructed to perform their duties well. Deacons, who earnestly and wisely perform all the duties pertaining to their calling, are of immense value to the cause. They are to the church what the wheel-horses are to the heavily-loaded wagon. They can be depended upon in times of trouble and they help to hold the work of the church steady. It is their place to look after the poor, the sick, take charge of the church finances, look after her property, and aid in keeping the church in her line of duty. We have always regarded them as the most important helpers in the church, not only in attending to the duties just suggested, but in looking after the erring. The elder who can get the deacons to magnify their office and realize the responsibilities resting upon them has done much in the way of preparing them for their special duties. A chapter might be written on the duties and value of deacons, but for the present we desire to give attention to the work of the ministry, showing how much good may be accomplished in the local fields. This we shall attempt to do week after next. J. H. M.

EDITORIAL WANDERINGS IN THE OLD WORLD.

BY D. L. MILLER.

Number Nine.

Our wanderings have brought us to a secluded little German village, far away from the rush and bustle of the busy world of travel. It is one of those quaint, old-fashioned towns that seem quite out of place in the present. It belongs to the past and has not yet awakened to the impulse of the age, which has taken hold upon many parts of Germany. Its peace and quiet has never been disturbed by the sound of locomotive or cars. For more than three centuries it has nestled in the beautiful valley through which, like a thread of silver in a ribbon of green, flows the historic river Eder.

As we write, we are seated on the approach to the foot-bridge, used by the villagers to cross over the stream. On either side of the river stand the quaint-looking old houses with high gables and steep roofs, covered with straw or red tile, which form the ancient village of Schwarzenau. The village children, in peculiar dress, stand at a respectful distance, watching, with open-eyed wonder, the strangers who have invaded their quiet little town. Even the elderly people stop and give us a look of surprised inquiry, and collect in groups to discuss the strange sight of a drosky with travelers in their streets. As they pass by they greet us cordially with a "Guten Tag." Wife walks along the meandering stream, the water of which is as clear as crystal, and the gently-sloping banks are covered with grass to the very edge of the river. A well-kept lawn is not more evenly mowed than are the grassy slopes of the Eder. It is a quiet October day, a day that recalls our own delightful Indian summer weather at home. The mountains on either side of the valley are covered with a thick growth of pine, birch, maple, and beech. The touch of autumn frost has tinged the foliage with a rich coloring of crimson, red and gold. Up the stream, a hundred yards away, is the old, five-arched stone bridge, built centuries ago, and beyond this a beautiful stretch of green meadow land. Sitting here on the old foot-bridge, with the valley for a mile above and below Schwarzenau in full view, we have no picture in mind so beautiful as this.

There are some places on the blue Juniata above and below Huntingdon, Pa., that are recalled as we sit here, but the similarity is scarcely sufficient to base a comparison upon. The Juniata has a grand, rugged, dashing beauty peculiar to itself; here the sharp curves, the rushing river, the rocky shores, and the steep mountains are replaced by a gently-flowing stream through a valley of green meadow land, formed by mountains of even slope and less than half the altitude of the Blue Ridge and Alleghanies. Here is a quiet, enchanting beauty which, we are quite willing to confess, exceeds anything we can now recall of ever having seen even in picturesque America. Perhaps the associations connected with the place may have their influence upon our estimate of its surpassing beauty; but after making due allowance for all this we are not willing to say less than we have.

And what are the associations connected with this quiet, old-fashioned German hamlet? Most of our readers already know and others, no doubt, will be interested in knowing that here at Schwarzenau, nearly two hundred years ago, the dying embers of primitive Christianity were rekindled and the Brethren's church was more fully organized. Here, on the banks of this beautiful stream, doubtless not far from where we write, the Brethren assembled in the year 1708, and following the example of Christ, as one of our learned divines of America recently followed it in the river Jordan, they went down into the water and were baptized "into the name of the Father, and into the name of the Son, and into the name of the Holy Ghost," and from here went forth that little band of persecuted believers exiled from their "Vaterland" to find a home in the Quaker Colony of Pennsylvania.

Under the mild rule of the good Count Cassimir, of Wittgenstein, who gave an asylum to the persecuted Pietists, the newly re-organized church flourished for a season and prosperous congregations were soon established at different places, especially at Marienborn and Berleburg. But they were not to live in peace. The reformers, who had been persecuted by Rome, now turned persecutors themselves and they laid a heavy hand on the Brethren. Refusing to give up their faith in Apostolic Christianity, many of them were cast into prison and heavy fines were imposed upon all "of this way." Hochmann, a prominent minister, was cast into prison and beaten with many stripes. Alexander Mack, one of their most prominent ministers, had inherited a considerable fortune. It was all used in paying fines for himself and his poorer brethren. At length the persecution became so grievous that a number of them left their homes to settle in the wilderness of the then New World. Others fled to Switzerland hoping to secure religious liberty in that republic, but a worse fate awaited them there. They were imprisoned and some were put to death. By these rigorous measures the State Church succeeded in its purpose, and no vestige of the church of the Brethren is to be found in those valleys to-day.

We have been brought into close contact with the homes of our Brethren in Germany. We have seen where they lived and labored and we are much impressed with the thought of the great sacrifice they made when they left these beautiful and fertile valleys for the wilds of the New World. We are made to admire, more and more, their courage and the spirit of self-sacrifice which led them to abandon home and the associations of a life-time for the sake of primitive Christianity. How they must have suffered and what hardships they must have endured, all for the sake of religious liberty! How often from their lonely homes on Indian Creek and the Wissachickon, at White Oak, at Ephrata, and at Germantown, surrounded by the Red Man of the forest, must they have looked back with longing, yearning hearts to this beautiful valley of the Eder, once their quiet, peaceful, happy home, from which they were exiled, never to return again.

How often must they have battled with the homesick feeling that will come to all who love home and leave it. How often in their dreams their feet pressed again the grassy slopes of the Eder, they drank again of its crystal water and breathed again the pure mountain air, and were happy again in their old homes, only to awake and find it all a dream. We have thought more of all this perhaps because we are far away from home and friends and know something of the desire to return again. These brave men and women endured much so that they might serve the Lord in his own appointed way. Long ago they were gathered to that home where the weary are at rest and from which they will never be exiled. The cause they loved so well, and for which they sacrificed so much, still lives. And shall it not continue to live? Shall not we, who to-day stand in the places of those who have gone before, hold up the cause of Apostolic Christianity? Shall we not be true to the cause we have espoused and for which our fathers suffered so much, yea, for which Christ died? God help us to be faithful even unto death.

What a place this is to write, and how the mind runs on, spurred by the inspiration of the theme and the surroundings, but we must put a curb on these reflections and say something more about Schwarzenau. The village is built on either side of the Eder and contains, as we were informed by one of the inhabitants, about 600 souls. On the outer walls of one of the principal houses hangs a square sign-board, on the white surface of which is painted in large black letters the following official record of the place:

D. Schwarzenau.
Amt Aufeld.
Kr. Wittgenstein.
Rg. Bz. Arnsberg.
Landwehr-Battalions.
Bezirk Meschede.

The people of the village are engaged in farming and appear to be well-to-do and happy. Their piety asserts itself in the custom of engraving passages of Scriptures on the oak sills and panels in the sides and gables of their houses. Not only at Schwarzenau but at other villages in the valley of the Eder we noticed not only Scriptural passages but short poems and various pious mottoes on the houses. The following are given as examples We copied them verbatim:

"Gott segne dieses Haus
Und einen jeden Stand,
Den Bürger in der Stadt,
Den Bauer auf dem Land,
Gib Segen und Gedeihen
Auch für ein jedes Wesen,
Besonders noch für den
Der diesen Spruch thut lesen."

Translated this reads:

"God bless this house,
And each and every occupation,
The citizen of the town,
The farmer on the field,
Give blessings and prosperity
Also to each being,
Especially to him
Who may read this inscription."

As we stood copying these lines the owner of the house came out and informed us that he had placed them there with his own hand. He read them over several times and seemed to be much pleased that his work was thus noticed. We wish he could read this letter in the MESSENGER. At another place we read, "Dieses Haus gehört Gott und mir." Here the owner takes the Lord into partnership with him. A lesson may be learned from this simple villager. We have too much of the "I own this properly" and not enough of the "It belongs to the Lord" in our way of looking at what God has made us stewards over. One more example will suffice: "Ich getrau Gott in aller Noth." Much of the carving is very skillfully done, the old German letters being used and the capitals finely decorated.

Not far from Schwarzenau is the town of Berleburg. This was a noted center for our Brethren and other so-called Pietists. They came here from many parts of Germany. Among others who came was a printer from Strassburg named John Jacob Hang. He had been awakened and came to Berleburg to enjoy the society of kindred spirits. A printing-press was set up, for these early brethren believed in the use of printer's ink, and Hang took charge of the office.* Here in 1726 the celebrated Berleburg Bible, with notes, was published in three volumes. A copy of this Bible may be seen in the Cassel Library at Mt. Morris, Ill. The printing-press was afterward sent to America where, in 1736, it came into the possession of Eld. Christopher Saur and he used it to print the first religious paper and the first Bible (1743) that was printed in America.

Eld. Christopher Saur, the printer, was a man of more than ordinary ability. He received a liberal education at the University of Marburg, Germany. He united with the Brethren and used his ability and education to further the cause of Christ. He had energy and business push. He gave the German colonists their first almanac and their first religious paper, and then, owing to the fact that Bibles were very scarce in the New Colony, he determined to give to his countrymen the Scriptures in their own tongue. He began the work under great difficulties. A friend in Frankfort, Germany, sent him a part of the type. A few pages were set up and printed and then the type distributed to be set up again. At last, in 1743, he sent out the first edition of the first Bible ever published in a European language in America. The credit of this important work thus belongs to the band of exiled Brethren. The book, a large quarto, was bound in boards and leather, and of such excellent workmanship was the binding that many well-preserved copies are yet to be found. The demand for the Bible made it necessary to issue two more editions, one in 1763 and the last in 1776. Bro. A. H. Cassel has a full set of these Bibles and we are also fortunate enough to possess a copy of each of the three editions in an excellent state of preservation.

If any of our readers should have an opportunity to visit the valley of the Eder and the village of Schwarzenau, they may not be able to locate the place on the maps, as the smaller villages are not given. We traveled southward through Cassel to the university town of Marburg, and here we secured a carriage and driver. The distance from Marburg to Schwarzenau is not far from twenty miles, and the entire trip is a pleasant one. We drive along the Lahn for some miles after leaving Marburg, and then, crossing a low range of mountains, we enter the valley of the Eder. We were much interested in noticing the peculiar dress and the manners of the people along the route, and a letter might be devoted to these topics, but already our MESSENGER letters are growing too rapidly in number.

At Marburg we visited the university founded by Philip the Generous in 1527. At the present time there are about 1,000 students in attendance in the various departments of the institution. One of the principal attractions of Marburg is the Cathedral of St. Elizabeth. In the year 1229, Elizabeth, the widow of Louis IV., of Thuringia and Hesse, came to Marburg. Instead of making her home in the great castle that overlooks the city, she built a house near where the church now stands and established a hospital and devoted her life to the care of the sick and the poor. After her death her name was placed by the Pope of Rome in the Calendar of Saints. And now occurred one of those peculiar incidents for which Catholicism is noted, and which partakes somewhat of the character of the holy coat, recently exhibited at Treves. Some sick people came to the tomb of Elizabeth and professed to be healed. As a result, thousands from all parts of Europe flocked to Marburg to touch the tomb of this newly-made saint. In 1235 her bones were taken up, blessed, and placed in a sarcophagus overlaid with gold, in the presence, so says the history, of more than 100,000 people. The crowd of pilgrims now increased and many wonderful cures are recorded as having been effected at the golden shrine of Elizabeth. The church was built, having been completed in the year 1425. Such, in brief, is the history of St. Elizabeth. We visited the church, saw the golden coffin thickly studded with precious stones and surmounted with a crown of gold, the gift of the Emperor Frederick II, but the miraculous healing power which, it is claimed, the shrine once possessed, has gone. No more do the pilgrims crowd the vestibule of the old church. Travelers, who come to Marburg, visit the shrine as a matter of curiosity. There can be no doubt but that many people, suffering from maladies, either supposed or real, received help by visiting these so-called holy places, and the problem of faith, or mind healing, occupied the attention of the early centuries as well as our own. The priests were shrewd enough to turn the delusion to their own advantage, and large sums of money were gathered into the coffers of the church from the crowds of pilgrims who came to the shrines. Those who are interested in the subject of mind and faith healing may study these incidents with advantage. Just now the holy coat of Treves is attracting great attention. The shop windows in all the Catholic cities were filled with photographs of the coat. We, who regard all this as a delusion and a fraud, feel some degree of surprise to find that many people here believe the whole story most implicitly, and if we express a doubt it is received with surprise. How easy the masses may be deluded and led astray.

The brethren and sisters of the above-named church met on Sunday, Oct. 18, 1891, to close their Sunday-school.

The large house was nearly filled with eager listeners, and the best of order prevailed while the brethren spoke ably and instructively to the little children.

Brethren John F. Kaylor, Wm. Bixler and S. J. Holl, were present and did the speaking. Many lasting impressions were made upon the young minds, and, if carried out through life, will make us better men and women.

The Sunday-school has always been a pleasant place to the writer. It is a nucleus around which should cluster the affections of old and young.

Much credit is due to Bro. Chas. F. Kingsley, as Superintendent of the school, for his regular attendance, and the able manner in which he has conducted the school. The number enrolled for the summer was seventy-two; average attendance fifty-two; number of male teachers, four; female teachers, three.

Let us, as teachers and pupils, not cease our Bible studies, but continue the good work through the winter, that when spring comes, and our school re-opens, we may be ready to resume our duties. S. S. Shoemaker.

Oct. 13, while Bro. Wm. Brady and wife were away from home, his house, from some unknown cause, caught fire and was burnt to the ground, consuming all their property, and also their four-months-old child. They are poor people, and can ill afford the loss of the property, to say nothing of the painful loss of their child. They are deserving of sympathy.

While this is sad, we also have our seasons of rejoicing. Oct. 12 Bro. H. C Early came among us and remained till Oct. 22. By his good sermons he built up those of us who have been trying to serve Christ, and caused others to acknowledge Christ as their Savior. Oct. 17 there were five baptized, and there remain two more applicants, to be baptized in the future.

The Brethren of the Black River congregation met in council June 27 and decided to hold their love-feast Oct. 16, beginning at 10 A. M.

On the day appointed a few of God's children,—about thirty in all,—met at the home of Bro. Geo. Wertemberger, to commemorate the death and suffering of our Lord, Jesus Christ. Brethren present from abroad were, Thurston Miller, Geo. Swihart, and A. A. Munson. At 10 A. M., Bro. Miller held forth the Word of Life from John 4: 29. Elder Swihart officiated at the feast. The order was good. Unfermented wine was used for the first time in this congregation.

Brethren Swihart and Munson left us Saturday morning. In the forenoon services of that day Bro. Miller preached from this cheering passage: "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Luke 12: 32. Bro. Miller continued the meetings until Tuesday evening, and left us with a promise to return sometime during the winter to hold a series of meetings. One precious soul forsook sin and was baptized. May she ever be found faithful to the cause of the Master!

All feel much encouraged to keep on with the good work. May God bless Bro. Miller in his labors for our Blessed Redeemer!

Oct. 12 was our regular appointment at East Riverside, where we had two meetings. This is a point which the missionary board has under its fostering care. Owing to the strong opposing forces, the simple Gospel of our Blessed Master is not readily accepted, yet there is a prospect that by and by the preached Word will accomplish some good in that desirable locality.

Oct. 17 was the love-feast at Covina. There was a good attendance of members. It took nearly all the space in the house to provide room for the members. There were nine ministers present. Many people could not get into the house. It was certainly an enjoyable meeting. In the morning before the feast one was baptized.

Oct. 19 was the regular quarterly council at Lordsburg. There was quite a large amount of business to attend to. The night session closed about ten o'clock. All the members seem to be in love and union. The time of the feast at Lordsburg has been set for Christmas Day. Regular services in the College are held twice every Sunday.

The Mission Board has arranged for services in Los Angeles City every Sunday. The work is under the care of Eld. P. S. Myers and Bro. Lehmer. J. S. Flory.

According to arrangements, previously made, elders Bowman and Witmore came to us Oct. 21, 1891, and on the day following we had a council-meeting, and were organized into a church. We had a choice for a deacon. Bro. J. Miller was chosen and installed into office. May the Lord bless him, that he may serve his office well! Bro. —— Lamar was chosen as our clerk, and Bro. —— Carver, collector of mission fund.

On the evening of Oct. 22 we had a love-feast. About a dozen members from the Prairie View church were present at the organization and Communion. Meetings were then continued over Sunday by Bro. Witmore. Two were added to the fold, which makes twenty members in all.

Bro. Witmore leaves for other fields of labor with our prayers in his behalf. We bespeak the united prayers of all, interested in the welfare of the church, for the little flock now organized at Florence. W. W. Holsopple.

From the Libertyville Church, Iowa.

The love-feast, recently held in the Libertyville church, has come and gone. It was one of the best meetings the church has ever had. Bro. Joseph Holder, of Deweyville, Ohio, came to us on the morning of Oct. 9th, and our meeting commenced at 4 P. M., the same day. Brethren Holder, Wolf and others, with the writer, were present. Bro. Holder remained with us two weeks, preaching the Word with success. Four made the good confession and came out on the Lord's side, and were baptized, while others were almost persuaded to come.

Baptism was administered on the last day of the meeting in Cedar Creek. A large gathering witnessed the administration of the ordinances. The church is in a prospering condition. Many new faces were at the meetings. Many, for the first time, saw trine immersion administered.

Sept. 12 Bro. George S. Rairigh, of Johnstown, Pa., commenced a series of meetings in the Greenland house, Somerset County, and continued until the 24th. Sept. 25 the meetings were moved to the Cross Roads house, Cambria County and continued till Oct. 1. Oct. 2 we commenced in the "Big" meeting-house, Somerset County, and continued till Oct. 11. During these four weeks there was the most favorable weather, with the exception of about two nights. Considering the busy season of the year, the attendance was excellent.

Bro. Rairigh preached thirty-two sermons besides what preaching he did at our Communion. As a visible result of these meetings, five dear souls (three brethren and two sisters) were received by baptism, the members much revived and encouraged, and there are others standing near the kingdom. Four are heads of families.

Our quarterly council, prior to our love-feast, was held Oct. 6. The deacons, on their visits, found the members in love and union, and but little business was presented by them. There was, however, quite an amount of business transacted, and, so far as we know, satisfactorily. A committee of seven brethren was appointed to secure additional grounds for the purpose of burying our dead. The committee met Oct. 12 and purchased about two acres adjoining the old cemetery, which will be laid out regularly, in lots and walks. We consider this the only satisfactory plan, because the unsystematic way of burying makes it impossible for the several members of a family to be laid together, and gives the cemetery an uninviting appearance.

Our love-feast took place Oct. 10. It was a beautiful day and a large number of members were present. A good many from adjoining congregations were present. In the afternoon a few outsiders were present, but at night the crowd was large. Brethren Rairigh, Levi Rodgers, of Bedford County, and S. P. Zimmerman, of the Quemahoning church, constituted the ministerial force. Though not as many as we had formerly, yet it was ample. We had good preaching, and in every respect a good feast. The Sunday following (Oct. 11) was the feast at Walnut Grove, which was attended by many of our members.

Oct. 17, Bro. Rairigh commenced another series of meetings in the Highland house, near the top of the Alleghany Mountains. The meetings lasted till Oct. 25. These meetings were held right in the mountains, where there were only about sixteen members living prior to the meeting. The meetings were well attended and the order and attention excellent.

During these meetings eight souls,—four brethren and four sisters,—were received by baptism, the members were very much revived and we believe that, had the meetings continued a week longer, more would have been made willing to go with us. Of the above, five are of one family,—a mother, two sons and two daughters. About two years ago one son joined the church and, by his Christian walk and conduct, got the rest to thinking, and now all are in the fold but the father and husband. May they live such lives that he may see the beauties in religion and also join in with the people of God. Much credit is due to the members of the Dunning's Creek congregation for their attendance and assistance in the meetings.

Though Bro. Rairigh is not strong physically, he is capable of doing much good in the pulpit. His whole soul is in the work. He lives out what he preaches. He does a great deal of visiting among members and outsiders and often in tears he instructs, admonishes, encourages, and, if necessary, reproves. He seems to have a special gift to make warm friends, and the esteem in which he is held, was plainly shown on the last Sunday by the number of members who met at the Mountain church from three Counties to hear his last sermon, driving home through the mountains, after the night meeting, as far as ten miles. It was a time that will not soon be forgotten. Our elder, Joseph Berkey, made a trip to the Brethren in Clarion County, Pa. Eld. Jacob Holsopple, in company with Eld. J. S. Holsinger, visited several congregations in Armstrong County, Pa. recently. Bro. Daniel Holsopple held a series of meetings in the Manor congregation, Indiana County, Pa.

The Lord willing, we expect Bro. D. H. Walker to commence a series of meetings in Scalp Level, Nov. 7, of which I will write later. So you see we are not idle. J. E. Blough.

Scalp Level, Pa., Oct. 28.

Notes from the Field.

Friday, Oct. 2, I started for the Cherokee church, Cherokee Co., where I arrived on Saturday, and began a series of meetings on Sunday. We had fair congregations, and good attention to the preaching of the Word.

The brethren and sisters of the Osage church manifested much concern in our meetings. Some of them were with us nearly every meeting, coming a distance of five and six miles and returning each evening.

Oct. 10 we met under a large tent, where Bro. George Barnhart, of Missouri, told us about the good things our Heavenly Father has in reserve for us. We had a blessed reunion in commemorating the suffering and death of our Loving Redeemer. Ministers from adjoining churches present, were brethren George Barnhart, —— Teeter, J. H. Neher, Eli Wolfe, —— Lichtenwalter, and the writer. We held three services on Lord's Day. The writer and Bro. Neher talked to the little folks in the morning. They seemed to enjoy it very much, and promised to be good children.

On Sunday evening we bade the dear brethren and sisters and kind friends farewell. Monday evening, Oct. 12, I met with the Father's children in Crawford County, where we had a very pleasant meeting. The young soldiers of the cross carried our minds to the heavenly fields of pleasure by their sweet songs. I desired much to remain with them during their series of meetings and love-feast, but, owing to previous promises I was unable to do so. Bro. Jacob Appleman consented to assist them in their meetings.

Oct. 13 I went to Independence, Montgomery Co., where wife and children were awaiting me. We continued meetings in the Brethren's meeting-house here until Sunday evening. We had good congregations, with the best of interest.

On Saturday evening, Oct. 17, we surrounded the tables of the Lord. About one hundred members communed, but I saw some of the dear ones were not at the tables. O, brethren and sisters, let us live so that we may always be worthy communicants, to partake of those life-giving and life-sustaining emblems! One came out on the Lord's side and expressed a desire to walk with the people of God. Brethren Aaron Heestand, C. H. Kingery, —— Ikenberry, and Allen Oberlin were present from adjoining congregations, and assisted in the ministerial work.

Monday, Oct. 19, I went to the Spring Creek church, Greenwood County, where I met with the saints in the evening for divine service. This congregation will be weakened considerably by a colony of about twenty-five members moving from here to Texas. There will be two ministers and one or two deacons among them. They expect to locate between Houston and Galveston.

Tuesday, Oct. 20, I went to Eldorado, Butler Co., and stopped over night with Bro. Jonas Deeter. I think this a good mission point. There are about ten or more members living here, without any preaching. I would advise the Mission Board of South-eastern Kansas to look after this point.

Wednesday, Oct. 21, I went to the Peabody church, Marion County, where I enjoyed myself much with the saints. We had an enjoyable Communion season, Oct. 24 and 25. Brethren D. Vaniman, George E. Studebaker, and F. H. Bradly were present, and told us many good things. Bro. George Strycker was advanced to the second degree of the ministry.

Monday, Oct. 26, I went to the Verdigris church, Lyon County, where I met with Bro. Pearsall from Ozawkie. I tried at night to encourage the church to be faithful. We visited with some of the members on Tuesday, who did not meet with us in worship. My extended mission was in a measure in the interest of the Aged Persons, Infirm, and Orphans' home, to be located in Reno County, Kansas. My associations with the Father's children were pleasant, and they encouraged me much in the noble enterprise by adding their mites to forward the good work. Christ says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Matt. 25: 40. I found the brethren and sisters, as a rule, sound in the faith, striving to build up our beloved Zion. The love of some has grown cold. May the good Lord enable them to realize that God has no good things for the luke-warm Christian. God bless the earnest labors and efforts of his children everywhere. I arrived home Oct. 29, and thank God for his Fatherly care over me!

Charles M. Yearout.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

Fort Seneca, Ohio.—The Brethren of the Green Spring church, Seneca Co., Ohio, held their love-feast Oct. 31. Bro. Simon Garber was chosen to the ministry. We had a very enjoyable meeting. —Mary Miller.

South English, Iowa.—One dear soul, a young man, was added to the English River congregation, Keokuk Co., Iowa, by baptism, at our regular meeting, Oct. 25. Bro. Wm. Hipes is now holding meetings in the church at North English with good attendance and interest.—Peter Brower, Nov. 1.

Alvo, Nebr.—Again we feel to thank God and take courage. Bro. S. Goughnour, of Des Moines, Iowa, came to the Weeping Water church, Nebr., Oct. 16, and remained ten days. He preached twelve sermons in all. There was a good interest at the meetings. Though there were no accessions, we hope that the church was benefited by the labors of our brother, for his preaching was thorough from first to last.—J. S. Ryan, Nov. 3.

Middle Fork Church, Ind.—The members of this church held a pleasant quarterly church-meeting to-day. One was received by letter, and two were reclaimed. May God bless them in their old age and finally save them in heaven! After the business, Eld. Lewis W. Teeter, of Hagerstown, Ind., preached an interesting discourse on church government. I trust we will all profit by our dear brother's good council. Bro. Teeter is at present holding a series of meetings in Edna Mills, Ind.—John E. Metzger, Nov. 3.

Pioneer, Ohio.—The Hickory Grove Sunday-school was organized on the last Sunday of April, 1891, and continued until the first Sunday of November, 1891. There was an average attendance of fifty. A collection during the summer resulted in raising $13 88 Everything seemed to pass off in love and union. The pupils seemed very anxious to learn from the Word of God. There were several that did not miss a single session or a verse. It was decided that we re-organize the first Sunday in April, 1892 May the Good Lord help us to bring up our children in the way they should go!—A. A. Throne, Nov. 3.

Broadway, Va.—A number of the members of the Linville Creek congregation enjoyed an interesting series of meetings at the Bethlehem meeting-house, conducted by Bro. H. C. Early. Bro. Early came to us Oct. 12, and remained with us until Oct. 21, preaching in all nine sermons. He also was with us at our Communion meeting Oct. 17 and 18, at the Linville Creek meeting-house, near Broadway. The meetings were generally well attended. The interest manifested was encouraging; but his stay among us was too short. The brethren and sisters were much encouraged, and sinners were made to think seriously. Five were baptized the day of the Communion meeting, and several more are to be baptized in the near future.—Fannie H. Zigler.

Sterling, Ill.—Yesterday our little band was made to rejoice as we gathered on the bank of Rock River, and two dear sisters were buried with Christ in baptism. One is an aged mother, and the other a sister of fifteen summers. Others are moved and we hope a bountiful harvest may be gathered. Bro. Dierdorff was with us over Sunday, and gave us cheering words.—P. R. Keltner, Nov. 9.

Adrian, Mo.—On Saturday, Oct. 31, the members of the Mound church met in quarterly council. Business was transacted in a pleasant manner. Elders Jacob Witmore and Fred Culp were with us. The church held a choice for a minister. The lot fell on Bro. Albert Smith. Bro. Wm. Miller was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. May God help them to prove faithful to the work before them!—Hanna Blocher.

Ozawkie, Kans.—The meetings, held here by Eld. D. B. Gibson, closed on the 23rd day after their commencement. During that time Bro. Gibson officiated twice in Communion, and twice in anointing the sick "with oil in the name of the Lord." He also preached three funerals and saw thirteen dear souls come over on the Lord's side. Others seemed to be even at the door, and are counting the cost. Our brother made many friends to himself and we hope and pray that the best results of his labors here, are those yet unseen.—C. C. Root, Nov. 3.

Mount Hope Church, Oklahoma Territory.—Elder John Wise, of Conway Springs, Sumner Co., Kans., came to us Oct 15, preaching for us each evening. Oct. 17, after the 2 P. M. meeting, one precious soul came out on the Lord's side. We hope he will make an exemplary soldier in fighting the battles of our Master. Rejoice with us, dear members! In the evening twenty-eight of God's children assembled for Communion services. Dear brethren and sisters, we ask an interest in your prayers in behalf of the Mt. Hope church. We have many trials and tribulations in a frontier life. Pray that we may be faithful!—A. J. Peebler, Nov 1.

Lick Creek Church, Ohio.—Our love-feast occurred Oct. 10. We had a very good feast. One was baptized on Saturday before the feast. A goodly number of ministers were present from adjoining churches; also brethren Gump and Swihart, from Indiana. The former officiated. On Sunday following, brethren Gump and Swihart addressed our Sunday-school, after which, Bro. Swihart preached a very acceptable sermon, followed by Bro. Gump. We had services again on Sunday evening by our home ministers. We expect to hold a series of meetings sometime in December. Bro. John Felthouse, of Indiana, is to preach for us at that time. We trust that sinners may be converted and saints encouraged.—M. J. Bosserman, Williams Center, Ohio, Oct. 29.

Girard, Ill.—The quarterly council of the Macoupin Creek church, held to-day, was one of pleasantness. Our elder, M. J. McClure, was not present, on account of the serious illness of his son, hence some unfinished business was deferred until another time. The treasury was replenished, and the missionary cause, as well as the Book and Tract Work received attention. Bro. J. W. Leer was appointed solicitor for the above funds, and a committee was also appointed to receive calls for preaching in our home territory, and have the same attended to. I hope much good may thus be done. All business that came before the meeting was satisfactorily disposed of. After the regular order of business, the visiting elders and other ministers gave us some soul-cheering admonitions relative to the order in dress, etc.—Michael Flory, Nov. 6.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—Bro. J. B. Light recently came to the Fairview church and commenced a series of meetings which he continued until the time of our feast. Only brethren Light and S. B. Thomas were present on that occasion. At our Communion only thirty-four members were present, ten of whom were from the Roann and Green Springs congregations.—Alverty Buxton, Nov. 2.

Pipe Creek, Md.—I was at the above place over last Sunday, attending the dedication of their large, new meeting-house. The weather and roads were all that could be desired, and a very large meeting it was too. I hope that the enjoyment of the occasion was mutual. I am just ready to go to Talbot County, Md., to attend to some church work there. Our love-feast in Elizabethtown, Pa., will occur Nov. 10 and 11.—S. R. Zug, Mastersonville, Pa., Nov. 5.

Peabody, Kans.—Our love-feast was an enjoyable one, in the service of the Master. Two who had wandered away made application to be received back into the church. Ministers present were brethren Charles M. Yearout, D. Vaniman, Geo. L. Studebaker, F. H. Bradly, and Jacob B. Shirk. Bro. D. Vaniman officiated. Bro. George Stryker was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. May he be faithful to his calling! Quite a number were present from a distance.—Katie Yost, Oct. 30.

Warsaw, Ind.—Owing to the disorganized state of the Washington congregation, it was found necessary to pay each member a special visit, and find out how many were willing to labor with the church and maintain the doctrine and general order of the Brethren. A council was appointed for Oct. 30, at which time a final report was to be made. The result was that five desired to have more time and a few would not comply with the request, but about one hundred and forty were willing to still labor in the cause of their Master. Although we have had much encouragement, we felt to rejoice and take new courage when we saw the spirit manifested at the council.—N. B. Heeter.

Chaplin, Kans.—We closed another series of meetings last Sunday night. Bro. Frantz, of Fredonia, did the preaching. With good roads and pleasant weather the attendance was excellent. Four came forward and were baptized last Sunday. Our dear old brother, G. W. Studebaker, planted the good seed, Bro. Charles Yearout came and watered it, and God saw fit to give the increase through Bro. J. Frantz. Others here are just outside the fold of Christ. Right here we would say that any speakers, wishing to do good, will find an opening at this place. We will arange to hold a series of meetings at any time if notified. We begin a social meeting to-night at the home of Bro. Henry Stoffers. May God help each one of us to do our duty!—John A. Studebaker, Oct. 26.

Farnhamville Church, Iowa.—Oct. 10 Bro. E. B. Hoff, of Waterloo, Iowa, came to us and preached the Word with power. Nine precious souls resolved to walk in newness of life, and we trust they may prove faithful. Others seemed very near. This church was organized about eleven months ago, with fifteen members, and placed in charge of Eld. J. W. Trostle. We feel thankful to the Mission Board for the good work they have done here and hope they will continue to help. Ministering brethren, traveling via the Northwestern and Sioux City Branch, are kindly invited to stop and give us some meetings. Any minister, desiring to change his location, should move among us. We have a good country and good prospects of building up a church, if we have the needed help.—A. White.

Wade, Adams Co., Kans.—The feast at Ottawa was attended by about 127 communicants. Some were present that could not be accommodated. Adjoining churches were well represented. This is as it should be. Ministers present were, brethren Jesse Studebaker, James Hilkey, I. H. Crist, and others, who faithfully dealt out the Word to the people. The Brethren of Wade's Branch church purpose building a meeting-house. The location has been decided upon, foundation dug, lumber on the ground and stone quarried for foundation. We want to put up the house this fall yet, as we are laboring under a great disadvantage for want of a house.—George Myers, Oct. 29.

Lacon, Ill.—Our love-feast in the Pigeon Creek church, Ill., Oct. 24, was an excellent meeting. Brethren Daniel Dierdorff, of Franklin Grove, and G. W. Gish, of Woodford County, were with us, and fed us richly on Gospel truths. I have just read Bro. Geo. L. Studebaker's article on "Envy." I say, Amen. May the Lord deliver us from all envious feelings and help us to closely adhere to Paul's instructions (Philpp. 2: 3), "Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem others better than themselves." I expect, in a few days, to start for Webber, Jewell Co., Kansas, to labor with the Brethren there.—C. S. Holsinger.

Shady Grove, Pa.—Our Communion meeting was held at the Hade church in the Falling Spring congregation, Oct. 15. The weather being exceedingly fair, we had a good attendance, with good order. Ministers from adjoining congregations came to our help. Bro. J. F. Oller, of the Antietam church, officiated. One good sister made the good confession, and two more just a few days before the meeting. Thus, while the good old ship is passing, there are still some willing to step aboard, to take passage to the other shore. We intend to hold a series of meetings in the near future, if the Lord will, to be conducted by Bro. S. R. Zug, of Mastersonville, Lancaster Co., Pa.—Wm. C. Koontz, Oct. 23.

Grater's Ford, Pa.—The members of the Mingo church held their love-feast in one of its churchhouses Oct. 13. A goodly number of ministering brethren were present, and we truly had a feast of joy. The day following Bro. Jesse Zeigler was advanced to the second degree. He has been in the ministry a little more than a year. We ask the Lord to sustain and help him in his appointment. Oct. 17 Bro. Silas Hoover commenced a series of meetings which he continued for about eight days. Bro. Hoover preached with much earnestness, persuading men to forsake their evil ways. Two precious souls were made willing to forsake sin and enter the "fold." Many more were made to consider, and we hope that the good seed sown may bring forth good fruit. May God bless our brother as he enters other fields of labor.—Emma Kulp, Oct. 30.

Buck Creek Church, Ind.—According to previous arrangements, Bro. I. B. Trout, of New Carlisle, Ohio, came to us Oct. 3, and commenced a series of meetings which he continued until the evening of Oct. 18. Although there were no accessions to the church, yet we feel that much good was done. During the time he was with us he preached nineteen sermons, and officiated at the love-feast, which was held Oct. 16. Having appointed a children's meeting for the morning after the love-feast, he talked to them. Oct. 5 he preached the funeral of my little niece, Maud Leffingwell, whom God saw best to transplant from this world of sin and darkness to a land of light and eternal bliss. Deceased was the daughter of Francis and Lucinda Leffingwell, and passed away at the age of one year and two months.—D. E. Rhodes, Rogersville, Ind.

Spring Run Church, Pa.—Our Sunday-school closed for the summer, but we have arranged to continue till Christmas at least. May the plant flourish and become an evergreen.—Emma Bollinger, McVeytown, Mifflin Co., Pa.

Gratis, Ohio.—The Ministerial Meeting for Southern Ohio will be held with the Painter Creek church, Darke Co., Ohio, on the J. B. & W. R. R. For further particulars inquiry can be made of Jesse Stutsman, Pittsburg, Ohio.—A. G. Crosswhite, Oct. 30.

Laforge Church, Mo.—Bro. C. S. Holsinger, of Lacon, Ill., came to us Oct. 3, and preached eleven sermons, with good attendance, and the best of order. We all feel encouraged, as a church, by his admonition. There were no additions to the church, but we feel sure that some were almost persuaded. We held our love-feast Oct. 10. It was one long to be remembered.—W. L. Burgess, Oct. 15.

Shoal Creek Church, Mo.—Our love-feast occurred Oct. 22. To judge from the expressions of those present, it was truly a feast of love. We were much encouraged to see so many from adjoining churches. Ministering brethren from abroad were G. Barnhart, C. Holdeman, D. W. Teeter and J. P. Harris. Bro. Holdeman officiated. Brethren J. Harris and L. Harader were advanced to the second degree of the ministry. One wanderer returned to the fold during the meeting. Let the Lord be praised!—Matilda Holderread, Rocky Comfort, Mo., Oct. 28.

Buchanan, Mich.—Our Communion meeting was held Oct. 24. The weather was all that could be desired, and the attendance was all that could be expected. The different churches around us were well represented. The house was over-crowded with spectators, but the attention and order were commendable. The ministers present were brethren Thurston Miller, E. J. Shreve, Daniel Whitmer, Isaac Early, William Borough, Hiram W. Kreighbaum, Joseph Culp, John Stretch and James Miller. We had a good meeting, and we hope much good may result from it.—D. P. Miller, Nov. 1.

Portage Church, Ind.—The love-feast at this place, held Oct. 17, will long be remembered by the love and zeal manifested by all. There were one hundred communicants. Our large church-house was filled with friends and neighbors, and the best of order prevailed. Ministers present from other congregations were brethren Amos Peters, John Stretch, Daniel Whitmer, H. W. Krieghbaum and and Isaac Early. Bro. Silas Ebersole officiated. Many good admonitions were given. The examination services were impressive and well calculated to prepare our hearts for the solemn occasion. On Sunday we had services at 10 o'clock. —Noah Early, South Bend, Ind., Oct. 31.

Sandy Church, Ohio.—Oct. 15 the brethren and sisters of this church met for Communion services Eld. E. Loomis officiated, and brethren Boyer, Caylor, Stroup, Shively, Hoover and Stuckey assisted. This meeting was held in the Reading house of worship. About 160 members communed. It was truly a feast of love. The church was filled with spectators who behaved in an orderly and interested manner. There were some who should have availed themselves of the benefits of this meeting, but did not We fail to see the gain realized by staying away, when the Scriptures command us to not "forget assembling ourselves together as the manner of some is." Brethren and sisters, think of these things and be in your places as the Lord directs, and you will be blessed far above the gain of earthly things. Watch and pray, lest you enter into temptation!—H. P. Brinkworth, Oct. 31.

Pleasant View Church, Kans.—Oct. 10 the members of this church met in council. All business was disposed of in a Christian spirit. We decided to commence a series of meetings Dec. 10, and would like to have some faithful brother to do the preaching.—Sylvester Workman, Oct. 27.

Carleton, Nebr.—Bro. John E. Young, of Beatrice, came here and preached two weeks for us. As a result, seven were baptized, one restored, and the church much encouraged on the way Zionward. Our feast was also held during that time. Bro. C. H. Brown, of Kansas, was present and officiated. We had an enjoyable feast. God bless the brethren that labored so faithfully for us! The Bethel church now has quite a number of young members.—Levi Heffert, Oct. 26.

Sidney, Ind.—The Lord, with his Holy Spirit, is still striving with erring ones. Two weeks ago three came out at our regular meeting, and were added to the people of God. Yesterday three more made the good confession and were not willing to wait, but sent for the ministering brethren and were baptized late in the evening, in the presence of a few members. All were heads of families. May God help them to so live that they may be a glory to God and ornaments to the church.—E. Miller, Nov. 1.

Oak Grove, Ohio.—The love-feast in this church was a pleasant one. Our ministerial help was all that we could desire. We have had good attention during the meeting. Next day the brethren made interesting addresses to the Sunday-school. Then we had preaching at 10 A. M. We thank the brethren and sisters from adjoining congregations for their presence and assistance. Bro. J. W. and sister Irene Chambers, and family, have moved from here to Mt. Morris, Ill. We wish them success.—Solomon Schubert, Alvada, Ohio.

Woodberry, Md.—The Brethren of this place held their love-feast Oct. 24. Many dear brethren and sisters from a distance mingled with us, and were pleasantly and profitably entertained by brethren Greenbury Ecker and W. T. Miller (both of this State), after which we all surrounded the Lord's Table. Of all the love-feasts I ever attended this was the most impressive. The dear friends, who came out to witness the administration of the ordinances, manifested such great interest and respect for the house of God and his people, that we cannot refrain from commending them. May God bless those who thus honored us with their presence!—John S. Geiser.

An Impostor.—Oct. 9, a young man came to the home of the writer, claiming to be a member of our church. His name he gave as Geo. Shively, son of Joel Shively, of Osceola, Ind. He claimed to be robbed of all the money and extra clothes that he had, while at the depot at Joplin, Mo., and said that he was sick and not able to work, and wanted enough money to take him to his home. He said he would return the money just as soon as he got home. As an evidence of his truthfulness he presented a letter of recommendation (not a letter of membership, as he said that was stolen with his clothes) with the following names signed to it: Joel Shively, Osceola, Ind.; D. Shively, New Paris, Ind; P. Stuckman, D. Wysong, and John Anglemyer, of Nappanee, Ind. After questioning him about ministers, churches, etc., and concluding that he was all right, one of our brethren gave him the amount required. After waiting about ten days for the return of the money, the writer wrote to John Anglemyer and Joel Shively about the man. They answered that they did not sign a letter of recommendation and that the man was an impostor. I write the above by order of the brethren for the benefit of others, should he come to them.—A. M. Sharp, Gardner, Kans., Oct. 30.

Burr Oak, Kans.—The Burr Oak love-feast was a very enjoyable one, and will be long remembered. The weather was delightful and the church-house filled to its utmost capacity. Good order prevailed, and good attention was given to the preached Word. Eight ministers were present, and about sixty members communed.—Joel H. Kinzie, Oct. 28.

North Morrill Church, Kans.—Recently the above church decided to hold a series of meetings, and called Bro. P. R. Wrightsman to their assistance. Our brother, while among us, wielded the Sword in a masterly manner, making deep impressions in the hearts of all his hearers, and leaving them purer and better. During the meetings eight souls were gathered into the fold by baptism, and one restored, making nine in all. The church was much strengthened, and God's name glorified. Sometime previous three more were gathered in, making twelve additions to the church lately. To God be all the praise!—J. S. Mohler.

Union Ridge, Maryland.—We are glad to report that the brethren of the Pipe Creek congregation have completed their new house of worship, and yesterday (Nov. 1) Bro. S. R. Zug, of Mastersonville, Pa., preached the dedicatory sermon, followed by Eld. Jacob F. Oller, of Waynesborough, Pa. Quite a number of ministers from adjoining congregations were present. It has been estimated that fifteen hundred people were present. Bro. Zug founded his remarks upon Gen. 28: 17. The subject was presented in a very practical and instructive manner. The brethren are making an effort to have the meeting protracted. If successful, we shall report later.—W. M. Lyon, Nov. 2.

Edgemont, Md.—Two weeks ago on Saturday and Sunday was held our love-feast at Welty's meeting-house. There was an exceedingly large attendance, so that a number of the communicants stood, and tables were placed in the kitchen. Bro. D. F. Stouffer officiated, and several other ministers were with us. Last Sunday one was added to the church by baptism. A few weeks ago we were called up into the mountain to the bedside of a very sick woman. We had prayer with her and her family. The burden of her mind was this: "Some say another way will do, but I want to be baptized as Jesus was." Yesterday her request was granted. And thus the Spirit continues to work among us.—W. B. Stover, Nov. 2.

The Gospel Messenger

Is the recognized organ of the German Baptist or Brethren's church, and advocates the form of doctrine taught in the New Testament and pleads for a return to apostolic and primitive Christianity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and maintains that Faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration of the heart and mind, baptism by Trine Immersion for remission of sins unto the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, are the means of adoption into the household of God, the church militant.

It also maintains that Feet-washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and as universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians, is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, as taught in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ.

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, James 5: 14, is binding upon all Christians.

It also advocates the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, thus giving to the Lord for the spread of the Gospel and for the conversion of sinners.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

She will be greatly missed in the church and neighborhood, as she was an earnest and faithful worker in the Master's cause, and always willing to administer to the wants of the needy.

Although she had been complaining for a short time, yet death came unexpectedly, which renders the home lonely and desolate, but we hope that the bereft brother and dear children can console themselves with the thought that she, whom they loved, is now at home with Christ which is far better.

Her remains were interred in the Locust Grove cemetery in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. Services by Bro. D. Bonsack, assisted by brethren S. H. Utz, S. Stoner and A. Rinehart. Text, Rev. 14: 13 M. E. ECKER.

She was one of a family of thirteen, all of whom are now dead. She was married Feb. 22, 1828, and shortly afterwards they moved to Cumberland County where they lived for over fifty years. She was the mother of six children, thirty-six grand-children and twenty-five great-grandchildren. She was a faithful member of the church for over fifty years, and was highly respected by all who knew her. Interment at Miller's church. Services by brethren D. Landis, S. S. Iva's seat in Sunday-school and church was never vacant if it was possible for her to be there. Her disease was inflammation of the stomach and typhoid fever. During her sickness she became concerned about her soul's salvation and several times requested to be baptized, but her physician told her that she was too weak. Thus her strong desire was not gratified. Funeral services conducted at the Freeburg house, Oct. 28, by Bro. Aaron Shively, assisted by the writer.
S. B. STUCKEY.

His home was the resting-place for many brethren. The funeral services were largely attended. Eight of the ten children are yet living and seven of them were present at the funeral.

Funeral services by the writer, assisted by Bro. Joseph Amick. Text, 2 Cor. 5: 7.
JOS. C. LAHMAN.

GROSSNICKLE. In the North Manchester church, Wabash Co., Ind., Oct. 29, 1891, of paralysis, Bro. George Grossnickle, aged 79 years, 11 months and 13 days.

Bro. George was confined to his chair for about three years from the time of the first stroke. Without a murmur he awaited the time when he might go to his long home. He came to the church while young and was elected to the deacon's office when twenty years of age. Afterwards he was elected to the ministry and also the eldership. He leaves eight children, most of whom are in the church, forty-five grandchildren and forty-five great-grandchildren. Funeral services by Bro. R. H. Miller from 2 Tim. 4: 7, 8, assisted by the home brethren. * * *

No One Is Too Old To Learn!

WERE the readers of the MESSENGER, who have children to educate away from home, to spend a day or two visiting Mt Morris College, they would send them here to school. The following are a few of the reasons for the above assertion: The attendance is such as to afford the most advantageous classification of the students. The facilities for learning are therefore most excellent. The instructors take pleasure in assisting the students. The adage, "No one is too old to learn," is practically demonstrated here. No matter how old one is, or how little he knows, he finds classes here to suit. It is decidedly

LIFE AND SERMONS

—: OF :—

ELD. JAMES QUINTER.

THIS is a neatly-printed and well-bound volume of 426 pages, containing a well-written biographical sketch of Eld. James Quinter and forty of his sermons.

The biographical part will be found quite interesting, instructive and impressive. No one can read an account of Bro. Quinter's life without feeling deeply and favorably impressed. The work shows how a poor orphan boy, by hard work, and faithfulness to his religious convictions, rose step by step, until he reached a field of usefulness and honor as broad as the Nation itself. Though dead, his good deeds and the impressive examples in piety, learning and simplicity will follow him for generations to come.

The Sermon Department contains many of his choice sermons, which will prove exceedingly interesting and profitable reading to all, and especially to our ministers and isolated members. We feel that this book will fill a long-felt want in our Brotherhood. Price, post-paid, $1.25.

TO TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND READERS.

As this issue of the MESSENGER will fall into the hands of thousands who know little or nothing of the people in whose behalf it is published, we deem it advisable to make a few remarks that may be of interest to them. All of the matter has been prepared with some care, and selected on account of its fitness for general instruction.

While we, as a people, make no pretensions to perfection, we nevertheless do claim that, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christianity, we can offer to the world a system of religious teaching that is deserving of more than ordinary consideration. A few of these claims will now engage our attention.

Concerning the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, we have no reason whatever, to doubt in the least the divine authority of the Bible. To us it is a revelation from heaven, containing not only men's religious duties, plainly stated, but also a careful narrative of God's dealings with the world from the earliest history of man, to the present period. Our convictions prompt us to interpret its teachings literally, as far as practicable, believing that the most obvious meaning of the written word is the meaning the Creator intended us to entertain. It therefore becomes our duty to study the Word and obey its requirements to the full extent of our ability.

While we should, and also do, greatly respect those whose convictions do not prompt them to obey the Scriptures so literally as we teach, we nevertheless have no valid reason whatever for excusing either ourselves or any one else, for neglecting to obey from the heart, that form of doctrine once delivered unto the saints. Amid the indifferences existing among other denominations concerning these things, fidelity to Jesus, as our supreme Teacher, seems to prompt us to still greater efforts in maintaining and earnestly teaching, that which the Master enjoined upon his intimate disciples, and they in turn transmitted to us.

The necessity of faith, repentance and baptism, in order to pardon, is plainly set forth in one of the articles in this issue; and whatever may be said in support of faith alone, it must be admitted, on all hands, that it is doubtful ground. He who unites works with his faith, or, in other words, shows his faith by his works, occupies a position that is beyond question. It is a position that leaves all doubts far in the rear. On this point we feel that we occupy ground that may be recommended to the entire world in all good conscience.

Our manner of administering the sacred rite of baptism happens not to be so popular in America as the modes in general use, but it has the unparallelled advantage of being almost universally regarded as valid baptism, by nearly, if not quite all, the leading Christian denominations of the world. Whatever may be said in support of other modes, not one of them presumes to compete with trine immersion in this respect. It seems remarkable, as well as significant, that all leading Christian denominations, in every age and clime, should, of their own accord, unite in regarding trine immersion as valid Christian baptism. The simple fact that this mode is the only one that can, with any degree of propriety, lay claim to such a universal regard, is of itself an argument in support of its divine origin, more powerful than the united testimonies of lexicographers and historians. This is the baptism we practice and commend to the nation with a clear conscience towards God and man.

Whatever may be said concerning feet-washing, as a religious rite, it must be admitted by all thinking persons, that we are at least on the safe side of that question. While we see and experience in it spiritual blessings which we could not otherwise possibly enjoy, there is nothing whatever in the proper observance of the ceremony, which tends to detract in the smallest degree, from the highest order of culture and Christian refinement, to which it is possible for the most intellectual and sensitive Christian to attain.

The simple fact that Jesus himself did wash his disciples' feet in a regular religious assembly, in connection with a sacred meal, where the Communion was solemnly observed in direct association with prayer and religious instruction, clearly indicates that the Master intended its perpetuity in connection with similar solemnity and religious exercises. Any divergence from this line of conduct most assuredly betrays a lack of Christian fidelity. In presenting our plea to the world, we feel impressed with the thought that we are commending that which is unquestionably safe. Since Jesus did say to his disciples, "Ye ought to wash one another's feet" it certainly follows that those who do so occupy ground that is infallibly safe.

As much may also be said in defense of our plea for plain dressing, abstaining from worldly amusements, and opposing war and secret societies of every grade and order. Plain Christian attire, such as becometh people professing godliness, is admired by thinking people on every hand, while the gaudy fashions of the world, at best, are of doubtful propriety even in the estimation of many good-meaning, worldly people.

War and retaliation we have opposed both in times of peace, and also in times of war. They are absolutely inconsistent with the principles of peace, so clearly set forth in the New Testament Scriptures. By degrees these peace principles are becoming more popular in the leading denominations, but not one of them, so far as we know, has taken a positive stand against the unchristian principles of war. Even worldly men, who make little pretension to be influenced by Christianity, are beginning to clearly understand that wars are unworthy the endorsement of any civilized or Christian people, and should, therefore, be discouraged on every hand.

Secret societies are sapping the very life out of many of the churches in various parts of the land. The lodges are well patronized and amply supported, while churches are struggling for a mere existence. From the very earliest period of our history, the Brethren have taken a decided stand against these societies, and we are glad to be able to report that we are in no measure annoyed by them.

With such principles as are set forth in the MESSENGER this week, and with the New Testament as our rule of faith and practice, we certainly feel that we can go before the world with a plea for primitive Christianity, deserving the candid consideration of all those who are seeking for the old paths.

J. H. M.

ON asking a brother the other morning how he was feeling, he replied: "Well, I don't feel that I have much to grumble about." We suppose that this answer we might apply to all of us, and yet how we do grumble! Not because we have, or could give any just cause for grumbling, but to us it has become a habit, and a very bad one too. Not only for ourselves, but for all who are about us, or with whom we associate. We are glad that there are some who are not grumblers, and they are as spots of sunshine in a cloudy day, giving light and warmth to everything with which they come in contact.

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

MISSIONARY HYMN.

TUNE, LENOX.

Oh thou slumb'ring church!
Awake; there's danger near,
The hosts of sin on earth,
Around the camp appear.
Gird on the armor, forward go,
To fight God's battles here below.

Oh slum'bring ministry!
Who live in wealth and ease,
While souls are perishing,
With sins' impure disease.
Awake! Awake! and onward go,
To meet and fight your dang'rous foe.

The nations now await,
The coming of the Lord,
To open wide their gates
For Jesus and his Word.
With rapid wings o'er oceans go,
With Bread of Life, for all below.

Ye saints of God arise,
Earth's wickedness to brave,
With God's whole armor fight,
A guilty world to save.
With heaven's armor onward go,
Till Christ has conquered every foe.

The battle's raging sore,
On Satan's chosen ground,
Keeps raging on still more,
To earth's remotest bound.
With heaven's banner march, below,
Till Christ has conquered every foe.

Dumb idols, quick assail
With truth, and light, and love,
Until the right prevail,
With power from above.
The Gospel trumpet loudly blow
That all may hear, on earth below.

The demon, "Drink," destroy,
All o'er this glorious land,
Your noblest powers employ,
To live a temperance band.
In heaven's light still onward go,
Till Christ has conquered every foe.

At pride and fashion aim,
The monster fiend to slay,
His captive slaves reclaim
From darkness, unto day.
And humbly may we onward go,
And Christ to conquer every foe.

And when the battle's o'er,
And truth the vict'ry's won,
With no opposing power,
Beneath the radiant sun.
Then praise to God, and Christ our King,
From every tongue, through heaven will ring.

IS THE BIBLE INSPIRED?

BY A. W. VANIMAN.

THE Bible is inspired or it is not. It is dictated by God himself or it is not. There is no middle ground that can be occupied. If it is God's Book, it is perfect. If not God's Book, it must be of human origin, and subject to the same imperfections as all other of man's work. A friend of mine said to me some time ago that he looked upon the Bible as being written by men who simply voiced the spirit of their times. If this were true we would find therein contained the same errors and superstitions that were in vogue during those times. We would find the Bible saying that there were about three thousand stars instead of saying they are innumerable. Gen. 15: 5. We would find that the earth rests upon the back of a tortoise, or elephants, or a serpent, instead of "hanging upon nothing." Job 26: 7.

It has been only a few years since scientists have learned that the first chapter of Genesis is the foundation of geology. Every little while some scientist makes a supposed discovery that is to overturn the Bible, but it is like overturning a cube,—it is always the same. Not many years ago the French Institute set out eighty points wherein the Bible did not agree with science, yet the Bible remains intact, and those theories have exploded. It is a fact that so-called science and the Bible do not always agree, but time always proves that science may be wrong, but the Bible NEVER. In the case of Joshua and the sun standing still, most scientists have shown remarkable stupidity in the manner of treating the subject. That miracle could be performed without in the least affecting any other planet. In some future number we may explain how. It must not be considered however, that no scientists believe the Bible; a great many of the most noted scientists the world has ever known were firm believers in the Bible.

It is a very hard matter to impose upon a people or nation for any great length of time. It would be impossible for any man or set of men to write a book now and cause the people of the United States to believe them inspired without extraordinary proof, and yet the books of the Bible were considered inspired at the times when they were written, and by those who had the best opportunity to know the facts and the character of the men by whom the books were written.

Another fact worthy of notice is that from the time the Bible was written until the present it has been generally accepted as being the Word of God. There has never been a time when it could be said there was a generation of infidels.

The present acceptance of the Bible is a strong proof of its inspiration. There has never been a more enlightened age than the present. Every avenue of human knowledge is searched. Every claim is sifted thoroughly. Nothing is believed because it is old or some one else believes or had believed it. The Mormon Bible and the Koran, claiming inspiration, have been tested and found wanting. With the present facilities for traveling in Bible Lands, studying people, customs, places and ruins, if the Bible were not true it could not stand one year.

Bro. D. L. Miller told me that he has in his possession seventy-five works on Palestine, thus showing the intense interest in Bible Lands. Yet every such book corroborates the Bible. There has never been a time in the world's history when a false Bible would have so small a chance to hold the confidence of the world, and yet there has never before been a time when so many people believed the Bible, and manifested such an interest in it. The Bible has already been translated into several hundred different languages and dialects. The American Bible Society is making them by the shipload. When the Revised Testament was first given to the public it is said two million copies were sold in one week, in America alone. Even some of the daily papers printed the entire work in their regular issues, and sent them broadcast over the land.

Looking at the Bible from another standpoint, we find such a great variety in it that it makes it a work of the greatest interest. We find history, poetry, genealogy, prophecy, scientific references, rules of life and business. It is written by at least thirty different persons in sixty-six different books, and during sixteen hundred years. It was written partly in Hebrew and partly in Greek, each writer having a style of his own, showing that he is not a copyist. It would be impossible to find sixty-six other books on any subject, covering not more than 100 years, to say nothing of 1,600, where there would be the harmony there is in the Bible. Take for example historians of our late war. Although many eye-witnesses are still living, writers will squarely contradict one another, and we find a great disagreement. These contradictions we do not find in the Bible.

Take again the geography of the Bible. Over 2,000 places are named in a world 2,000 miles in extent, in Europe, Asia and Africa,—many places of which the sites were, for a time,—lost, and infidels used to complain that the Bible was wrong, and yet not one place is wrongly located, showing that the writers must have been on the ground, and acquainted with the places of which they wrote. Places are described during different stages of their existence, which no one man could have lived to see.

The existing institutions of the Bible cannot be accounted for on any other ground than that the Bible description of their establishment is true. The Passover, the Sabbath, the many feasts and ceremonies would be as unexplainable as the Fourth of July without there having been a Declaration of Independence.

There is no proof more conclusive and tangible than the prophecies. No man can minutely predict future events, yet the Bible contains many such predictions, describing minutely what should happen to nations, places and persons. Who could have foretold all the minutiæ of Christ's death, and yet they were written hundreds of years before, at different times, by different writers.

The Jews to-day are living witnesses of the fulfillment of prophecy,—a distinct people, scattered among all nations, persecuted, a hissing, a by-word, a reproach. With so many proofs of the Bible, a few only of which have been here touched upon, the only wonder is that an intelligent person can disbelieve it.

RECAPITULATION.

1. The Bible contains no errors and superstitions like other ancient writings.

2. When the Bible touches upon scientific subjects, it proves to be absolutely reliable.

3. The books of the Bible were considered inspired by the people who lived at or near the time of their writing.

4. The Bible has been accepted by the majority of people who knew anything about it, from the time of writing to the present.

5. In this age of research and intelligence, it is the foremost book every-where, as far as known.

6. There is perfect harmony among the thirty writers, although living many years apart.

7. Of over 2,000 places named not one is wrongly located.

8. The existing institutions, can only be accounted for in the way the Bible says they were established.

9. Hundreds of prophecies have been fulfilled, hundreds of years after they were written, some are now being fulfilled, and some are yet to be fulfilled.

Truly the Bible is God's book!

McPherson, Kans.

THE CONDITIONS OF PARDON.

BY DANIEL VANIMAN.

1. FAITH.—"For without faith it is impossible to please him, for he that cometh to God must believe that he is and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Heb. 11: 6. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark 16: 15.

2. REPENTANCE.—"Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." Luke 13: 3. After the Pentecostians believed on Christ and inquired what to do, they were told to "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Acts 2: 38.

Here repentance and baptism are alike declared to be for the remission of sins, are equally made conditions of pardon. Repentance implies a change of life. No matter how much a man believes, unless he forsakes the life of disobedience and sin, and lives a life of obedience to the requirements of the Gospel, he cannot be saved, but will be forever lost. Faith changes the heart; prepares or brings the sinner to a change of life. Repentance implies a change of life and prepares the sinner for a change of state or induction into the church or family of God.

3. Immersion into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, completes the conditions of pardon, brings him into Christ, into the church, and to the remission of sins. The Pentecostians who already believed were told to "repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins," etc. After Saul of Tarsus believed and became penitent, he was told to "arise and be baptized and wash away his sins." He who believes, repents, and is immersed, as God commanded, has complied with the conditions of pardon; has passed from death unto life, from the power of Satan unto God, having been begotten by the Word of Truth. He is born again,—born or baptized into the family of God. God has pardoned him, and he is now a child of God and has begun a new life. This new life is from God. The Word is the seed from which it sprung. "The words that I speak unto you they are spirit and they are life." 1 John 6: 63. God has placed in every perfect grain of wheat or corn a little germ, having life in it, which life is from God, and when this perfect grain finds a congenial soil and is placed in reach of the laws that govern growth, God makes it grow; man cannot. So when the spiritual seed, the Word, finds a congenial soil, a good and honest heart, the Lord makes it grow. The result of this is a new creature, begotten in the soul, manifesting life. If this new life does not exist in the soul before baptism, baptism will not make it. Baptism into the kingdom of grace is only a change of state, corresponding to birth in the animal kingdom. Where there is no life before birth, there can be none after it. Birth makes nothing alive. The individual who is not alive to God and duty before baptism, will not be alive afterwards. Only when dead to sin and alive to God is he a proper subject for baptism.

In the commission the Lord connects faith and immersion together in the same sentence, and in order to the same end. Two things are mentioned for the individual to do, and the promise is he shall be saved. The Divine Spirit, in Acts 2: 38, connected repentance and immersion together, and both are declared to be for the same end,—for the remission of sins. Peter in Acts 3: 19, said, "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out." That which is included in the words, "Repent ye therefore, and be converted," goes before the blotting out of sins and is in view of it,—in order to it. Blotting out sins is the same as pardon or remission of sins. It is clear that the persons to whom this language was addressed already believed, therefore, as they already believed they were required to repent and be converted in order to complete the process of blotting out their sins. This included all that comes after faith in the process of turning to God, or, which is the same, to the remission of sins. From the above it is clear that sins are not forgiven as soon as one believes; nor when he believes and repents, but when he believes, repents, and is converted, or turned to God. Any one can see the blotting out was not by faith alone, nor by repentance alone, nor by faith and repentance together, but by being converted or turned, which completed the process. The faith prepared them in heart to turn, or really turned them in heart. The repentance prepared them in life to turn, or really turned them in life,—nothing remained now to be done but the visible act in which a man turns to God, or gives himself to God.

This visible act in which a man gives himself to God, vows allegiance to him, is immersion into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. This is the closing act, the conclusion of the process. It is the birth of the child, which brings him into the heavenly family, into the new relation, into the kingdom of Christ.

From this time forward he is held responsible, as one of the body, as a child of the family, a citizen of the kingdom. The past life is now left out of view, and if his life from now on is characterized by faithfulness, all is well, so far as life and character are concerned. What an infinite mercy it is that upon these simple conditions God will pardon the most hardened sinner, and let him begin life over again. When he was born into the world he began life in this world, but soon fell into many errors. But God, in his great mercy, permits him to be born again,—this time into the family of God's dear children and try life over again as though he had never been a sinner. Surely God is merciful!

FEET-WASHING.

BY S. Z. SHARP.

Its History.—As early as the days of Abraham, feet-washing was practiced in oriental countries as a domestic habit which the warm climate and mode of travel made desirable. Gen. 18: 4. The ancient patriarch offered to his three heavenly guests some water that they might wash their feet before sitting down to a meal.

In David's time it was practiced as a domestic custom even among slaves, as may be inferred from the language of Abigail who afterward became his wife, and who offered to become a servant to the servants of David to wash their feet. 1 Sam. 25: 41.

In the days of our Savior's time it must have been the custom to give water to guests on entering a house that they might wash their feet, since the Savior said to a certain Pharisee, "I entered into thine house and thou gavest me no water for my feet." Luke 7: 44.

Its Purpose.—That its original purpose was for cleanliness and comfort, can scarcely be questioned, but when the law of Moses was given to the Israelites, and the religious service at the altar was established, then feet-washing obtained a more sacred purpose. "When they go into the tabernacle of the congregation they shall wash with water that they die not, or when they come near to the altar to minister. So they shall wash their hands and their feet." Ex. 30: 20–21.

The washing of the Savior's feet by the "woman who was a sinner," was not an act for the cleansing of the feet, for all the tears she could shed would have been inadequate for such a purpose. It was rather an act of humiliation and devotion on the part of the woman, for the spiritual advantage she might derive therefrom, and for a manifestation of the love she cherished for the Savior. "For she loved much." Luke 7: 38–47.

The sacred purpose of this ceremony was understood before the Savior instituted it, to be observed by his disciples. The priests understood it when they washed their feet before approaching the altar or entering the sanctuary. Both the Savior and the woman who washed his feet, recognized the sacred purpose of this ceremony, and it only remains for us now to consider the institution of feet-washing by the Savior.

The Time and Place.—That it took place in an upper room in Jerusalem in the same night the Lord's Supper and the Communion were instituted, becomes evident from the following facts: Six days before the passover Jesus came to Bethany where he had raised Lazarus from the dead a short time before. John 12: 1. During his stay at Bethany, and just two days before the Passover, a supper was made for him in the house of Simon, the leper. Matt. 26: 2–8; Mark 14: 1–5. Lazarus was one of the guests, Martha his sister, helped to serve the tables, and Mary anointed his feet with precious ointment. John 12: 2–3. This anointing offended Judas Iscariot who desired to get the money the ointment might bring if sold, so he went to the chief priests and contracted to betray his Master. Matt. 25: 15–16; Mark 14: 10–11.

Two days after was the feast of the Passover, and Jesus sent two of his disciples to make preparation in an upper room in Jerusalem. Matt. 26: 2, 18; Mark 14: 1, 13; Luke 22: 7–12.

When the evening was come he sat down with the twelve. Matt. 26: 20; Mark 14: 17; Luke 22: 14. And supper being ended, the following acts of the Savior follow in their order. (1) "He riseth from Supper." (2) He "laid aside his garments" or mantle. (3) He "took a towel and girded himself. (4) "He poureth water into a basin." (5) He began to wash his disciples' feet. (6) And to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded. (7) When he had finished, he said, "An example have I given you that ye should do as I have done to you." John 13: 15. "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." John 13: 17. After sitting with his disciples he spoke a few words of encouragement, and then said, "I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me." Matt. 26: 21; Mark 14: 18; Luke 22: 21; John 13: 21. The four evangelists unite in testifying that Jesus spoke these words at the supper table, and the first three positively testify that it was at Jerusalem, in the upper room where the Supper and Communion were taken. This settles the time and place of feet-washing, and if any further proof were needed to show that this feet-washing did not take place in Bethany, we might add, that Lazarus, Mary and Martha were present at Bethany, but not at the time of feet-washing in Jerusalem. Also that when Jesus had washed his disciples' feet, and had instituted the Supper, and the Communion, he conversed with his disciples awhile, and then went across the Brook Kedron, in the direction of Bethany, to the Garden of Gethsemane, which he could not have done if the feet-washing had taken place at Bethany, since the Garden and Bethany are both on the east side of the brook.

That Christ did not wash his disciples' feet for the purpose of bodily cleansing, is evident from these facts: It would have been contrary to the custom then in vogue which was, for each one to wash his own feet. Luke 7: 44. There was no reason for his doing it except for a sacred purpose. If the object had been for bodily cleansing, it was a failure, since Peter was clean before he had his feet washed, and Judas was still unclean after being washed. John 13: 10–11.

The True Object.—

1. As a token of esteeming others better than himself. Philpp. 2: 3. "He that is greatest among you shall be your servant." Matt. 23: 11.

2. As a token of condescending love. "Having loved his own which were in the world he loved them unto the end." John 13: 1. This being stated in close connection with the washing of the disciples' feet, it shows a relation to it.

3. As an after-cleansing for those who were baptized. "He that is washed (baptized) needeth not save to wash his feet." John 13: 10.

4. To obtain a part with Jesus. "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me." John 13: 8. It matters little whether we are washed by the hands of Jesus or by the hands of those to whom he says: "Ye ought to wash one another's feet." Jesus will do what he promises, and give us a part with him if we obey him.

5. To afford us happiness. If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." John 13: 17.

THE AUTHORITY TO WASH FEET.—

1. It was instituted in the same night, and at the same place as the Communion, and in close connection with the Supper.

2. It was a sacred washing as shown above.

3. It is enjoined upon Christ's disciples by the word "ought," which has the same force as in other passages. Ex., "Men ought to pray." Matt. 25: 27.

4. It was given us as an example for us to follow Jesus.

5. The neglect of washing has a penalty attached of losing our part with Christ.

6. It was made a requisite in the apostles' time that a widow have washed the saints' feet before she could be received into the number who received support from the church. 1 Tim. 5: 10. What stronger argument can be given for the Communion than for the ordinance of feet-washing?

THE WOMAN'S PRAYER COVERING, OR VEIL.

BY L. W. TEETER.

ALL acceptable worship with God depends entirely on a strict conformity to all of the principles and regulations incorporated in his will.

Among those relating to the woman while exercising in worship, are, as principles:

1. The relationship existing between her and Christ.

2. The relationship between her and the man.

THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE WOMAN AND CHRIST is primarily the same as that of man to Christ. The principles and ordinances which make man a son of God, and a brother to Christ, will also make the woman a daughter of God, and a sister to Christ, i. e., the same faith, repentance, prayer, and baptism, is required for both. Acts 8: 12.

THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE WOMAN AND THE MAN is a consequence of the order of their creation, "For the man is not of the woman; but the woman of the man. Neither was the man created for the woman; but the woman for the man." 1 Cor. 11: 8, 9; Gen. 2: 21: 22. Paul, in 1 Cor. 11: 3–16, does not consider the matrimonial relationship, as it is between husband and wife, but only as between "the man and the woman." Then, since the man is not without the woman, neither the woman without the man in the Lord, (verse 11), i. e., because the man was first created, and created in the image and glory of God, therefore she is required to have power on her head whilst engaged in prayer or prophesying, which is a sign of willing submission to the authority of man, respecting her relationship to man; and at the same time, and by the same sign, she is authorized to exercise in worship, having the assurance of being accepted by God, because she obeys God in acknowledging man as her head.

THE FORM OF THE DOCTRINE FOR THE MAN AND THE WOMAN IN PRAYER OR PROPHESYING. The man is required to have his head uncovered, and the woman to have her head covered, during praying and prophesying. (Verses 4–7.)

The reason given for this difference is, that the man is the image and glory of God (verse 7), because he was made in the image and likeness of God. Gen. 1: 26. The woman is the glory of the man, because she was created for man. (Verse 7) Therefore Paul presents man (a) as the head or superior of the woman, and (b) Christ, as the head or superior of man, and (c) God, as the head of Christ.

Hence, if a man should pray or prophesy having his head covered, he would dishonor Christ, his head, or superior. Likewise, if the woman should pray or prophesy with her head uncovered, she would dishonor man, who is her head, or superior.

But the disorder in the Corinthian church in reference to the rite of the "covering" was among the women more than the men. Therefore Paul proceeds to show how hurtful it is to the woman to pray or prophesy with her head uncovered, or unveiled, saying that it is just the same as to have her hair shaved off her head (Greek, xurao, means to remove with a razor, Greek, xuron), which means, literally, to remove all the hair from the head. Verse 5.

WHAT CONSTITUTES THE WOMAN'S PRAYER COVERING? It is an artificial covering, called a veil, which should be made in the most convenient form to fit, and to cover the head, while being engaged in the various religious exercises of the Gospel of Christ. Veil, Greek kalumma, is goods of very light weight, with open meshes like a screen, which adds but little heat, but can be easily seen, which is the object of its being commanded, that it may be a sign of submission and authority, or power (Greek, exousian, authority), and yet not uncomfortable.

The putting on, and taking off of the veil, together, are spoken of six times, in verses 5, 6, 7, and 14. In each place the Greek root kalupto is used, which means literally, the putting on, or taking off, the (kalumma) veil. The covering spoken of with which women should cover their heads, during religious services, is therefore an artificial one.

But it has been argued from the language of verse 15, that the hair is the covering insisted on by Paul, in all the other places where the covering is referred to in this chapter. (1 Cor. 11). That position can never be supported, as may be seen from the following considerations:

1. Because the word, from which "covering" is rendered in verse 15, is not the same, nor even a cognate of the root used in any of the other places in 1 Cor. 11, which is alone conclusive evidence that the covering, spoken of in verse 15, is not the same as that in verses 5, 6, 7, and 14; where the Greek root kalupto is used, but in verse 15 the Greek word rendered covering is peribolaiou. Any one can see the difference.

2. It cannot mean the hair, because it would make the language of verses 5 and 6 teach nonsense. (a) In verse 5, if the hair is the covering meant, then for a woman to be uncovered, her hair must be taken from the head, which would make a bare head, and since a shaven head is also a bare head, there would be nothing gained in saying: "A bare head is even all one as if she had a bare head." (b) Verse 6 would be even more ridiculous. Admit that the hair is the covering, then verse 6 would read thus: "For if the woman have no hair on her head, let her hair be shorn off her head,—an impossibility.

WHAT COVERING IS MEANT IN VERSE 15? Nature's covering only is meant in verse 15, as may be seen by reference to verse 14. As it is the nature of the woman to have long hair, and of the man to have short hair, therefore, Paul would say: Doth not even nature itself teach you that it is a shame for a man to have long hair? But if a woman have long hair, nature itself teaches you that it is a glory to her: for her (long) hair is given to her, i. e., it is a production of nature, given her, in her creation, which is proven from the fact that all women have naturally much longer hair than the man.

It is therefore a glory to the woman to have her long hair, for it is a part of her, and is the distinguishing sign of her sex. For this reason, it is a shame for a woman to have her hair shorn or shaven off, contrary to nature. (Verse 6.) Anciently it was a mark of infamy, as a just retribution for a woman's conduct, contrary to nature.

Again, Paul means nature's covering only, in verse 15, because all women, whether religious or not, have long hair, alike, naturally. But it is clearly taught in verse 15, that the religious women, especially, should preserve their long hair; and, according to verse 6, there is but one remedy, and that is, "Let her be covered," or veiled, as stated before.

Finally we would say with Paul, according to our own judgment (verse 13), that it is not becoming a woman to pray to God uncovered or unveiled, and since the woman's prayer covering is a religious institution, and to be worn as a sign of authority, it should be in open view, and should not be hidden by either bonnet, hood, or any other covering for the head, which is worn for protection from the weather.

MY HEAVENLY HOME.

BY A. HUTCHISON.

IT is claimed that there is no place on earth like home, and if an earthly home so far excels all other places here, what will a heavenly home be? Our finite capacities fail to reach the grand heights, but while this is true, to a very considerable extent, we are happy to realize that we may have some idea of that which awaits the faithful followers of Jesus. We have the following cheering words from our Captain, who has led the way: "If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be: if any man serve me, him will my Father honour." Jno. 12: 26.

Who could wish for more, or greater honors? The Lord,—the Father of our spirits, proposes to honour us, if we follow his Son, and serve him. What would be the honor of kings, as compared with what the Lord offers to do for us? But while we are amazed at the grandeur of the scenes, and filled with ecstasy, while we anticipate the joys of that heavenly home, let us not lose sight of the road over which we must travel, before we can reach that thrice blessed and happy home. Jesus has told us that "he is the way." And if he is the way, we will have to follow him, and this we cannot do except by using the means which he set apart for that purpose while he was here. We cannot otherwise follow him. If we do not follow him, then we have no assurance that we will ever be where he is. We ought to very grateful to him to think that he did set apart ordinances, and sanctify elements, so that we can know that we are on the way.

The apostle seems to have had a glorious view of that home over there. Here are his words: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." 2 Cor. 5: 1. This home, here in this world, may possess many attractive features,—our tables may be well supplied with the good things which earth can give, our barns may be filled to overflowing, but the flames may consume it all in a very short time. But if nothing befall it,—we ourselves will soon have to bid adieu to all that is of the earth, but not so with that "heavenly home." It is eternal,—no passing away, no fading of the bloom of youth, no tears in heaven!

O blessed place, oh, glorious home! Long severed friends will meet there, to part no more. Will father and mother be there? We hope they will,—yes, we are sure they will, if they followed Jesus, for he said such should be where he was. We know the little children will be there, "for of such is the kingdom of heaven." But we must not try to satisfy ourselves with the idea, that we can put off the preparation for heaven until our dying hour, and then call on the Lord, like the thief on the cross. We must remember that the thief called on the Testator while he was yet living. "A testament is of force after men are dead; otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth." Heb. 9: 17. The difference between us and the thief on the cross, consists in the fact, that the thief applied to Jesus, the Testator, while he was yet living, and before the testament was made of force. We now apply to Jesus through the medium of the will, or testament, and therefore must comply with the conditions of said Testament. The thief was on the cross, and therefore helpless,—we are at liberty, with all the blessings of the Gospel before us. How shall we reach that heavenly home, if we neglect such favorable opportunities? We cannot expect to secure a place in that heavenly home on easier or more reasonable terms than to obey the Gospel. We must not be content with the common expression: "If the heart is right all is right." While that is strictly true, provided the Word of the Lord is made the standard by which to try the heart, yet we dare not trust to our heart, conscience, or emotional feelings. All of these are deceptive, as may be seen by the following Scriptures: Jer. 17: 9 says, "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: Who can know it? Prov. 28: 26 says, "He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool." Jno. 16: 2 says, "The time cometh, that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service." If they think they are doing God service, their conscience will approve, so you see it will not do to trust the heart or conscience, except as these have been trained by the Word of the Lord. Our feelings will be just as we believe anything to be true or false.

"My heavenly home is bright and fair." We cannot afford to take any risks on this question. We all hope to secure a place in that heavenly home. If we obey the words of the New Testament from the heart, we will inherit that home. Reader, I hope to meet you there.

OUR HOPE.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To Bro. F. C. Myers, of California:—

Who can comfort those whom death has bereaved? "Watchman, what of the night?" Are there voices from beyond the vail that tell of continuity and reunion? "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God?" Isa. 40: 1. "Comfort one another with these words." 1 Thess. 4: 18. "With these words." How many, how wonderful, how glorious, how infallible are the words of love and comfort God has spoken "at sundry times and in divers manners" by patriarchs, and prophets, and apostles, and lastly most distinctly and emphatically by his Son. When a heart is rent and broken and crushed as yours is, no sympathy, no encouragement, no help can avail that does not come direct from the heart of Jesus, expressing all the love and pity and power and assurance of the Everlasting Omnipotent Father. "Believest thou this?" is the supreme question from the lips of Emmanuel for the establishment of your soul in His own Eternal Peace in this hour of your unutterable agony. John 11: 25, 26. I groaned in spirit when I moved from line to line, unfolding the painful providence that desolated your home and made your dear little children motherless. What could you do but despair and pine and die under so dire a calamity, in such aggravating circumstances, were it not for "the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost?" 2 Cor. 13: 14. The very Spirit of the Eternal God and His Co-eternal Son has assumed the office of "COMFORTER," and He has all the fullness of the Godhead to draw upon, and can assuage every sorrow and heal every wound, and lift every mourner from the grave's mouth to the very Gates of Pearl.

Two little children, and a new-born babe, the mother entombed, the heart sore and bleeding, resources exhausted, future veiled and unpromising, I can easily understand the deep, voiceless sorrow that dictated the first line in your letter:—"My harp is on the willows." It may seem like mockery to say, take it down, and in the name of Jesus and the power of the Holy Ghost, tune it anew to the Song of Calvary. And yet with all the sympathy of my soul, and a keen appreciation of your great heart-rift and humanly unhealable sorrow, I dare say, "Rejoice in the Lord always, and again I say, rejoice." Philpp. 4: 4. Joy for you that there is none if it be not found in the great reconciliation effected by the divine incarnation and atonement of Him who is "God over all, Blessed forever," and also near enough of kin to "be touched with a feeling of our infirmities." The dislocations and wrenches resulting from sin are awful indeed. You and I have experienced them in body and soul. But have they not torn the Blessed Jesus as no one else was ever lacerated? These heart-aches and body-tortures must be. They not only protest against sin, but they attest the righteousness and goodness of the divine law. They reveal the nature and extent of sin, and lead to an appreciation of its remedy.

Your outlook is dark, but "the darkness and the light are both alike to Him." Ps. 139: 12. "He leadeth me." The valley of the shadow of death may be very, very dark, but in its deepest gloom the restful soul may sing, "I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me." Ps. 23: 2, 4.

Pivot your present and future, for time and eternity, on the immutable valedictory of him whose wisdom and love and power are infinite, and whose Word is pledged for our eternal security. Matt. 28: 20. Let your whole being rest in the faithfulness and beatitude of John 13: 7; Rom. 8: 28; 1 Pet. 5: 10; Ps. 37: 4, 5, 6; Ps. 62: 5, 6, 7. "Hope thou in God." Ps. 42: 11.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

It is a little curious, but nevertheless a fact, that good writers do not always value their articles very highly. It is very common for many of them to accompany their articles with remarks like this: "Here is another article. If not good enough for the Messenger, there is room in the waste basket for it."

We are in receipt of sad news from Tennessee. Our esteemed brother, Eld. Jesse Crosswhite, was instantly killed while helping to load a saw-log on a steep hillside near his home, at Garber's Mills, Washington County, Nov. 5. The log struck him on the side of the head, causing instant death. He died without speaking a word. Bro. Crosswhite was a minister of more than ordinary ability, well read in the Scriptures and possessed considerable knowledge of history. We were never personally acquainted with him, having met him but one time to our knowledge, but we have always heard him well spoken of as a man of clear understanding. He has also written a number of articles for the Messenger, which indicate positive views and a very forcible way of presenting them. His death will be greatly lamented by the Brethren in Tennessee where he was very widely known and highly respected.

The famine in Russia is raging with great severity, and great suffering must necessarily be experienced before another crop can be raised. The winter sowing of grain, however, has progressed sufficiently to assure, with a good season, an abundance for another year, and to help the unfortunate through it would seem that the government has established store-houses where the poor may purchase, on time, provisions to help bridge over the terrible calamity.

In some of our exchanges we read of as many as three hundred turning to God in one meeting. But most of these meetings are held by popular churches, that are so near like the world that those who unite with them have so little turning to do in order to become members that it is hardly perceptible. True repentance means a complete turning away from everything of a sinful character, and a pressing forward towards that which is right. The three thousand who turned to God on the day of Pentecost had much more turning to do than is expected in modern churches.

It is at least possible that the present Pope of Rome may be required to take up his residence in another part of the world, where a greater freedom of action will be allowed him. The Italian Government is far from being friendly to him, and it is very plainly hinted that his absence from the Eternal City will be appreciated by his numerous enemies, some of whom may be induced to deprive him of his life, should a favorable opportunity present itself. This, however, would not be an unprecedented move on the part of even a Pope. In the year 1848 Pius IX was compelled to flee in disguise to save his life, his infallibility not being sufficient to protect him in times of trouble. In the beginning of the present century Pope Pius VI was expelled from Rome and died in exile. Many of the Popes for hundreds of years have found it necessary to leave Rome for safety, and the present pontiff may yet have to follow the unpleasant example of not a few of his predecessors.

As a religious body we should cultivate the courage of our convictions. We need not be ashamed of our religion, though we may at times have reasons to be ashamed of the conduct of members who act both unlawfully and indiscreetly. Our faith and practice are to be commended, and deserve the support of every member. We ought to have the courage to stand up for the characteristics of the Brethren church and fully maintain them on every hand. They are not to be compared with the semi-worldly ways of the popular sects; we have in our hearts a love for these things that they know not of. Our aim is to rise above the evil ways of the world and imitate our divine Master to the full extent of our power. This we can do to the credit of ourselves and the cause of Christianity, if we will only stand boldly in defense of those principles we espoused in our baptismal vow. There is a humble boldness that is to be admired and encouraged, and it is to this that we refer.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER.

It is almost universally admitted that there is an institution to be observed in the church, called the Lord's Supper.

1. This institution is not the bread and the cup.

(a) The bread and cup do not constitute a supper in any sense.

(b) The bread and cup are not called supper in the Scriptures, but are called the Communion. 1 Cor. 10: 16.

(c) The bread and cup being taken after supper, therefore are no part of the Lord's Supper. Luke 22: 20.

2. The meal that Christ ate with the twelve in that upper chamber in Jerusalem was not the passover of the Law.

(a) John who was one of the twelve declares, "Now before the feast of the passover," etc.

(b) The disciples while at the table eating, refer to the feast as a future event. John 13: 29.

(c) After Christ had eaten his meal, and was under trial in the hall of judgment, the Jews had yet in contemplation the eating of their feast. John 18: 28.

(d) If Christ ate the legal feast that year, it was the Jews' passover. He was slain next day, which was "our passover." Then either the Jews' passover in that year or our passover was slain on illegal time; as the law defined that the lamb should be slain on the fourteenth; hence Christ, the antitype, to fulfill the law, must be slain on the same day. We name the darkness, the earthquake, the alarm and commotion of the elements as being a manifestation of God's hand, to hinder the Jews from killing their lamb that year, so that of a truth, "Christ, our passover, was slain for us."

Dr. Clarke, Winchester and many of the divines agree, that the lamb was not slain in all Palestine in that year.

3. Christ instituted a Lord's Supper, a sacred meal. Matthew and Mark are not so plain, hence we call up Luke as follows: "With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer; for I say unto you, I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God." Luke 22: 15, 16.

(a) This text shows that this meal is to be fulfilled,—to be continued. Luke 12: 37 shows that his faithful are going to eat with him when he comes.

(b) This text shows that Christ is going to eat this meal again at its fulfillment. The seer upon Patmos beheld the joyful occasion of the glorious fulfillment of this sacred meal. "Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. . . Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb." Rev. 19: 7, 9.

That this meal is of divine appointment, the following words of Christ clearly show. "I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me, that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom," etc. Luke 22: 29, 30. Hence those, who are eating at the Lord's Table, do so by divine appointment, and those who have no table, hence no meal, are disregarding one of Christ's appointments.

4. The apostles kept the meal, instituted and appointed by Christ. "I must by all means keep this feast that cometh in Jerusalem." These are the words of Paul in Acts 18: 21. This feast was not the feast of the Jews, but the feast appointed by Christ. In 1 Cor. 5: 8 the apostle tells us how to keep or observe this sacred feast.

The church at Corinth, one of Paul's own planting, had become greatly corrupted. Their corruption had developed in their manner of eating this sacred feast. The apostle corrects them thus: "Ye can not drink the cup of the Lord and the cup of the devils; ye can not be partakers of the Lord's Table and the table of devils." Associated with the idea of a table, is a meal. Christ had a table, because he had a meal. So have the Brethren. Those who have no meal, need no table, hence do not follow Christ nor the apostles.

The apostle further corrects the disorder in the Corinthian church, relative to the manner of eating this sacred meal. "When ye come together therefore unto one place, this is not to eat,"—or as found in the marginal reading, 'ye can not eat,' —"the Lord's Supper." In the next verse he tells them why they do not eat the Lord's Supper. "For in eating everyone taketh before other his own supper: and one is hungry, and another is drunken." Surely none would call a scene like the above, the Lord's Supper, save the blind.

In the next verse, the apostle gives them a sharp reproof. "What! have you not houses to eat and drink in;" that is to eat and drink what they had eaten, -their own suppers. It is right to come to the house of God to eat the Lord's Supper; but wrong to come together and eat our own supper, in pretense of the Lord's Supper. The apostle follows by telling them how to eat: "When ye come together to eat, tarry one for another."

In this chapter the apostle does not condemn the meal, nor their coming together, but their manner of eating. He tells them how to eat,—to "tarry one for another. The presence of a table and the quantity of provision clearly show that the Corinthians understood that the Lord's Supper was a full meal. 2 Peter 2: 13, and Jude 12 we name as proof that the apostolic churches kept the sacred feasts appointed by Christ. Dr. Clarke's comment on Jude 12 is as follows: "The feasts of charity, or love-feasts, of which the apostles spoke, were in use in the primitive church, till the middle of the fourth century, when, by the council of the Laodiceans, they were prohibited in the churches; and having been abused they fell into disuse." History is abundant showing that these sacred feasts were kept by the early Christians.

5. This sacred eating should be "at night."

(a) The term "supper" unmistakably indicates the time, "at night." (b) Matt. 26: 20; 1 Cor. 11: 23, are proofs that this sacred eating service should be "at night."

(c) Every time the Communion service is narrated in the Scriptures, the time is named, "at night."

There is a teaching prevalent, that the Communion service should be observed every first day of the week, and Acts 20 is quoted as evidence. While the disciples on that occasion, "came together on the first day of the week to break bread," the narrative shows that they did not break bread until after midnight, which would be on Monday morning. I find nowhere, in all the Sacred Record, that either Christ or his apostles ever broke bread on the first day of the week. The doctrine that "it is the duty of Christians to break bread every first day of the week," I pronounce "teaching for doctrine the commandments of men." The frequency of the service is not named; hence let us not try to be more definite than the Word. All that is said is, "As often as ye eat this bread," etc. With this we let the subject rest.

"That is just what hearts that are sick want—comfort; and they have it in Christ Jesus, and in the Fatherhood of God, and nowhere else in such measure, and with such pertinency of application."

THE COMMUNION OF THE BODY AND BLOOD OF CHRIST.

BY M. J. M'CLURE.

By a living faith and a genuine repentance a sinner is prepared for the change from death unto life. By following Christ in the regeneration he is brought into that condition where eternal life is received. John 3: 15 and 10: 28. It is a truism that food cannot give life, but will sustain it.

As in the natural, so in the spiritual. When once the sinner is born again, and in the birth receives the life given by the Eternal Power, that life must be sustained. John 6: 53, 54 says, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life."

The mistake, that the body and blood of Christ gives life, should not be made, for the life has already been received in the new birth; and it has been ordained by God that the eating of the body and the drinking of the blood of Christ shall be a means of sustaining and retaining that life.

Now it is evident that the flesh and blood of the Son of Man cannot be partaken of literally, so he made bread and wine the representatives of his body and blood. Mark 14: 22, 23, 24. Why bread and wine were chosen for this use, is not revealed, nor how the spiritual life is sustained thereby. It is enough for the child of God to know that they have been chosen, and that the realization of the promise may be enjoyed by eating "of that bread and drinking of that cup."

We do not believe in the real presence of the flesh and blood of Christ in the bread and wine, as do some, but that they represent to us the real, and, through the power of God, as revealed in his promise, we may and do receive the strengthening nourishment, needful for the sustenance and perpetuation of the spiritual life, given to the new-born babe in Christ.

Note the peculiar phraseology of the caption of this article. One may readily grasp the thought of communing with another. That carries with it the idea of reciprocal enjoyment or benefit, while "communion of" conveys only the thought of enjoyment or benefit received. Hence Paul's expression (1 Cor. 10: 16) leads one to the consideration of the Savior's words (John 6: 55), "My flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed,"—teaching that, by partaking of the divinely-appointed representatives of the broken body and shed blood of Christ, there may be imparted to the soul that spiritual sustenance, needful to supply the want, caused by a continual strife with the adversary of all good.

As physical labor causes physical exhaustion, so a continuous combat against sin produces a spiritual weakness and sickliness which only divinely-provided food can counteract.

To meet this very want the Good Master has ordained that, by eating of "that bread and drinking of that cup," we do not only "show the Lord's death," but we enjoy the "communion of the body and blood of Christ," and are thus made the recipients of the divine food which strengthens and keeps alive the spiritual man, and enables us to fight the good fight, and keep the faith, so that, in the Lord's own good time, we may wear the crown, laid up in heaven for the faithful.

THE KISS OF CHARITY.

BY DANIEL HAYS.

Will the reader pause with the inquiry, Why has the "kiss of charity" been discontinued among professed Christians in the present day? Dean Stanley justly observes: "Had any primitive Christians been told that the time would come when this, the very sign of Christian brotherhood and sisterhood, would be absolutely proscribed in the Christian church, they would have thought that this must be the result of unprecedented persecution or unprecedented unbelief. It is impossible to imagine the omission of any act more sacred, more significant, more necessary (according to the view which then prevailed) to the edification of the service." (Christian Institutions, p. 63.)

"The Holy Kiss originally formed an element of every act of Christian worship. No sacrament, or sacramental function was deemed complete in its absence." (Christian Antiquities, Vol. 2, p. 903.)

Justin Martyr, the earliest author who mentions it, thus writes: "When we have ceased from prayer, we salute one another with a kiss. There is then brought to the president bread and a cup of wine." (Apolog. i. c, 65.)

It was the practice of the apostolic church, when meeting and parting from each other. (Acts 20: 27.)

It is five times commanded in the Gospel: "Salute one another with a holy kiss." Rom. 16: 16. "Greet ye one another with a holy kiss." 1 Cor. 16: 20. "Greet one another with a holy kiss." 2 Cor. 13: 12. "Greet all the brethren with a holy kiss." 1 Thess. 5: 26. "Greet ye one another with a kiss of charity." 1 Pet. 5: 14.

This is the natural token of love among all nations in all ages. It is given by the Holy Spirit, to God's children, to express their mutual love for each other. It is the symbol of spiritual love: "If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us." 1 John 4: 12

It will be seen that it is a command of God, given through the Holy Spirit to the churches. Paul enjoins it upon the Romans, the Corinthians, the Thessalonians; and Peter upon the churches in general. Luke, in Acts 20: 37, records its observance as an historical fact. Justin Martyr and the Church Fathers give it as the practice in the first centuries of the Christian church. Dean Stanley says that the primitive church would have regarded the discontinuance of the holy kiss among Christians as the result of "unprecedented persecution or unprecedented unbelief." Since, then, it is not because of persecution, is it not because of unbelief? Unbelief in what? Unbelief in the sacredness and inviolability of God's Word.

Now we cannot escape this duty upon the ground that it is but once commanded. Neither can we escape its force upon the plea that it is not imperative, for it is given five times in the imperative mode. Then we cannot dismiss it as a duty from the church, as some reject the Lord's Supper and feet-washing, by saying that it was practiced before Pentecost and lacks apostolic authority; for it was practiced by the disciples after Pentecost, and enjoined by the Holy Spirit, through the apostles, upon "all the brethren." Then we cannot excuse ourselves upon the ground that it is commanded by the apostles and not by Christ; for when the Lord sent his disciples to preach he said, "He that heareth you, heareth me; and he that despiseth you, despiseth me; and he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me." Luke 10: 16. This brings the authority from God, through Christ to the apostles. Lastly, the apostles were to teach the nations to OBSERVE all things whatsoever Christ had commanded them. Since, then, the apostles instructed the nations, among whom they proclaimed the Gospel, to observe this as a Christian duty, it is obvious that Christ commanded it.

There is no substitute for a positive command of God. We cannot substitute a hearty handshaking for the kiss of charity. True, it may not be the fashion of the age, but the church of Christ observes it now as she has in all ages. And in its observance the proprieties of the sexes are strictly regarded,—it never being observed between those of opposite sex. Then, to salute "all the brethren" does not require us to salute all that are living. If we give the salutation on all proper occasions, and if this be done among all the brethren, we fully answer the purpose of the command.

This is the manner in which God directs his children to greet each other. This is the manner of the kingdom of heaven,—not of the world. How carefully some children are trained that they may enter good society! How much more careful should the children of God be trained in the manner of the kingdom of heaven, that they may have the mind of Christ, the order of heaven and the love of God. "He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is love."

THE FREE GOSPEL.

BY GALEN B. ROYER.

YES, it is free. You and I paid nothing for it. We bought it without money and without price, and it is a glorious thought that others may have it on the same conditions. To-day, my reader, if you have not already received the Gospel, it is offered to you free. All you need to do to have it is to feel your load of sin, cast it all on Jesus, and obey him in all his commands.

But some Christians misapply this idea of a free Gospel. They take the position that when within the fold, they are free from any obligation to give it to others. There is no passage, to my knowledge, in the Bible, teaching such doctrine. Isaiah's prophetic call, "Ho, every one that thirsteth, . . . come, buy wine and milk without money and without price," applies to the soul away from God, and not to the one that has found him. "Freely ye have received, freely give," contains a very different idea than freedom from giving the Gospel to others. Each follower has received Christ freely. Indeed, every one who desires, has received him abundantly. Now then, freely give him to others.

This cannot be done without labor, money and sacrifice. Verily, here is a solemn teaching. No selfishness in it,—just the opposite,—freely give. He who receives the Gospel and makes no effort to give it to others, has not received the spirit of Christ, for Christ did all for others, not for himself.

To receive Christ and not help to give him to others is in direct opposition to the teaching, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Here do not rest with the mistaken idea that our neighbor is the one living next door to us. Neighbor, in this day of steam and electricity, includes all those people in the world, that we can reach with our money and influence to affect their lives.

But, on the other hand, what strong reasons are there why we should give of our means and labor for the great mission work of the church?

1. That others may receive it free. If we do not give, then the sinner must buy or do without.

2. We are treating our neighbor as we would wish to be treated, were we in his place. Think of it awhile that way, my brother, my sister. If you had not the Gospel in your home and all around you, would you not give much more that you might receive it, than you are now giving that others may receive it?

3. Because the Bible teaches that we should give our time or means for this purpose. There is no use trying to deny this proposition. The whole scheme of redemption and salvation is based on the idea of sacrificing for others. In this way, if our labors are performed in the right spirit, we have the blessed assurance of salvation for ourselves. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren," says Christ to those who felt unworthy of the reward. Notice, not done to themselves, no hint of that, but to some one else.

Again, Paul says, "How can they hear without a preacher; and how shall they preach, except they be sent?" And I am sure no one can be sent without sacrificing home comforts on his part, and the church bearing the expenses, etc., in sending him. If the church that sends him does not bear the burden in part or entire, they have no part or parcel in the good he may do. This is true of individuals of the church. If each one does not bear his portion of the burden in sending him, he has neither part nor parcel in the reward. In the great judgment day, we will not be judged as congregations or churches, but as individuals.

Now the important question for each one who is exalted to heaven with religious blessings, to ask himself is, Am I doing my duty in helping to proclaim the Gospel free to all the world? Having abundance on every hand this year, let us answer this question for eternity. Let our souls be stirred to liberality this coming Thanksgiving by awakening sermons on our duty to spread the Gospel freely. Then every one will give "as the Lord has prospered him," and there will be an abundance in the Lord's treasury.

The calls from the West, the East, the North, the South, at our last Board meeting, were so many and so great that the Board could not respond to them all. Shall we leave the spiritually hungry starve in this year of plenty? God forbid! May he find within the fold every member with "a willing mind," to give as he hath!

CHIPS FROM THE WORK-HOUSE.

BY DANIEL VANIMAN.

1. IN "Chips from the Work-house," published in No. 42 of GOSPEL MESSENGER, the types make me say, "Two millions of smokers spending each five cents per day would waste one thousand dollars per day," instead of "one hundred thousand dollars per day," as it should be. Just think of it! One hundred thousand dollars per day sent up in nicotine smoke, bringing no one nearer to Christ, making no one more like Jesus, helping no one away from his sins! This is a sum sufficient to sustain fifty thousand preachers, allowing each two dollars per day. What a power for Christ would this be, if turned in this direction!

2. What a noble work is that of the Christian whose life and energies are given to help people out of that which is unprofitable and vain, and which he, of course, aims principally to do through the power of his own example. There is no teaching so powerful as that of example, and the beauty of it is, while helping others to higher enjoyments, we also help ourselves. Add to the above waste another hundred thousand dollars per day for the chewers, a third hundred thousand for the worse than waste in strong drink, a fourth hundred thousand for useless expenditures in vain display, and another hundred thousand dollars, annually wasted in table luxuries that could easily be dispensed with, and we have the sum of five hundred thousand dollars, unprofitably spent each day in the year, Sunday included. This would sustain two hundred and fifty thousand missionary preachers, allowing them two dollars per day. Reader, how much of this vast sum can we, by precept and example change over, to help in saving the lost and thus working for Christ?

AT the love-feast in the Lamotte church, Jefferson Co., Ill., Oct. 10, two were received into the church by baptism. Bro. Jacob Swinger writes that the meeting was a very pleasant one. Bro. David Troxel, of Cerro Gordo was with them and officiated at the feast.

SEND to the Brethren's Tract Work, Dayton, Ohio, for a list of tracts published in defense of what we conceive to be the faith and practice, clearly set forth and enjoined in the New Testament. Purchase a number of these tracts and do good by using them.

BRO. E. HOPKINS, of Dayton, Washington, informs us that his little tract, "The Law and Sabbath," is now out of print.

PARTIES wishing copies of this issue for distribution on mission fields and at isolated places will please write Bro. Galen B. Royer of this place, stating the number of copies that can be used judiciously.

BRO. SAMUEL DUNCAN, of Jerico, Mo., reports a very pleasant feast Oct. 10, with one addition by confession and baptism. He also reports good ministerial force, and the Word preached with good ability.

BRO. J. E. METZGER, of Edna Mills, Ind., reports a series of meetings at that place, conducted by Bro. Lewis W. Teeter. While there were no accessions, the members seem to have been encouraged and strengthened.

BRO. SILAS HOOVER writes that he is engaged in a series of meetings at Salemville, within the bounds of the Yellow Creek congregation, Bedford Co, Pa., with good attendance and attention, and also one applicant for admission.

BRO. LAFAYETTE WATKINS, of Mt. Ida, Kans., reports a series of meetings in the Cedar Creek church, conducted by Bro. Jesse Studebaker, followed by Bro. Isaac Crist. Two came out on the Lord's side during the meetings.

THE Lord willing, the next Annual Meeting will be held at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, commencing on Tuesday, June 7. Ample arrangements will be made to accommodate a very large gathering. Of the Committee of Arrangements Bro. John Zuck, Clarence, Iowa, is Foreman, and Bro. J. S. Snyder, Brooklyn, Iowa, Secretary.

J. W. KEISER, of Pioneer, Ohio, suggests that as many Sunday-schools have closed it would be a good idea to give more attention to fireside talks concerning Bible studies. The suggestion is a good one, and we hope our readers will profit by it. Much good may grow out of these fireside talks if they are properly directed.

AT a recent meeting in Lordsburg, Cal., twenty one letters of membership were handed in and letters given to eight. The church is now under the charge of elders John Metzger, J. S. Flory and J. W. Metzger. A good Sunday-school has been organized with F. M. Nofziger as Superintendent. The church and school seem to be prospering.

FOR a clear defense of our faith and practice we know of nothing in our literature that we can commend more highly than Quinter's work on Trine Immersion (price, $1.00) and R. H. Miller's "Doctrine of the Brethren Defended" (price, $1.50). These works ought to be carefully studied by all of our ministers, especially our young ministers.

BRO. J. T. MYERS, Oaks, Pa., writes of a pleasant visit to the Philadelphia church, where he enjoyed a feast that was well attended and passed off very pleasantly. He says there are at present about one hundred and forty members in the city that hold to our church, with prospects of a still further ingathering, several having been added during the last year.

LAST week mention was made of the severe storm in the English Channel through which our brother and sister Miller passed on their way from France to England. Bro. Miller also mentions it in his letter in this issue. A few days ago another severe storm occurred in the same locality, in which many lives were lost, some in the sea and others on the land. At Paris the gale was very severe and did considerable damage to property.

THE M. E. Tennessee Conference recently did a very kind act. It was a very beautiful example indeed. When the name of Eld. J. G. Bolton was called, it was stated that he was quite ill, and could not for a long time undertake any work. At once, on motion of Eld. B. F. Haynes, a collection amounting to about $350 was taken up and sent to him as a token of brotherly esteem; and this by men whose own salaries are, for the most part, exceedingly scant.

THE bulk of the estate of Mrs. Elizabeth S. Newton, who was killed on board the steamship Saale, while en route to Europe, in June, and which is valued at $200,000, goes, by her will, to the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society of the Episcopal church in the United States, for its sole use forever. That is a good example for our wealthy brethren to follow when preparing to leave this world. Place at least some of your property where it will help along the Lord's cause.

BRO. M. C. CZIGANS, of Auburn, W. Va, reports an interesting meeting, conducted by himself and Bro. John Friedley at McFarlen. Six meetings were held, and closed Oct. 22, with two applicants to be baptized in the future. Bro. Czigans then went to Cairo, where there are eight members and where the Brethren never preached before. Four sermons were preached in the M. E. church, creating quite an interest among the people. Some of them searched their Bibles to see whether these things were so.

WE have just published a large edition of our "Trine Immersion Traced to the Apostles" for the Brethren's Tract Work at Dayton, Ohio. It is a neatly-printed pamphlet of forty-eight pages and may be had for eight cents per copy, or fourteen copies for $1.00. Let our Brethren purchase this tract by the hundreds and distribute them every-where. The work has been carefully revised. Its circulation in the past has been very great, and there are many places where it will yet do good.

THE love-feast at Lanark, Nov. 14, passed off very pleasantly and quietly. A snow-storm in the afternoon somewhat diminished the crowd, yet the attendance of members was large. About one hundred and twenty communed. The spirit of the meeting was very encouraging. At the present time the Lanark congregation numbers about one hundred members, who seem to be earnest and well established in the faith. Those who attended from Mt. Morris report a very pleasant visit though the weather was quite disagreeable.

BRO. W. H. EISENBISE, of Mt. Carroll, Ill., writes a very interesting letter concerning his recent trip to the Root River congregation, Minn., where he attended a love-feast Nov. 10. He reports a very pleasant meeting, good attendance and good order. The people there seem to be in warm sympathy with the Brethren. Jonathan Broadwater and John Sadler, Jr., were advanced to the second degree of the ministry. Three made the good confession and were baptized. Bro. Joseph Ogg has the oversight of the congregation, which seems to be in a flourishing condition. During the meetings Bro. Ogg's afflicted daughter was duly anointed with oil according to the instructions of Jas. 5: 14–16.

PEOPLE who postpone repentance for the dying bed are running an awful risk. The propriety of such action, even in the minds of very liberal thinkers, is doubtful in the extreme. Albert Barnes one time said, "I have seen many dying beds, but never have I seen one which seemed to me to be a proper place in which to make preparation for eternity." The dying thief on the cross, in the presence of Jesus, should not serve as a precedent for people who have the Bible in their houses, and have had a thousand opportunities to repent before they are laid upon their dying bed.

TO those who have not been reading the MESSENGER we will state that Bro. D. L. Miller is now on his way to Egypt, Mt. Sinai, and Palestine. One of his letters, "Editorial Wanderings in the Old World," will be found in the third column on this page. These letters are to be continued during his travels, and will prove exceedingly interesting reading. For the present he will not be permitted to enter any of the Bible Lands on account of the Asiatic cholera, which is spreading alarmingly in some of the cities of both Asia and Africa. Bro. Miller is probably in Rome by this time, and will continue to visit various points in the East until the outcome of the cholera epidemic manifests itself more fully.

THE following incident, which occurred in a neighboring town, is significant, showing the tendency of the times in the popular churches: A young lady, about to connect herself with one of the leading denominations, was held back by the thought that, by uniting with that church, she would have to give up playing cards, dancing, etc. She confided her troubles to a lady friend, who proposed consulting the minister of that church. He answered as follows: "If your conscience will allow you to do those things, I suppose it will be all right. Don't let that hinder you; where the spirit of Christ is, there is liberty." This desire for liberty to do wrong is not only becoming popular, but is finding its way into not a few of the popular churches.

THE poor we have always with us, and many of them are very worthy members,—are in full sympathy with the church in all her works. In almost every congregation are members too poor to pay for the MESSENGER, and yet they greatly enjoy reading it. We suggest that each congregation supply her poor with the paper, i. e., those who are really too poor to pay for it. For this purpose a collection might be taken up in any way the church thinks proper. In all cases where the paper is thus donated we will send it for $1.00. There are also instances where elders and ministers, who have labored hard for the Master's cause and would greatly enjoy the MESSENGER, but unfortunately are unable to pay for it. By no means should such be neglected. We would like to supply all of this class at our own expense, but the burden is rather heavy to be borne by a few, hence we suggest that the churches come to the aid of the needy in this respect.

ONE BAPTISM.

SPEAKING of that which pertains to Christianity Paul says, "One Lord, one faith, one baptism." Eph. 4: 5. From this we are led to conclude that there is for the church of Christ but one rite known as baptism. True, there may be many baptisms, as there are lords many, but for genuine Christianity there must be but one baptism as truly as there is one Lord and one faith. There is no more reason for claiming that the apostles endorsed more than one baptism than there is for believing that they held to a plurality of faiths.

It is well to understand what this one baptism is to which Paul refers. We must bear in mind, however, that it is one, and not two or three. He who will think seriously must certainly conclude that there was but one rite of Christian baptism in the apostolic age. There is no valid reason for concluding otherwise. Jesus was baptized in but one way. This is self-evident. When he gave the formula, "Baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost" (Matt. 28: 19), he certainly taught but the one rite. The apostles who used this formula most assuredly performed the sacred rite in the same manner, and also just like Jesus instructed them. Since hundreds had seen Jesus baptized in the Jordan, and had witnessed the rite many times afterwards, as it was administered under his instructions, there is every reason for concluding that there was but the one way of administering baptism according to the formula. This is certainly the one baptism of which Paul speaks.

But how was this rite administered? The question cannot rightly include either sprinkling or pouring, for the Greek word baptizo, the word used in the New Testament to designate the rite, has no such a meaning attached to it. As defined by the best Greek Lexicons, in this or any other land, it means to immerse, to submerge. Donnegan says it means "to immerse repeatedly into a liquid." The question, then, hinges on single and trine immersion. We suggest that the "one baptism," mentioned by Paul, cannot be single immersion, for that mode of baptizing was not invented until near the middle of the fourth century. This fact is so well established in history that not a line to the contrary, in any ancient document, has come down to us. See Quinter's tract on the "Origin of Single Immersion" where this fact is overwhelmingly established.

Trine immersion, then, is the only rite left unquestioned. And it is remarkable that, amid the conflicting theories and discords throughout Christendom, all leading denominations are united in regarding it as valid baptism. On no other mode of administering the sacred rite are they thus united. The simple fact that they are agreed in considering trine immersion valid, is of itself one of the strongest arguments in proof of its genuineness, for it is unreasonable to presume that they would all unite in endorsing the very mode that happens to be wrong. While all the apostles were yet living, a church was established at Antioch. It continued in a flourishing condition for centuries. In the fourth century it numbered nearly 100,000 members, and was presided over by a very learned Bishop, named Chrysostom. Speaking of the "one baptism," named by Paul, he says, "Christ delivered to his disciples one baptism in three immersions of the body when he said unto them, 'Go, teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.'" ("Chrystal's Modes of Baptism," p. 77.) During the same century Basil, who presided over the church at Cesarea, and Cyril, who had the oversight of the church at Jerusalem, both give trine immersion as the mode in use. Surely this ought to be convincing.

We may, however, add that all the congregations established by the personal labors of the apostles, retained the practice of trine immersion for more than five hundred years without a single known exception in the annals of ecclesiastical history.

EDITORIAL WANDERINGS IN THE OLD WORLD.

BY D. L. MILLER.

Number Ten.

OUR stay at Halle was rather enjoyable, notwithstanding the suffering occasioned by a lame back. We especially enjoyed a visit to the little "Baptisten Gemeinde" where we attended services when we were here eight years ago. Changes have come to them too, and a number of faces with which we were once familiar we did not see. They have passed over the river. We also had the pleasure of meeting Prof. Cravens, one of our former teachers at Mount Morris. He is attending the University at this place, to better qualify himself for his chosen profession. He will remain at Halle two years. The growing interest in the educational work of our church demands that our teachers prepare themselves well for the important work in which they are to engage, and a year or two spent in a special line of work in a German University would be helpful to them.

When we were in Germany before we wrote about the hard work imposed upon women, and the same conditions still exist. The women of the poorer classes have a hard burden to bear. We then wrote about having seen women and dogs hitched to small wagons, drawing heavy loads. A certain German professor in the Iowa University expressed some doubt as to the correctness of the statement. If he had been with us in Halle a few weeks ago he might have seen for himself what we described. One afternoon, sitting in our room, in company with Prof. Cravens, we saw no less than three women pass by on the street hitched to a wagon, in each case with a large dog as a companion, both dogs and women doing their full share of pulling to move the loaded wagons. Indeed, the sight is now-a-days so common in many German cities that no one thinks strange of it. To us the spectacle is a sad one, and while we sympathize with the poor slaves we think of our own country and rejoice that our women at home are not compelled to work as they do here.

It must not be considered that women do all the work and that the men are idle. Men, women and children are all kept at work in order to keep starvation from the door. Crossing over Belgium, a few days ago, we travelled for some distance along a canal and we noticed that five or six men were hitched to the long tow ropes, pulling the heavily-laden boats, thus doing the work that is allotted to horses and mules in America. It was not uncommon to see men and women dragging harrows across the ploughed fields, and at one place we saw three women laboriously harrowing a field in this way. At another place we saw two men sawing a log into boards. The log was placed on a frame about six feet high, one man stood on top and the other below, and the large ripping saw was drawn up and down, a slow and laborious process for making boards, but labor is cheap here and money among the poor people very scarce and they are glad to get any kind of work at wages so low that would bring actual starvation to the average American laborer.

We sometimes hear complaining at home about hard times, when, in fact, we know nothing about the meaning of the words. Instead of complaining we all ought to be thankful to God that we live in a country so highly blessed, a land where all who are willing to work and will save their money can easily earn a good living and lay something by each year without being compelled to engage in such slavish labor as must be performed by men and women in many parts of Europe. Women have it better, as a rule, in America than in any country in the world, and we are glad of it.

After our very pleasant visit at Schwarzenau we left Marburg and traveled southward to the Rhine, noted in song and story as the most beautiful river in Europe. The Germans sing, "Die Wacht am Rhein" as their national hymn, and the stream seems to be as important to Germany as the Jordan is to Palestine. Along its shores are to be seen many old castles, inhabited in the olden time by war-like, or rather robber-like, noblemen who were constantly at war with each other. They swept down over the fertile valleys from their impregnable castles, robbed the weak with impunity, and lived in sensuality. In those days might made right. But the days of the robber knights have passed away and around each of their old castles, now crumbling to ruins, hangs some legend of the days of chivalry, or some superstitious story of haunted halls, of strange sights and of ghostly visitations. The simple villagers, who believe these old stories, give the castles a wide berth after nightfall. We were much interested in visiting some of these old castles with their deep moats and old drawbridges, but they are fast falling into ruin.

Our stopping-place on the Rhine was at the ancient city of Cologne, where we spent the Lord's Day. So far in our wanderings we have arranged so that when on land we have not traveled on Sunday. The city of Cologne, founded by the Romans B. C. 38, now contains about 260,000 inhabitants, five-sixths of whom are Roman Catholics. It is now among the most prosperous cities of Germany and contains much to interest travelers. We have only space here to refer briefly to the Cathedral and one of the most important churches.

The Cathedral of Cologne is said to be one of the most magnificent Gothic structures in the world. A full description of the great building would involve the writing of a small volume. We give here only a few statements concerning the great structure which impressed us more with its grand architectural design than any building we have ever seen. The foundation stone of the edifice was laid Aug. 15, 1248, with pompous ceremony and the finials were placed on the towers on Aug. 14, 1880, just six hundred and thirty-two years from its beginning. The building, like all cathedrals, is in the shape of a cross and is 466 feet long and 200 feet wide outside measure, and contains a superficial area of 7,359 square yards. Allowing two persons to the yard it would hold nearly 15,000 people. The ridge of the roof is 201 feet high, and the ceiling, which is composed of groined arches, is 145 feet above the pavement. The towers are 515 feet high and are the loftiest church steeples in Europe. The main doorway is 93 feet high and 31 feet wide, while the large windows are 48 feet high and 20 feet wide. Twenty cannon, captured in the war between France and Germany in 1871, were used in casting the great bell which hangs in the tower. It weighs twenty-five tons, and requires the strength of twenty-eight to ring it. The entire cost of the building is estimated at ten million, five hundred thousand dollars.

These facts will give our readers but a faint idea of the Cathedral of Cologne. In order to know what it is, one must visit it and be impressed with its magnificent proportions, the beauty and symmetry of all its parts, and the grandeur of its interior. It is "a poem in stone." Like all great Catholic cathedrals, it has its treasury where may be found a number of so-called sacred relics. We are not especially interested in these things, but to give our readers an idea of how sacredly the relics are preserved we give the following.

We were admitted into the secret treasure chamber of the Cathedral, which is in charge of a priest who showed in his rounded body and full red face that he was well kept and that he did not lack for plenty of beer and wine. He spoke German and French and a mixture of the two with a little English. The first treasure shown us was a magnificent sarcophagus made of beaten gold and studded with 1540 precious stones. It is 6 feet long, 4¾ feet high and a little over 3 feet wide. The sides and ends are decorated with golden figures of the prophets and apostles. The entire shrine is covered with enamelled, chased and filigree ornamentation. It is said to be one of the richest specimens of gold work in Western Europe. Our attendant gravely informed us that within this golden reliquary rested the bones of the Magi, or wise men, who brought gifts to the infant Savior, and he seemed to be certain about it.

The history and tradition concerning these bones is this: Tradition says they were secured by St. Helena, the mother of Constantine the Great, the first Roman Emperor who embraced the Christian faith, and taken to Constantinople and afterward to Milan, Italy. History tells us that when Milan was overthrown in the year 1162, by Frederick Barbarossa, he sent the bones to Cologne, where they were received July 23, 1164, with great rejoicing by the people, and where they have since rested as above described.

Among other relics shown were two thorns from the crown of Christ. A part of the staff of the Apostle Peter and two links of the chain with which he was bound when in prison. Also a magnificent cross studded with emeralds and diamonds, valued at $15,000, worn by the archbishop of Cologne.

It seems strange to us, who have no faith whatever in these things, to find men and women of apparent intelligence who believe as implicitly that the bones of the Magi rest in the golden shrine at Cologne as they believe in the Bible. The craze for relics dates back to the early days of the Roman Catholic church. The mother of Constantine is said to have found most of them. Many of the relics have a recorded history, covering a period of from ten to twelve centuries, but beyond that only dim tradition of the most uncertain character is depended upon. The care with which they are kept, the costly shrines provided for them, their great age, all go to give them added value to the masses of the Roman Catholic church, and accounts, in some part, for the common belief in them.

Take for example the relics in the Cathedral of Aix-la-Chapelle, a city of 100,000 inhabitants, not far from Cologne. Here in a magnificent golden reliquary are kept, what are supposed to be, the robe of the virgin Mary, the swaddling clothes of the infant Savior, the cloth in which the head of John the Baptist was carried, and the linen cloth girded about the loins of Christ on the cross, and these are shown to the people only once every seven years. These relics have an authentic history, dating back to the eighth century and the days of Charlemagne. To us it seems little less than downright sacrilege to make these claims, and yet they are made in apparent good faith, and millions of Catholics believe in them as they believe in the Bible. The leading Catholic papers, even in America, will gravely tell their readers that there is as much evidence back of the bones of the Magi at Cologne, the Holy Coat at Treves, the piece of the true cross at Rome, and the four great relics at Aix-la-Chapelle, as of the Bible itself. Is it to be wondered that the masses of the common people believe in these things and pay large sums of money to see them? Our own feeling is rather one of pity than of contempt for the people who are thus misled. It pays well. There is money in the relic business for the Church of Rome.

But we leave this subject; to us it is not a pleasant one. It illustrates two phases of human character that are responsible for much of the evil and error in this world, cupidity and credulity.

One of the oldest churches in Cologne is that of St. Gereon. It is stated that this good man, together with nearly three hundred of his followers, suffered martyrdom at this place during the persecution of the Christians under the Roman Emperor Diocletian, A. D. 286, and the church was built and named in honor of the martyr. It has all the marks of great age and was undoubtedly built in the early centuries, the style of the architecture being Romanesque. Additions were made to it in 1075 and 1227. In the oldest part of the building is the baptistry in which the rite of baptism was administered by trine immersion until the mode was changed by the church of Rome about the thirteenth century. After this date sprinkling the applicant with water three times declared to be legal baptism, and gradually sprinkling supplanted immersion, until now there is only one cathedral in Roman Catholic Europe where trine immersion is practiced. The Reformation took sprinkling from Rome, although Luther strongly favored and urged trine immersion, and thus the apostolic form of Christian baptism, based on Christ's commission, was changed by a mandate of Rome, and the great majority of Protestant churches are following her order. We have given here a simple historical fact which any one can verify by looking up history on the subject.

Traveling in Europe, one is constantly reminded of the smallness of the various countries. For example, we left Cologne at 8:30 P. M., passed over part of Germany, the entire kingdom of Belgium, passing through Brussels, its capital, part of France, crossed the English Channel from Calais to Dover and reached London at midnight of the same day. It was our misfortune to cross over the Channel in the great gale which occurred on the English Coast on Tuesday night, Oct. 13. The London papers contained lengthy accounts of the destruction wrought by the hurricane. The waves broke over the pier and the train of cars which was standing upon it, to convey the passengers by the night boat to London. Several car windows were broken in by the force of the waves. The passage was a terrible one and the landing frightful. Our boat was washed away from the pier twice before she was moored, and we were compelled to land in a blinding shower of spray and sea water. The water, driven by the force of the wind, pelted against us like hail. By the assistance of the seamen we finally landed, and dripping wet we went into the cold wet cars and were whirled off to London. Truly we have been in perils by the sea, but the Lord hath hitherto helped us and we praise his name. As we think of the terrible experience through which we passed, we feel glad that those of our friends at home who had thought at one time of coming with us, did not have to land at Dover that night. Wife has been quite ill since our arrival here but is better again. We must remain here at least another week. Our trip to the East will be delayed to some extent but it is just as well. The following extract from the London Times shows that it would not be safe to go into Asia at present:

THE CHOLERA.

ALEXANDRIA, OCT. 19.—In consequence of the spread of cholera throughout Syria, seven days' quarantine has been imposed on arrivals from all Syrian ports. The original source of the outbreak was probably Aleppo, where cholera has prevailed more or less continuously during the last six months.—Our Own Correspondent, London Times, Oct. 20.

We shall continue our journey as the Lord opens the way and directs. We long ago learned the truth of the proverb that "Man proposes but God disposes," and we cheerfully submit the whole matter to him who doeth all things well.

OUR MISSION WORK IN SWEDEN AND DENMARK.

AFTER spending some time in the Scandinavian churches, we have learned something of the mission work and its needs, and we propose to give our readers a few thoughts on the subject. The first question usually asked in this practical age is, "Has the mission been a success?" This may be answered both negatively and affirmatively. Looked at from the stand-point of numbers, we should say it has not been a striking success; looked at from the stand-point of the value of a single soul, the success has been great beyond human computation.

Several things operate against the mission in Denmark and Sweden. First, the opposition of the State church. This is a real factor and must be met on every side. It is made manifest in various ways. We gave an instance of the opposition in one form in a recent letter. Second, the disfavor of the Governments. Owing to the fact that our church holds to the peace principle, and are non-combatants, they are not recognized as a religious body. Our ministers are not allowed to solemnize marriage, or to officiate at the burial of the dead. Third, many who unite with the church look towards America for a free home and emigrate, thus depleting the number of members in the church in Scandinavia. Fourth, as in Christ's time, so now, the poor hear the Word gladly. The members are, as a rule, poor and are not able to support the mission, or push the work forward. These are some of the hindrances in the way, and they operate against the work constantly. Looking at these things, the success which has attended the efforts of our brethren is to us surprising, and we can only say the outlook is encouraging.

THE NEEDS OF THE WORK.

First an active, aggressive ministry, and this can only be secured as the means are furnished by the churches in America. Our ministers who are in the work do well, but they must be supported. An allowance must be made for natural characteristics, as well as for the opposition the ministers must meet. To work for the support of a family, and give attention to the mission work is simply out of the question. In a country where labor is cheap, and where, if a man labors, he must give all his time to his employer, there is no hope for a minister to support himself and labor in the mission field. He must give up one or the other.

Another pressing need just now is some assistance for the poor. In answer to a query from Denmark, in reference to keeping the poor, it was decided by Annual Meeting at North Manchester, that a fund should be started for that purpose, free-will offerings to be sent to the writer. The following plan has been drawn up and adopted by all the Scandinavian churches:

1. The District Meeting shall appoint a committee for Sweden and one for Denmark, of three responsible brethren, who shall serve for three years, or until their successors shall have been appointed. Each committee shall have a treasurer, who shall receive all money, place it in a safe bank, and pay it out only by order of the committee.

2. Any one desiring aid shall apply to the elder of the church of which he is a member, and the elder shall have the case carefully investigated by the deacons and then lay it before the church, and if the church grant the request, the elder may call on the Relief Committee for the desired help.

3. No members shall receive help unless they are sick and unable to work, or unless they cannot get work enough to afford them a living. If a man's family refuse to work, they shall receive no help. The committee shall secure work, if possible, for those who cannot obtain labor and pay them for it. No aid shall be given to pay debts.

4. All who receive help shall, if they become able, return the money, or such part of it as they can, to the committee, to be used in assisting others.

5. The churches in Denmark and Sweden shall do all they can to secure money for the relief fund. The following committees were duly appointed by the churches:

Committee for Sweden: Per. Nielsen, Treas.; John Swenssen; Per. Jönsson.

Committee for Denmark: Jacob Hansen, Treas.; Anne M. Ericksen; Jorgen Rasmussen.

The plan, as adopted, is fully in harmony with our method of keeping the poor. The committees are made up of responsible brethren and sisters, and we may rest assured that any money given for the poor will be judiciously used. Owing to the present crop failures in Europe, with consequent high prices and hard times, a free-will offering is asked of our brethren and sisters in America, to assist those who are in need here, and we believe the call will not pass unheeded. It comes in the regular order of our method of church government. Any district or districts, unable to keep their poor, may call for help.

A dear brother in the Far West sent us $10.00, which we found in a letter, delivered to us on board the Aller, at New York. He said, "Give it to the worthy poor in Sweden and Denmark." If that brother could have witnessed the tears of thankfulness with which the money was received, and heard the blessing of heaven called down on the donor, he would have felt that it is more blessed to give than to receive. Help is needed for the poor. Will you not give? If you do, God will bless you. Send your free-will offerings to Bro. Galen B. Royer, Mount Morris, Ill., who will receive and account for them in my stead. Say, "For the poor in Denmark and Sweden." You who have plenty and to spare, will you not remember those who cannot even get enough black bread to supply their hunger? As you surround your richly-spread tables on Thanksgiving Day, think of the poor.

THE BRETHREN OR DUNKARDS*.

Incorporated
(GERMAN BAPTIST BRETHREN CHURCH.)

COMPILED BY D. L. MILLER.

THE Brethren are a large body of Christians, with a membership not far from seventy thousand, whose faith and practice are not generally known outside of their immediate localities. The errors in the books that attempt to describe the BRETHREN, as they call themselves, have been both numerous and lamentable. Starting with Buck's "Theological Works" and ending with the ponderous encyclopedias and standard dictionaries, error after error is found, and the faith and practice of the church have been greatly misrepresented. The statements that the Brethren are celibates, that they discourage marriage, that they do not marry outside of their own Fraternity, that they keep the seventh day Sabbath, that they live in communities, and other similar errors, set forth in the books, always have been without foundation. These misstatements, to be found in nearly all the standard works, show a lack of care in obtaining correct information that is far from commendable.

HISTORY.

Ever since the decline of Primitive Christianity, in the early age of the church, God has had a people who protested against the departures from the usages of the apostolic church. The Brethren come in this line of succession, and the movement which resulted in their closer organization grew out of the great religious awakening which occurred in Germany during the closing years of the seventeenth century, when large numbers, becoming dissatisfied with the lack of spirituality in the State Church, withdrew from its Communion and met together for the worship of God. They were called Separatists, or Pietists, and among them were to be found such men as Jacob Philip Spenner, Herman Francke, the founder of the Orphans' Home and School at Halle, Ernst Christian Hochmann, Alexander Mack, and many other earnest, pious men whose names have become historical. The Pietists were bitterly persecuted by the Reformed and Catholic churches, and were driven from place to place until finally Count Cassimir, of Witgenstein, opened a place of refuge for the persecuted brethren in his province. Here, in the village of Schwarzenau, Alexander Mack, and others, similarly minded, met together to read and study God's Word. They mutually agreed to lay aside all existing creeds, confessions of faith, and catechisms, and search for the truth of God's Book, and, having found it, to follow it wherever it might lead them. They were led to adopt the New Testament as their creed and to declare in favor of a literal observance of all the commandments of the Son of God.

In 1708, a small company, that is to say eight souls, repaired to the river Eder and were buried with Christ in baptism, trine immersion being the mode used. The church was organized, and Alexander Mack was chosen as its first minister, but he has never been regarded as the founder of the church The Brethren claim to follow only Christ, and, as they accept his Word as their rule of faith and practice, the claim is well founded. The infant church increased in numbers rapidly, but even in Witgenstein their peace was soon disturbed, and, although they lived peaceful and harmless lives, the hand of persecution was laid heavily upon them. Mack, in company with Hochman, preached the Word of Truth in many parts of Germany, visiting Holland also. Here they met and formed the acquaintance of William Penn, who was at that time much interested in his colony in the new world. The Brethren were invited to settle in Pennsylvania, and, as they were sorely persecuted, the invitation was accepted.

In 1719 they commenced emigrating to America, and in less than ten years the entire church found itself quietly settled down in the vicinity of Germantown and Philadelphia. From this nucleus, formed in the New World, the church spread southward and westward, and flourishing congregations are now to be found in many of the States. They are, however, most numerous in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska and Kansas. At the Annual Conference, held at Warrensburgh, Mo., 1890, twenty-two States and two foreign countries, Sweden and Denmark, were represented by delegates on the Standing Committee.

FAITH AND PRACTICE.

The Brethren hold the Bible to be the inspired and infallible Word of God, and accept the New Testament as their rule of faith and practice. In the subtleties of speculative theology the church takes but little interest. She is chiefly concerned in giving willing and cheerful obedience to the plain, simple commandments of Christ Jesus. The Brethren are, in every respect, evangelical in their faith. They believe in the Trinity, in the divinity of Christ and of the Holy Spirit, and in future rewards and punishments. Faith, repentance and baptism are held to be conditions of salvation. These three constitute true evangelical conversion, and upon them rests the promise of the forgiveness of sins and the gift of the Holy Ghost.

BAPTISM.

Baptism is administered by trine immersion. After being instructed in the faith and principles of the Gospel, and having faithfully promised to observe the same, the applicant is taken down into the water, and, kneeling, re-affirms his faith in Christ and promises to live faithful until death. He is then baptized for the remission of his sins, into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; the administrator immersing the applicant face forward at the mention of each name in the Trinity. The administrator then lays his hands on the head of the kneeling candidate and offers a brief prayer in behalf of the one baptized, and he rises to be greeted as a brother, with the right hand of fellowship and the kiss of love, to walk in newness of life.

The Brethren follow closely the practice of the apostolic church, and admit none into fellowship until they have been baptized. In the language of Peter to the Pentecostians, they tell all believers to "repent, and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Acts 2: 38. Holding that baptism is only for believers, and those who have repented, they oppose infant baptism. Infants can neither believe nor repent, hence they are not proper subjects for baptism. Christ having sufficiently atoned for them, all children who die before coming to a knowledge of good and evil will be saved.

In defense of trine immersion they hold that the great commission given by Christ, and recorded in Matt. 28: 19, Revised Version, "Baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," teaches a threefold action. As there are three persons in the Trinity, each one of the Divine Three is honored in this form of baptism. As the three Persons constitute one God, and a belief in each of these one faith, so the three dippings constitute one baptism. In favor of their practice they have the testimony of all Greek scholars, who have examined the subject, the practice of the entire Greek church, and reliable history. These all show that trine immersion was the almost universal mode of baptism for centuries succeeding the apostolic age. Changes were gradually made from trine immersion to sprinkling, but the church that made the change, the Roman Catholic, still retains the three actions in applying water to the candidate. Nearly all the Protestant churches that practice sprinkling, retain the same form, thus testifying to the truth that the commission teaches a threefold action in baptism. Their baptism is accepted as valid by all religious denominations of any note whatever.

THE AGAPE, OR FEAST OF LOVE.

The evening before his betrayal and death, our Blessed Master, after having washed his disciples' feet, ate a supper with them and instituted, in connection with this sacred meal, the Communion of the bread and wine. The apostles, led by the Holy Spirit, followed the example of their Great Leader and introduced the agape into the apostolic church. This feast of love, of which all the Christians partook, was a full meal, was eaten in the evening, and is called by the apostle Paul the Lord's Supper. The Communion of the bread and wine was given in connection with this meal. The love-feast was kept up in the primitive church for four centuries, but as the church grew in numbers and wealth, it lost its first love and spirit of fraternity, and the feasts of love were discontinued. The Brethren, in their reformatory movement in 1708 restored these love-feasts, and in this particular still follow the example of Christ and the practice of the apostles and primitive Christians, and keep the feast of love. A full meal is prepared and placed upon tables, used for that purpose, in the church, and all the members partake of the supper.

Before eating supper, the religious rite of washing feet is observed. Their authority for this practice is found in John 13: 1–17, "He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel, and girded himself. After that he poureth water into a basin, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded. . . . If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet: ye also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you." The Brethren do not stand alone in the practice of this rite. The Greek church, with ninety million communicants, has adhered to feet-washing, as she claims, ever since the days of the apostles, and the patriarch of Jerusalem engages in feet-washing to-day near the spot where Jesus himself gave the example and the precept.

In their practice of the ordinance of feet-washing at love-feast occasions the Brethren follow very closely the example of the Master. Water is poured into a basin, a brother girds himself with a towel and washes and wipes his brother's bared feet, and in turn has his feet washed. The rite is in this way performed over the entire congregation. The sisters wash the sisters' feet and all the proprieties of the sexes are most rigidly observed. By this ordinance the Gospel principle of humility is set forth and by its observance all are placed on a common level. The rich and poor stand alike together in the great Brotherhood established by Christ.

After observing the ceremony of feet-washing, a blessing is asked upon the simple meal spread on the tables, and it is eaten with solemnity. It is held to be typical of the great supper at the end of the world, when Christ himself will be master of ceremonies. The important lesson is taught that we are all children of one common family, members of one common brotherhood, having one common purpose in view, and the bond of fraternity and loving fellowship is shown by eating together this sacred meal as did Christ and his disciples and as did the primitive Christians. At the conclusion of the meal thanks are returned and then, as the members are seated around the table, the right hand of fellowship and the kiss of charity are given. The salutation of the kiss of love in worship and in customary greetings, as enjoined by the apostles, is never observed between the sexes.

The Communion is then administered. This consists in partaking of the bread and wine in commemoration of the sufferings and death of our adorable Redeemer. In the Lord's Supper we are pointed forward to the evening of the world, to the great reunion of the saints. In the Communion we are pointed back to the cross. The emblems are passed from hand to hand by the brethren, while the officiating minister breaks the bread and passes the cup to the sisters. After this a season of earnest devotion follows, and then a hymn is sung and the services are closed for the evening. Love-feasts are held in each congregation usually once or twice each year, but as the members visit from congregation to congregation, during the love-feast season, they engage many times in this service during the year.

CHURCH GOVERNMENT.

The Brethren have a republican form of church government. Each congregation is independent in the management of its local affairs, such as the election of deacons, ministers, elders, or bishops, and in matters of local church discipline; but is subject to the General Brotherhood through District and National Conference. A number of congregations, usually in the same State, conveniently located, are formed into a District, and these hold annual conferences, to which each congregation sends two delegates, either lay members, deacons, or ministers. Questions, local to the District, are discussed and settled by the District Conference, but those of a general character are sent to the General Conference, or Annual Meeting, as it is commonly called. This is also a delegated body. The Districts, thirty-two in number, each elect one delegate, who must be an elder, to serve on the Standing Committee, and each congregation, with a membership of two hundred or less, may elect one delegate. Congregations with a larger membership may send two delegates. The delegates may be selected from the laity or the church officials. The Standing Committee and delegates form the official body of the Conference. Any member present may take part in the discussion of questions, but the voting is confined to the delegates, two-thirds of the votes cast being required for a decision.

The General Conference is also a great annual reunion for the Brethren. They come together from all parts of the Brotherhood, and it is not unusual for thousands of them to assemble at the place of Meeting.

The decisions of the Conference are to be adhered to by all the members of the church. An examination of the Book of Minutes of the Annual Meeting shows that questions referring to church doctrine rarely come before the Conference, proving that there has been a firm adherence to the principles of the Gospel, as originally adopted by the church. But the application of those principles in special cases, and the best means to carry them into effect, have been subjects of frequent discussion and decision by the Meeting. The tendency of the Conference and the annual reunions is to unify the Brethren in all their church work, and it is a fact that there is rarely found so large a body of religious people so closely united on the doctrines and principles to which they hold.

Elders, ministers and deacons are elected by the church from among her members, such as she may deem qualified for the important work to which they are called. Each member, without reference to sex, has a right to cast a vote. Ministers, after giving full proof of their faithfulness and ability, are advanced to the "second degree" of the ministry. They are then authorized to baptize, solemnize marriage, and make and fill appointments for preaching the Word. Elders, or bishops, who preside over the congregations, are chosen from the ministers in the second degree. No salaries are paid, but poor ministers, and those who are sent out as missionaries, are properly supported.

A PECULIAR PEOPLE.

The Brethren claim to be, and are, in many respects, a peculiar people. Plain dressing is taught and required, and a general uniformity is observed, but this is regarded as a means to an end. They believe that the New Testament teaches plainness in attire, 1 Tim. 2: 9, 10; 1 Pet. 3: 3, and that, by a general uniformity of habit, marked enough to distinguish the church from the world, Gospel plainness may be made a living fact instead of a dead letter, as it has become in many other churches whose discipline strongly insists on plain dressing.

The Brethren are not allowed to go to law with one of their own number, nor with others, without first asking the counsel of the church, and it is rare indeed for a brother to be engaged in a lawsuit. Among themselves differences are adjusted personally, or by the church, in accordance with the Christian law of trespass given by the Master. Matt. 18: 15-20. The Fraternity is strictly non-resistant, as well as non-litigant. It is held that Christ is the "Prince of Peace," that his Word is "the Gospel of Peace," hence his servants cannot go to war and fight. "For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds." 2 Cor. 10: 4. They take no active part in politics, and "swear not at all." If called upon to testify in the courts, they simply affirm, without raising the hand or kissing the Bible. In this they literally obey the command of Christ who said, "Swear not at all. But let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil." Matt. 5: 34 37. No brother may become a member of any secret or oath-bound society, the Brethren holding that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is fully sufficient for all the wants of humanity. All new converts who are identified with such orders are required to sever their connection with them before they can be adopted into the family of the Brotherhood.

The Brethren hold that the marriage bond can only be dissolved by death. Divorce and re-marriage are practically unknown among the membership. It is held by some that those who have been divorced for a violation of the sanctity of the marriage vow and re-married before conversion, might be received into church fellowship while their former companions were living, but the rule has been against even this much leniency, and they hold, with Paul, that the woman which hath a husband is bound by law to her husband so long as he liveth: but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband. Rom. 7: 2.

They, in compliance with the instruction of the apostle James, 5: 14, 15, anoint the sick with oil. This rite is administered only by the request of the sick. The elders are called and the sick member is raised to a sitting posture. The elder applies the oil to the head three times, saying, "Thou art anointed in the name of the Lord unto the strengthening of thy faith, unto the comforting of thy conscience, and unto a full assurance of the remission of thy sins." The elders then lay their hands on the head of the sick, and offer a prayer for the anointed one.

The church keeps her poor, each congregation looking after her own who may become needy. If a single congregation becomes burdened, she may call for assistance upon her sister congregation, and in this way the needed help is obtained. As members of one common family, all are held by the Fraternity as brethren and sisters entitled to support, both moral and physical, in time of need. They are generous in their hospitality and show much of the spirit of the Master in the practice of this Christian virtue.

On the question of temperance and prohibition the Brethren have, for more than a century, given no uncertain testimony. They are one of the oldest temperance organizations in the United States. More than 100 years ago a decision was passed, forbidding any of the members to engage in the manufacture or sale of intoxicants. They forbid the use of all alcoholic or malt liquors as a beverage, in public or private. They request the members not even to have dealings with saloon-keepers. They discourage the use of tobacco, and the rule is that no brother can be installed in office who uses tobacco without making a promise to quit it. All applicants for baptism, who are addicted to the tobacco habit, are advised to abstain from its use before they are received into church fellowship.

The Fraternity is largely engaged in agricultural pursuits, but men and women in other departments of human endeavor may be found enrolled among its members.

Four schools or colleges are in successful operation, over which the church has a supervisory control. The schools are located at Huntingdon, Pa., Mt. Morris, Ill., Bridgewater, Va., and McPherson, Kans. The church has a well-organized Missionary and Tract Society. The GOSPEL MESSENGER, the organ of the church, is published at Mount Morris, Ill., and is a large and well-edited religious weekly, circulating in nearly every State and Territory in the Union and also in Canada and Europe.

The Brethren are well-known as a quiet, peaceable, unassuming people. Habits of strict economy prevail amongst them, and by their adherence to plainness in dress and living they are, as a rule, well-to-do, and are able to meet their obligations. They enjoy an enviable reputation for honesty in the communities where they live. They manifest a strong devotion to the Bible and are consistently laboring to live out the principles and the spirit of the Man of Sorrows. The church has not, as yet, felt the withering influence of worldlyism within her borders. Caste distinctions and differences, born of human pride, have not entered her doors. Rich and poor, high and low, meet alike as one common family in Christ and the fraternal sentiment is largely developed in her membership. The church has been richly blessed of God and is in a prosperous condition; and before her there is opening a great field for work, in promulgating the principles of primitive and apostolic Christianity,—a work that must be pleasing to her Great Head and that will bring to her a continuation of the divine favor and blessings.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

Sawyer, Kans.—We again have cause to rejoice in the conversion and baptism of one more dear soul. Our council, preparatory to our love-feast, passed off, we trust, to the good of all God's children.—H. F. Brubaker, Nov. 3.

To the Delegates of the Middle District of Iowa, Minnesota, and Southern Dakota.—Our next meeting will be held on the last Monday of November, in the Kingsley church, four miles south-east of Kingsley, Woodbury County. Delegates will have to come on Saturday by rail. Those coming from the North should come to Cherokee and thence to Pierson, by way of Correctionville, where you will be met with conveyance. We want a good representation.—J. W. Trostle.

River, Ind.—We spent five weeks in Northern Illinois, visiting my wife's children, also many of the members and friends. We reached home Nov. 3, well pleased with our trip. We thank the Lord for our safe return. We bless God for the privilege of attending two of the most pleasant Communion meetings we ever attended. We refer to the Silver Creek feast, near Mt. Morris, and the one at Pine Creek. They were largely attended, by members as well as others. The houses, though quite large, were well filled with members. Very few, not members, could find room in either of the houses. It was said that there were as many outside as in. What made these meetings especially pleasant and enjoyable was the profound quietness both inside and outside of the houses. Even after services, when going away, we heard no loud talking or laughing. From the general conduct one would have concluded that Christianity in Illinois is almost universal. I like the way the Brethren in Illinois conduct their love-feasts. We also attended quite a number of other meetings. We attended four preaching services in the College Chapel, and were well pleased to see so large an attendance of young brethren and sisters. I never before saw so many young people at a Communion meeting. O Lord, bless them and keep them close to thee! I also met with the Bible Class a few times, and I was well pleased with the work. I think that class should be increased, and hope it will be. I pray God's blessing to rest upon the school in general, as well as upon all those engaged in the work of the GOSPEL MESSENGER. May God keep us all humble! We also pray God's blessing to rest upon all the members for kindness shown us. And especially do we feel grateful for the substantial assistance received from the members at Mt. Morris and Pine Creek.—Samuel Murray, Nov. 7.

The Gospel Messenger

Is the recognized organ of the German Baptist or Brethren's church, and advocates the form of doctrine taught in the New Testament and pleads for a return to apostolic and primitive Christianity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and maintains that Faith toward God, Repentance from dead works, Regeneration of the heart as Mind, baptism by Trine Immersion for remission of sins unto the reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, are the means of adoption into the household of God,—the church militant.

It also maintains that Feet-washing, as taught in John 13, both by example and command of Jesus, should be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper, instituted by Christ and as universally observed by the apostles and the early Christians, is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That the principle of Plain Dressing and of Non-conformity to the world, as taught in the New Testament, should be observed by the followers of Christ.

That the Scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, James 5: 14, is binding upon all Christians.

It also advocates the church's duty to support Missionary and Tract Work, thus giving to the Lord for the spread of the Gospel and for the conversion of sinners.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

THE GOSPEL OF PEACE.

BY I. D. PARKER.

THE great need of all men is peace,—peace with God, peace with one another, and peace with themselves. Even those who engage in carnal warfare or in the fruitless fight against God, love not the field of conflict, only as they hope in some way, faint as that hope may be, to obtain their longings for peace.

To meet this want the Divine Father gave us his blessed Gospel of peace. As there is no salvation without peace, so there are no means to save, unless those means contain the principles of peace. Hence a gospel that saves must contain principles, every one of which breathes forth the spirit of peace, appealing to the higher nature of man for its support, and gaining its victories by wielding the spiritual weapons of warfare. These weapons, which, Paul says, "are mighty through God to the pulling down of the strongholds of sin," are not directed by the carnal mind, or stained with human blood.

Such a Gospel must emanate from a God of peace and be carried to those whom it proposes to save by the Prince of Peace. Now if these statements and conclusions are correct, then no one who seeks the "peace that passeth all understanding," is justified, or can hope for victory while wearing the armor of an earthly kingdom. Let us elucidate: That the Gospel of Christ is the means and the only means of salvation, is not questioned by those who accept it as the Word of God, and the nearest approach of the finite to the Infinite reveals all the attributes of God harmoniously engaged in perfecting our peace; hence he is called the "author of peace." 1 Cor. 14: 33.

That he led the armies of ancient Israel to battle and thus put down moral evil with the sword, does not license the subjects of his peaceable kingdom, in the absence of command or precept, to resist evil with evil. On the contrary, Jesus teaches us, in Matt. 5: 44, 45, "to love our enemies, to bless them that curse us, to do good to them that hate us," etc, "that we may be the children of our Father which is in heaven." Can we be his children and at the same time violate these principles of peace? Is it not most reasonable to conclude that the author of these principles governs his kingdom,—designed to accomplish the glorious work of saving souls,—with a Gospel adverse to strife and bloodshed? The prophet speaks of him, who brought this Gospel to us, as the "Prince of Peace." Isa. 9: 6. His mission, expressed in angel song, Luke 2: 14, was, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good will to men" How difficult to conceive of one with such a name and such a mission bringing a Gospel that teaches anything adverse to peace or permits his subjects to engage in carnal strife and bloodshed! Matt. 10: 34 and Luke 12: 51 must refer to the effect of his peaceful and self-denying doctrine, when brought to bear against those who reject him, or else we would have a kingdom divided against itself,—Jesus casting out devils through Beelzebub, the prince of devils,—the very thing the Pharisees charged him with. Hear the Prince of Peace with reference to the nature of his kingdom: "My kingdom is not of this world, or else would my servants fight," etc. Behold the contrast:

HEAVENLY.	EARTHLY.
King of peace.	King of strife, contention and war.
Subjects – peaceful, kind, and loving.	Quarrelsome, revengeful, and hateful.
Fruits—love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance.	Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings.
Law founded upon love and sacrifice.	Hatred and selfishness.
Perpetuated by moral suasion.	By the sword and bayonet.

Paul says in Rom. 14: 17, "For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost." From the nature and contrast of the two kingdoms we must conclude that the Gospel is one of peace in all its bearings upon the moral actions of men.

David says in Ps. 29: 11, "The Lord will bless his people with peace." This he did when he reconciled them to God through the Gospel of peace. Jesus said to the angry waves, "Peace, be still," to Peter, "Put up thy sword into its sheath," and to his disciples, John 14: 27, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you." In Matt. 5: 9 he promises blessings to peace-makers. In Mark 9: 50 he commanded his disciples to "have peace one with another." He authorized Peter to say in 1 Pet. 3: 11, "Seek peace and pursue it."

Paul to the Hebrews (12: 14) writes: "Follow peace with all men," and to the Romans (12: 18), "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men." In Col. 3: 15 he says, "Let the peace of God rule in your hearts to the which also ye are called in one body." What a gentle but mighty conqueror is peace,—moving onward like a river, breaking through, or rising above, every obstacle in its course. The Christian's calling is one of peace,—higher and nobler than earth can give. A God of peace, a Savior of peace, a Gospel of peace, a kingdom of peace, will bring us to a glorious and peaceful end. Dear reader, if this sweet peace is not yours, may you find it in him who alone can speak peace to the soul!

"IF THY BROTHER TRESPASS AGAINST THEE."

BY D. E. PRICE.

"Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican."—Matt. 18: 15, 16, 17.

THE instructions given by our Savior in Matt. 18 are sometimes misapplied. When a brother commits a fault against the body, the church, or, for instance, such crimes as are enumerated by the Apostle Paul in 1 Cor. 5, and others of similar nature, such transgressions cannot be adjusted by Matt. 18 If I go to him and tell him his fault, and he confesses his wrong to me only, that will not adjust the matter, because the fault was not committed only against me, but against the whole body: hence it must be brought before the church as a body. Pay particular attention to the reading, "If thy brother trespass against thee, (in the singular number) go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone," etc

If this rule were strictly adhered to, both in the letter and the spirit, we would seldom have individual difficulties brought before the church. The reason why we so often do not succeed is this, We do not go to our erring brother with the right object in view, and, in consequence, are led, or governed by the wrong spirit, and almost invariably meet about the same kind of a spirit we take with us, and before we get through, we may have still greater trouble on hand.

What is the object in going to our brother and telling him his fault? Is it to get satisfaction for the wrong committed against us, or because he has done us a wrong? If either of these, or any other motive of a similar nature is the cause, we are not in the right spirit, but we should go to our brother because he has done wrong, because he has gone astray, and we are in search of the lost, endeavoring to reclaim him. Christ shows this plainly when he makes use of the parable of the lost sheep, right in connection with the subject, "How think ye? If a man have a hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray? And if so be that he find it, verily I say unto you, he rejoiceth more over that sheep than the ninety and nine that went not astray. Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish." The above language teaches us plainly what our object, or motive should be when we reprove one another for our faults.

We all made the solemn vow before we were initiated into the church by baptism, that we would adhere to this rule; but oh, how often do we violate our solemn obligations! If a brother commits a fault against us, we are so inclined to tell it to everybody else, and probably to the world, instead of going to our brother as directed.

The object in first going alone is to reclaim, or gain, our brother, but if, in spite of our best efforts, he will not repent, then we are to take one or two more, and probably we can then succeed. If not, we now have testimony to bring it before the church; and if the church decides he has done wrong, and he acknowledges his fault, we are still under obligations to forgive him. If he will not hear the church, then we are to hold him as a heathen man and a publican, or withdraw church fellowship from him.

Some assume the position that it means that the offended brother only shall withdraw fellowship from him because the Scripture reads, "Let him be unto THEE," (in the singular number). They think this means only the offended member, and not the church; but since the case is now before the church, the pronoun thee applies to the church, and not to the individual alone. Such a position as the former would be absurd. How could I withdraw fellowship from a brother, if he were held in fellowship by the church, without withdrawing from the church myself? If he were allowed by the church to unite with them in the holy ordinances, I, in order to hold him as a heathen man and a publican, would be obliged, or compelled, to withdraw from the Communion table. Then Peter said, "Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times? Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times: but, Until seventy times seven." Matt. 18: 21, 22. In Luke 17: 3, 4, 5, we read, "Take heed to yourselves: If thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him. And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn again to thee, saying, I repent; thou shalt forgive him. And the apostles said unto the Lord, Increase our faith." This teaches us that we are under as much obligation to forgive our erring brother when he says he repents, as we are to tell him of his fault. I have heard brethren say, when the acknowledgment, required by the church, was made, "I will forgive but will never forget." When we pray the Lord's prayer, we say, "Forgive our debts as we forgive our debtors," which means, in the same proportion that we forgive others, we ask the Lord to forgive us. We do not want the Lord to remember our sins against us. I think we have in substance, if not exactly in word, If ye do not from the heart forgive your brethren their trespasses, neither will your Heavenly Father forgive you.

When this beautiful rule is adhered to strictly from the heart, when proper acknowledgments are made, and a reconciliation is effected, we firmly believe that the parties concerned will have more confidence in one another than they had before, because each one sees that the other is honest in his purposes.

THE CHRISTIAN MOTHER.

BY B. C. MOOMAW.

More precious than refined and purest gold,
Or radiant pearls. O who can tell her worth:
Though heavenly gems were cast in mortal mould,
Heaven has done more for many a lowly hearth.
Excellent gift: a treasure from above:
Renewed pledge of everlasting love.

If we were asked to name one of the most striking and beautiful fruits of Christianity, we would immediately point to Christian motherhood. No one who is not familiar with the utter degradation of the heathen mother,—a degradation which is almost as notorious among the highly civilized Greek and Roman heathen as among the heathen of our own times,—can form a just conception of the blessed difference which Christianity exhibits in this respect.

The natural instinct of maternal affection is, of course, more or less strongly developed among all peoples, but it is greatly diminished and debased under the blighting touch of heathenism. In ancient times thousands of children were slaughtered, with inconceivable torture, in the horrible rites of Moloch. The story of those dreadful crimes makes one lose faith in human nature, and think, that, instead of men, there must have been a race of incarnate devils. But thousands of Chinese mothers, in our own day, strangle their infants, without remorse, and fling their bodies into the public pit, provided for that purpose. The Hindoo mother throws her babe alive into the Ganges, to be food for the crocodiles.

At the best, motherhood among the heathen is a martyrdom and a curse to the helpless child, and ruinous in its effect upon his moral nature. Heathen motherhood is, to-day, the strongest perpetuating agency of heathenism, as it inevitably plunges each generation, without moral restraint, into the impenetrable darkness of superstition, ignorance, and vice.

What an infinite difference does this comparison reveal when we are thus enabled to see how the Christian religion has elevated, purified, and consecrated motherhood! Here it has borne its most blessed fruits, and established the strongest possible guaranty of an enduring and ever-brightening Christian civilization. The Church, the State, society, liberty, all, are founded upon the Christian home, presided over by the Christian mother, as the most effectual agency for their perpetuation and elevation. The strong and beautiful character which springs up under her gentle but magic touch, is the great tower of strength to every cause of truth, of virtue, and of humanity.

Now and then we hear some discouraged or doubting soul exclaim, "What can a woman do?" But what is it a woman cannot do, if she is consecrated, if she is Christ's, if she has faith, if she prays? Under God she is the invincible power behind the throne of moral supremacy. She wields, as no other can, those mighty levers of influence which have so often proved stronger than material force,—self-denial, gentleness, love.

There is a beautiful legend which illustrates this truth. Once there arose a controversy between the four winds as to which was the most powerful. To settle it they agreed to try their strength on a little bud which was just beginning to peep out into the big world. First came the cold, harsh North Wind from the frozen Arctic, and blew upon the bud; then came the loud, blustering West Wind, and tried all his furious strength; then came the damp, depressing East Wind; but the little bud gathered its mantle of green more closely around the treasure of its heart, and refused to come forth. Then came the gentle South Wind, with its warm, fragrant breath, and whispered to the bud, and immediately it opened all its portals, and spread abroad its radiant bloom.

Self-sacrifice for others is the highest Christian virtue, and the Christian mother exemplifies it more frequently and more beautifully than perhaps any one else. This is one secret of her marvelous influence for good. Her children may go out from her, and, exposed to evil influences, may fall under the power of unbelief; but they can never doubt that mother's sincerity, that mother's self-denying love, that mother's religion. They may even try to break away from all restraints, but that mother's influence, that mother's prayers, will follow them to the ends of the earth, and to the very threshold of hell. With a mighty and an outstretched arm the Christian mother's prayer will snatch her child from the verge of perdition itself. If she has been persistent and untiring in seeking to impress upon her children the right influences, teaching them from their earliest youth to fear God, to love the Lord Jesus Christ, teaching them how to pray; how to do good, and how to shun evil; how to love righteousness, and hate iniquity, though, for awhile, any of them should go astray, in their inexperience of the world, yet they will surely come back again to the paths of virtue and truth.

Let no Christian mother suffer herself to form an inadequate conception of her high calling. That little one whose first awaking recognition smiles a sweet delight into the mother's soul, whose innocent prattle and pattering footsteps fall so lightly on her heart,—that child, IS IMMORTAL. It will be living when the sun is blotted out. On earth all the possibilities and opportunities of usefulness and power await it. After that, ETERNITY.

Mother, your hand can reach, can open a door for that child, either on this side, or on that,—the one leading through a noble life, to heaven, the other, from infamy to hell. Oh do not underrate the infinite possibilities which God has placed in your hand, concerning the future of that child. Save that son! Save that daughter! Your love, your prayer, your gentle perseverance, and good example, can do it. Doubt it not! Commit your children continually unto God, as unto a faithful Creator, who will keep that which is given into his hands.

I cannot close this article without a tribute of love to my own sainted mother. She was truly a hand-maiden of the Lord, a beautiful reflection of that exquisite picture of the perfect woman, in the last chapter of Proverbs. Had the following words been written for her alone they could not have been more fitting: "She stretcheth out her hand to the poor; yea she reacheth forth her hands to the needy." "She openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness." "She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness." "Her children arise up and call her blessed." "Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all." A thousand years would not suffice to take away the memory of that dear mother, or weaken the influence of her beautiful life. She is in heaven now, and the solemn and mysterious future holds for me, among others, this one joyful expectation, to meet her again when the troublesome journey of life is over. To her precious memory I affectionately inscribe this essay:

"Through all the years her gentle hand
E'er led us to a better land;
And all her love one burden bore,
Or lavished all its golden store,
To serve her God with holy life,
And patience, in the world's rude strife,
And tireless ministry of good
To all who in her circle stood.
It was a light divinely given,
And soon it fled to shine in heaven;
So shall her memory ever be
A bright and beckoning star, to me."

FROM THE FIELD

"Go, work in my vineyard."

From Cartersville, Va.

We are few in number, but are still striving, by the grace of God, to work for the Master. We are made to feel sad and almost discouraged, to think that Bro. Bowser's stay will be so short. He will leave us shortly. Please remember us in that trying hour, for we will be as sheep without a shepherd, but I trust the Lord will supply us with another good leader. We are happy to know that we have a Shepherd who will never leave us alone,—one who is ever by our side. May he give us grace for our trials we have to pass through.

I accompanied Bro. Bowser and family over to Goochland County,—six miles from us,—last Saturday evening, where he preached on the next day for the benefit of sister Tull and others. The attendance and interest were good. We are happy to meet with loved ones, but, oh, the pangs when the time comes for us to part! But if we part, and have a hope of meeting again, it is much better for us to bear the parting, than otherwise. Only a week ago this evening a young man was taken without warning. He was slating a house, and the scaffold gave away, so that he fell and broke his skull. He lived sixteen hours. On the day before he attended meeting and was well. We have no lease for our lives, so let us be ready when the Master calls. FLORIDA J. E. ETTER.

Nov. 2.

Notes from the Second District of West Virginia.

Our love-feast at this place was held Oct. 24 and 25. The ministering brethren from a distance were W. Taylor Sines, B. F. Satterfield, and W. R. Murphy. Fair order prevailed, considering the crowded house. Marked attention was paid to the Word preached. One grand feature was noticed,—all the members present were at the tables save one. We think all should live so that when these seasons come around, they might be worthy communicants. One sister, who never had the privilege to attend a meeting of this kind before, remarked, "It was the grandest sight and the most blessed privilege I ever enjoyed."

No One Is Too Old To Learn!

WERE the readers of the MESSENGER, who have children to educate away from home, to spend a day or two visiting Mt Morris College, they would send them here to school. The following are a few of the reasons for the above assertion: The attendance is such as to afford the most advantageous classification of the students. The facilities for learning are therefore most excellent. The instructors take pleasure in assisting the students. The adage, "No one is too old to learn," is practically demonstrated here No matter how old one is, or how little he knows, he finds classes here to suit. It is decidedly

"THE Christian Preacher's Companion" is the title of a neat little work, sent us by R. B. Neal, Centerville, Kentucky. The work was prepared by Alexander Campbell, and has been out of print for some years. It contains the testimony of unbelieving Jews and pagans in support of Christianity, and will prove of great value to those who desire to read up on this line of controversy. Few men knew better how to write a work of this class than Eld. Campbell. Price, 50 cents.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

IN speaking of secret societies, we mean such as have pledged their members together in secrecy and are known to each other by signs, grips and pass-words. As such, they are growing to be a power in both state and church, and therefore it becomes us, as a Christian people, to examine into their character and learn whether the power, thus exerted, is for good or for evil.

This it is our purpose to do, and in doing so we will treat them with the same respect and deference that we would any other worldly organization, because such we believe them to be, and to such as have nothing better, we have but little to say. Our intention is to discuss them from a religious stand-point and see whether or not Christian people have any use for them, or whether it is right for the professed followers of Christ to be identified with secret societies.

The church of the Brethren or Dunkers has, as a Christian society, from the beginning taken the broad view that God has, in all ages, through his law and will, made ample provisions for his people, physically, morally and spiritually, and therefore they refuse to accept any of the secret organizations gotten up through man's wisdom,—organizations that propose to do that for which God has made such full provisions.

As early as the year 1804 it was decided, in Annual Conference that no one could be held in fellowship with the church who belonged to the Freemasons. At later Meetings the same decision has been passed in regard to all other secret and oath-bound societies and orders that have been gotten up through the inventions of human wisdom. It is, therefore, plainly understood that no person can be a member and in fellowship with the church who is, at the same time, a member of a secret and oath-bound society. This decision has been made after due deliberation and a careful and prayerful examination of the words and spirit of the Bible and the Gospel of Christ. We feel, therefore, that for the decision we are able to give good and sufficient reasons.

We do not expect that the position which we take in regard to this question will be satisfactory to the earnest seeker simply by saying that the church has so decided, as churches have made decisions which were not in harmony with either the letter or spirit of the Gospel. Therefore, we feel that when a church makes decisions she ought to be ready and willing to give satisfactory reasons why she so decides. This we now propose to do, and we do it with the hope that our reasons may command the decision to the careful consideration of the reader.

Our first reason is that secret societies are not of God, but are the inventions of man's wisdom.

When God made man he amply provided for all his wants, but Satan told him that there was something more needed to perfect his happiness, and by giving heed to this temptation he fell into the grasp and power of sin. Thus, in seeking for the better, outside of God's ways, men lost the good that they were then enjoying and were terribly disappointed in the promised good. But notwithstanding their disobedience and fall, God continued his willingness to provide for them and gave them a law, or rule, which, if obeyed, would give them all the happiness that it would be possible for them to enjoy in their fallen state.

In the first-born, Cain and Abel, we have shown to us the blessings of obedience, and being satisfied with God's ways, and the curse that followed disobedience and man's ways. Abel was satisfied with God's ways and offered to him the acceptable sacrifice, but Cain resorted to the invention of his own wisdom and offered his bloodless sacrifice which God could not accept. The result was, he became angry towards his brother and slew him,—a very common result with those who reject God and lean on their own wisdom. The descendants of Cain were the fathers of inventions, as their history shows, and it was because they rejected God and sought their highest good through their own wisdom.

So it has been with those who reject God's ways ever since. They make flesh their arm, lean upon their own strength, and are continually seeking out ways and means of their own, for their good and enjoyment. They reject God's ways and depend upon their own inventions.

Saul rejected God and his ways until God rejected him, then it was that he resorted to the witch of Endor and there learned the folly of the course in which he had been going. David complains against Israel while in the wilderness. They were God's chosen people, and, though passing through a barren wilderness, he had made ample provisions for all their wants,—as he does for us now,—and yet they were not satisfied; they desired a better way. They gave heed to the temptation of sin and sought after the better way by joining themselves to Baal-peor, "and they ate the sacrifices of the dead. Thus they provoked the anger of God with their inventions and the plagues broke in upon them." This was going away from God's ways to the ways and wisdom of men and we have the results that followed.

Solomon says that "God made men upright, but they have sought out many inventions." Thus it has always been with those who are not satisfied with the provisions which God has made. It has been one invention after another to find that good which can be found alone in God.

Prominent among these inventions we class secret, oath-bound societies. They are not of God but positively and decidedly of the world and from those who did not find their sufficiency in God's way, which is beneficent and beneficiary far above anything that human wisdom can invent.

Great antiquity is claimed for these orders, especially of Masonry, which, by some, is dated as far back as the building of Solomon's temple. Of course, this is a claim without a shadow of evidence, and the learned author of the "People's Encyclopedia" well says: "Its origin is obscure." It is said to have originated in England in 674, and in Scotland in 1140. But the Grand Lodge of England dates from 1738. Thus it is seen that there can be no claims for great antiquity unless its votaries are willing to accept as its founders the descendants of Cain, and those who, like them, rejected God and sought their happiness through their own inventions.

But no matter what the date of the origin may be there can be no evidence given anywhere that God had anything to do with its origin. Indeed, the fact that these societies exist outside and independent of the church, claiming what they do, is sufficient evidence that they are not of God.

The second reason we give is, we have no precedent for such societies, either in the life and precept of Christ or of his disciples.

In the New Testament Scriptures we have positively but one organization for the followers of Christ. That is the church, which is sufficiently comprehensive and beneficiary to meet all the wants of God's people whether they be Greek, Jew, or Gentile. In its rules and regulations is embodied every known duty of man to man as a Christian Brotherhood, as well as toward those who are outside of the kingdom of grace, so that there is no room, no need, or no provision made for any beneficiary society, outside of the Christian church. Therefore no man can connect himself with any other society for personal good, or to extend benefits to others, without stepping down from that which is higher and better to that which is lower and worse.

It is virtually ignoring the Author of the greatest scheme for the accomplishment of human good that was ever introduced into the world. The scheme of salvation, as embodied in the church, contains all, and every possible element for human good,—physically, morally and spiritually. In its provisions for the people, in all their various conditions, it is cosmopolitan for all ages and all time. Indeed, it is the perfect and the only perfect society that has ever been formed in the world, and therefore the Christian needs nothing more, and should desire nothing less.

Our third reason is that secret societies and their designs are not in harmony with Christ's methods of doing good. He brought the scheme of redemption into the world for the purpose of doing man good. He knew what poor, miserable man needed to liberate him from the bondage of sin, and to make him good and happy, and this he made manifest, not to the few that were secreted somewhere within barred, locked and guarded doors, who were bound by a terrible oath not to reveal or divulge it on the outside, but in the crowded cities, by the seaside, in the homes of the rich and poor, as well as to the beggars who sat by the wayside, begging. To the High-priest he said: "I spake openly to the world; I even taught in the synagogue, and in the Temple whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing." The good that he brought was intended for all, and therefore his work was to make it manifest, so that all could receive it. It is represented as the light of the world, and therefore not to be hid under the bushel, or in the lodge, but to be placed on the candlestick that all might see and receive its saving power. His ministrations were alike free to all who felt the need. He went about doing good, and it was a public ministry,—nothing concealed, all revealed.

The same beneficent spirit was to characterize his followers, and in its primitive purity it was shown by those who were the called after his purpose. They knew no bonds and no pledges, but the bond of love, and the fellowship of the saints. The church of the Living God was their highest ideal of right living, and right doing, and they were right, for therein was the fullness of wisdom. We do not say that there is no good connected with secret orders, but we do say that whatever good may be there, it must necessarily be short of the good that ought to be, and is found in the church of Christ. As the church of Christ is the source and fountain head of all good, why should we not remain at the source for it, and thus get it in all its fullness and purity? And if we have good to give to others, we should give it as did the Christ,—openly and freely, to all in need.

Our fourth reason why we are opposed to secret societies is on account of the oath of secrecy and its character. Just what the character of this oath is, we do not know practically. But if it is anything like what it is represented to be, there ought to be no question as to whether or no we, as Christians, should take it. To do a thing so barbarous and heathenish is a disgrace to Christian manhood.

How men, making any pretensions to Christianity, can take an oath of this kind, and thus pledge themselves to secrecy which, if a good thing, ought to be revealed, we fail to comprehend. But such is the way of wrong when once entered. It is a terrible stride downward, and a very difficult thing to go upward again. Few men who can be induced to pass the ordeal of entering the lodge, have the manhood to stop at the critical moment. Rather than be scoffed at, they will risk the frowns of an offended God and pass through. There are, however, a few who have dared to stop and refuse to take an oath that ought to shock the ears, and deaden the soul of a heathen, or an uncivilized Indian. We know of one, at least, who had consented to enter the lodge, and, though then unconverted, when he came to taking the oath, determinedly refused to do so, and went no further. His experience, thus far, satisfied him fully and forever as to the propriety of lodgism. Since then, he has become a church member, and he speaks against the lodge with no uncertain sound.

If we had enough such men who fear God more than they do the power of sin, fewer would pass through the shameful ordeal which those are compelled to pass who wish to become members of the lodge.

We are told that the processes of initiation are different in the different orders, and that some are less objectionable than others. This may be true, but no Christian is justifiable in entering into any association without first knowing its character. The better a thing is the more it should be made known, and the good in it ought to be the incentive for accepting. It is a sin against God and man to conceal that which is good for the world behind a terrible oath. May the Father save the world from such good!

Our fifth reason in opposing secret societies is the professed religious character of the lodge, especially those in which the name of Christ is forbidden to be used in prayer. Think of Christians being associated in a way in which they, in prayer, dare not use the name of the Christ that died to save their souls from perdition. How devils must laugh at such prayers and such Christians? O, can it be that angels rejoiced when heralding the glad tidings of great joy to the world, and yet poor, sinful man, the subject for all this good, will, by an oath, have his tongue so tied that he dare not lisp, in prayer, the blessed name?

A Christless lodge is surely no place for a Christ-loving and Christ-honoring soul. But it is said that such regulations are necessary because in these brotherhoods are represented those who do not believe in the Christ. All the worse for this, and we offer it as our Sixth reason against the lodge,—the unequal yoking. These brotherhoods form an association in which there is the unequal yoking, forbidden by the religion of the Scriptures. "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." This is a yoking that cannot be sanctioned by God because he wants his people not only to work, but to work together. In our uniting with the church we not only become a yoke-fellow with Christ, but also with one another. Receiving the same spirit, we all become like him, and therefore like one another. Thus being of the same mind and yoked together, we can all pull together, and, in this way, do the work that is given us to do. But when we are yoked with unbelievers, this unity of purpose is destroyed, and nothing can be accomplished for the Lord. How can the man who professes and believes in the atonement of Christ work and pray with the one who does not? This yoking together with unbelievers is done in the lodge, and therefore it is no place for the Christian.

We remember, years ago, of standing beside the grave where an aged minister performed the burial service of a member of the lodge. Our soul was chilled at the empty form, the hollow service, and the Christless prayer. We went away from that grave, fully convinced that such organizations are both Christless and Godless, as God cannot be honored when his Son is disgraced.

Our seventh objection to secret societies is that they are robbing the church of its glory, power, and usefulness. Its first tendency is to alienate church members away from the regular church services, and attract them to the lodge meetings. The associations tend to blunt religious feelings and convictions, so that, by degrees, the love for the simple worship of God, as found in his house, abates, while it grows for the lodge associations, and in this way the glory of the church is lost to the people, and the power of the service, and the ministry is proportionately lost. This is being sensibly felt by ministers of all the churches. Not only is it felt in this way, but the lodge is also interfering with the support of the church. The vast amount of money that is paid for the support of the lodges,—paying the officers, and building expensive lodge halls, is telling on the finances of the people, and as a result there is less left for the use of the church.

But it is said that many of the ministers of the different churches are members of these societies. Yes, and be it said to their shame! But some of them feel that they are almost driven to it, because the lodges are becoming a greater power for protection and support than the church, and they are willing to risk themselves, in case of need, to them rather than the charities of the church. Sad will be the day when even professed ministers of the Gospel turn away from the church, to worldly organizations for charity and support in old age. But such seems to be the tendency, and because of this and other worldly advantages, the shepherds are following the sheep into other folds that they may get pasture suitable to their wants. Surely, the church is being shorn of her glory and power!

Our eighth reason for opposing the lodge is that its charities and beneficiaries are selfish and, therefore, not in harmony with the spirit and teachings of Christ. Do good to all men is the charity of the Christ. Do good to my brother only is the principle of the lodge. By a most binding oath they are bound to stand by each other, not only in the right, but also in the wrong. This is often done to the great injury of those who are thus related. So manifest has the carrying out of this principle become, that even our courts of justice have, in many cases, become a farce and a sham. It is impossible to have a brother of the lodge convicted of crime before judges, lawyers, and a jury of the same Brotherhood. A beneficiary society that covers up crime and gives license to wrong is a threatening danger to our country, and is in no way in harmony with the higher code of Christian law which does the good to all men. The whole system is founded and built on a selfishness that is antagonistic to the intent and purpose of the Gospel, and therefore should be discountenanced by all Gospel-loving people.

The last reason that we have to offer at this time, is, that the Christian has no need for such organization. The church of Christ has in it all that is needed for man's happiness in this world, and in the world to come. Truly has David said: "The Lord supplieth all my needs." We are the sheep of his fold. He will make us to lie down in green pastures, and lead us by the still waters. Dear reader, is it not true that Jesus is all-sufficient,—that the society which he has established is better than anything that it is possible for man to devise? The relationship is that of a loving family. We are brethren and sisters in the best and purest sense. And then, as the family of God, we have possibilities for enjoyment and good that can be had nowhere else. God, who is the source of all blessings, temporal and spiritual, is the Father, and Christ, who redeemed us, is the elder brother. In such a family, such a church, such a society, can we not get enough? If not, to whom shall we go? Will we go to a society, founded by men who know not God, and whose only tie, to bind them together, is an unsanctified oath? No, dear reader, if you wish to live a peaceful and useful life while here, and enjoy heaven hereafter, give your all to him who hath said: "First seek the kingdom of God," and all these things that are necessary for time and for eternity,—shall be added. Become a member of this kingdom,—this society, and you will need no other. The Blessed Christ says: "If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." Let us all abide in Christ and we shall have enough.

ESSAYS.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

FOR HIS SAKE.

You have read of the Moslem palace—
The marvelous fane that stands
On the banks of the distant Junna,
The wonder of all the lands.

And as you read, you questioned
Right wonderingly, as you must,
"Why rear such a noble palace,
To shelter a woman's dust?"

Why rear it? The shah had promised
His beautiful Nourmahal
To do it, because he loved her,
He loved her—and that was all!

So minaret, wall and column,
And tower and dome above—
All tell of a sacred promise,
And utter the accent—Love.

We know of another temple,
A grander than Hindushrine,
The splendor of whose perfections
Is mystical, strange, divine.

We have read of its deep foundations,
Which neither the frost nor flood
Nor forces of earth can weaken,
Cemented in tears and blood.

That, chosen with skill transcendent,
By wisdom that fills the throne,
Was quarried and hewn and polished
Its wonderful corner-stone.

So vast is its scale proportioned,
So lofty its turrets rise,
That the pile in its finished glory
Will reach to the very skies.

The flow of the silent Kedron,
The roses of Sharon fair;
Gethsemane's sacred olives
And cedars, around it there.

The plan of the temple, only
Its architect understands;
And yet he accepts—(oh, wonder!)
The helping of human hands!

And so for the work's progression,
He is willing that great and small
Should bring their bits of carving,
As needed, to fill the wall.

Oh, not to the dead—but the living,
We rear on the earth He trod
This fane to his lasting glory—
This church to the Christ of God.

For over the church's portal,
Each pillar and arch above,
The Master has set His signet,
And graven his watchword—Love.

"THE SOWER SOWETH THE WORD."

BY B. C. MOOMAW.

Number One.

REMARKABLE men, living in distant ages, and widely-separated nations of the world, have enunciated the leading principles of ethical, metaphysical, and social philosophy. Four hundred years before Christ, Plato (sometimes called the divine, on account of the superior elevation of his mind), and his more celebrated pupil, Aristotle, expounded these principles in a system so consistent and compact as to win the admiration and numerous discipleship of all succeeding generations.

Five hundred years before Christ, Confucius, the sage of China, set forth the same principles, in a more disjointed form, without any apparent unity of design, but with a remarkable display of proverbial wisdom. It cannot be said that the seed sown by these ancient preceptors of so large a part of mankind has been without good results. But this can be said, that while they were bright and shining lights, in comparison with the surrounding darkness, their light was wholly secular, and pointed out no new way, no way of life, no way of deliverance to a lost and wandering race. They made the house we live in here more comfortable, perhaps more beautiful, certainly more secure, but they had no better and no other to offer when this one finally crumbled into dust. Neither of these great philosophers had any idea of the regeneration of society through the regeneration of the individual, and certainly neither one of them, except it be the dim speculations of Plato on that subject, had any idea of, or belief in, the future life.

The oracle of Confucius was a light for the present life, but lent not a single ray to dispel the darkness of the future. "While you do not know life," he said, "what can you know about death?" He incidentally acknowledged a Supreme Being, but he did not know anything about him, or about a condition of future rewards and punishments. He was the ancient Agnostic, and the greatest of all that school. Modern Agnosticism is but a repetition and a refinement of ancient Confucianism, made over again according to the learning and eloquence of the nineteenth century.

Huxley, the great living apostle of that negative creed, whose disciples are becoming more numerous every day, is, in respect to religion, simply a modern Confucius, more methodical, more learned, more scientific, but not more original. Nothing is more striking than the lack of originality, the lack of the creative faculty, in modern negation. All the arguments and devices against religion which the world has ever seen or heard were fully known to the ancients, and modern infidelity has only succeeded in serving up those old dishes in new forms, and fresh disguises.

Among all this variety and multitude of seed sown in the world, some good, but most of it thistles and tares, a more ancient and more excellent seed has been first prepared, by long processes, in a remote part of the world, and among an ancient people, and afterward been sown broad-cast among all nations, and peoples, and tongues. It is the Word of God. There is one peculiarity about this word which may be regarded as a silent assertion of its conscious superiority, the divinity of its origin, and the transcendent nature of its wisdom. It is the fact that, unlike other books, it never quotes from any purely human source. There may be one or two exceptions as in the case of Paul's quotation from the Cretan poet, and one from another Greek poet, namely, "Evil communications corrupt good manners." But Paul was an accomplished classic, thoroughly versed in that marvelous hellenic literature which just before his time had revived all the glory of its ancient bloom, under the liberal appreciation and patronage of Rome. But in respect to all the leading and marked features of the Bible, which distinguish it from the records of human thought, its history, its biography, its ethics, its jurisprudence, its theology, its spirituality, each of which would be a sufficient subject for a volume, it acknowledges no equal among the literary achievements of men, and no preceptor but the mind of God.

There is one characteristic which we have not included in the above list because we have reserved it for more extended treatment. More than any other it distinguishes this Word of God from any word of man, however philosophical, however eminent, however brilliant with genius. More than any other it establishes the divine origin of that Word, and reveals the divinity dwelling in it, and working through and with it into marvelous results on every hand. That characteristic is expressed by the simple word, POWER.

To render the discussion of this part of the subject more intelligible, we will divide it under two heads: first, Providential power; second, Regenerating power. All the narratives of the Bible, and all the records of Christian experience are full of the illustrations of providential power, proceeding from the Word.

If all the unrecorded instances of the intervention of providence in Christian experience were known and written, it would take a vast library to hold all the books. Every genuine Christian can recall numbers of such instances in his own history. How many times, in some spiritual or temporal emergency, has some precious promise come home to the heart in a strangely vivid manner, timely and appropriate; and, resting upon that promise, how often have we found deliverance.

When we come to test the Word in this way, with an honest purpose, and an unwavering faith, we find a strange power in it, and behind it,—a power which works visible and tangible wonders, changing the course of events, and the purposes of men, and bringing to pass the improbable and impossible.

The whole history of providential intervention, whether we find it in the Bible, or in the published records of eminent Christians, or in the narrower field of our own personal experience, and the experience of those who come within the range of closest observation, reveals the important fact that it covers the whole wide area of human need. There is not a single exigency in human life, and not a single want in human experience which cannot be met by prayer, based upon the promises of God's Word. This marvelous providential power of the Word is not fully appreciated even by Christians. Great numbers of those, perhaps the great majority, who profess to be the children of God, and who, for all we know, are the children of God, go about in life with bowed heads and heavy hearts, bearing their burdens spiritual, burdens temporal, their sorrows, their temptations, their perplexities, their business or household cares, their losses and disappointments, their sickness of mind and body, when there are a score of promises which cover every aspect of their individual cases, and a living God who will redeem every promise at its par value, and throw in something more for good measure. All things are possible to earnest, honest, believing prayer. Where is there any other book, any other philosophy, any product merely of the human mind which can show anything parallel to the marvelous and universal providential power of God's Word? Or, rather, we should put it this way, Where is there any word of man, or angel, or any other creature, which covers the whole ground of human need, and which has been made the effective vehicle of the invisible, divine power, to reach that need, and satisfy it? In this respect it stands alone among all the literatures of the world, as some tall peak, towering above the lesser hills, its top above the clouds, and bathed in eternal sunshine. Or like a Jacob's ladder from heaven to earth, down which continually come the innumerable messengers of daily help. This claim to divine origin, and superlative distinction would be sufficient and convincing were there no other; but it has another claim, still more significant and still more overwhelming in the potential display of REGENERATING POWER. In this respect it has been compared to a seed, which, though in itself a plain-looking object, yet contains a germ, and a life principle, out of which springs a new, more elaborate, and more splendid body. On every hand we see the most abundant evidence of this life-germ, this potentiality in God's Word, through which is derived the generation of the NEW CREATURE, that most wonderful handiwork of Omnipotence and Grace. It is perfectly certain in the light of all history that even in the ages of its highest development the human intellect, unaided by divine inspiration, was totally unable to devise any scheme which, in any sense, exerted a regenerating influence upon mankind. They were lacking in lifting power. They were not even able to conserve the temporary moral elevation which several ancient and celebrated nations displayed for a time, but which they quickly lost. The most splendid productions of genius (apart from the influence of Divine Revelation), which have descended to us from former times, or which appear in our own times, have no appreciable influence upon the moral or spiritual life of communities or nations. To the Sacred Scriptures alone belongs the glorious distinction of the new creation; silently but mightily transforming the world by transforming human hearts. As the vehicle of the Holy Spirit, and the power of God, as the effective instrument of these almighty agents, it stands, in its appointed sphere, as high above all human agencies as the heaven is higher than the earth.

This regenerating power of God's Word is what makes it so precious to believers. Life is an exceedingly precious boon, especially the "more abundant" life, the eternal life. Therefore we hold sacred the incomparable agency, or channel, through which that life has come to us. It is not the source of life, but it has conveyed to us the perennial stream which flows from the divine fountain. It is the heavenly seed in which is wrapped up the germ of the new spiritual life here, and the resurrection life hereafter. Sow it in the heart, and let God's direct power be exerted upon it, in the sunshine of his grace, and the showers of his special providencee, and it will spring up in the glorious body which he has given it, clothed in beauty and immortality. Who has not seen the wonderful transformations of character which it alone can work? The greatest of the prophets has given us this sublime proclamation concerning it, "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord." "For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts." "For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater: so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."

"The sower soweth the Word," not his opinion of it, nor the opinions of others, nor creeds, nor commentaries, nor councils. All right interpretations of God's Word are helpful if they are used simply as side-lights to illuminate our dim understanding of it; but when they are received instead of the Word, they are thereby elevated above it; they thereby usurp its prerogative, and assume its authority. Would to God there was more abundant sowing of the unadulterated Word! Truth rejoices in it; error is afraid of it. "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand, for thou knowest not whether shall prosper this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good."

"As everything in the life of the creek depends upon the connection with the great, unresting ocean yonder, so everything in the spiritual life of man depends on the soul's connection with God."

THE SOCIAL OR PRAYER-MEETING.

BY L. A. PLATE.

HISTORIANS have recorded the fact that among the early Christians there were meetings in vogue, corresponding in character to our prayer-meetings, or, as some prefer to call them, social meetings.

That at the present day the prayer-meeting has its legitimate sphere in the order of church services and as a means of grace, no one would question. It has been aptly remarked that "the active piety of a church rises no higher than it manifests itself at the prayer-meeting." True, we have the regular preaching services that we all delight in attending, but even those can never take the place of the prayer-meeting, which is, emphatically, a meeting by the people and for the people.

As to the mode of conducting these meetings, no absolute rule can be laid down, nor should it be insisted upon. Circumstances and surroundings may call for different plans at different places, and yet all may be in conformity with Gospel principles. The main idea is to get everybody interested and at work; for a busy church is a strong bulwark, to ward off attacks from the evil one. What we want is a live prayer-meeting, and whatever may tend to make it such, should be encouraged and fostered. Let us enumerate a few essentials:

1. Regular and Punctual Attendance.—This, at a prayer-meeting, as at all other meetings, is of greater importance than is generally supposed. If we attend the prayer-meeting only at rare intervals, or if we come so late as to disturb others, we detract from the success of the meeting, because we fail to give it the influence of earnest and undivided attention. The apostle tells us "not to forget the assembling of ourselves together." Will we follow his advice and realize the promise that is given to the faithful ones who assemble in Christ's name?

2. Bringing Others.—"Come thou with us and we will do thee good," was said by one of old. Have we found that at the prayer-meeting heaven is brought very near, oh, let us not forget to invite others to share in the glorious feast! Urge them to come, make it pleasant for them, and they will come again.

3. A Prayerful Spirit.—"We would see Jesus," was the heart-felt desire of earnest seekers in the time of the Blessed Master. Is it our earnest longing to have the Savior with us at the meeting? Let us pray that he might thus bless us, and as our souls are lifted heavenward, sweet peace will steal over us. We realize that there is a peace of which the world knows nothing, and that it is ours if we open the door of our hearts to him who will make his abode with all those who love him.

4. Taking Part in the Exercises.—In conformity with the words of the apostle, let us "teach and admonish one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs." This gives all an opportunity to take part in the services. Have you an exhortation, a word of caution, a thought on the subject before the meeting, a suitable Scriptural passage or a soul-cheering hymn,—do not fail to present it. You will grow stronger yourself and help others.

5. Brevity in Prayer and Remarks.—Too often an otherwise good prayer-meeting is spoiled by the injudicious practice of some, to become too lengthy both in their prayers as well as in their remarks on the subject under consideration. We read, "For God is in heaven, and thou upon earth; therefore let thy words be few." Let all remember that "short and to the point" is a rule that will forcibly apply to all that is said in the prayer-meeting.

6. Maintaining a Devout Frame of Mind.—When the apostle admonishes us to "continue in prayer," he desires to impress the believer with the fact that the benefits of the meeting must be shown by a better life afterwards. Most of us, who attend the prayer-meeting and have realized its benign influences, would like to take with us more of its blessings, but, alas, the world and its troubles often efface the good impressions received, and we are the losers. Perhaps we do not continue in the spirit of prayer as we should, and while there will always be room for improvement in that direction, let us hope that a growth in grace will lead us to a more consecrated life,—one that will show that we have been with Jesus, and learned of him the true life of Christian usefulness.

In the Field.

ON the morning of Nov. 4, in company with Bro. A. B. Miller, I started to West Virginia to visit the members belonging to the Cook's Creek congregation, situated on the South Fork, in Pendleton County. Reaching Brandywine we separated, Bro. Miller going to the upper part of that section and I, in company with Bro. Jno. Brady, to visit the members in the lower part of the Valley.

We visited altogether thirty-six members and found the work to be arduous. In many cases the members are separated quite a distance, and it is necessary to traverse very rough and mountainous sections to reach them.

On the morning of Nov. 6 we met at the Brandywine church for council. At this place we were joined by Elders John A. Miller and J. M. Kagey who had been holding some meetings farther west. The business of the council passed off pleasantly. Feeling the need of more assistance in the work of the church, it was decided to hold an election for a deacon, which resulted in the choice of Bro Jno. C. Brady. Bro. Brady is an earnest follower of Christ and we trust he may have a continuance of divine help to perform the the new duties devolving upon him.

On the afternoon of Nov. 7 we met again at the same place for Communion. Prior to the Communion services, baptism was administered to one sister who was willing to follow the Master. The Communion service was well attended and many outside of the church seemed much interested. Brethren Miller and Kagey spoke earnestly on the practices of the Brethren and it is hoped some may be made to see the Truth, as it is in Christ, and believe.

On Sunday morning we met again at the same place. Bro. Kagey declared the Word earnestly and fearlessly from Matt. 16: 24, on the subject of self-denial,—showing the congregation the necessity of giving up worldly practices, desires and amusements if we would be the true children of Christ. The audience was very attentive and considerable interest was manifested. If the brethren could have remained longer, more good could have been done. As it is, many seemed deeply interested and several expressed themselves as being near the kingdom, but not quite ready to give up the world and stand for the right. May the Lord spare them and make them see the danger of delaying this most important work.

After a drive of thirty miles over the mountains we reached home late on the night of Nov. 8 and, through the protecting hand of our Heavenly Father, found all well. P. S. THOMAS.

Among the Churches in Franklin and Roanoke Counties Virginia, and Lancaster County, Pa.

I OMITTED to say in my last, that the church here, on Maggodee Creek, — the Bethlehem church,—is under the care of elders Daniel Peters, Daniel Bowman and Daniel Naff, with other ministers to assist. It numbers nearly 300 members, is in love and union, and contends strongly for the order of our Brotherhood, as do all of the churches in Franklin and Roanoke Counties. The Blackwater or Antioch church is under the care of Eld. Riley Flora and has suffered by the Old Order Element, but is recuperating. I attended the feast at the Old Brick church, under the care of elders Abraham Barnhart, Henry Eikenberry and William Roberson, with other ministering brethren. Here we had a large and pleasant meeting.

Leaving Franklin County Nov. 6, I went to the feast at Peter's Creek, in Roanoke County, Nov. 7 and 8. This church is under the care of elders John Eller, John Neff and Abraham Garst, with other ministering brethren. Here Bro. P. S. Miller has his home, and at this feast a number of the Botetourt Brethren communed with us, so we had a large and pleasant meeting.

Being under promise to the Brethren in Lancaster County, Pa., I left here on Monday, Nov. 9, and next day met with the Brethren at Elizabethtown. This church is under the care of Elder S. R. Zug.

Nov. 12, I went to the Ephratah feast. Eld. Samuel Harley has charge of this church. Though slightly paralyzed, he was able to attend the feast and is in about his usual health.

From here I went to the feast at Derry, Nov. 13. This church is under the care of Eld. Wm. Hertzler. Bro. Frank Cassel, of Indian Creek, Bro. Joseph Light, of Ohio, and many other ministers, were present at this and several of the other feasts.

At the most of these feasts there were baptisms. All these churches contend for the order of the Brotherhood in non-conformity to the world and are increasing in numbers, notably the Ephrata church, which has now a very large membership. The Brethren made me feel very much at home while among them. I reached home on the evening of Nov. 14, after an absence of more than three weeks, and found all well. I thank the Lord for his care and goodness.

OUR love-feast which was held Oct. 17, commencing at 10 A. M, was an enjoyable occasion to all,—one in which the minds were filled with good and wholesome food. The meeting was well attended, and we could not wish for more favorable weather. The ministers from abroad were brethren I. D. Parker, George Worst, George Irvin, F. B. Weimer, Wm. Dessenberg, and Tulla Moherman. On the second day (Sunday morning) we held a children's meeting. Brethren Irvin, Worst, Weiand, Weimer, Dessenburg, Moherman, Geo. Irvin (junior) and sister Irvin talked to the school, and all present seemed to enjoy the speeches very much. We believe such meetings will accomplish much good. Our Superintendent, Simon Garver, made a few appropriate remarks to the school, which closed the morning services. Bro. I. D. Parker preached on Sunday to a large and attentive audience. We hope that the good seed sown will spring forth and yield a bountiful harvest.

A love-feast was held on Saturday evening, after the Communion services for my mother (Mary Pittenger) who has been greatly afflicted with rheumatism for nearly five years and suffers much at times. For over one year she has been unable to walk. She enjoyed the services and was spiritually strengthened. Brethren and sisters, remember her in your prayers! Do we, dear readers, appreciate our condition while in health? Do we attend church and Sunday-school as often, and with as much earnestness as we should? If not, let us awaken to our duty.

We are glad to know that our church has good schools for the rising generation, that they may be taught the right way, and that many, already, have been led to Christ. We rejoiced to see our minister's daughter unite with us at our late meeting, and hope that during our series of meetings this winter more may unite with the church to be saved. CLARA WOODS.

THE Communion in the Prairie View church, Scott Co., Kans., Nov. 14, though small, was a pleasant one. Thirteen members communed, wife and I being the only members present not belonging to this congregation. On account of cold weather and other hindrances the members could not all attend. One was baptized, and others seem near the kingdom. The bountiful crops of all kinds this season are inducing settlers who had formerly left the country to return to their homes in the West. Wheat, oats, cane, rice corn, Jerusalem corn, and Kaffir corn, as well as the common corn, all did well this season, where planted and properly cared for, and a larger area of wheat is being sown than ever before. People are still sowing wheat at this date, Nov. 18. There is a scarcity of hands to do the work. Every one seems in a rush, and many are not ready for the winter.

Our series of meetings closed on the evening of Nov. 18, and wife and I are now on our way to our home, at McPherson. DANIEL VANIMAN.

"On the Way."

NOV. 7, I met with the brethren of the Shipshewana district, Lagrange Co., Ind., in public worship. I held three meetings with good interest. The ministers are Benjamin Leer and Benjamin Bollinger. Bro. Samuel Lupold was one of its active ministers, but met with an accident in 1877, which resulted in his death. In the burying grounds near the church I saw a marble slab, upon which I read—

"His body to earth
His spirit to God
His memory to me."

The brethren in this locality are surrounded with Orimsh and Mennonite brethren.

Nov. 11 I met with the Yellow Creek Brethren in church council. Bro. I. J. Rosenberger is expected to hold a series of meetings here soon.

Nov. 13 the Brethren of the Elkhart church, Ind., held their love-feast, which was refreshing to all. Ministers were present from the adjoining congregations. Bro Daniel Snell, of Sidney, Ind., officiated. Our thanks are extended to all who came and helped us, and were the means of aiding us in the noble work. Bro. Snell took the train homeward to be at their feast Nov. 14, while I took the train for Michigan.

Our meetings at Berrien, Mich., were poorly attended, owing to much rain and storm. Nov. 15 we had a driving snow-storm. In consequence our meetings were closed and I returned home.

During the storm we read the account in the MESSENGER, of the narrow escape of brother and sister Miller. May the good Lord ever protect them on their journey! Around the family altar wife and I often call upon Jehovah, in our family prayers, to kindly remember our dear brother and sister. May they enjoy their usual good health to go on their journey eastward, and visit that part of the old world, so interesting to every Bible student.

When our near friends are in perils like Paul, and Bro. D. L. Miller and wife have been, our sympathies are drawn out! Oh, how anxious we are for their safe return! J. H. MILLER.

From Virden, Ill.

THE Pleasant Hill church convened in council Nov. 7, at which time preparations were made for the love-feast. A report of the annual church visit was received and other important work transacted. The business was greatly facilitated by the assistance of Eld. J. M. Gibble and other ministers. (Owing to the sickness and death of his son, Eld. M. J. McClure was absent.)

Nov. 13, at 10 A. M., the Communion services began with a sermon by Bro. Michael Flory, followed by one from Eld. M. J. McClure.

During the hours of intermission Bro. J. H. Brubaker was forwarded to the second degree of the ministry. Examination services were conducted by brethren J. M. Gibble, Javan Gibson and M. Flory. Bro. J. M. Gibble officiated at the feast. The usual scenes that present themselves on such occasions were realized at this time.

The next day the large congregation was addressed by Michael Flory on Christian doctrine and duty. He brought out the qualifications, required of a Gospel teacher and which are the seed thought of all spiritual growth and culture.

JAMES WIRT.

From the Woodland Church, Fulton Co, Ill.

OUR love-feast occurred Oct. 15, and will long be remembered by some of us. About one hundred and forty members surrounded the Lord's Table, to partake of the sacred emblems. It encouraged us as we looked down the long tables and saw so many dear brethren and sisters. Although the house was crowded to its utmost, we had excellent order. Ministering brethren present from other churches were Solomon Bucklew, Isaac Gibble, John Demmy, and Conrad and John Fitz. They preached the Word with much zeal and power. Many others were present with us from adjoining churches. Last Sunday was our regular preaching day, at which time one dear soul was received into the church by baptism.

On Monday morning, long before sunrise, Bro. Cyrus Bucher and wife, Bro. D. Eshelman, husband and I started for a sixteen-mile drive to baptize a sister, who has had a desire to be with the Brethren for some time, but had no opportunity to be received into the church. Her husband is a brother and takes the MESSENGER. Through it she learned the name and post-office of Bro. Cyrus Bucher, and supposing him to be the nearest minister, she at once wrote him, asking him to come and preach for them. We believe there are many more starving for the Bread of Life because there is no one to deliver it unto them.

Work in Arkansas.

WIFE and I left our home Oct. 27, for Weiner, Ark., a distance of ninety miles. At Weiner we had two meetings. We then moved the meetings to a school-house about eight miles west, near the home of Bro. Coyn. Here we had twelve meetings at a new place, and in a neighborhood where there has been but little preaching. As a result, three dear souls were buried with Christ by baptism, to arise and walk, we hope, in the newness of life. They were all heads of families, and two of them past middle age. All seemed to act from calm conviction of right, and not from excitement, for we let each one make his own application for the instruction that always should precede baptism. We made a standing offer, to all who wished to ask any questions, or desired information of any kind, to let themselves be known, and we would arrange to meet them and give them all the instruction in our power. This is our way of working, and while we may not get as many to unite with the church at the time, yet I think it is the safest and most substantial way of proceeding.

This is quite a new country, with much heavy timber of excellent quality. It is just beginning to be settled. There are no roads as yet, but only trails winding through the big timber, as it used to be in Ohio and Indiana years ago. We went to meeting night after night in an ox wagon, but the Lord met with us and blessed the meetings, and we had a refreshing season. Thanks be to his name! Here you also find the old-time log cabin, puncheon floor, and clapboard door. Everything reminds you of old-time customs; and with these old-time things you find an old-time hospitality, which says, "All we have is good; help yourselves." But this is not all. Many Brethren in the East having no homes can here get eighty acres of timber land for 200 dollars, out of which you can soon make yourself a comfortable home. There is plenty of timber, that you can build your own house, fence your own land, and work your own way through, if you will. As to health, the climate is fully as good as Ohio or Indiana was, when first settled. Here they need some families of orderly, working members, to help develop the country, and, at the same time, help to build up the church. Here are five members in good standing, and some others that have not brought their church letters with them, that will now endeavor to get them. With the help of a minister I think the prospect is good for a church. Who will come? Address Bro. John Coyn, Weiner, Poinsett Co., Ark., inclosing a stamp.

Nov. 9 we had a Communion season together. On the night of the 10th we went about sixty-five miles further north-east to this place, in response to a call. Here there are no members, and the Brethren have never preached at this point. Meetings are to commence to-night.

At Work for the Master.

MY last was written from Madison, Monroe Co., Mo. I met with the brethren at the Mount Pleasant meeting-house, near Monroe, Oct. 17 where I preached two sermons. On Sunday evening I commenced a series of meetings at the Forest Grove Methodist meeting-house, north of Salt River,—a new place for the Brethren. While at this place I made the acquaintance of many warm-hearted friends, whom I visited, accompanied by Bro. Jesse Royer, with whom I made my home while I was there.

On Saturday, Oct. 24, we met at the house of Bro. Jesse Royer, with ten members of what was once known as the Novelty church. They having obtained consent of the elders to do so, we organized them into a separate congregation. They chose for their elder the writer of this notice. Among them there are four deacons and their wives. All seem to be full of zeal, and are earnest workers. I continued my work here until Sunday night, Nov. 1.

Any minister who is an example for the flock is heartily invited to stop off and preach for these Brethren. Address Bro. Jesse Royer, Holliday, Mo., or Bro. Samuel White, Madison, Mo.

On Monday, Nov. 2, we met at the house of Bro. Jesse Royer and organized a Bible class of fourteen members. Bro. Royer was chosen foreman of their meeting. In the evening we held a love-feast. Twelve members communed. Truly this was a feast indeed. H. W. STRICKLER.

Wayside Notes.

WE closed our meetings in the Nettle Creek church on Monday evening, Oct. 26. During these meetings two were baptized. We returned home on the morning of Oct. 27, and as our home feast was appointed for Nov. 6, we remained until after the feast. On the morning of Nov. 6 a number of the brethren and sisters from adjoining churches met with us to enjoy the Communion season. But while we were enjoying this love-feast, we regretted that some of our number could not be with us.

At two P. M. the writer was called to preach the funeral sermon of sister Margaret Thayer, aged fifty years, seven months and twenty days. On the morning of the same day we received the sad intelligence of the death of Bro. John G. and sister Annie Rarich's infant child. Its funeral was preached on Saturday by the writer, assisted by Bro. David Replogle. Thus the time, appointed for our Communion, had associated with it two funerals. How uncertain life is! There were not so many ministers present at our feast as is generally the case. Bro. Lewis Kinsey officiated. On Saturday evening we met at the home of brother and sister Eller, who are old in years, and not able to get out to our meeting any more. We had a love-feast with them, at which about nineteen members communed. Bro. and sister Eller enjoyed it very much.

Brethren, we should not forget our old members. Can we not look back to the time when we were children, to the time when our old brethren (not old then) were earnestly promoting the work of the Lord, handing it down to us? Should we not now remember them? While they cannot come to us, we can go to them.

At present we are with the Brethren in the Four Mile church, Union Co., Ind. May the Lord bless our labors! GEO. L. STUDEBAKER.

Work Among the Lowly.

Sept. 11 I left home for the love-feast with the colored members in Pickaway County, O. Lodging at Dayton that night, and being delayed by change of cars at Washington Court-house, I did not reach Circleville till the afternoon of next day. It had been expected to hold the feast in the country, about nine miles from the city, and with an isolated colored sister who lives there, but learning that there was sickness in her family, the Brethren thought best to hold the feast at the home of Bro. James H. May, one of the colored ministers, and a resident of Circleville.

The meeting was not large, nor could it be, with its surroundings, but it was a very pleasant one and all, both members and spectators, seemed to enjoy it very much.

On Sunday we held two services again at the same place. All seemed to regard the Word of God as affording food for all men who will take it.

Sept. 13th I returned, and while waiting for the train at Washington, I called to see several families of the colored Baptist Church in that city. From these I learned that quite a number of their body in that place had severed their connection with the Baptist church, owing to some neglect of its officials. All of these members, so far as I could learn, were advocates of the humble service of washing one another's feet, although none of them had ever seen the service performed.

In our little call I gave them some particulars as to the faith of the Brethren, and also told them of the feast, appointed with the colored Brethren at Frankfort, Ross Co., Ohio. From Washington I came home to attend our feasts here, and to await the time for another visit with the children of Ham.

I had thought to find some among our white members here, who could go to the Frankfort feast, Oct. 24, but none did but myself. My wife took me to Dayton Oct. 24th, by 7 A. M., and I was soon on my way to the feast, in Ross County. I looked for some one to go with me from Dayton and other points, for I had written them of the feast, but none came on the train till we reached Washington Court-house, where nine colored friends came on board, and all of them above mid-life. Some of them belonged to the Baptists, and some to the Methodist church. We were soon acquainted, and, upon arrival at Frankfort, we were gladly received.

We held a pleasant service at 2 P. M., and were soon joined by six members from Circleville. The house at night was full to overflowing, both of white and colored people, although a large political gathering occurred at the same hour near by. We had the best of order and attention. Bro. Wm. D. Mallow and I were the only white members, who were present at the meeting, but the one blood which takes away sin, is not confined to race or color; it was shed for all men. 2 Cor. 5: 15. The love which is of God, gives us another bond of union besides that named by Paul on Mars Hill, when he said that God "hath made of one blood all nations of men to dwell on all the face of the earth." Acts 17: 26. God's love is unlimited.

The Supper at Frankfort was altogether a love-feast, and well it might be for two had lately been baptized at that point. Their church-house was completed, painted and all paid for, with the assistance of the churches in Southern Ohio; and the number, who had come in from adjoining cities, to learn of the good old way, made us all feel glad,—to thank God and take courage.

The strangers were all much pleased with the service, and soon gave an expression as to their feelings on these subjects. Some said: "We have been members of a church for over thirty years, and were ignorant of these things all the while, but we see the light now." They left us on Monday forenoon with a request to hold meetings with them. I staid and held two meetings at night, and one in day-time at Frankfort, beside visiting a number who are not far from the door. On Wednesday, Oct 28, I came back to Washington, where we held three meetings at night in a private house, with great interest. On Saturday I was joined by Bro. Carter, from Frankfort; also Bro. Jones (a deacon), and two sisters. Next morning two others arrived. We now held the meeting in a vacant dwelling-house, large enough for the present, and on Sunday morning, Nov. 1, three of those who had been to the Frankfort feast, and all Baptists, asked to be received as members. We repaired to the stream near by, and baptism by trine immersion and the forward action, was witnessed by the many spectators for the first time.

The members from Frankfort now left us, but not alone, for in the homes where we stopped it seemed like a Pentecost to all of us. One old lady said: "For over forty years I was a slave to the white race, and for a long time I have been a slave to our preachers, but now I am going to serve God." Five others have made application for baptism, and our aim is to return Nov. 14. I reached home on the evening of Nov. 2 and found all well. What a field is now opening among the millions of colored people! May God aid the work! Read Jer. 33 and 39. LANDON WEST.

Ministerial Meeting.

THE following is the program of the Brethren's ministerial meeting for the Southern District of Illinois, to be held in the Cerro Gordo church, Dec. 16 and 17, 1891:

1. OPENING EXERCISES.—The ministers of Cerro Gordo are the Committee and shall arrange also for services at night.

2. "Object of Ministerial Meetings."—G. W. Cripe.

3. "Organization and Adoption of Rules to Govern Same."—David Troxel and D. B. Studebaker, committee to draft rules.

4. "The Church, its Mission and Relation to her Ministers."—M. J. McClure, David Troxel.

5. "What will make our Churches Prosper?"—T. D. Lyon, Daniel Mohler.

6. "The Minister and his Duties."—S. Bucklew, C. Fitz.

7. "Missionary Work and How to Make it more Effectual."—G. W. Cripe, H. W. Strickler.

8. "The Sunday-school and its Relation to the Church."—D. B. Gibson, A. L. Nickey.

9. "The Relation of Ministers to the Sunday-school and Prayer-meeting."—John Harshbarger, Michael Flory.

10. "The Baptism of Fire,—What is it?"—Thomas Keiser, John Pool.

A cordial invitation is extended to all. Ministers, especially, should try to be present, prepared to take part in the meeting, that it may be one of pleasure and profit to all. The members of the Cerro Gordo church, we are sure, will do all in their power to make this meeting one of success, as well as comfort, to all who may attend. We feel that our part of the work is not what it perhaps should be, but circumstances are such that we had to do our work by writing.

An Appeal.

ALMOST wherever we go among the isolated members, the same story is told over and again: "If we only had a minister located among us, there would soon be a church built up in this community, for the most of the people here are convinced that we have the true principles of the Gospel.

Certainly, the Brethren church has, compared to its membership, a large supply of ministers. BUT WHERE ARE THEY? At too many places in the Brotherhood there are from two to five who meet at each Sunday service, where one or two do the work. Should not every one be at work? Should not every minister of the Gospel be declaring its glad tidings to the dying sons and daughters of men? On every hand precious souls are starving for the want of the Bread of Life.

You say: "It is pleasant to be at Sunday-school and church where there is a large congregation of those in the same faith." Would it not be more pleasant to know that you are doing your duty to your God and fellow-man by being where you could feed hungry souls? To leave this nice home to go into a new community would be too much of a sacrifice? Can there be a sacrifice too great for us in meeting our obligations in the great sacrifice that Jesus has made for us?

Please read Ezek. 33: 1–9, and Isa. 62: 6, 7, and then let us take this all-important matter with us into the closet, with James 2: 14–26. O that we could more and more realize our responsibilities, and redouble our energy in the service of our Master! E. B. HOFF.

Waterloo, Iowa.

REMARKS.

Our brother has brought forward a very important subject indeed. We have thought it all over time and again, and to our mind it is no small question to decide. We have also been raised on the frontier and know the hardships, and what kind of men are needed in these new fields where there are isolated members. There are at least two important considerations.

1. It takes means for a minister to locate in a new field, make his own living, spend the necessary time, required at a new point, and meet all his expenses. We have but few ministers, financially circumstanced so they can do this. If some one will tell us how to overcome this part of the difficulty, probably these isolated places may be supplied.

2. It requires a little more than ordinary skill in the handling of the Word to build up churches in new places. All of our western ministers are aware of the struggle. Still we have a few hundred ministers who could be spared, and will do good work, if the first difficulty can be removed. If they get to work in these new fields they may possibly soon acquire the ability. Then we have a number of brethren who, perhaps, ought to be elected to the ministry so as to increase our force.

But in meeting all these calls the financial difficulty is an important consideration. We may say it ought not to be in the way, but our saying so does not remove the difficulty. Perhaps some experienced minister can solve the problem.—ED.

REPUTATION OF OUR HOME.

WE speak of the reputation of our Home for the first time. Were it not for the demands of justice we would decline, but we trust none will consider us egotistical if we do not set up our own judgment in the matter.

The reputation of our Home as an institution resembles very much the reputation of an individual. It is, like the individual, subject to public criticism. It may merit public esteem, and, as the reputation is measured by the extent of public esteem in the community in which a person resides, so we think our Home's reputation should be measured by the extent of esteem where it is best known.

In order to get the Home before the Middle District of Indiana in its true character, we must give you its reputation where best known. To do this we give you some testimonials:

TESTIMONY OF INMATES.

We, the inmates of the Old Folks' Home of Middle Indiana do hereby testify that we are well pleased with our home, and can truly say that we enjoy its comforts, and feel that it is all that we can desire for an earthly home:

Signed: Michael Minich, David Colpetzer, David Strawh, William Melling, David Jewell, Jacob Jacobson, Geo. Smithgall, Anna Lyons, Liencinda Leslie, Katie Curtis, Susie Furgison, Mary Fogle, Jane Deeter, Sarah Zook.

There is still one who is not at home and cannot, conveniently, be interrogated at this time.

TESTIMONY OF THE OFFICIALS OF MEXICO CHURCH

As to the reputation of the Old Folks' Home, we, the undersigned officials of the Mexico church, can truly say that we do believe, from what we can see, and all the information we are able to gather, that the Home is meeting the design of its founder, and also the desire of the church, and, by its influence and comforts, its inmates are enabled to enjoy more fully the blessings of religion, and to live more consecrated and devoted to their Master, and by the aid of the Home the inmates can spend their days in more peace and happiness than they otherwise would. As to its general success we think it is all we could expect, considering the short time of its existence, and the inexperience of its officers. Therefore we, the officers of the Mexico church, do deem it worthy of all the influence we can throw around it:

MINISTERS:—Jacob Barnhart (elder), Joseph L. Brower, Samuel Myers, Noah Fisher, Jacob Fisher, J. M. Lair.

DEACONS:—Henry Balsbaugh, David R. Petrow, Noah Flora, Isaac Fisher, Samuel Kinzie, Levi Eikenberry, Levi Flora, James Himelick.

We think this sufficient testimony, and we trust that, as we have learned some false impressions have gone out, these testimonies may give you full satisfaction. We also learned from some of our solicitors that some brethren rather entertained doubts about the Home being the right thing for our poor and aged members, but we trust, upon hearing the testimony of the inmates, and also the testimony of the officials, that their doubts will be removed, and, when our solicitors come to you, after having waited for the Home to prove its worth, we hope that you will give liberally, and by giving thus to the poor you will be "lending unto the Lord, and the Lord will repay you again." Solicitors, keep the stone rolling!

FRANK FISHER.

"IT is right for us to care what others think of us. The man who does not care for the opinion of others is not the man to influence others, or to to be worthy of the sympathy or respect of others. But when the choice fairly comes between doing what is right, or doing what others think we ought to do, the opinion of others must be defied by us, however much we may regret the necessity of losing the good-will of our fellows. What God thinks of our conduct is of more importance than what is thought of it by all other beings in the universe."

BRO. J. C. MURRAY is engaged in a series of meetings at Franklin Grove.

BRO. J. BENNET TROUT has changed his address from Springfield, Ohio, to New Carlisle, same State.

BRO. J. S. MOHLER writes that he held a week's meeting at Osborn, Mo., with good interest and one addition.

BRO. A. W. VANIMAN'S Bible Class was unavoidably crowded out this week. It will be resumed in next issue.

BRO. C. N. BROWN, of Brewster, Kans., has changed his location to Mound City, Holt Co., Mo., where he may now be addressed.

THE members of the Southern District of Illinois will hold their first ministerial meeting in the Cerro Gordo church, Dec. 16 and 17.

ELSEWHERE in this issue will be found a letter from Bro. Landon West, telling of the good work he has been doing among the colored people in Ohio.

WE go to press one day too early to give any account of our Thanksgiving meetings. We have preaching in the Chapel in the morning and at Silver Creek in the evening.

A FEW days ago we were shown some of the finest Bibles we have ever seen for the price. They are for sale at the Brethren's printing-office, and are about forty per cent cheaper than agents generally sell them for.—Mt. Morris Index.

BRO. GEORGE BARNHART, of Carthage, Mo., accompanied by his wife and child, are now visiting in Virginia. He may spend some time laboring for the Brethren while with them. Until further notice his address will be Holm's Store, Franklin Co., Va.

THE North-eastern District of Ohio will be represented on the next Standing Committee by Bro. Edward Loomis.

THE Minutes of Northern Indiana show that there are thirty-seven congregations in that District, and all but two were represented at the late District Meeting.

BRO. D. L. MILLER'S address, for the present, is, Care of Thomas Cook & Sons, Ludgate Circus, E. C., London, England. As he travels from point to point, his mail will be forwarded to him.

BRO. C. D. HYLTON has been doing a glorious work in the way of gathering in souls at Pleasant Valley, Va. Nearly sixty have united with the church. Forty-four have been baptized, eight reclaimed and several yet to be baptized.

WITH next issue Bro. B. F. Moomaw completes his series of articles on the experience of our Brethren during the late war. These articles were written by our request, in order that some of the transactions of the times might be placed on record before the aged fathers pass hence. They have proved interesting reading, but it is to be hoped that our people will never be called on to pass through another cruel war.

WE have made an extra effort to get all the church news received in this issue, but are compelled to go to press with about twenty reports left on the hook. We hope our correspondents will have a little patience, and we will probably get them all in the next issue. These reports are certainly encouraging. Twenty additions to one church and nearly sixty to another, besides many smaller numbers show that the good work is moving.

OUR correspondents must not think unkindly of us for cutting down their reports of church news, for we are compelled to do it in order to get all the news in. Articles may lay even for months and then prove instructive reading, but that is not the case with church news and general correspondence. Our aim is to get all church news in the paper the week that it is received, and in order to do so, much of it, especially this season of the year, has to be cut down in order to find room for it. The correspondence in this issue is cut down about one-half. Let no one become discouraged because their reports happen to be shortened. We never cut valuable news out. We would like short reports and plenty of them, somewhat like those found in our department headed "Notes from our Correspondents." It is our intention to make this part of the MESSENGER exceedingly interesting.

THE Missionary Review for March contains a very interesting article concerning the Waldenses in Italy. Tradition has it, though doubted by many, that Paul, on his way to Spain, passed through the valley of Piedmont and established churches among the people of that valley. We will not pause to discuss the truthfulness of the tradition, but certainly churches were established there in a very early period, and continued in a pure state for centuries. They resembled the Brethren, it seems, very much in many respects. They were greatly persecuted by the Catholics, and finally driven from their charming valley to seek shelter in other lands. But they were never contented, so 800 of them returned and re-entered the valley on Sunday, August 27, 1689. Though persecuted some since, they have continued to make the valley their home until the present. At the present time their membership is about 4,400 and they are very poor, and yet they raise $16,000 annually to carry on their mission work. What do our Brethren think of that missionary zeal?

SISTER SUSANNA HOHLFELD, writing from Rogers, Ark., says there are a few members living at that place, and that any ministers passing that way should give them a call.

WORK on the Old Peoples' Home at Mt. Morris is progressing as rapidly as the weather will permit. The contract for the building has been let for $4,634.00, the contractor to furnish all material, and have the building ready for use by July next. The size of the building is 36x64, two stories high and a good basement. It will be veneered with brick, and put up in a most substantial manner. Mr. Buser, who erected the College Building here, has the contract.

BRO. A. B. FISHER, of Fort Scott, Kans., who had the misfortune to have his large dwelling burned a few months ago, writes us of another serious loss in the burning of his large lumber shed, a part of which had been fitted up for meeting purposes, where the Brethren had been holding services. While the loss is a great one, yet a man of Bro. Fisher's energy is likely to rally. For encouragement in losses of this kind study the financial history of Job. Bro. Fisher reports the members full of zeal, with a great desire upon their part that their elder will consent to make that place his home, for they think the opening for building up a good, strong church in Ft. Scott is flattering.

THE tax burden in all European countries is becoming very grievous indeed, with no prospects of modification. This burden results mainly from the foolish notion that large standing armies are essential to the peace of the nations. One of our exchanges administers a very cutting rebuke after this style: "Among the military expenses which make the tax-payers of Europe groan in despair is the enormous expense for the equipment of the vast armies. No sooner are men furnished with rifles than some improvement is announced, and it soon becomes necessary to re-arm in order to have an equal chance with rival armies. New rifles, a foreign dispatch says, are now the order of the day in all foreign armies. An order for 3,000,000 rifles, recently given by one Government in Europe means an expenditure of money which would buy bread for hungry mouths in that country for many a day. But the policy of 'preserving peace' by holding a knife at every one's throat demands, of course, knives enough 'to go around,' as they say, and therein Europe finds its justification for keeping millions of men, who might be producing wealth for the nations, under arms."

OUR Eastern Editor, Bro. H. B. Brumbaugh, has, in this issue, his excellent editorial on Secret Societies. The article was published last spring, but by request of many of our leading brethren it has been carefully revised and prepared for the Tract Work. We hope all of our readers will give it a careful perusal and also encourage its appearance in tract form if it meets the approval of the Examining Committee. We are greatly in need of some good tracts on that subject, and something of the kind ought to be placed in the hands of our Brethren at an early date. Our missionaries are greatly in need of them, and they ought also to be widely distributed in many of the well-established churches. Secret societies are exerting an astonishing influence at the present time, and not a few of the Brethren's children are being enticed into them. It, therefore, becomes our duty to use our influence against the growing evil. Brethren, let us encourage the publishing and using of tracts on this subject. Bro. Brumbaugh has given the question of secret societies considerable thought, and now shows up their evil tendencies and errors in a manner that will certainly do good.

THE announcement, last week, of the District Meeting for Middle Iowa, etc., should have read Northern Iowa, etc. The mistake was in the copy sent us, and we did not discover it until after the paper was printed. Notices of that kind ought to be sent about two months in advance of the meeting.

THOSE who imagine that the Catholic church in the United States is sleeping may read the following and form some idea as to where our public school system is drifting: "It would astonish the people of the United States to have the figures which would show the magnitude of the grasp that this scheming organization has upon the school system. There are scores of cities where it has quietly placed Catholics upon the school boards, and then as quietly selected Catholics as the teachers. Not content with this, the priesthood are putting nuns in the school-room, and paying them out of the public funds as public school teachers. In Stillwater and Faribault, Minnesota, the Catholic parish schools have been turned over to the school-boards, to be run as public schools, with the understanding that the nuns in charge should be retained and put on the pay roll and paid out of the school funds."

HOME MISSION WORK.

WE have referred to the necessity of the elder consecrating himself to the care of the special flock over which the Holy Ghost has made him overseer. The more thoroughly he can become interested in the welfare of this flock, the greater blessing he will be to the cause at large. In proportion as elders become concerned for their home flocks, in that proportion do they serve the general Brotherhood aright.

The elder being thus concerned for the church of God, and feeling that he is in a large measure responsible for the care of the flock, will, if he is a wise elder, lay plans for utilizing the forces at his command. If he is as much concerned about the Lord's work as he should be about his own he will certainly do this. He has the oversight of a portion of the Lord's vineyard and he certainly should use all his helpers in dressing and keeping that vineyard in order. Some elders may be more concerned about other vineyards than the one placed in their care. This is not wise, to say nothing of the wrong and injustice there may be in it.

Since it is evident that an elder's duty is first to the little flock entrusted to him, we desire to make a few suggestions concerning the utilizing of his ministerial helpers that may be of value to the cause, and do more in the way of spreading the Truth and building up new churches than any thing that has yet been done among us. But at this point we want to impress upon the mind of each overseer the fact that every minister under his charge is entitled to his attention. He should by no means show more favors to one than to the other, but labor to train all of them for greater usefulness. Like a family of children he will have to study their dispositions so as to learn how best to train and use them. To him they sustain a more intimate relation than the other members, for their work happens to be in the same line as his. Their business is to feed the flock, feed the lambs as well as the sheep.

To do this work aright they must all study the wants of the flock as well as the contents of the Bible. In performing a work of this kind, where there are a number of ministers, there is nothing so valuable as system, and we might add that without system very little can be expected of even a large force. System in the handling of a number of ministers on one field is just as necessary as it is for properly using a number of men on the farm or any place else. God evidently has a beautiful system in performing all his work, and those who desire to be God-like in their wisdom should certainly fall into the same line to the full extent of their abilities.

Let the elder, therefore, call his ministers together for a consultation in regard to laying out their work for the year. They know their territory, their number and their general ability. There is nothing wrong about this. We have seen it practiced for years and it always worked well. To illustrate, we will presume a congregation to have three ministers in addition to the elder, viz., James, John and Henry, and three places for preaching, with their meeting-house as the central point. In dividing up the labor it may be best for them to decide on filling the appointments at the meeting-house in turns, agreeing when each one's turn comes, and have it distinctly understood that each one is to be held responsible for his Sunday at the meeting-house for the year. Make a record of it so there will be no misunderstanding.

The appointments at the meeting-house having been provided for, the appointment at the Cross Roads might be assigned to James for one year, while John takes charge of the meetings at the Brick School-house for the year also. The elder may now conclude to open up a new point in the Jones' neighborhood, where a few members are living. Henry being young in the ministry, it may be deemed wise to train him in the opening and closing of the meetings, letting him preach occasionally, trusting that at the end of another year he, too, will be able to take charge of a station. These ministers all become responsible for the work at their stations for the entire year, and it becomes their duty as well as their privilege to work up the interest to the best of their ability. Being made responsible for their stations they will work the harder and do better work, and at the end of the year will doubtless have greatly improved their talents as preachers in many ways. These ministers may call to their assistance such members as may consent to aid them, in the way of helping with the singing, etc. John and James may decide to exchange appointments a time or two, or they may use Henry now and then so as to give him some training and thus offer their congregations a little variety, for people enjoy variety in spiritual as well as in temporal food. It would also be well for the elder to visit these points at least once during the year to see how the work is progressing. It would also be well that the appointments be so arranged that all the members and ministers could meet at the meeting-house about once in two months. This would be a kind of a reunion and also be the means of holding the church and ministers together and help retain kindred feelings. Thus the work might move along one year and there is no telling how much good might be accomplished. Think over this happy state of affairs until next week, and we will follow up the line of thought a little further. In the meantime read Bro. Sharp's report, elsewhere in this issue, of their manner of assigning stations to ministers in the vicinity of McPherson, Kans. It will be of some help in considering what we have suggested. J. H. EDITORIAL WANDERINGS IN THE OLD WORLD.

BY D. L. MILLER.

Number Eleven.

A CITY containing over five million souls, with half a million and more houses, great and small, including fourteen hundred churches and seven thousand five hundred drinking saloons, with streets and roads in aggregate that would reach from New York to San Francisco and back again to Chicago, and which are lighted by more than a million gas lamps; a city whose inhabitants eat annually over seventeen million bushels of wheat, two and a quarter million beeves, sheep and hogs, with an annual meat bill of two hundred and fifty million dollars, drink fifty-five million gallons of beer, wine and spirits, and burn eight million tons of coal; a city with more Irish than in Dublin, with more Roman Catholics than in Rome, and more Jews than in Palestine; a city older than the Christian era and whose history is the history of the rise and progress of the English-speaking race, and in which laws are enacted that govern empires and countries in all parts of the world, such a city is the world's great metropolis, —the City of London.

It has been said that to see London is to see the world, but having seen neither the world nor London, we are not prepared to say whether the saying is correct or not. It is true we have spent some weeks in the City, and have visited a number of its most interesting places; we have seen something of its streets and great public buildings, and of its rushing, mighty tide of business life; we have seen something of its misery and wretchedness, as we have met a few of its one hundred and fifty thousand beggars and paupers on the streets; we have seen or rather felt its fog, but we have not seen the City; that would take months instead of weeks.

Our first feeling after reaching London was one of oppressive solitude and utter loneliness. We were entire strangers set down in the midst of the great, strange City at midnight,—strangers in a strange land. Our exceedingly unpleasant experience in crossing the English Channel was still fresh upon us. We were wet and cold from the drenching received at Dover. There was rain and fog every-where. It was gloomy and dismal and dark enough to suit the purposes of those whose works are evil. We entered a hackney coach and drove through the deserted streets to a hotel, where, after ringing the door-bell for what seemed to us a half an hour, we succeeded in arousing the porter, and were soon shown to comfortable rooms. Wife's illness also had a tendency to deepen the feeling of loneliness, and it was hard to shake off, but when she was able to go out we soon became accustomed to the place and enjoyed our stay as well as could be expected.

In coming to London we had a special object in view. Simple sight seeing would not have induced us to cross the English Channel. We came here to see and study the world-renowned collections of sculptural marble, of engraved stones, of tablets and cylinders, inscribed with the history of Mesopotamia, as ancient as the days of Abraham, and of the colossal statuary, brought from the excavated palaces of Nineveh and Babylon. To us these great collections, brought together by the outlay of immense sums of money have been the chief center of attraction.

Here we had the privilege of examining the clay tablets and cylinders, taken from the library of Sennacherib and Sargon, his father,—two of the great kings of Nineveh. Here are books, twenty-seven hundred years old, bearing records that show with indisputable testimony the truth of the Bible. Here we saw and examined the old Egyptian book, written on papyrus, as old as the days of Moses, containing at least a part of the history of the life of Jacob's beloved son Joseph in Egypt. Here is the Rosetta stone, which furnished the key to the Egyptian hieroglyphics, and which has been of such inestimable value in the study of the ancient records of Egypt. Here is the six-sided clay cylinder, bearing, in the ancient cuneiform letters, an account of the invasion of Judea by Sennacherib. Here is the old record telling of the peculiar disease that fell upon Nebuchadnezzar and kept him from his throne four years, and which corroborates so clearly the words of Daniel. Here are notes, bills of sale, contracts, receipts, checks and drafts, inscribed eight hundred years before Christ. All these, with hundreds of others, we had the privilege to examine and study, for they are all arranged in proper order and labeled in English so that all may learn the lessons they contain.

There, in connection with these collections, is the great library, containing one and a half million volumes with one of the largest and best appointed reading-rooms in the world. We were admitted to the reading-room, where we had a desk assigned to us, and where, by the aid of a catalogue in two thousand volumes, we were enabled to secure, free, such books as we needed to study more carefully the Assyrian, Babylonian and Egyptian antiquities. Here, with the great collections at hand for examination, and the great library containing all the English translations of the records of the past, one may learn more of the ancient cities of Nineveh and Babylon than can be learned by a visit to the ruins on the banks of the Euphrates and Tigris, for all that is valuable, in the way of records, is to be found in the great British Museum.

The Christian world owes a debt of gratitude to the men who, at the risk of life, and by the expenditure of immense sums of money, have brought these records of the truth of the Bible together, and have spent years of great labor in arranging and translating them, so that they can now be read in all the modern languages. Such men as Layard, Rawlinson, Sayce, Smith, and others, who spent their lives and fortunes in this work, will not soon be forgotten. The work of the Egyptian Exploration Society of England and America is also to be commended. The Society has for its object the excavation of ancient ruins in Egypt, and already has made some most important discoveries. They are now investigating the route followed by the children of Israel in the exodus from Egypt. When we have fully completed our investigation of the Assyrian, Babylonian and Egyptian collections, we will give our readers some further account of them.

We have heard two of London's noted preachers, Dr. Parker, Congregationalist, the minister who was selected to preach Henry Ward Beecher's funeral, and who, it was thought at one time, would take Henry Ward Beecher's place in Brooklyn; and the other, Canon Farrar, Episcopal, the author of the Life of Christ. These men both draw large crowds and thousands are often turned away from Dr. Parker's church.

Dr. Parker is an interesting speaker and a deep thinker. He has a commanding presence and a magnetism that carries his audience with him. He speaks slowly and with great deliberation, and constantly impresses one with the thought that he is only using a small portion of his power. Once or twice during the sermon to which we listened, he burst forth in a strain of fiery eloquence that revealed his real power. His audience appeared to be electrified by these outbursts. His language is well chosen and full of beautiful figures. Here is one. Speaking of the grave, he asked, with a rising inflection of the voice, "What is the grave?" and then pausing a moment, so that the question might have its full force on the audience, he answered in a voice full of pathos, "A wound made in the earth by the metal of death." Again, speaking of men who deny God, he asked, "What is a man without God?" The answer was full of scathing contempt, "A circumference without a center; a poor, vain attempt to be a circle, contorted, twisted, vanishing into nothing." The tone of voice in which these words were uttered, made them wonderfully effective. His sermon was full of sharp, bristling points, and they were put in such language that his audience could easily understand. Whatever else may be said of Dr. Parker's theology and of his orthodoxy, he certainly has a wonderful power in the pulpit.

Canon Farrar, the celebrated author and leading minister in the Established Church of England, is as different from Dr. Parker as it is possible for two men to differ. He is of medium stature, with a full, round face, and speaks rather rapidly, without any attempt at oratory. He is a man of great learning, and carries his scholastic attainments with him into the pulpit. He preaches to members of both Houses of Parliament, and he has among his auditors, whenever he preaches, members of the English nobility and oftentimes of the royal family. In the center of the church is a seat reserved for Americans. We listened with much interest to his thirty-minute sermon. It was a learned dissertation on the philosophy of the laws of nature, and abounded in fine passages. It was a learned, finished discourse, intensely intellectual and full of deep thought, but to us it seemed like a cut diamond, polished and sparkling, but cold and lifeless. There was in it much food for the intellect, but very little for the heart and soul.

Mr. Spurgeon, probably the greatest preacher in the world, from the popular stand-point, has been very ill, and at one time no hopes were entertained for his recovery. He is now reported as improving slowly and was strong enough to be taken to the south of France, where it is hoped that his improvement may be more rapid, but there are many here who think he will never be able to enter the pulpit again. Except Dr. Talmage, of New York, who is given to sensationalism, no living minister's sermons are more widely read than are the sermons of Mr. Spurgeon.

In Dr. Parker's church, and we are informed that this is true in Mr. Spurgeon's tabernacle also, congregational singing is the rule. Choir singing has always seemed to us like worshiping God by proxy. In our own church services the singing ought to be improved and means should be adopted by which this may be done. We are glad to note in the MESSENGER that efforts are being made at many places to improve the singing. While this is being done, let there be no tendency toward the proxy plan.

OUR TRIP TO ASIA AND AFRICA.

WHEN we left home we had hoped that by this time we should be in Asia Minor, but we were detained longer in the North than we anticipated, and then wife's illness occasioned another delay. In all of this we now see the hand of Providence. If we had gone on as we had planned, we should now be in a strait as to what to do. The cholera is spreading rapidly and all the ports of Syria, from Beyrout to Joppa, are under quarantine. To-day we had an interview with the manager of the Messrs. Cook Agency. These gentlemen sell tourists' tickets and control much of the travel in the East. We were informed that it would be impossible for us to go on with our journey at this time, as the ports were practically closed. To us this is a sad disappointment, but we shall not worry over it We are thankful that we are not now in the cholera district, as we doubtless would have been if we had gone on as rapidly as we had proposed. The London Times of Oct. 26 says: "On the 20th inst. there were thirty cases of cholera at Damascus, and fifteen deaths, including six from previous attacks. There were no new cases at Aleppo. Arrivals from Syrian ports are subject to quarantine both at Constantinople and Egyptian ports. The Austrian Lloyd's steamers have stopped touching at these ports."

Our plan is now, if the Lord so will it, to leave London in a few days on our way to Rome, Naples, Herculaneum and Pompeii, stopping on the way at Paris, and possibly at Zurich in Switzerland. We shall continue our letters to the MESSENGER, giving such accounts of the places we visit as may be of general interest. From Italy we may possibly go to Vienna and there await developments in the East. Unless the trip to Egypt and Palestine can be undertaken before a great while, we shall have to give it up for this winter, as it will not be safe to travel there in the summer. We leave the matter entirely in the hands of the Lord, and are glad to say that we are not troubled about it. Wife says it may not be the Lord's will that we are to visit the Holy Land again. The way being closed against us, it has that appearance, but we wait and trust, hoping for the best.

SEPT. 19 we held our love-feast, and brethren from other congregations present were, S. M. Forney, Eli Rothrock, J. J. Kindig and J. P. Nofziger. We had a good meeting. The Brethren were much built up and sinners warned. We held a choice for two speakers, resulting in the election of Basel McCue and Lewis Clark.

Sept. 29 I went to the Wallace congregation, Lincoln County, to their council-meeting, Oct. 1. All things passed off nicely. Their love-feast occurred Oct. 15, of which Bro. Cripe gave an account. While with them I visited my daughters in Hayes County, and held six meetings, besides attending the love-feast. From there I went to Frontier County Oct. 17, to their love-feast. They had a soul-refreshing meeting. I held a week's meetings with the best of interest at that place, and, I think, left many good impressions. In the Highland County church, brethren Wm. Colebanks and Bro. Philips are the speakers.

From there I went to Jasper County, to Bro.

J. Sandy's, and held seven meetings with exceedingly good interest. Later on I went to Harlan County, to Bro. J. P. Nofziger's to a love-feast. Here we had good attendance, and thirty-five members communed. I held three meetings in all. Upon returning home I found all well, for which I thank the Lord. After Nov. 15, till further notice, my address will be Sevastopol, Ind., in care of S. E. Burket.

ELD. DAVID BECHTELHEIMER.

Notes by the Way.

I CAME to Middle River, Va., Nov. 6 and commenced meetings the same evening. I am now in the midst of a seemingly very interesting meeting at which the attendance and interest are very good. I hope it may result in building up the church in spiritual strength, and also induce some to come and accept Christ. The members here held a love-feast at one of the outposts of the congregation It was our privilege to be present. We met at 2 P. M., for examination services, and in the evening nearly sixty members gathered around the Lord's Table. It was a very pleasant feast indeed. After the services closed, we drove five or six miles to our appointment, to preach at 7:30 P. M. This was something we had never done before. Some of the readers of this may conclude we had the services too early, but when we closed and went out, it was night.

I expect to arrive home Nov. 19 to attend the Ministerial Meeting of Southern Ohio, Nov. 20, and commence a series of meetings in Pyrmont, Ind., Nov. 21. This I will do if God permit.

I saw in GOSPEL MESSENGER some time ago, a suggestion, advising that we hold our harvest or Thanksgiving meetings on the last Thursday of November, being Thanksgiving Day. Would we not better continue the harvest meetings, and also have meeting on Thanksgiving Day too? We need not be afraid of being too thankful to the Lord. The two are a little different. Let each meeting stand as it is, and let us gather at our places of worship Nov. 26, and thank the Lord for national blessings. We, the members of the Donald's Creek church, Ohio, have gathered in the old church on said day annually, for more than thirty years. May we continue so to do, is my prayer! HENRY FRANTZ.

From Roanoke, Va.

OUR Communion meeting occurred Nov. 7. After the morning services we repaired to the water where baptism was administered to two dear sisters, making three additions in the Roanoke congregation during the last thirty days. Ministers present from other States were elders E. W. Stoner, of Maryland, and Daniel Barnhart and C. T. Heckman, of Kansas.

There were also a goodly number of elders and ministers from adjoining congregations present. The evening services were largely attended, and we certainly had one of the best of meetings. The Sunday meeting was largely attended, many friends of other denominations being with us.

The preaching was of such a nature as to fill the souls to overflowing and when the time for giving the parting hand had arrived, it brought sadness and tears. The order throughout the entire meeting was excellent and the weather pleasant.

The interest manifested then as well as at all our regular meetings proves the Roanoke congregation to be advancing in interest and prosperity. Series of meetings have been spoken of, but as yet no definite arrangements have been made. There are frequent calls for preaching, and many souls that need persuasion by the power of God's Word. The interest the members have generally in the Lord's work in this congregation, proves that they have faith that works by love in the cause of our Blessed Master. P. S. MILLER.

WE feel to thank God and take courage. Bro. H. W. Strickler, of Lorraine, Ill., came to us Oct. 17, and preached in all nineteen sermons. Bro. Strickler's whole soul is in the good work. While here he made many friends. He distributed tracts and this, together with his preaching, put many to thinking and many, from their actions, are fully persuaded, but do not yet accept Christ. The Brethren were much strengthened. We had a council and completed our organization. Bro. Strickler was chosen as our elder. He made arrangements for us to have prayer-meeting once a week, from house to house, among the members, as we have no meeting-house of our own. We have met twice since he left, and we all enjoyed our little meetings very much. We had a Communion Nov. 2, while our brother was with us, in our dwelling-house. There are fourteen members in our little band at this place. Nov. 3 Bro. Strickler, and Bro. Jacob Wilt and wife, went up to Cherry Box to see sister Lapp, but she died before they met her. Sister Lapp was loved by all who knew her, and entreated her family to meet her in heaven. Bro. Strickler officiated at her funeral. KATE ROYER.

THE church at this place has been much encouraged and we feel to thank the Lord.

On the first Sunday in September Bro. D. B. Arnold preached a funeral sermon at our church and baptized two young sisters. On the fourth Sunday four persons were received by baptism.

Our love-feast was held on Nov. 7 and 8 Brethren Jonas Fike. D. B. Arnold and Isaac Abernathy were the ministering brethren from a distance, and we had a feast indeed. The brethren labored faithfully and zealously for us. One dear sister was received by baptism. Bro. Jonas Fike began a series of meetings about two miles west of the meeting-house on Sunday evening, the last day of our feast, and continued eight days. During the meetings nine precious souls were received by baptism and others were near the kingdom. Our brother labored earnestly and ably for us and made many friends. May God reward him for his labor of love among us! The ages of the nine were from fourteen to eighty years. Our members feel much encouraged. May the Lord enable us all to let our light shine and thereby induce others to accept of Jesus and be saved. DENNIS CLARK.

ELD. M. M. BASHOR, of Linn County, met with the Brethren in council Oct. 10. Much work was before the council, but all passed off pleasantly. A series of meetings was commenced on the evening of the same day by Bro. Bashor, who labored diligently and zealously for the Master's cause during the week following. The meetings were well attended and good attention was given to the Word.

On Saturday, Oct. 17, was the time appointed for our love-feast. Services commenced at 2 P. M. Four were made willing to unite with the church, and were baptized. An election was held for a minister, which resulted in selecting two. A vote was taken for a deacon, and this also resulted in two being elected. For ministers, brethren Thomas Barklow and Perry VanDyke were selected. For deacons brethren D. M. Brower and Joel Root were chosen.

The feast was an enjoyable one to all present. On Sunday morning, by 10 A. M., a large crowd of people had gathered together to witness the installation of the above-named brethren. Eld. M. M. Bashor officiated. After installation services Bro. Bashor preached an excellent sermon to a large and attentive congregation, and also at 4 P. M., with one more applicant for baptism. This closed the meetings at this place.

A series of meetings was then held at Norway, a few miles further down the valley, commencing Oct. 19, and closing Oct. 29. The meetings at this place were well attended, and good attention was given to the word spoken, but so far there have been no additions. Bro. Bashor preached in all nineteen sermons. GEO. C. CARL.

From Eagle Creek, Ohio.

OCT. 10 I went to Dunkirk, in the above congregation, for a week's meetings. I met with them in their house of worship, and had quite a good congregation. For one week the meetings continued with a growing interest. Their Communion occurred Oct. 17, and was a very pleasant one. A number of ministers and members from adjoining churches were present and labored faithfully for the interest of the cause. On Sunday after the Communion we had a children's meeting, which will ever be remembered as one of the best meetings we ever attended. As nearly all of those dear children, that can read, read the MESSENGER, I want to tell them that I hold them in sacred remembrance. We closed our meetings in the evening. We record this as one of the most pleasant meetings that it has been our lot to enjoy, even though there were no accessions.

ON Saturday, Oct. 10, Bro. Daniel Wysong, of Nappanee, Ind., came to us to hold a series of meetings. His first effort was to assist Bro. Leonard Hyer in preaching the funeral of Mrs. Rebecca Maggert, wife of Jesse Maggert, aged about seventy-two years. This elderly lady had intended to come to the church, but, like many others, waited too long.

Next day, Oct. 11, one came out on the Lord's side and was baptized. Our meetings continued from evening to evening, in addition to some meetings in day-time, with increased interest until Friday, Oct. 16.

During the progress of our meetings we were pained to hear of the sad death of Ervin Ressler, son of brother and sister Reuben Ressler. Ervin was a model young man, nineteen years of age. In attempting to pass a gun through a picket fence to a younger brother, with the muzzle pointing towards himself, the gun was discharged, taking effect in his right arm above the elbow. It shattered the bone to the shoulder. The arm was amputated, but the shock, consequent to the amputation, caused his death in a very short time.

This young man, when he saw that he was seriously wounded, said, "Mother, if I only were baptized!" His father said to the writer of this article, "It I knew that my son was happy, I could be reconciled." May the young men, who chance to read this article, take warning by this sad occurrence! Funeral services by Bro. D. Wysong and Bro. L. Hyer to a very large congregation.

Meanwhile our meetings still progressed with interest. On Tuesday, Oct. 20, one young man and wife came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. Bro. Wysong continued to preach the Word with power, and on Saturday, Oct. 24, we held our love-feast. Bro. Wysong gave us an interesting talk on the qualifications of deacons, as we were about to hold a choice for two brethren to that office. The choice resulted in the election of brethren Jonas Ziegler and J. Z. Long, two worthy young brethren. Our meetings continued two days longer with two more additions, and would have been continued still further, but Bro. Wysong's vitality having become exhausted, the meetings had to close while in the midst of good interest. C. K ZUMBRUN.

From the Mississinewa Church, Delaware Co, Ind.

ON Saturday, Oct. 31, was the day of our church council, prior to our fall love-feast. The usual amount of business was transacted.

The question of brethren following the worldly fashion of wearing a mustache alone, and thus approaching the Communion Table, was considered, and it was decided to act in harmony with the decision of the District Meeting, held at this place in the spring of 1890 (as is also the decision of Annual Meeting). Said decision was that the church should request such brethren not to go to the table.

Our feast was appointed for Nov. 6. A goodly number of brethren, sisters and friends assembled at the appointed hour. The ministering brethren from adjoining churches were brethren Hiram Branson, David Replogle, L. Kinsey, L. Holder, J. Groves, and Geo Painter.

The services of the evening were conducted by Bro. Lewis Kinsey. The tables were more than filled, and the room for spectators was limited. The usual number of brethren and sisters was present. This we are always glad to see. Bro. Henry Frantz is expected to be with us during the early part of February next.

McPherson Notes.

SINCE writing last time, four more have been received into the church by baptism, making thirteen in all received at the College since the beginning of the fall term, ten of whom are students. Many hearts were gladdened, not only those entering upon a new life, but also of their school-mates and friends, and especially of their parents. No more welcome message can be sent home than the fact that a son or a daughter has been truly converted and received into the church.

From the beginning of the term a deep religious feeling prevailed among many of the students, and one after another made the good confession. Eld. Andrew Hutchison, returning home after an extended absence, preached several evenings to large audiences in the College Chapel, but his promise to hold a protracted meeting at the East McPherson church, prevented him from continuing longer, however much we regretted his leaving us so soon. After finishing his appointments, he will start for the Pacific Coast where he will labor for the Master this winter.

The labors of the ministers living at McPherson are rapidly increasing. The West McPherson congregation is supplied entirely by the ministers from McPherson. Two of our ministers have a station nine miles north of the City, where a nucleus of a church has been formed, and members have been received. Another minister has a station fifteen miles south-west, where a number have been received, and others are ready to come. Another has a station forty miles south-east, where no members were a short time ago, but now a number have been baptized, and a good interest is manifested in our church. Another station for preaching has been chosen about twenty miles north-west. These five places for preaching, together with preaching twice each Sunday in the College, keeps our ministers very busy. Eld. Daniel Vaniman is away much of the time, and just now is conducting a meeting in Rice County, while Eld. Andrew Hutchison is away nearly all the time. We mention this to show that all our ministers are hard at work, and the field of labor around McPherson is large and still increasing.

Bro. Paul Wetzel has calls to preach in Barton and in Harvey Counties, where he will labor at once. S. Z. SHARP.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

Conway Springs, Kans.—A love-feast will be held in the Slate Creek congregation, at Conway Springs, Sumner Co., Kans., on Friday, Dec. 11. There will be preaching at 2 P. M. of that day, and at 10 o'clock of the next day. We also expect to have a two weeks' series of meetings, commencing on Dec. 6.—J. R. Leatherman, Nov. 16.

Waddam's Grove, Ill.—Bro. Frank Myers, of Mt. Carroll, came to us Oct. 3, to hold a series of meetings of two weeks. He discharged his duty faithfully. During the meetings we had one of the most enjoyable love-feasts. One young sister made the good confession and was baptized to walk in newness of life. By request, Bro. Myers again returned to us Nov. 7, and on the eighth, seven more young souls were led down into the watery grave, the oldest being only sixteen years of age. This makes eleven since the first of June, that have been received into this church. No wonder we rejoice when the angels in heaven rejoice over one sinner that repenteth.—Abram H. Lutz, Nov. 15.

Pleasant Valley, Va.—Bro. C. D. Hylton came to us Nov. 1, and remained eight days, preaching in all sixteen sermons. As an immediate result eight were reclaimed and fifty gave their hands for membership. Forty-four of that number have been baptized (one of the above has been a member of the Methodist church for many years). The brethren and sisters have been very much built up and strengthened in our most holy faith. Certainly, the good Lord has abundantly blessed us! Bro. Hylton is doing much good and certainly deserves the sincere prayers of the entire Brotherhood. He is a man not yet thirty-three years old, but surely has complied with the Scriptural injunction: "Study to show thyself a workman approved of God."—R. T. Akers.

Sheridan, Mo.—The Honey Creek church, Nodaway Co., Mo., has been without an active minister since last March, when our elder left us. In August Bro. L. M. Kob came and preached four sermons, and was with us also at a council-meeting. Nov. 7 Bro. A. M. Dickey preached three times for us and baptized one. The same day Bro. J. E. Ellenberger came to hold some meetings for us and to assist in holding our love-feast Nov. 13. Bro. S. B. Shirkey came to us Nov. 12, at our council, to hear the report of the visiting brethren. They reported the members in love and union. We had a special council on Saturday, when three letters were granted, and some other business attended to. Bro. J. E. Ellenberger was chosen for our elder. Brethren Shirkey and Ellenberger closed the meeting on Sunday evening, leaving the members much strengthened and encouraged.—Wm. H. Clark.

Riverside, Iowa.—Bro. J. C. Seibert is preaching at Palestine, at which place he has regular meetings. The interest is good and one was baptized yesterday. Many gathered on the banks of Iowa River, to witness the burial of the dear sister, who rose to new life in Christ. Very many are deeply impressed and the husband of the sister is standing near the kingdom. It is believed that several others will come to Jesus before the meetings close.—M. B. Cline, Nov. 16.

Purchase Line, Pa.—Oct. 17 Bro. Daniel Holsopple, of Rummel, Somerset Co., Pa., came to us and remained two weeks. He preached in all eighteen sermons. On account of rain the congregations were sometimes small, and sickness kept some away, which we very much regretted, but our brother was not discouraged. He stood up boldly for the Master and encouraged saints to be faithful, and warned sinners to flee from danger. Though there were no accessions to the church, we believe much good may yet come from the sowing of the true Gospel seed in our past meeting.—Lizzie Fyock, Nov. 12.

Roaring Springs, Pa.—Nov. 14, the members of the western end of the Clover Creek church held a very pleasant council. In the evening of the same day we had our love-feast, which will long be remembered on account of the love and zeal manifested, and because we had the pleasure of again communing with our elder, J. W. Brumbaugh, who has not been in this house for one year or more, on account of ill health. We were made to rejoice when we could see so many of our brethren present. Bro. J. S. Holsinger officiated, and brethren J. Y. King, D. S. Clapper, Brice Sell, and J. B. Miller were also with us. The meetings were all well attended, especially on the evening of the love-feast, when the house did not hold near all the people. The order throughout was good.—J. R. Stayer, Nov. 17.

Voganswille, Pa.—Sunday, Nov. 15, husband and I took a drive of about twelve miles to the Conestoga church, Lancaster County, Pa. A meeting was held at the Voganswille house, in the forenoon, and was conducted by Bro. Levi Mohler and H. E. Light. The church had a series of meetings two weeks before, which was conducted by Bro. J. M. Mohler, and resulted in twenty applicants for baptism, which were attended to in the afternoon. There was one in the number about twelve years of age, and when baptism was administered to him it greatly affected the one who asked the questions in the water. The brethren and sisters of that place seemed to be zealous in the work of the Lord, and full of love. There were more people at the water than I ever saw on a similar occasion. It is estimated that there were three thousand people present.—Sue S. Schreiner.

Walnut Creek Church, Mo.—Bro. Lentz, from Bates County, Mo., began a series of meetings in the Walnut Creek church, Mo., Oct. 10, and continued for two weeks Our love-feast occurred Oct. 17. On Sunday, Oct. 18, one requested baptism, which was administered in the afternoon. On returning from the water, two more requested baptism. The necessary arrangements were made at once and we returned again to the water to administer the sacred rite. On Monday, Oct. 19, three more were received by baptism, among them a little girl fourteen years of age. When this little sister went down into the water, I thought of the words "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth." Oct. 21 one more made the good confession and was baptized, making, in all, seven baptized at this meeting. Our meetings closed Oct. 25. Oh, what means of spiritual strength and grace these meetings afford the children of God. —Esther Cripe, Knobnoster, Mo.

Mt. Repose, Ohio.—Our Communion of Oct. 3, in the Stone Lick church, was soul-cheering. Eld. Jesse Kinsey officiated. Sunday afternoon a children's meeting was held, led by Bro. J. H. Brumbaugh. Dec. 5 is the time for our quarterly council. We hope that our elders will remember us at that time, and that some meetings may be held in connection with the council.—Lydia C. Lesh, Nov. 19.

Centre View, Mo.—Our series of meetings began Nov. 7, and closed Nov. 18. Eld. David Bowman, of Morgan County, conducted the meetings. Attendance was good until the 14th, when rain and cold weather set in. Although only one was received into the church, we feel that the efforts put forth were not in vain. Bro. Bowman is an earnest worker. His preaching was plain and practical. The members seemed much encouraged and built up.—Sarah Witmore, Nov. 19.

Big Creek Church, Ill.—Our love-feast, though not as largely attended as at other times, yet was an enjoyable one. The order was excellent. Bro. David Troxel, of Cerro Gordo, Ill., was with us. The meeting was carried on for not quite two weeks, with two additions and closed with a full house. Some good impressions were made on the people. Bro. Troxel leaves for home this morning. May the good wishes of all go with him! Come again, Bro. Troxel.—J. M. Forney.

Brainerd, Kans.—Bro. G. E. Studebaker, of McPherson, has been holding a series of meetings here for the past two weeks. He has been laboring for the Master, and the salvation of precious souls, and we are glad to say he has made a success. As a result of his faithful work, on Sunday, Nov. 8, two more souls came out on the Lord's side to be buried with Christ by baptism, and walk in newness of life. Our brother delivered his first sermon to the people of Butler in February, 1891. He has delivered monthly sermons here since that time, and has baptized seven. We hope the good work may continue!—L. Thomas, Nov. 19.

Sam's Creek, Md.—Nov. 8 the Brethren of the Sam's Creek church commenced a series of meetings, and closed them on Sunday night, the 15th. These services were conducted by our beloved brother, Eld. Joseph A. Long, of Abbottstown, Pa., who is a son of the well-known elder, David Long, of the Manor church, Md. Bro. Long preached for us ten very able and interesting sermons. As an immediate result of our meetings three precious souls were baptized, who were not children of the Brethren. We have reasons to believe many more were deeply impressed with the Truth as held forth by Bro. Long. The congregations increased from the beginning of the meeting. The last meeting on Sunday night was the largest.—Wm. H. Franklin.

Mount Storm, W. Va.—Nov. 8 Jonas Fike, of Eglon, W. Va., came to the Lyon school-house, where we have been preaching monthly during the past summer, and commenced a series of meetings. He preached eight sermons in all, which resulted in the conversion of nine dear souls, ranging in age from fourteen to eighty-four years. Children and their parents united in serving the Lord. Bro. Fike wielded the Sword of the Spirit ably, causing the Father's children to rejoice with the angels of heaven. Many more, we believe, are near the kingdom. A more kind-hearted and hospitable people it has never been our lot to meet. Though there is some opposition, yet the prospects are encouraging. The work has just begun to move in good shape, and by prayerful watching we look forward to brighter days for this little band. They ask the prayers of God's children.—Raphael Baker, Nov. 16.

Darkesville, W. Va.—The brethren and sisters of the Van Clevesville church, Berkeley Co., W. Va., held their Communion meeting Oct. 31. The house was filled to its utmost capacity. About one hundred and twenty-five members surrounded the tables. Brethren David Long, Abraham Rolland and Jacob Bricker did the preaching. Bro. Long officiated. J. O. Puterbaugh, Nov. 6.

Smithborough, Ill.—Nov. 14 was the regular quarterly council for the Hurricane Creek church. Not much business came before the meeting, and all passed off in a seemingly satisfactory manner to all. Our elder, Henry Liligh, was not present with us. Bro. Ira Beanblossom was chosen to act as Moderator. The church decided to close our Sunday-school for the winter; also, to hold a series of meetings in January, to be conducted by Bro. Michael Flory.—Cornelius Kessler, Nov. 20.

Pleasant Valley, Va.—Nov. 14 I crossed the Blue Ridge to Brown's Cove, to hold some meetings. We have some brethren and sisters in that locality. We had three meetings at Blue Dale, and Nov. 16 we had Communion meeting at the Locust Grove church. Eld. Daniel Miller and A. D. Garber were the speakers. Four brethren and two sisters from the Valley were present. Twelve brethren and thirteen sisters communed. We had a good meeting and hope it will not soon be forgotten. One sister was buried with Christ in baptism.—Daniel Miller, Mt. Sidney, Va.

West Milton, Ohio.—The members of the Salem church, Montgomery County, Ohio, held their love-feast Oct. 14. Some communed for the first time and some, no doubt, for the last. The day was a pleasant one, and there was a large attendance of both members and spectators. The assistance from adjoining ministers was limited. Bro. Abraham Deitrick officiated. The best of order prevailed, and good attention was given to the Word preached. One dear sister united with the church by baptism. Next morning Bro. H. C. Longanecker ably addressed the audience. S. T. Harnes.

McLouth, Kans.—The members at this place are somewhat isolated from the main body of the church, being a part of the Ozawkie district, located about sixteen miles nearly due east of the above-named place. We number about twenty members and have our regular meetings separate from the regular meetings at the center of the organization. We have a fairly good country and invite immigration. We are located forty-one miles from Kansas City, and have direct railroad communication with Kansas City, Leavenworth and Topeka. By the good providence of God we had a very pleasant Communion meeting Oct. 30. Brethren D. B. Gibson, C. C. Root, and others, were with us. We enjoyed the occasion very much.—David Kimmel.

Ottobine, Va.—Our love-feast at Sangerville, in the Beaver Creek congregation, Rockingham, Va., was held Oct. 17. Our only help from abroad were two brethren, young in the ministry, who gave us some good, sound preaching. Our home elder, Jacob Thomas, officiated, and I think we all realized that a good Communion may be held without so large a number of ministers from abroad, yet we always like to see them come. We had a full attendance of members,—all we could seat,—also many, not members, gave good attention. Two were received by baptism in the morning before the services commenced, making ten in all during the summer in this arm of the church. Two fashionable ladies, from across the mountain, who were never at a meeting of the kind before, said, "We have seen and heard enough so as to be almost Dunkards." We would to God they were not only almost but altogether such.—G. W. Wine, Nov. 5.

Back Creek, Pa.—The members of this church met for Communion services, Oct. 17, at the Brandt meeting-house. Eld. William Koontz, of Falling Springs, officiated, assisted by brethren H. Etter, A. Baker, D. Wineman, W. A. Anthony, D. Wingard and D. Zook. We had a pleasant, well-attended meeting and good order. At the close of the meeting one precious soul covenanted in baptism to walk in newness of life. Nov. 8 another young sister was received by baptism. May God help them to be faithful to the end! The Lord willing we intend to hold a series of meetings some time in January of next year, to be conducted by Eld. S. R. Zug, of Mastersonville, Lancaster Co., Pa.—John Lehner, Nov. 18.

Frankfort, Ohio.—Our love-feast is now in the past. The ministering brethren present were W. D. Mallow, of Austin, and Landon West, of Lanier, Preble Co.; also brethren and sisters from Circleville. The spectators were many, but there was good order. Bro. Landon West officiated at the Communion services. Within the last two months two were received by baptism here. After our love-feast, while Bro. Landon West was on his way home, he stopped off in Washington Court-house,—a new point. Bro. Carter and the writer were called to come over, and we, in company with two dear sisters, responded to the call. We held meetings for several days, and three came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. Others are near. May God help them to come!—J. C. Jones.

Antioch, Va.—I have been permitted to be with the Brethren of the above place for a season, and have attended some of their meetings and feasts. I left home Oct. 22, and met with the Brethren of the Bethlehem church, Franklin Co., Va., at their feast, Oct. 24 and 25. We had a very pleasant and quiet meeting. A number of ministers were present from other churches, and brethren Barnhart and Heckman, from Kansas. This church is under the care of elders Daniel Peters, Daniel Bowman and Daniel Naff and other ministers. I next attended the feast in the Antioch church, under the care of Riley Flora. Here we had a very pleasant and large meeting. The brethren are maintaining the order of the church well, as far as I can judge. There will be a feast at the Brick church, to-morrow at 4 P. M. and at Peter's Creek, in Roanoke County, on Saturday, Nov. 7, after which I expect to go to Lancaster County, Pa., to Bro. S. R. Zug's congregation and feast, Nov. 10 and 11.—E. W. Stoner, Union Bridge, Md., Nov. 3.

Belleville, Kans.—In the evening of Nov. 14 quite a number of brethren and sisters from adjoining churches convened with the band of members of the Belleville church for love-feast exercises. Brethren Eli Renner, of Burr Oak; Humphrey Talhelm and William R. Phillippi, from the Washington church, with Bro. C. S. Holsinger, of Lacon, Ill., were the ministers from other places. Bro. Talhelm officiated, assisted by Bro. Holsinger. There was a small representation of our home members. The weather was bad, but nevertheless some came a distance of forty miles from other places by private conveyance. The weather was no hindrance to them, and upon the whole we had a good meeting. On Sunday morning we had a children's meeting, after which the brethren preached to a well-filled house. Bro. Holsinger also preached for us both Sunday and Monday evenings. He is a great worker, and a favorite among the young people. Bro. ——— Dickey, of Iowa, was with us last evening and gave us a good lesson. We felt sorry that his stay was so short. We appreciate those visits of the Brethren very much and hope they will come again.—Louisa J. Williams, Nov. 18.

Bango Church, Ind.—I closed a two weeks' meeting at this point last night, in the Baptist church house. We had a good attendance and attention to the Word preached. One dear young sister came out and was received into the church by baptism. We have reason to believe that many good impressions were made, and hope that others will be gathered into the fold.—Daniel Snell, Sidney, Ind., Nov. 13.

Clay Hill, Pa.—We closed our Sunday-school yesterday, for the winter, and rewarded the scholars with Bibles and Testaments. There were over one hundred scholars enrolled. The school had an average attendance of sixty-five for the summer. They also committed 6,777 verses from the Testament. We know that the school ought not to have been closed, but as we have many appointments and the afternoons are so short, we were obliged to close, so that our Sunday-school would not conflict with our preaching services. —W. A. Anthony.

Chiques Church, Pa.—Our Sunday-school for 1891, at Chiques Hill church, has closed. There were 150 pupils enrolled, with an average attendance of about 120. A children's meeting was held at the same place on the afternoon of Nov. 8. The speakers were our elder, S. R. Zug, of Mastersonville, and Bro. S. H. Hertzler, of Elizabethtown, in the English language. Bro. D. P. Ziegler, of Lower City, Pa., spoke very appropriately in German. Our love-feast was held in Elizabethtown, Nov. 10, and largely attended. Our church is in peace and union, and we hope God may continue to bless us!—John C. Zug, Mastersonville, Pa.

Wallace, Nebr.—I write this from near Wallace, Lincoln Co., Nebr., where I am at present, laboring among the scattered members, by order of the District Mission Board. I arrived last week. My first preaching was in a Methodist church, not a $50,000 edifice, but a sod house, neatly finished. I could not help but remark that it was a very appropriate house of worship and in every way suited to the followers of Jesus. I am holding meeting every evening, and, from present indications, may remain for some time yet, though I cannot say how long, as there are calls for series of meetings at several different places.—Jesse Y. Heckler, Nov. 11.

Gretna, Ohio.—We closed our Sunday-school at the Logan church Nov. 1 Bro. S W. Hoover, of Dayton, Ohio, was with us. He held a children's meeting in the morning, at which quite a number were present. This talk was well received by the children as well as the older ones. One was received by baptism on that day. Bro. Hoover also preached in the city of Bellefontaine, in the afternoon and evening. The Brethren have preaching there every four weeks. We think much good could be done there if the right encouragement were given. We also expect to hold a series of meetings, in the near future, at our church house, if we can procure a minister.—John R. Snyder.

Ari, Ind. The members of the Pleasant Hill church held their love-feast Oct. 22 It was a meeting long to be remembered. We are few in number, but as our brethren and sisters from numerous other churches were with us, we had the privilege of seeing about seventy members surround the Lord's Table in the evening. Quite a number of ministering brethren were present. Among the number were J. V. Felthouse, and D. Snell. These brethren did the principal part of the preaching, while Bro. D. Wysong officiated. At the same meeting two deacons were chosen. The lot fell on brethren George and Albert Gump. May they discharge their duties faithfully!—P. A. Bosler.

Battle Creek, Iowa.—Our love-feast was held in Bro. John Isenberger's shop, Oct. 31. The weather, though cold, was pleasant, and we enjoyed the meeting. It was the first meeting of the kind, held in this community. We have no church organized here yet, but belong to Bro. Trostle's charge. Eighteen members communed at the feast, and four ministering brethren were present to aid in the services They were brethren J. Early, J. W. Trostle, E. B. Hoff and John Diehl. Bro. John Diehl officiated. Bro. E. B. Hoff remained with us till Nov. 12, and conducted some meetings. He made good impressions on some of the people. We hope he will come again.—Lona Cripe, Nov. 13.

Sidney, Ind.—Our Communion, in the Spring Creek church, occurred on the evening of Nov. 14. We had a very pleasant meeting, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather. The very best of order prevailed during the exercises. Our large house was well filled, and even standing room was in demand. At least 180 members surrounded the Lord's Table. The ministerial help was ample. Bro. Daniel Shively, of Peru, Ind., officiated. The ministers gave us good short talks on the different subjects. Eld. Noah Fisher, Davis Younce and Joseph Holder were also with us, besides the ministers of adjoining congregations. All did much toward making the meeting a pleasant one, giving most wholesome instruction to both saint and sinner. I hope many good resolutions were formed, and may God help us to carry them out, during life! We regretted very much that some of our dear members were not able to attend our feast, on account of sickness, and that, too, some of those who had quite lately come to the church. May God stand by them and comfort them!—E. Miller, Nov. 17.

This removes one of the faithful in Israel. She was born Dec. 28, 1810, near Johnstown, Pa., and came to Montgomery County, Ohio, when but five years of age. She was married to Daniel Hyre in 1830 and shortly thereafter she and her husband joined the German Baptist church, professing a faith then, which was the inspiration of their younger years, and became their joy and consolation in the evening of their lives.

Two years ago her husband, Daniel Hyre, passed on to the great reward She left the old home in Montgomery County and took up her abode in Van Wert, Ohio, where her youngest child, Ella, the wife of Dr. J. M. Stutsman, resides. Her health gradually failed and, notwithstanding all that loving care could do, she quietly passed on to the higher life, the disease being consumption. She was the mother of nine children, six of whom still survive her.

The remains were taken to Montgomery County for interment and the funeral held on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 4, at the Salem church. The large concourse of old friends and neighbors showed in what esteem she had been held in life by their gathering to pay the last tribute of love and respect. Brethren Bookwalter and Kleppinger conducted the funeral services, speaking from the text, 2 Cor. 5: 1. A. E. Hyre.

In 1859 they all came to Indiana and, in 1862, the parents joined the German Baptist Brethren church, having their membership in the Solomon's Creek church in which they lived and died.

It has models of prayer, suitable for the service of the prayer-meeting, while its suggestions, meditations and instructions are pre-eminently calculated to be of service in preparation for the solemn duties that rest upon the active members. The DIVINE DEMONSTRATION

A Text-Book of Christian Evidence.

By H. W. EVEREST.

"The strong arguments of this author are convincing, and his strong faith is contagious. His method is good. He does well in narrowing down the whole discussion to the nature and authority of Jesus. All the classes of evidence converge to this point. The title of the book is no misnomer—it is a demonstration."

"The grand proposition is that 'Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God.' Starting with certain postulates, the argument is based upon these, and built up with relentless logic until the conclusion is reached with almost the certainty of a mathematical demonstration. There are three distinct arguments, all independent of each other, but each weaving together solid facts, and building upon the firm basis of postulates, until the inevitable conclusion is reached; three lines of argument that reach the same conclusion thus give it a triple force. After these three lines of argument are completed, the whole is gathered into one sweeping summary, that rushes over the sophistries of skepticism like an avalanche."

"This is an original and very able apologetic work. It first gathers the strong proofs of the Messiahship of Christ, meeting candidly the modern criticism of the evangelical records; and having established the superhuman origin of Christianity, it brings out afresh the relation of the Old Testament to the New, and the argument from prophecy and history; and then follows up the argument with the legitimate corollaries that are involved in it. The volume makes an excellent text-book for our higher academic classes, and we commend it to our Christian educators."

— OF —

ELD. JAMES QUINTER.

This is a neatly-printed and well-bound volume of 426 pages, containing a well-written biographical sketch of Eld. James Quinter and forty of his sermons.

The biographical part will be found quite interesting, instructive and impressive. No one can read an account of Bro. Quinter's life without feeling deeply and favorably impressed. The work shows how a poor orphan boy, by hard work, and faithfulness to his religious convictions, rose step by step, until he reached a field of usefulness and honor as broad as the Nation itself. Though dead, his good deeds and the impressive examples in piety, learning and simplicity will follow him for generations to come.

The Sermon Department contains many of his choice sermons, which will prove exceedingly interesting and profitable reading to all, and especially to our ministers and isolated members. We feel that this book will fill a long-felt want in our Brotherhood. Price, post-paid, $1.25.

WE enjoyed a pleasant call from Bro. Levi Replogle and wife, and J. Y. King, of the Eastern Shore, Md. They remained over night with us and Bro. King preached for us. He is full of zeal for the Master and labors with his might. We were much pleased with the visit, and also pleased to learn that the Brethren on the Eastern Shore seem to be prospering. They now have two good houses of worship and a membership of seventy. Bro. George Brumbaugh, of the same place, also gave us a short call.

OVER last Sunday we had a very pleasant visit from brethren Jacob Coppock and A. S. Rosenberger, of Ohio. Bro. Rosenberger preached in the morning and Bro. Coppock in the evening; also on Monday evening. Both have children attending school and came to see how they do. Dr. Rosenberger was made to rejoice in meeting his son as a subject of the better kingdom, and we are sure that others entered into his rejoicing. Why should we not, when the angels in heaven are made to rejoice in the return of the children to the Father's house?

LAST week we were called to attend the funeral of one of Bro. M. R. Bashor's daughters, who was called suddenly to pass over into the other life, but on account of other engagements we could not go. We extend our sympathies to the distressed parents' family. May the Lord sustain them in this, the time of their sorrow, and may the language of their hearts be, "Though the Lord slay me yet will I trust in him." We cannot now understand his ways, but when we shall know as we are known, we shall then learn that he is a compassionate Father and doeth all things well.

BRO. HOFFMAN AND WIFE have been guests at the Normal during the last week. They came to visit their daughter who has been sick, but is now convalescent and, we hope, will soon be well again.

WE write our editorials a little ahead of time this week, as we wish to attend the Ministerial Meeting which will be held with the Clover Creek brethren and open on Wednesday morning. We may have something to say about it after it is over.

OUR late love-feast was one of the most pleasant ever held in our congregation. We had with us elders Jas. A. Sell, J. B. Replogle, and Jas. R. Lane; also I. M. Gibson, of Roanoke, Va. On the afternoon of the first day we elected three deacons and one minister and forwarded two ministers from the first to the second degree, and ordained one to the eldership. On the same afternoon there were five persons baptized. After the baptism we had the examination services, and after that the elections and the installations. In the evening we had the Lord's Supper and the Communion. The day and evening were pleasant and the attendance unusually good. On Sunday morning, Bro. Sell gave us one of his interesting and practical sermons, and in the evening the congregation was entertained by Bro. Lane. All the services passed off pleasantly and all present seemed to enjoy the meeting.

HISTORIES.

OF histories there seems to be no end. Every land and every nation has its history. Then we have State histories, County histories, histories of the sciences, the arts, church histories and many other histories that might be named. These are studied in our families, taught in our schools, and made a prominent feature in our education, and yet the oldest, the most reliable and best of all histories is comparatively neglected. We mean the Bible.

This history dates back to the beginning and spans thousands of years, detailing some of the most wonderful events that were ever chronicled by man.

During the present term we have had a class in Genesis and have gotten as far as the ninth chapter. We might write a book in telling what we have found in this, the beginning and foundation of all histories. Of course, it is not our intention to do this, because, as slowly as we have been going, we have only gathered a few of the jewels of this great treasure house.

There are several thoughts with which we have been especially impressed. The first one is that in almost the beginning of the world's history the earth was populated with two distinct races of people, as distinct morally as the Christian and the heathen, and socially, as the Jews and Samaritans. We have reference to the descendants of Cain and those of Seth.

The first leading characteristic that we notice on the part of the descendants of Cain is, that they, early in their history, turned their attention to inventions, such as would especially tend to their own enjoyments and enable them, as much as possible, in their estimation, to live independent of God.

1. We have Lamech as the introducer of polygamy, Jabal was the inventor of tent-making, Jubal, of musical instruments and Tubal Cain an artificer in brass and iron. We do not mention these facts to show that inventions, in themselves, are necessarily wrong, but the promptings, in these cases and among this people were wrong, because they did it to modify the curse of sin through their own wisdom and strength, and independent of God. They either felt that they were forsaken of God or they presumptuously forsook him. It is the way of sin; whenever found it is rebellion with the determination of being independent and having our own way. We have this truth beautifully pictured by Milton in his graphic description of the fallen angels in their council in hell as to how they could better their condition, independent of God. Men and devils may resort to their own devices, but they cannot live without God. As this nation went away from God, wickedness increased. In the meantime Seth was born and a new nation was commenced. Then it was that men began to be called after God and to distinguish themselves from the Cainites. They were called the "sons of God" while Cain's posterity were called the children of men,—the "daughters of men."

The Sethites were not so much concerned about the affairs of life. They had faith in God and had respect to both his promises and rewards, and recognized the truth that they were but sojourners and were looking for a better city and country. By strong inference we are made to believe that God had forbidden intermarriage between these two races. This we have from the first part of the sixth chapter in the account of the intermarriage and its direful results. From here we date a special growth in wickedness, so much so that God determines to destroy the world, but gives one hundred and twenty days of grace, but through these unholy unions sin had made its die and only one uncontaminated family was found, through which the race could be perpetuated.

What are the lessons taught? First, a desire to live without God is an indication of the works of sin, which, continued on this line, leads to ruin, as to forget God is to be cast away from his presence forever.

2. The danger of entering into any league whatever with sin. This has, in all ages, proved an unequal yoking and always will.

These few remarks afford only a glimpse of the thoughts and truths that lie hidden in the most wonderful of all histories,—the Bible. It is an inexhaustible mine of precious diadems. Dig,—dig deep, and continue to dig and you will be made rich unto eternal life.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

JUDGE NOT.

BY ADELAIDE A. PROCTOR.

Judge not; the workings of his brain
And of his heart thou canst not see;
What looks to thy dim eyes a stain,
In God's pure light may only be
A scar, brought from some well-worn field,
Where thou wouldst only faint and yield.

The look, the air that frets thy sight,
May be a token, that below
The soul has closed in deadly fight
With some infernal, fiery foe,
Whose glance would scorch thy smiling grace,
And cast thee shuddering on thy face.

The fall thou darest to despise—
May be the angel's slackened hand
Has suffered it, that he may rise
And take a firmer, surer stand;
Or, trusting less to earthly things,
May henceforth learn to use his wings.

And judge none lost, but wait and see,
With hopeful pity, not disdain,
The depth of the abyss may be
The measure of the height of pain,
And love and glory that may raise,
Their soul to God in after days.

"IF, IF, IF, IF."

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To ELDER S. S. MOHLER,

Beloved Fellow Pilgrim:—

How wonderful are the monosyllables of God. The "so" of John 3: 16, and 15: 8, is large enough to hold all the fullness and all the manifestations of God and man throughout "the ages of the ages." Some one has called it "an ocean of thought in a drop of language." In Philpp. 2: 1, God's little "if" appears four times, as if to concentrate all the resources and sacrifices of the Holy Trinity within the smallest possible compass, and press His supreme claims on human confidence and affection.

"If any CONSOLATION IN CHRIST." The whole River of Life, clear as crystal, rolls in that "if." The history of the universe, so far as recorded, the whole manifestation of God in Christ, responds yea and amen. There is consolation in Christ, consolation as deep and high, and broad as Jehovah. When God undertakes to comfort, it must needs be boundless as His own eternity. The atonement is for the sinner, and it is as vast as the sin, as limitless as the sinless.

All that God is, all that He has, and all that He can do, are found in Emmanuel. And Emmanuel is God with us, God of us, God for us. With such a Refuge, such a Helper, such a Consoler, may we not with glad heart and unwavering confidence rehearse the triumphant challenge of David: "The LORD is my light and my salvation: whom shall I fear? The LORD is the strength of my life: of whom shall I be afraid?" Psalm 27: 1.

"IN CHRIST." This is the key-note of the Gospel. Paul was an unsurpassed comforter, but he claimed no originality. He determined to know nothing but Jesus Christ and Him crucified." This made him the third-heaven man he was. In 2 Cor. 1: 3, 4, 5, we have the secret of all his energy and victory and peace and joy and wisdom, and all his untiring, unparallelled labors. "IN CHRIST." GOD was his "dwelling place," and he was "an habitation of GOD THROUGH THE SPIRIT." Ps. 90: 1; Eph. 2: 22. Wondrous man, but not more wondrous than you and I may be.

His was no exclusive privilege of peace and consolation and glory. He was only one among many members in the same body. The same life, and love, and joy, that pulsed through his soul, also vitalizes and warms and gladdens the little toe, and that means me. Paul in Rome, and S. S. Mohler in Warrensburg, are partakers of the same "consolation in Christ." The faith that is strong enough to lift its finger and touch the hem of His garment, is sure of a blessing that thrills from the centre to the circumference of our being. "He dwelleth in our hearts by faith;" and when JESUS is there, it matters not how the sufferings of Christ abound in us, "our consolation also aboundeth by CHRIST." Eph. 3: 17; 2 Cor. 1: 5. "Perfect love casteth out fear," because it is "the LOVE OF GOD shed abroad in the heart BY THE HOLY GHOST," AFTER we are "justified by faith." 1 John 4: 18; Rom. 5: 1, 5.

Love is the greatest of the triplet graces, but faith is the first. To love without believing, and to believe without loving, are moral impossibilities. Just as soon as our sense of sin and sinfulness, and emptiness and helplessness, is lost in the sense of Christ's all-sufficiency for all things, and always, we know the peace of God which "passeth all understanding." 2 Cor. 9: 8; Philpp. 4: 7. There is such a fullness in Jesus, that to empty Him would be to annihilate God. And it is the MAN Christ Jesus in whom Jehovah has deposited all His infinite resources. God needed no such expedient on His own account.

He admits of neither supplement nor diminution. His incarnation did not undeify Him. Without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness; God was "manifest in the flesh," "was made flesh," "was made sin," so that sinners might become sons, "partakers of the divine nature," spectators and heirs of the beatitudes and glories of the Eternal Trinity. 1 Tim. 3: 16, John 1: 14; 2 Cor. 5: 21; 2 Pet. 1: 4; John 17: 24; Rom. 8: 17. Just as certainly as God is true, all this "consolation in CHRIST," is for you, so that you may be "filled with comfort, and be EXCEEDING JOYFUL in all your tribulation." 2 Cor. 7: 4.

Depression is of the flesh, darkness creeps over our sky out of the memory of the past, and the sense of present weakness and demerit, but the "consolation in Christ" tides over it all, and swallows up all our sins and all our insufficiency, and all our doubts and fears in the reiterated assurance that God will supply all our need "according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." Philpp. 4: 19; 2 Cor. 9: 15; and 1 Cor. 15: 57. When I think of my sins I am so ashamed and confounded, that were it not for the open heart, and open arms of Jesus, I would be ready to vociferate the prayer in Rev. 6: 16. And when I allow myself only for one hour to contemplate my physical and temporal conditions, and the utter destitution of all inherent merit or power, I am of "all men most miserable." It is only by "looking UNTO JESUS" moment by moment, and casting body and soul unreservedly on the "two immutable things in which it is impossible for God to lie," that I find "strong consolation," and the unwavering certainty of my eternal security. Heb. 6: 17, 18, 19. It is only in the faith that presses Emmanuel to our heart of hearts, that we are able to join in the pæan of Rom. 8: 32-39. In enumerating the "all things" in verse 32, let us not forget 1 Cor. 3: 22, and 2 Cor. 12: 9, 10, and kindred et cetera. Let us pray the Holy Spirit to emphasize in our intelligence and consciousness the "but" in Heb. 12: 10, and similar conjunctives. We need another Philip to put the forcible interrogation of Acts 8: 30. Yea, we need Jesus Himself to point His finger to many a passage, to many a single word, and say with mild yet pungent rebuke, "How readest thou?" Luke 10: 26.

Your sufferings and sorrows abound, but the consolations of Christ superabound. When you forget self and "see Jesus only," you cannot help repeating the sweet testimony of the Shepherd Poet, "My cup runneth over." Ps. 23: 5. And as you pass along the appointed way of discipline and consolation, you may place high in your spiritual gamut the notes "surely," and "will" in Ps. 23: 6. With this correspond well the three tenses in 2 Cor. 1: 10. Read over with fresh unction Heb. 12: 5, 6. Oh, what "consolation in Christ, what comfort of love, what fellowship of the spirit, what tender affections and compassions." Now chastening is not joyous, but grievous, but afterward, AFTERWARD, "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

BY B. F. MOOMAW.

Chapter Eight.

FINALLY the Union army came to the conclusion that it could succeed in suppressing the rebellion in a way in which many lives might be saved, and they decided to change their policy. Instead of slaying their enemies, they would destroy the provisions, the supplies for the army and the people, and so went broadside through the Shenandoah Valley, applying the torch to mills, barns and stores, till, as was said, the ravens could not find whereof to keep them alive, and the Confederacy would be compelled to surrender. When this was done, many of our Brethren and others left their homes, and went West. Some returned after the close of the war, and others remained away.

In this tragedy I was among the sufferers financially, having purchased a farm in Rockingham County, in the early part of the war, on which the buildings cost five or six thousand dollars, all of which were burned at my loss. After holding the farm for thirty years, and spending several thousand dollars in improvements, I sold it for just half the sum paid for it, but I sold it for the currency of the present time, and had paid for it in Confederate currency, when it had become considerably under par.

When the war closed, our people were left in a sad condition financially. The Confederate currency was not worth the paper upon which it was printed, and but few had been able, or had taken the precaution, to get and save some specie, and they had but little, if anything, to dispose of, to procure the necessities of life.

Our case was a little different. We had managed to get, and save, all the specie that we could, and securely hid it away. We also had a farm in Ohio, in the care of a good and honest agent. The rent for the four years amounted to a considerable sum, which, as soon as the embargo was raised, was sent to us, and put us in a pretty good condition, in that respect.

SCENES AFTER THE CLOSE OF THE WAR.

There was a great change in many of those who, during the war, were my enemies, and sought my ruin. I was informed by a Baptist minister that a number of men were thirsting for my blood, but the tide had now turned, and they thought I might be of some service to them, and they desired me to give my aid and influence in the work of reconstruction, and afterwards in the Legislature. I received a letter from Col. E. M. Wood, who, at the time of electing members to the Reconstruction convention, was the Representative of our County in the Legislature, and who was, at that time, in Richmond. He wrote to me, asking me to let my name come before the people as a candidate for the said convention I replied, saying, "My dear sir, you certainly cannot be in earnest. I am not competent for the position, if I were desired it." He wrote again, saying that I was the man, and that he had just read my letter, sent to him at the beginning of the war, stating my fears as to the folly, the impossibility of success in the undertaking, and the fearful destruction of men and property. He said that that letter appeared to him more like a prophecy than anything he had ever seen in human affairs.

The Baptist minister, spoken of above, also told me that my name would carry more votes than any other man in the County.

I feel a delicacy in stating these facts, but it is well-known that I never wanted to make myself conspicuous, by being in public positions, or in political matters in any way; nor in the church. I never sought any position at the hands of the church, but rested content with obtaining my membership I thought that if I was wanted in any way, in the service of the church, the brethren knew where to find me. As a matter of duty, I was willing to serve to the best of my ability, and was always very glad to know that my services were, to some extent, appreciated by true and faithful brethren. This being so, I thought that I might venture to publish it in connection with this biographical sketch, and hope that I can be excused, and that God may be, in some way, glorified, and his cause honored, in the vindication of the principles of our Blessed Christianity, as set forth in the proclamation of the angels, at the advent of our Divine Savior, is my fervent prayer. "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace and good will to men."

THANKSGIVING.

BY JAMES WIRT.

"Every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused if it be received with thanksgiving."—1 Tim. 4: 4.

To a devout believer in the Word of God a grateful mind is really necessary to a continued reception of the blessings that come to us as a result of close application of the powers given. The fact that the Christian is expected to use what has been entrusted to him is apparent, and we see that by this means are his possessions increased.

We believe that the vital truths of the Gospel, rightly interpreted, will allow all to make the most of their respective callings in life. "Industry and intense application bring success."

The final rewards of the righteous are promised to the faithful, and to be faithfully and persistently engaged in any legal undertaking, always will bring the greatest profit, therefore the conclusion is reasonable that it is the duty of all to make the most of their opportunities. Remuneration for our efforts may not be each time in money, and this principle applies with equal force to any calling or occupation. God has ordained that, by a wise interchange of the earth's products, all may have enough and to spare. While the husbandman may sow, God will give the increase, and so it is in every avenue of life.

Let us receive, then, with thankfulness and gratitude the blessings of the Bountiful Giver.

The custom of the religious world, to devote one day of each year for the purpose of thanksgiving, finds a hearty endorsement among the administrators of civil affairs, and accordingly the last Thursday of November has been appointed as the day on which to give thanks.

A pious community is a prosperous community. Prosperity brings manifold blessings, and a proper reception of these blessings is indicated by an expression of gratitude. God takes cognizance of the manner in which his gifts are received, and the way in which they are appropriated. We are told that it is more "blessed to give than to receive." Should we not aim to share the good things we enjoy with others, that all alike may be benefited to the fullest extent of every good and perfect gift? The wants of the needy may be met by obeying the instructions of the Gospel.

The present year has been characterized by abundance in every sphere. That which would result in ruin to our works has been given, in a bountiful measure. Good results are always accomplished by working in harmony with the Lord, and we feel that our prosperity in the past is the result of well-directed effort. The world encourages us to go on in this work with vigor, and that zeal that comes through experience. We have much to be thankful for at this time. We have happy homes if we make them such, good schools, and, beyond all, we have the home over there." Our Savior is now preparing that eternal home for us. Let us be up and doing!

"THE SOWER SOWETH THE WORD."

BY E. C. MOONAW.

Number Two.

WE have already considered the nature and power of that Word and have come to speak of its effects in particular cases. This is graphically portrayed in the parable of the sower, found in Mark 4: 3, 20.

1. There is that which fell by the way-side, which the fowls of the air came and devoured; representing on the one hand the hardened hearer, and, on the other, the active agency of Satan in promptly snatching away the Word, lest, if it lie there too long, it might take root, even in the heart. In this case the condition of the heart is aptly represented by the highway, unbroken by the Gospel plow of repentance and humility, and unprepared to receive the good seed of saving truth. More than this, the fowls of the air will one day confess a possession, and can always be on hand to claim every work of grace. The text states that he 'cometh immediately.' Verse 15. He is alert, he is punctual, a regular church goer; in fact, he never misses a service. Wherever the Word is sown, there is Satan, no matter how sacred the time and place may be. See how he watches the sowing of the precious seed, that he may immediately take away all that falls within his reach.

Preachers of the Gospel have always been amazed at the readiness with which the most powerful impressions of the most solemn service can pass away, and be forgotten. No sooner is the congregation dismissed than a film of forgetfulness passes over the multitude, a kind of veil, shutting out all vision of the great spiritual realities which, but a moment before, stood out in solemn and terrible distinctness. A few ordinary civilities, and a little light conversation, seems to be all that is necessary to banish from the mind the most absorbing, tremendous, and overwhelming verities of eternity. In other matters men are not thus indifferent to their most important interests. Far otherwise,—they are alert, active, persistent. How, then, can we account for their indifference and forgetfulness in the supreme concerns of the soul, the one thing needful, the eternal destiny? There is no accounting for it except upon the hypothesis of the parable, that a subtle and invisible agency stands ready to counteract and remove every saving influence which may be brought to bear upon the heart,—that Satan cometh immediately and taketh it away. We cannot see him as he is, busy with the minds of the congregation, but his presence there is attested by patent facts, as well as by plain revelation. He works the more readily because the people themselves are not aware of his presence. Like an undetected thief he accomplishes his whole purpose because his victim is unconscious of the attempt. We would be startled and quickly give the alarm if, in the middle of the night, we should discover a robber at his work. With equal diligence should every minister alarm his congregations by discovering to them the robber of their souls, busy at his dreadful work, even in the midst of God's house, and at the actual time of his holy worship. Especially should we warn those who are most exposed to the arts of the enemy, those whose hearts are like the wayside, hardened by the hoofs of sin; unbroken by repentance, a place of unclean birds, and unclean beasts. And let hearers of every sort profit by the lesson of this parable, and be quick to secure the precious seed by storing it deep in an earnest heart, and holding it with a firm and honest purpose.

2. Next we have that which fell on stony ground, as represented in verses 16 and 17, where it had not much earth. In this shallow ground the seed came up, it is true, but it did not grow. The sun quickly scorched it, and it withered away. This represents a numerous class of superficial hearers, who receive the Word, it is true, and with a great show of heartiness, but having no depth of character, or strength of purpose, they quickly fall away in the presence of difficulty and danger. They are not so clearly marked now in these peaceful times as they were in the days of persecution,—when it was not uncommon for great numbers of shallow professors to publicly abandon the faith. The same scenes would be witnessed now, if our church-going throngs were brought face to face with torture and death. As it is, this second class furnishes the backsliders, who can be met upon every hand, having abandoned their profession for a trifle. "When affliction or persecution ariseth for the Word's sake, immediately they are offended."

While we are now, for the most part, free from this kind of affliction and persecution, yet this same spirit of shallow fickleness is alive as much as ever, and manifests itself in various ways. Now-a-days it is "immediately offended," if asked to give up some indulgence, some favorite sin, or to do some disagreeable service, or to part with its money for the Word's sake. It may also discover itself in the presence of temptations, conflicts, or difficulties in the spiritual life. There are some professors who like the joys of religion well enough, but they cannot brook its sorrows, its chastenings, or its labor. They are fond of the grapes, but do not like to hoe the vines. If the day is fair they will walk with Christ, but if the weather is bad, they are conspicuously absent. Christianity has its heroes, but they do not come from this class.

There have always been plenty of grand men and women who could never be intimidated by danger or difficulty. Obstacles only had the effect of stimulating them to greater exertions. If necessary they will take the kingdom of heaven by force. Special warning should be given to the class represented by the stony ground. There is great need in them for special preparation. Let the stones be removed, and good earth put in their place. Break up the soil more deeply. Disabuse them of the holiday idea of religion. Inure them by degrees to the idea of discipline and labor. While it is hardly possible that they will ever become regulars and veterans in the Lord's army, yet persistent training may make of them very good militia.

Next there is that which fell among thorns, representing another class who hear the Word, but the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things entering in, choke the Word, and it becometh unfruitful. This seed takes root, grows, but does'nt bear fruit. It represents the most disappointing class of all,—a blade of wheat with a blasted head, or a stalk of corn with no sign of an ear. There is much promise, but no performance,—much good opportunity and outward show of religion with none of its reality. Let us look closely and see what is the matter with this particular seed. It fell among thorns, and the thorns are said to represent the deceitfulness of riches, and lust of other things, and the cares of the world. These choke the word, so that it becomes unfruitful.

It is a well known and undoubted fact that the accumulation of unsanctified riches, with the luxury and self-indulgence which inevitably follows, is usually attended with the greatest danger to individual Christians, and churches. First the accumulation of wealth, according to the principles of our present industrial and commercial system has a hardening effect upon the mind and heart, rendering it intensely selfish, and impervious to generous and humane sentiments. It destroys the bond of sympathy between man and man,—it destroys love, which is the essential soil of religion. Moreover it absorbs all the faculties, and consumes all the time of the individual, so that he has nothing left for God and the soul. The man of affairs must be "troubled and careful about many things," and is apt, therefore, to neglect the "one thing needful." But the worst feature of all is that in the heart of the wealth seeker, riches is apt to occupy the place of the chief good. Herein consists its "deceitfulness." The CHIEF GOOD is the object of universal search. The world says practically that it consists in wealth. God says that it consists in the NEW CREATURE. But the multitude run after riches, and are therefore deceived. Riches take the first place. It becomes their idol and they fall down and worship it, and sacrifice to it, and publish abroad its praises. Men sell their souls for this Dead Sea fruit, which turns to ashes on their lips, and leaves naught but eternal hunger, and eternal thirst. Ah, how quickly the undeceiving follows the deceiving. There is a more excellent way. It is for every Christian, who has wealth, to take the place of God's steward in these things, and use them for his glory, and for the advancement of his kingdom. In this way, instead of his wealth being a great curse, it will become a great blessing to himself, his family, and the church. Cultivate the idea, and let it be uppermost in every transaction, that God is the proprietor, and it will cut off all the cares, and all the lusts, and all the deceitfulness of riches. In doing this, your sense of honesty will immediately prevent you from making an improper or selfish use of what belongs to another. Also God will thenceforth occupy the first place in your heart. A faithful stewardship unto God, in respect to property, is a most blessed and profitable service; try it, and get rid of that uneasy conscience, and that heart-ache, arising from the possession of unsanctified and unconsecrated wealth. Trample down the thorns under your feet, and make manure of them for the more rapid growth, and great fruitfulness of the Word.

Lastly there was that which fell on good ground, and brought forth, some thirty, some sixty, and some a hundredfold. There is not much to be said about this plain statement, only that a uniform proportion of results is not expected in every case, even where the ground is good. We see the different gifts, and different degrees of usefulness among the best people, but all are commended of God if they simply do their best. Our service is judged by the sprit in which it is done, and not by its intrinsic value, or merit. The man who only worked one hour in the vineyard received his penny, the same as the man who worked through the heat and burden of the day. Nothing that we can do can add anything to God, or will be accepted by him as an equivalent or recompense for his gifts. But if we are capable of bearing the thirtyfold, or the sixtyfold, we should not be satisfied to fall short of our capacity or opportunity. Another significant reflection presents itself at this point, namely, that only one-fourth of the seed sown bears fruit. The other three-fourths is lost. Must this be taken to mean that of all the multitudes who hear the Gospel, only one-fourth will be saved, while three-fourths will be lost? When we look out over the congregations which throng the churches, is it not a tremendous reflection that so large a proportion of them will be lost? Should not every hearer ask himself the question, "After all, shall I at last fail of the grace of God? After all my opportunities to enter the kingdom of God, shall the door of mercy be finally shut in my face? Will my life bear no fruit, fit for God to gather into his garner? Am I to be like the chaff which is driven away, or trodden under foot, or burned in the fire?" God forbid that such shall be the fate of any one who enjoys Gospel privileges. Let us receive the Word into good and honest hearts, especially that Word which was made flesh, "and dwelt among us." Let us receive Jesus, and rely wholly and solely upon his saving and sanctifying power. Doing this we will surely reap the golden harvest of eternal life. Our sheaf will not fail, nor our place be wanting in the garner of God.

DID JUDAS GO OUT WHILE THEY WERE EATING THE SUPPER?

BY A. HUTCHISON.

BELIEVING as I do, that there is a little mistake made in our teaching on the subject of Judas going out while Jesus and the disciples were eating that last supper, I now ask the indulgence of the reader while I call attention to a few facts, as indicated in the Scriptures:

1. Let us notice the record carefully. Matthew, in his account of that event, shows us that Judas was at the table at the time that they ate the supper. Matt. 26: 25. "Then Judas, which betrayed him, answered and said, Master is it I?" Verse 26 says, "And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it," etc. Verse 27 says, "And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it." Mark 14: 18–23 gives nearly the same account of the case, mentioning the fact that the twelve were present at the time of eating the passover supper. No traitor had been pointed out as yet,—but in answer to their question as to who should betray him, he said, "It is one of the twelve, that dippeth with me in the dish." Then they took the bread and cup, and, in speaking of the cup, Mark says, "And they all drank of it." Why say all, if one was out?

Luke 22: 15–20, gives a very clear account of the passover supper and of the Bread of Communion and Cup of Blessing. Verse 21 says, "But, behold, the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me on the table." If he had gone out while they were eating the supper (as is affirmed) and the bread and cup were used after supper, how could the hand of the traitor still be at the table after the bread and cup were both given?

If you will carefully read the accounts of this case, as given by the four evangelists; you will see that none of them tell us that Judas went out before the bread and cup of Communion were given. Matt. 26: 23 says, "He that dippeth his hand with me in the dish, the same shall betray me." The token by which it was to be made known, was withheld. Mark 14: 20 says, "It is one of the twelve, that dippeth with me in the dish." He does not point him out,—that is yet in the future. John 13: 26 says, "He it is, to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped it." They were then eating the supper, but the act of dipping and giving the sop was still in the future. "And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iscariot." When he had received the sop he went immediately out.

Now the question to be determined is, when did he receive the sop? We go to Luke 22: 21 and we find the answer. Christ was holding the disciples in suspense up to this time, but now he says, "Behold." The hand of him who was the traitor was yet on the table. Then he certainly had not received the sop yet,—for he went immediately out when he had received it and I understand that to be the time when he called their attention, by saying "Behold." You have been wishing to know who it is; I now point him out to you.

This view of the case makes the several accounts, as given by the four evangelists, agree, and cuts off the opportunity of the critic, to say that we don't take the Scripture as it reads, etc. Hoping that a careful examination of this question may be of advantage to us all, and do harm to no one, I present the case in this manner. Far be it from me, to try to provoke controversy. Read carefully before you condemn, but if the Word of the Lord condemns the position which is here set forth, then do not accept it.

TIME ENOUGH FOR DUTY.

BY A. C. WIEAND.

THERE'S always time enough to do our duty, and do it well. People say, "I've a hundred things to do and my time is so limited." Stop! Think! You have all the time there is.

This one thing must be true:—Truth and right are eternal and never can contradict or oppose each other. There never, never will be two conflicting duties. One thing is your duty now. Do it. To-morrow is never long enough to do to-day's slightest duty. He that procrastinates lades himself with the unbearable burden of undone duty; and to the end of his hampered life, he can not free himself.

Not only is there always time enough for duty; but just time enough,—none to spare for idleness; none for frivolity; none for wickedness. Life means labor. There's no place in heaven for idlers: for time is our most precious and priceless gift; it makes life passable; and he who fritters that away betrays a sacred trust, "is dead while he lives," and so proves himself unworthy of eternal life and fit only for everlasting death.

We review our work, and we look at what remains undone, and our hearts fail us. Nothing! Nothing!—yet "she hath done what she could." Herein is encouragement:—

> Do your duty; do it well;
> Trust the rest to Heaven.
> Little strivings surely tell
> As the hidden leaven.

"OUR personal desires are no proper guide for our action. What we want to do, may be right, and it may be wrong. Unless we have a better reason for doing a thing than our desire to do it, we are without a satisfactory reason for its doing."

McPherson Notes.

For several years we have been much interested in the subject of home influence and parental training. Every student entering college, brings with him the impression of some leading spirit from the home circle,—some influence which he has absorbed like a sponge. The defects in the character of boys and girls are not all chargeable to natural human depravity. In studying the habits and dispositions of students, one can almost read the character of the parents.

There came to our school a certain young brother who had all the correct manners of a true Christian gentleman. He was so tractable that all the teachers loved him. His gentle manners won for him the esteem of all fellow-students. From a few words he dropped, we were led to believe that he had a very exemplary Christian mother. Subsequent facts proved that our surmises were correct, and we wished that all boys were blessed with such mothers.

A short time ago, after preaching at a certain place, we stopped at a brother's house for dinner. We had to admire the gentle restraint, held over the family by the parents. The children waited patiently until the strangers and the father had finished their meal; then the children, with their mother, took their places at the table in an orderly manner and waited until the eldest, a boy of seven, had reverently folded his hands and asked a blessing upon the meal before them. We wondered how many older ones would be condemned by the example of this little boy. "Bring up your children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," is as much a command as the injunction not to steal or to kill, yet many of the acts of insubordination to the government of the church, the school, or even the State, are directly traceable to a lack of parental government.

Ministers should labor more to impress on the minds of parents their duty in this respect, and as a church we should pay as much attention to it as we do to suppress pride and drunkenness.

Nov. 28.

From the Highways and Hedges.

Our last notes, as I remember them, told you of our meetings,—two at Weiner, and twelve about six miles west. Three were baptized. Our first love-feast in that part of the country was held Nov. 9, 1891. Nov. 10 we left for Greenway, sixty-six miles further North-east, a distance of 156 miles from Stuttgart.

Here we were met by Mr. G. R. Hornback, who had called us to this place. He took us to his home, and treated us very kindly. Bro. Hornback formerly lived in Kentucky, and had heard Bro. McCann preach in Webster County of that State, some years ago. He has held to the faith and doctrine of the Gospel through these many years, although alone and among strangers in Arkansas. The truths of God's Word still find a place in his heart. May God fan that sacred spark until he can see his way to unite with the people of God. I trust that he may be faithful, and that God may spare his life, until he may have an opportunity to obey the Lord in all things.

Here we had seven meetings,—the first ever held here by the Brethren. We had good attention, and while entirely among strangers, we were kindly treated, and had many invitations to come again.

Greenway is in Clay County, Ark., and is a border County on the North line. It is a frontier settlement and many of the cabins never had a pane of glass in them. The houses are mostly built of logs; they have no lofts, and are not even "chinked." Here a person can get very cheap homes and near the railroad. Some timber is found here, but the soil is only of medium quality, but with reasonable industry and economy a person can make a good living and get a home of his own. Here would be a good opening for a minister who has a little means.

Wednesday Nov. 18, we returned home, after having been in the field twenty-three days. During that time we held twenty-one meetings, traveled 312 miles by rail and some in ox wagons. The rest of the time we traveled afoot. My wife was with me all the time. Jas. R. Gish,

According to previous arrangements the Brethren at Barren Ridge, Augusta County, commenced a series of meetings on the first of this month and closed Nov. 21, having, in all, twenty-five sermons. The church seems much revived and sinners seem to be like Agrippa of old,—almost persuaded to be Christians. We were sorry to close the meeting, leaving so many awakened sinners outside of Christ, but our obligations to commence a meeting at this place Nov. 22, caused us to say farewell to those whom we so recently learned to know only to love. Seventeen souls bowed beneath the liquid stream and we trust were planted in the pure, crystal stream of God's love. One wandering sheep was brought back again into the fold. May God's mercy and grace be with them all, and we pray his special favor upon the new-born babes in Christ. Awakened sinner, remember that the door to God's fold is open!

From Millville, Nev.

Bro. Flory's meeting closed Nov. 3, with three more additions and a good interest. We feel that much good was done, as Bro. Flory's address was not only to those without the fold, but to the stirring up of those within as well. Several seemed very near the kingdom, but decided to "wait a while,"—the worst choice they could have made.

The last four meetings were held at other points and we did not have the privilege of attending them. This was the first cause of delay in making out the report. Then, waiting from time to time, for news from Bro. R. H. Miller, caused more delay.

We are sorry to state that, up to this date, we have had no news of Bro. Miller's coming. As previously noted, he was to have preached us a series of doctrinal sermons, but his health being impaired, and the winter having fairly set in, we fear he will not be able to come to us before spring or summer.

To-day was our regular council. Bro. J. H. Shirkey was chosen correspondent for the coming year. Several letters were also granted. Sisters Ida Bowman and Effie Evans were appointed solicitors for Book and Tract Work,—a hitherto neglected branch of work in this congregation.

The business of the council was easily and satisfactorily disposed of, and so our report closes with the church in peace and good working order. Several letters are in the hands of the elder and more are coming. Surely goodness and mercy have been with us all the days of our lives.

Oct. 24 and 25 we had a very pleasant feast and good attendance. At 10 A. M. on Saturday, and in the evening, we had a crowded house of spectators and fairly good order. There were many members present from adjoining churches. Bro. Noah Longanecker officiated. Brethren Weimer, Eld. George Irvin, D. M. Irvin, George Worst, W. L. Dessenberg, Bro. — Brubaker, T. Moherman and D. N. Workman, our elder, were also present. We had an enjoyable meeting.

Our quarterly council occurred Nov. 21, at which all business passed off quite pleasantly. We had decided some time ago to have a series of meetings, to be held about Jan. 1, and Bro. N. Longanecker was chosen to do the work. He will begin the meetings Jan. 3. Nancy A. Fackler.

We held our Communion meeeting Nov. 7, at Cedar Grove. It was well attended and seemed to be greatly enjoyed by all present. Bro. D. F. Stouffer, of Maryland, was with us, and did most of the preaching. He began a series of meetings Nov. 5 and continued until the evening of Nov. 16. One dear soul united with the church on the evening of the feast, and four more during the meetings. Our hearts were made to burn, and tears to flow for joy, to see those four dear young sisters go side by side into the flowing Shenandoah. May our Kind, Heavenly Father give them grace, wisdom, and power from on high to continue faithful until death! Bro. Stouffer labored very faithfully for us and his efforts were highly appreciated. Our prayer is that he may be richly rewarded for his labors. B. W. Neff.

Practical Questions on Lesson IV.

1. To what did the fourth Beast of Daniel's prophecy refer?

2. Were the Jews an independent nation most of the time?

3. What language was most commonly used previous to and at Christ's coming?

4 What is the Septuagint? How and when did it come into existence?

Lesson V.

The close of the last lesson referred to the means used to secure the high-priesthood. It may be well to give in order the high-priests of the first period, following the close of the Old Testament. Jaddua, the son and successor of Jonathan, is the last high-priest named in the Old Testament. It was during his reign that Alexander stopped at Jerusalem, on his way to Babylon.

Jaddua was succeeded by his son Onias I, about 330 B. C. Following him was Simon I, The Just, about 300 B. C, as mentioned in former lesson. Simon was succeeded by his brother, Eleazer, about 292 B. C. It was during his time that the Septuagint came into existence. Eleazer was followed by his brother Manasseh, about 251 B. C, who was succeeded, about 240 B. C, by Onias II, son of Simon I, The Just, and nephew of Eleazer and Manasseh. Up to this time Palestine had been on friendly terms with Egypt, but almost severed that friendship by the neglect of Onias, in paying the annual tribute of twenty talents. The king of Egypt threatened to make war upon Palestine, which was averted by Joseph, the nephew of Onias II, by his making satisfaction with the king, who obtained the contract for farming the tribute of Palestine.

This farming the tribute was still in vogue in the time of Christ, and a description of it may not be uninteresting. It was carried on in the same way as if a man would rent a farm for cash. He pays a certain amount for the use of it, and makes all he can out of it. Thus a man would pay a certain sum of money for the privilege of collecting the tribute (tax). He then had the privilege of collecting what he could. Thus the tax collectors, or publicans were inclined to oppress the people, and often cheated them, as was just. For this reason the publicans were looked upon with disfavor by the Jews, and classed as sinners and dishonest.

Onias II was succeeded by his son, Simon II, 226 B. C. During his time Ptolemy Euergetes finally recovered the lands that had been Egypt and Syria, as it was his rightful territory. During the time of Simon II, Antiochus V, Epiphanes, became king of Egypt, whose coronation decree was inscribed on a stone called the Rosetta Stone, which will be described in our next lesson.

I am in receipt of the following: "Dear Brother: Will you please inform me where we find the proof for a statement in a paragraph in your last article in GOSPEL MESSENGER where you state, 'In symbolic time a day represents a year?' I have studied and read but I cannot find anything to prove it.—A. H. S."

Thinking others might be in the same position, I give the answer here: In Ezek. 4: 6, the Lord tells Ezekiel, "I have appointed thee each day for a year." By turning to it and reading the context, it will be seen that it is a prophecy against Israel. In Num. 14: 34 we read: "After the number of days in which ye searched the land, even forty days, each day for a year shall ye bear your iniquities even forty years."

I wish to say in this connection, that if any one has any questions to ask on the line of "Our Bible Class," I shall be glad to hear from him, and will gladly answer through these columns, — if I can. The object of these lessons is to tend to improvement on Bible subjects.

"FROM STRENGTH TO STRENGTH."

BY WEALTHY A. BURKHOLDER.

THE Psalmist David was a man of deep, religious feeling. He loved to meditate upon the law of the Lord, even in the "night watches." He not only confessed devotion and confidence in God in days of prosperity, but at all times, and under all circumstances, he acknowledged his power and greatness, and his dependence in him.

True, he sinned, but he was humble enough to confess his wrong and ask forgiveness. He did not justify himself as many of us do, by surrounding circumstances, but, in lowly contrition of heart, acknowledged that he was the guilty man. What a beautiful lesson is learned from the example of David! True humility does not consist alone in outward appearance. We may observe all the rituals of the law, and, so far as the external appearance is concerned, may appear very meek and lowly, but if the heart is not humbled, if the spirit of the Master does not pervade the mind, all is in vain. God looks to the heart and the outward life is the result of the state of the inward man, which is the seat of affection. "For out of it are the issues of life."

The Lord has promised to help all those who call upon him, and he loves to hear the plaintive cry of those who are lost and who wish to be restored. He is strength to the weak, if they will but place themselves under the "everlasting arms" and be shielded from the blasts of sin, and he has promised to increase the strength of the weak and helpless.

There are times in the life of every individual when temptations come and the way is not so brightly illuminated. Trials and bereavements have a tendency to weaken faith and then is the time we most need the consoling influences of the Gospel and the religion we profess.

It is comparatively easy to be a Christian when in health and physical strength, but in times of extreme suffering and when death robs us of our loved ones and darkens our homes it requires more of an effort willingly and trustfully to pray, "Thy will be done." Then it is that we need more than ever to be humble and submissive and to pray for strength to bear patiently whatever is laid upon us.

Our Father is one of pity and great compassion. He loves his children with an everlasting love, and when he afflicts it is for our good. He wants us to become stronger and more valiant soldiers of the cross, and promises to give us strength for every trial.

"My grace is sufficient for thee," assures us that in the darkest hour, if we allow the bright rays of Light Divine to penetrate our hearts, the darkness will flee away and it also assures us that, by relying upon his strength, we will be able to withstand the temptations presented. We need to lean more confidently upon the strong arms of him who is "strong to deliver" and "mighty to save" and we will be secure, for "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in time of trouble."

WORK.

BY J. H. MILLER.

"I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work."—John 9: 4.

Jesus gave us a grand lesson of work.

1. Temporal work.

2. Spiritual work.

1. God said to Adam, after his shameful fall, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return to the ground," and Paul uses language similar, "But if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel." We move with the busy world, and how necessary that we do work so that our natural bodies do have something to subsist upon.

2. Spiritual work is much more needful than natural. The Christian has so much work to do that he can be busy all his life. The work of the church is onward and upward, but though it is largely confined to the ministry, yet deacons and the laity are not exempt from it. The work in the ministry is divided so that each one may know his place.

Paul divides the work as given by Christ: (1) apostles; (2) prophets; (3) evangelists; (4) pastors; (5) teachers. These are all given "for the perfecting of the saints," for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ. It seems to have been necessary to place in the church these different offices, as their talents, or gifts, would call them for the edifying of the church. Each office has its own calling. The work among the ministry was different, as their names in office will readily show.

(1) Apostles are such as are sent forth. The Savior sent them forth two by two to preach repentance and perform miracles. This they did, so much so that many were made to believe on the Son of God. "And when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power against unclean spirits, to cast them out and to heal all manner of diseases." After Christ had called the apostles unto him, he sent them forth (that is to work), to preach the Gospel, heal the sick, etc. Those holy men were to go from city to city. One of their official duties was to plant churches and confirm them by supernatural power.

(2) Prophets were a class of men who foretold future events, more especially in the time of the Old Testament. The prophets of the New Testament were "supernaturally illuminated expounders and preachers."

(3) Evangelists comprises those who publish good news or glad tidings. The work of an evangelist is to go and preach the Word. He is one who has that peculiar gift of bringing many home to God. Not all preachers have this gift; hence let those who can, follow their calling.

(4) Pastors are those who have the care of flocks. As true ministers of the Gospel, they have the the charge of churches, and the care of souls. What great responsibilities are resting on a shepherd, or pastor! Jesus did not forget this class of officers, and, after his resurrection, called unto one of his shepherds, reminding him to feed the sheep and lambs. John 21: 15, 16, 17. It requires attentive work to see that the lambs and sheep are all cared for. A minister who has the care of churches will not find much time to go out to do much preaching. If he does, his church will be neglected, and the wolf may find openings to do great mischief. In my judgment an evangelist makes a poor pastor or shepherd. I have tried both for a number of years, and I am making a failure in both, to some extent. When I am away from home two-thirds of my time, my church at home is poorly cared for. Little troubles may arise that no one sees after, and soon the cause will suffer at home, while at some point away from home, much good may be done. We all have a certain official calling, and whenever we try to do too much, or do the work that belongs to some one else, we fail. Another matter I notice. Some of the pastors have too many sheep to care for,—too many churches to preside over. In this another failure is noticeable. Every church should have her own shepherd or pastor, if possible. Supposing there were four families living on one section of land, each family being the owner of one quarter and residing thereon. Supposing that in each family there were a lot of boys who needed to be instructed how to work, and that this work should be placed on one man to look after, what would be the result? I am certain the work would not be properly done.

Again, supposing four school districts join in one township, each district having a full school, would we suppose that one teacher could do all of that work, and do justice to his pupils? We answer, No. In like manner, neither can a minister do justice to so many churches and live miles away. The work of a pastor is so needful, and to be thorough, should be confined to only one district, if possible. I am aware that in some places this cannot be done, and do justice. Paul instructed Titus to set in order the things that were wanting and ordain elders in every city, as he had appointed him. What was wanting in Crete? There was a church that had no elder. Titus 1: 5. Paul saw such work would not be the best, hence he instructed Titus to ordain an elder down there. In all probability they had preachers enough there, to convert the people, but after they were brought into the church, there was no one to care for them and "feed them upon the sincere milk of the Word. Paul saw the great need of these offices in the church, and said, "If a man desire the office of a bishop he desires a good work. 1 Tim. 3: 1. This desire should not come from an exalted mind, or an overbearing spirit. A father has a family of children. It is his desire to be a true father to them, and "bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." He does not desire that those children whom he loves so well, be ruined or lost, or grow up in idleness, but he teaches them how to work and leads them to Jesus.

A minister who has the love of God shed abroad in his heart, who cares for his church, and loves to save all for Christ's sake, will desire to be placed in such a position that he may properly feed the lambs and the sheep.

Work means something. What can I do that will please my Master, in order to be a pastor or leader? How may I be like him who said, "I am the good shepherd; the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." John 10: 11. If Jesus is our shepherd, we should be like him. We should have a mild and peaceable disposition, an humble appearance,—the appearance of a sheep. Then we will be recognized not as a stranger (John 10: 5) but as "living epistles, known and read of all men." 2 Cor. 3: 2.

We should work in cities, as well as in rural districts. I remember an incident connected with our late Annual Meeting. I spent a part of a week in Washington City, and a number of us stopped at a hotel. The landlady asked us what our profession was. We soon replied, and turning to me, she said, "Are you a minister?" I was not ashamed to own Christ, and glad to know that we could be recognized as Christians. Had I been dressed like the fashionable world, I should have appeared to that lady as a stranger. If only all our ministers could see the propriety of humbling themselves under the mighty hand of God, by being in the general order of the church, perhaps more churches would be blessed with a pastor.

(5) Teachers comprises those who teach or instruct. In the great commission by Christ we have this: "Teaching them to observe all things." This noble work belongs to all workers. In all our work in the church one essential point is, we must teach and instruct. This noble work is not only applied to the ministry, but deacons and even the laity can engage in teaching. That will bring all into the work so that there is no place for idlers in the church. "Why stand ye here idle all the day?" was the language of Christ in the parable. How many of those who have confessed Christ, and have felt in their heart to work for the Master the remainder of their days, have become a little lukewarm, and do not work any more! There are too many sleepers in the church. "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead and Christ shall give thee light." How necessary that we, as ministers, deacons, and the laity, all put forth every effort to do more work for the Master in our different callings.

S. BOCK, Sec. and Treas.

"THERE are two ways in which God indicates what is wrong: by positive prohibition, and by tacitly annexing evil consequences. If a certain train of consequences seems frequently to follow certain individual or social practices, it is fair to conclude that the evil consequence is itself God's seal of condemnation upon the practice, even though God's Word gives no direct utterance on the subject. Whatever results in a dullness of the moral sense, social deterioration, discord, discontent, impurity, and mental or physical wretchedness, is a bad influence. Whatever is sure to work badly, cannot be good."

"DUTIES never conflict. God has but one duty at a time for any child of his to perform. If we are doing the one duty God has for us to do at the present moment, we are doing just right. If we are not doing that one duty, we are at fault, no matter how good or how important the work we are doing. And we need have no question as to what is our duty in God's plan for us."

"RIGHT-DOING is a very simple thing, but right-doing is not always an easy thing. A straight line is the shortest line possible between any two points; yet, as a practical matter, it would be easier to draw a dozen crooked lines than one straight one in off-hand drawing. All of us can see the way of right living, but who of us can walk in that way without wavering?"

WHILE Bible reading is a most excellent occupation, it is by no means a substitute for right doing.

WE again remind those who send in obituary notices that we do not print poetry in connection with these notices.

PLEASE do not ask us to return the manuscript of articles that have appeared in the paper. We have it kept on file for reference, if necessary.

BRO. GEORGE REXROAD has located at Springfield, Mo., and will be pleased to become acquainted with members living in that part of the State. He is from Hutchinson, Kans.

SOME of the churches are remembering the worthy poor this season and have the MESSENGER sent to them. This is certainly commendable, and will greatly encourage them in their spiritual work.

WE learn from the dailies that one hundred native converts to Christianity were recently massacred in China. Some of the foreign missionaries suffered personally and also in the loss of mission buildings.

BROTHER, where do you stand on the temperance question? Or are you too undecided to stand at all, and permit others to stumble over you? Those who stand for the right need not be a stumbling-block to any one. Learn to stand for the right.

IT is to be hoped that many of our ministers and others will arrange to attend the Mt. Morris Special Bible Term during the month of January next. In next issue we shall have something special to say concerning this term; in the meantime, those who feel interested may write Bro. J. G. Royer, of Mt. Morris, for further particulars.

THIS is still a world of calamities. A recent earthquake is said to have destroyed 40,000 houses in Japan, rendering 200,000 persons homeless and killing many thousand. Add to this the great famine of Russia, a few wars, etc., and we still have much sadness in the world.

SIXTY years ago the census of Ireland showed that eighty-one per cent of the population were members of the Roman Catholic church, but recent statistics show that it has decreased to seventy-five per cent. Protestantism is making its mark in Ireland, and before another generation we look for the Catholics to be in the minority.

IT is said that Boston shipped one million dollars worth of rum to heathen Africa last year, while from the same place a few thousand dollars have been sent to carry the Bread of Life to the same people. This shows how our boasted civilization is doing more to make brutes of the Africans than they are to make Christians of them.

WE still have on hand copies of the missionary number, intended for use on mission fields, and at such other points where they may be distributed among well-meaning outsiders with a view of doing good. Send all orders to Bro. Galen B. Royer of this place, stating the number of copies that you can use to good advantage. They are sent out free.

AN earnest sister writes: "A lady who contemplated uniting with the church recently said to me, 'If ever I join the Dunkard church I am going to be a Dunkard, not a half Dunkard and half worldling.'" That is the way we like to see them come. If one is going to be a member let him be one in soul, mind and body. Too many try to convince us that they have the mind of Christ but their conduct and appearance resembles the world completely. Coming out from the world does not mean taking the world along.

WE would like to urge upon our housekeepers the advisability of encouraging all the families in their respective congregations to subscribe for the MESSENGER. The tendency of the paper will be to get such families more thoroughly interested in the work of the church, and also keep them posted on the doings of the church. As a rule, members who read our literature are more alive in every department of church work than those who do not. And while we would like to get the paper into every family in the Brotherhood, we feel especially concerned to have it read by every minister among us. It would be well if our agents would give this consideration special attention, and if there are any ministers not able to pay for the paper, more than likely liberal-hearted members would willingly donate the required amount, if solicited to do so.

WE are asked to state why some brethren persist in saying "we" in their speaking and writing when "I" is really meant. A brother holds a series of meetings and writes "we" for "I," in giving a report of the meeting. Another gives his opinion on some subject and speaks of himself in the plural number. We presume most writers and readers fall into the habit without thinking much about it. While the mistake is not a very serious one it is nevertheless worthy of attention. While in the editorial chair, the writer of this item speaks of himself in the plural number, because he is presumed to represent the paper he helps to edit, but when he retires from that work and represents no one but himself, it will then be proper for him to speak of himself in the singular number. It is an easy matter to determine whether the singular or plural form should be used, if writers and speakers will stop and think a moment.

SUNDAY, Nov. 29, the mercury with us dropped to about eight degrees below zero, with about three inches of snow on the ground.

A NUMBER of queries have accumulated on our hands. They will engage our attention shortly. Some of them are questions of importance and deserve careful consideration.

A CARD just received from W. G. Cook says the District Meeting for Northern Iowa, Minnesota and South Dakota passed off very pleasantly. No queries were sent to the Annual Meeting. J. W. Trostle will represent the District on the Standing Committee next year.

LAST week we were favored with a pleasant call from the visiting elders for the Mt. Morris College, viz., Geo. D. Zollars, Edmund Forney and D. B. Eby. We are always pleased to have these brethren call, believing that their visits from time to time may have a very salutary effect on the moral and religious condition of the school. These committees, guided by wisdom and discretion, have it in their power to greatly aid the work of education in our various schools in the Brotherhood.

WE have a lively Sunday-school at Mt. Morris this season, superintended by Bro. G. N. Falkenstein, with an attendance of 300. A collection is taken up every Sunday and the amount thus raised is turned over to the Missionary Board; but for November 29 it was decided to send the collection for that day to the poor in Denmark. The amount raised was $18.94. This added to our Thanksgiving collection makes nearly $50.00 raised here for charitable purposes as a Thanksgiving offering. Another student made application for membership and received baptism the same afternoon. This makes seven students that have united with the church since the opening of the school in the fall.

DR. MCGLYNN, who knows about as much concerning the Catholic church as any man on this continent, predicts that in another generation the bitterest enemies of the Catholic church will be from her own ranks, not so much on account of their general religious principles, as on account of the authority claimed by the priestcraft, and those still in higher authority. This is a very liberal age and the tendency is for every man in religion to be a law unto himself, and do very much as he pleases. While this tendency of the age may be for the improving of the Catholic church, it is more or less detrimental to that higher order of true vital piety, found in other religious bodies. To find and maintain a happy medium between formalism and personal piety, should be the aim of every honest Christian.

IT is generally estimated that in the year 1000 A. D. there were 50,000,000 professing Christians on the globe. In the year 1500 this number was doubled, it having required 500 years to do so. But only 300 years were required to double the number again, bringing the time down to 1800, with 200,000,000. This is a remarkable increase, but nothing like the increase for the next eighty years, for during this short period the number more than doubled, giving, twelve years ago, 415,000,000 persons, professing the Christian religion. By the close of the present century we may safely count on the number being well nigh doubled again. While this may not count much in support of the spread of primitive Christianity, it certainly does speak volumes in support of the fact that the world is becoming more thoroughly civilized and prepared for those who teach the duty of adhering more closely to the ancient order of things.

BRO. B. F. MOOMAW'S address is now changed back to Bonsacks, Va., his former address.

WE are receiving a number of favorable expressions regarding the missionary number. It is being very widely circulated, and we trust that it may accomplish good.

ELD. DAVID J. MILLER, of Overhill, W. Va., writes very encouragingly concerning the MESSENGER. He says: "You will please see that my paper is not stopped. I would be lost without it. Set my subscription down for life."

WE are glad to learn that Bro. Daniel Wysong, who was recently injured by falling from his barn, near Nappanee, Ind, is improving, yet he suffers considerably at times. We have since learned that his thigh was broken in the fall and it will require some months for him to recover.

BRO. D. B. GIBSON writes that a large congregation was in attendance, Nov. 8, at the dedication of the Brethren's new house in Bement, Ill. The house is in the Milmine congregation, and was built mainly at the expense of Bro. Philip Siders. The act is a very commendable one. Bro. Gibson expects to be in the Mulberry congregation the next few weeks.

IN a private note from Bro. C. H. Balsbaugh we have, what might well make a long article, crowded into this one little paragraph: "We must exercise limitless patience with each other in our different conceptions of truth. The revelation of God in Christ is so infinite, and our faculty of apprehension so shallow and contracted, and so easily distorted, that forbearance becomes one of the most sublime and radiant Christian virtues."

OUR Thanksgiving services in the Chapel were favored with an unusually large attendance, many being present from the country. At the close of the services three of the students presented themselves as a Thanksgiving offering unto the Lord, and were baptized the same day. A collection was also taken up, resulting in $30.86 being raised for the purpose of sending the MESSENGER to poor people who are not able to pay for it. This will enable us to place over thirty copies of the paper in families where it will certainly be appreciated and will also do good.

SISTER RACHEL A. PROUTZ, of Linwood, Md., who has been afflicted for some time, has reasons to thank the Lord for recent blessings. In a letter just received she says: "Dear Messenger: Your weekly visits are much appreciated, and especially is it so since the hand of affliction has been laid upon me. I feel to give thanks to our Loving Father for thus far restoring my health that I can now get around through the house without the use of a cane. We know not how to thank the good Lord as we ought for the many blessings we enjoy, and especially for health of both body and mind, until it is too late. May these afflictions be the means of bringing us nearer to Christ."

A BROTHER writing from the frontier says there were eight members in his neighborhood one year ago, but the number has been reduced to three, caused by a division, five withdrawing from the church. He sometimes feels discouraged. We cannot blame him for that, but we do urge him, as well as all other isolated ones, to remain faithful and work the harder. If all the isolated members will remain firm, and persist in defending the church and her cause, they may yet be the means of laying in the hearts of the people a firm foundation for the building up of a strong church. People will have confidence in the religion of those who can remain faithful under adverse circumstances.

HOME MISSION WORK.

A YEAR has passed and the elder calls another meeting of his ministers to lay out the work for one more year. It may be thought best for John and James to exchange stations, or they may have become so thoroughly interested in their separate fields that they prefer continuing the work another year, some having united with the church at each point. The elder may report that he has worked up a good interest in the Jones neighborhood, and he would advise the advancing of Henry to the second degree, and the placing of that station in his care for one year, and he will help him some while also working up an interest at another point.

The elder may be a man of some enterprise and decide that he can handle more ministers if he had them. Thus steps may be taken to call more help to the ministry, and they placed in the care of the other ministers for training. Thus the work goes on, and more ministers are being prepared for the work. Possibly the elder may not have time to work up an interest at a new point, feeling that his flock needs his full attention. He realizes that he holds a sacred trust, and that it is his duty to see that the entire church should be properly cared for and fed with that spiritual food that makes stronger the inner man. Through his ministers he keeps the work moving at the outposts.

As time passes James may be induced to move near the Cross Roads and take charge of the little band of members he has collected. The elder sees that James is ordained to the eldership and the Cross Roads church properly organized. James, having been trained by a wise elder, conceives the idea of having some brethren called to the ministry, so that he can train and station them out to work on border points. Hence the same wise system is being extended and the foundation laid for other congregations.

John may have met with equal success, and is in charge of a flourishing little congregation in the neighborhood of the Brick School-house. Henry has worked hard with both hands and brains and is now elder of the Jones' congregation. The old elder was wise enough to have some one ordained to take his place before he got too old, and now, in his old days, he sees the good work, which he set in motion, moving on. He falls asleep in Jesus, loved and mourned by both old and young, not on account of his great ability as a preacher, but on account of his unselfish, fatherly devotion. He consecrated himself to the work of one little flock, and has put in motion a system of home missionary work that may roll on, and multiply itself until the whole land is dotted over with working congregations. He may have done some little preaching from home, but his own congregation was his sacred trust, and he never neglected that on account of others.

This is all easy, reasonable, lawful and commendable. Any elder can put such a system in motion. It is all home work, inexpensive and necessary. It makes live workers of all the ministers, gives them training they could never otherwise obtain, and multiplies congregations. Such a line of work is in perfect harmony with the long-established principles of the Brotherhood and can be operated by any housekeeper, thoroughly interested in the work of his own local congregation.

This very properly leads to two other important questions, viz., the necessity of ordaining elders in every church, and missionary work outside of the local congregations. These will be considered in another article. J. H. M.

EDITORIAL WANDERINGS IN THE OLD WORLD.

BY D. L. MILLER.

Number Twelve.

IN our last letter we promised to give our readers some facts relative to the Egyptian, Assyrian and Babylonian collection of antiquities in the British Museum. At longest our sketch must be brief, for volumes might be written, and still the subject remain unexhausted. We shall refer for the most part to the monuments and tablets, giving such abundant and indisputable corroborative testimony of the truth of the Bible. And first we take a look into the Egyptian department. As we walked among the sarcophagi, the sculpture, and the mummies of ancient Egypt, we could almost imagine that we had suddenly been transported to the kingdom of the Pharaohs. Here are the immense stone coffins in which some of the Pharaohs had been laid to rest so many centuries ago. Here are the mummified bodies of Egyptians who lived 2000 years before Christ. Here are statues of Rameses the second, the Pharaoh who knew not Joseph, and who oppressed the sons of Jacob. We shall not attempt to give a list of the interesting objects in this great collection.

We were especially interested in the collection of embalmed bodies, for here we have a Scriptural topic. "And Joseph commanded his servants the physicians to embalm his father; and the physicians embalmed Israel. And forty days were fulfilled for him; for so are fulfilled the days of those which are embalmed: and the Egyptians mourned for him threescore and ten days." Gen. 50: 2, 3.

The art of mummifying the dead was practiced in Egypt as early as the days of Abraham, and it may be before the time of the "father of the faithful." It grew out of the belief that the soul, after undergoing many changes, would re-inhabit the body again. This made the relatives of the deceased anxious to use the best means to preserve the body and secure for it a safe and lasting resting place. The natural conditions in Egypt were conducive to the preservation of the body after death. Without rain-fall and with a very dry atmosphere, it was not a difficult matter to arrest decomposition, and the bodies became dry and hardened lumps of clay. Some have thought that the preservation of the body through so many centuries did not agree with the Bible statement, "Dust thou art and unto dust thou shalt return;" but the real meaning here is that the body being made of earth, shall return to the earth again, and the old mummies are only preserved portions of the earth. The dust simply kept in the form which was given it in creation; it is, however, no less earth than if it were pulverized and scattered to the four winds of heaven.

From the published works of the British Museum we glean the following reliable facts concerning the art of embalming. Our knowledge of the way the Egyptians embalmed their dead is obtained from the Greek historians, and by a careful examination of the mummified bodies. According to Herodotus, the art was carried on by a professional body of men, appointed by law, and this is in accordance with the Scripture quoted, "Joseph commanded his servants the physicians to embalm Jacob." There were men duly appointed to attend to this work.

A body might be embalmed in three different ways and the price varied accordingly. In the first and most expensive method used, the brain and viscera were removed entirely from the body, washed in palm wine, and after being covered with powdered aromatic gums, were placed in jars made for the purpose, a number of which are to be seen in the Egyptian collection. The body was then filled with myrrh, cassia and other fragrant and astringent substances, and was laid in natron* for seventy days. Forty days was probably the time actually spent in the work of embalming the body, but seventy days were required to pass before the burial took place. Thus we have both forty and seventy days in the Scripture quoted. After this the body was carefully washed and wrapped in fine linen, covered with gum. The linen used was made in strips from three to four inches wide, and as many as four hundred yards were used in swathing a single body. The cost of embalming a body in this way was a talent of silver, or about $1,200. The body of Israel was doubtless embalmed after this manner.

In the second method, which cost about $400, the brain was not removed at all, and the body was also laid in salt or natron and wrapped in linen. The third method was only employed by the poor. It consisted in injecting some strong astringents into the body, and then laying it in salt for seventy days. The cost of this method was very small. These three methods were usually employed, but there was still a fourth method, adopted only by the very poor, which was to fill the cavities of the body with bitumen, and soak it in salt and hot bitumen. This process destroyed the hair and features and left the skin like paper and the bones white and brittle.

After the embalming process was fully completed, the body was placed in the coffin which was usually made of sycamore wood. In some instances two or three coffins were used, fitting into each other like a nest of boxes. We examined a number of the sycamore coffins, all of which were over 3,000 years old, and they are in a remarkable state of preservation. The inner coffin lid usually had an inscription, giving the name, rank and date of birth and death of the deceased. The outer coffin was covered with a coat of plaster, on which was usually painted a figure, representing the body in a reclining posture.

Members of the royal families were, after being embalmed in the most costly manner, placed in great stone coffins with closely-fitting lids, made of the same material. Several fine specimens of this kind of coffin are to be seen in the collection, and they are so placed that they can be easily examined. One of these bearing date of B. C. 3633, has part of the inner wooden coffin, and held the body of King Mykerinos, the builder of the third pyramid. The pyramids were doubtless built as tombs for the kings. There were also rock-hewn and vaulted tombs used. The poor were buried in pits and caverns.

In the tombs of the royal family, or the chambers of the dead, as they were called, the coffin was placed with the jars above referred to. In the coffin, or wrapped with the body, was a papyrus-roll inscribed with chapters of the book of the dead. To provide the deceased with the means of refreshment and material for the toilet, alabaster or other vessels filled with wine, articles of food, ointments, etc., were placed on alabaster stands near at hand. Here also were placed the instruments or objects which the deceased used or prized in life, together with gifts from relatives and friends. In this way the chamber of the dead became the receptacle of many things in daily use. Books, written on papyrus, were also deposited, and it is to this custom that we owe the possession of so many relics of the daily life and literature of the ancient world.

As to the mummies, many of them drop to pieces upon being exposed to the air, and smell strongly of bitumen. Especially is this true of those bearing date of B. C. 3,500. The art of embalming was carried to the highest degree of perfection in Thebes B. C. 1,400. To this period belongs the embalmed body of Rameses II, the Pharaoh of the oppression, whose body is well preserved, the features retaining much of their original look, as is proven by the statue of the king, made during his life-time. It seems strange, indeed, to be able to look upon the face and form of the Pharaoh "which knew not Joseph," and who said, "Behold, the people of the children of Israel are more and mightier than we: come on, let us deal wisely with them; lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies, and fight against us, and so get them up out of the land." Ex. 1: 9, 10. The discovery of his body a few years ago, filled a broken link that gives a startling evidence of the truth of the Bible account of the bondage of the children of Israel. And to this has recently been added the discovery and excavation of the cities of Pithom and Rameses. "Therefore they did set over them task-masters to afflict them with their burdens. And they built for Pharaoh treasure cities, Pithom and Raamses." Ex. 1: 11.

We have given considerable space to the subject of embalming because of the Bible reference to it, and because it has been the means of preserving to us evidences of the truth of the Bible. The body of Jacob, the patriarch, was embalmed, and the body of Joseph, his beloved son, was also treated in the same way. "And Joseph died, being an hundred and ten years old; and they embalmed him, and he was put in a coffin in Egypt." Gen. 50: 26. The body of Jacob was carried to the land of Canaan, and placed in the tomb of his fathers, in the cave of Machpelah at Hebron. When the Israelites left Egypt, they carried with them the embalmed body of Joseph. Ex. 13: 19. "And the bones of Joseph, which the children of Israel brought up out of Egypt, buried they in Shechem, in a parcel of ground which Jacob bought of the sons of Hamor for an hundred pieces of silver." Josh. 24: 32.

The graves of Jacob and Joseph are, and have been for many centuries, under control of the Mohammedans, but we believe the day will soon come when their power will pass away, and the embalmed bodies of Israel and his son may be examined. What a wonderful thing it would be if this should be done and the bodies be found in the same state of preservation as is that of the Pharaoh of the oppression! Whether the damp soil of Palestine has had an effect on the bodies or not, can only be told by an examination.

I close this letter with a digression, suggested by the last paragraph. Jacob was buried in the tomb of his fathers, Abraham and Isaac. Gen. 50: 13. There also Sarah, Rebekah and Leah were buried. Gen. 49: 31. Why was it that Rachel, Jacob's best beloved wife, was buried over by the way as you go to Bethlehem, not more than twelve miles from the family tomb at Hebron, while Joseph, his best beloved and most illustrious son, is entombed within a mile of Jacob's well, near Shechem? We visited these places when in Palestine, and the question naturally suggests itself, Why were these two excluded from the family burying-ground? This question has suggested itself to others, and the following answer has been given:

May this not be a silent, though strong, protest against polygamy which was practiced at that time? Notice that Sarah was Abraham's first and only legal wife. She sleeps her last sleep with the father of the faithful. Isaac and his one legal wife rest in the same tomb. Jacob and his first wife, Leah, not the one he loved best, however, lay side by side in the same family burial place, while Rachel and her great son were laid by the wayside. It seems to us that this is a striking protest against a plurality of wives, as only the first wife was legally bound to her husband by the law of God. She only could receive admission to the tomb of her husband. The Bible does not teach polygamy; it simply records the fact that it was practiced and allowed because of the hardness of the hearts of the Israelites. The Master fully explains the original marriage law in the following words: "Have ye not read, that he which made them at the beginning, made them male and female, and said, "For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh? Wherefore they are no more twain but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." Matt. 19: 4–6.

Our next letter will contain some account of the Assyrian and Babylonian collections. These topics are intensely interesting to us, and we hope our readers will be benefited by them. We suggest that they be read carefully, in connection with the Bible. We have spent considerable time on these subjects, and given them much study. Our aim is to get the best and most reliable information and give it to our readers

On the Way.

Nov. 21 I met with the Brethren in the Springfield district, Ind., at their feast. The day was rainy, so much so that only a few members were present. Twenty-nine communicants surrounded the table. Some members are easily kept at home by a little blaster, or muddy roads. Though the meeting was small, the members present were much built up Why should they not, when we had more than double the number that was present in that "upper room?" Bro. Leonard Hyre and wife, from the Blue River church, were present; also Bro. J. H. Elson and wife, from Cedar Lake, and Bro. Geo. Swihart and wife, from Elkhart. Bro. Cornelius Eby was not with us as in former years. He passed over the river and has gone to his reward.

Bro. Florian Zimmer, one of their members, who is living near the church, gave me an interesting account of his life. Bro. Zimmer was raised a Catholic and he is a native of Germany. He lived near the River Rhine, not far from Constance, and emigrated to America in 1854.

He frequently saw the house where John Huss formerly lived, and often saw, on a marble stone on that house, the inscription, commemorative of John Huss. Bro. Zimmer also stood in the meadow where John Huss was burned at the stake. He also saw a Catholic woman beheaded in the same meadow, in 1853, for poisoning her husband. Thousands of people assembled to see her executed. The scene was so terrible and shocking that it chilled his body while he related the sad scene to me. Bro. Zimmer saw the history of John Huss in "Europe and Bible Lands," which makes that book the most interesting one to him of any book outside of the Bible. He told me that $5.00 would not buy the book if he could get no other. He was twenty-two years old when he came to America and soon afterward united with the Brethren. He came here to evade military duty. How thankful we should be that we can serve God under such favorable circumstances! J. H. MILLER.

Goshen, Ind., Nov. 24.

McPherson Notes.

"THE most solemn love-feast I ever attended," was the remark of an old soldier of the cross at the close of our Communion services last Saturday evening. We, too, felt that the occasion was an unusually solemn one. The services were held in the College Chapel. The arrangements were quite satisfactory. Nearly two hundred communed, though many from the surrounding churches were kept away by the threatened rain. A number were seated at the Lord's Table for the first time, but the most affecting scene was the greeting of parents who came to the feast and embraced their sons and daughters for the first time since they were "born again," and received into the family of the saints.

The spectators, too, seemed to be impressed, and yielded to the solemnity of the occasion. One gentleman from a distance remarked that he was now perfectly satisfied with the doctrine of our Brethren, and would be ready to be received soon.

Our congregation received some additions since the school term began, in September. Eighteen handed in their church letters to be residents here, and seven were received by baptism, making twenty-five added to this congregation, besides the number received by letter and baptized from other congregations and remaining here for the present as students.

During our Communion occasion we were favored by the presence and services of Eld. Alpheus Dickey, of State Centre, Iowa, who preached here very acceptably; also by Eld. John Forney who comes here officially, to see how the school, and especially the members advance in the divine life, and gives the young people encouragement.

Children, too, are not forgotten, but on Sunday, after the feast, a time was set apart for their special benefit, and they were addressed by brethren Forney, Dickey, Wetzel and Hutchison. We had a good meeting.

The first term of school is just closing with the best record of attendance and deportment of any term since the school was established.

The programme for the Bible Term, beginning Jan. 5, is completed and will be issued soon.

Later.—To-day two more were received by baptism at McPherson College. They are husband and wife, and come from another denomination in order to obey the Gospel more fully.

Nov. 23.

From Pleasant Home, Oregon.

OUR love-feast occurred Nov. 14, at which time eighteen members surrounded the Lord's Table to observe the ordinances of the Lord's house. We felt it was good to be there and to listen to the Word of Life, so ably administered by brethren David Brower, Eld. M. M. Bashor, Joseph Early and our home minister, Josiah Royer. The meeting was held at the house of the latter, owing to not having a house of worship of our own. The weather at this season is rather bad, yet it did not discourage the members from meeting together from miles around, over muddy roads and mountains. The place of the meeting was on the beautiful banks of the Clackamas River, near Damascus, Oregon. Brethren, remember the mission fields of Oregon in your prayers! Truly, the harvest is great, but the laborers are few!

From the Panther Creek Church, Ill.

AT the District Meeting of Southern Illinois, the following query was presented: "Is it right for a minister, who will not worship with, nor serve his home church, to go to other churches and hold meetings?"

We are informed, by the official board of the above-named church, that the state of affairs, referred to in the query, does not now exist.

BRO. ABRAM CONNER, of Manassas, Va., accompanied by his daughter, came among us on Saturday, Nov. 7. He attended our Sunday-school, and gave us a short talk there, and that evening as well as on Monday evening, he held forth the Word in the Boonsborough house. He was joined by Eld. Geo. Bucher, of Pennsylvania, on Monday. At 2 P. M., on Tuesday, Nov. 10, we met at our other house for divine worship. We had examination services at 5 P. M. After these services the ordinances, belonging to the occasion, were attended to. Sixty-five members surrounded the Lord's Table. Several brethren and sisters from Talbot County were with us. Eld. Geo. Bucher officiated. The services were solemn and impressive. I trust all who partook of this feast were strengthened in spirit, and will go forth to live out the profession there made.

Eld. Bucher went to Talbot County after services. Bro. Conner and daughter took the boat on Tuesday, intending to stop with Bro. Quinlan, in Baltimore. May God's blessing go with them and ever attend their labors of love!

Our elder, J. Y. King, and Bro. L. B. Replogle and wife, have gone to Middle Pennsylvania. They intend visiting friends and relatives; also to attend some feasts. Eld. King will remain until after their ministerial meeting.

From Muenster, Texas.

THE Williams Creek church is still alive, thanks to the efforts of the faithful that are here, although they have passed through sore trials. We have been encouraged by the visits of the faithful now and then, during the past year, especially so by the visit of Eld. James R. Gish. All that heard him preach were pleased, and we look for some fruit yet from his seed-sowing.

We have read some of Bro. Quinter's sermons in his book and we wonder why we cannot have more of the same kind from other faithful brethren.

We expect Bro. Hoover here soon, to labor in Texas. May the Brotherhood remember us in their prayers!

We wonder what has become of the interest in the mission work in the District of Texas, Indian Territory and Oklahoma. The wants of the churches and that of the scattered members throughout the District should be known. We were appointed on the board of workers, and since the General Mission Board has come to our aid and support, we are ready and want to know where the members are and what they are doing. The loving brethren who donate to the mission work want to hear from all, of their advancement in the divine life, etc. We want to know the location of every minister that comes within this District. Write to the Secretary of the Mission Board for further information. A. W. AUSTIN.

Sudden and Unexpected Death.

MANY of the brethren and sisters who attended the Annual Meeting, at Pertle Springs, in 1890, will, doubtless, remember with pleasure, Mrs. Christopher, the kind and amiable landlady of the hotel at that place. It becomes our sad duty to announce the sudden and unexpected death, on Monday evening last (Nov. 9), of this estimable lady.

She had been in rather delicate health for some months past, but had not been confined to her bed, and no one expected her death. On the evening of her sudden decease she was in her usual health and spirits. She had just risen from the supper table, and, while conversing with her husband in a cheerful manner, she suddenly put her hand to her head, and said, "O give me a drink of water!"

Her husband started to get it, when she suddenly reeled, and fell forward on the floor, and expired without a word or a groan. By the time Mr. Christopher reached her side, and lifted her up, she was dead.

The cause of her death is supposed to be organic disease of the heart. Her death, so sudden and unexpected, was a great shock to the entire community. Her remains will be interred in the Warrensburgh cemetery to-day (Nov. 12th). She was a member of the Christian (or Campbellite) church, and was deservedly esteemed by all who knew her. A. W. REESE.

Warrensburgh, Mo.

From Keuka, Fla.

WE took the train at Everest, on the Missouri Pacific R. R., at five o'clock Oct. 23, and made the trip to Keuka without any incident worth mentioning. My wife has been sick for several months with lung trouble, and our physician advised her to go south, as medicine would not reach her case. She was quite feeble when we started, and we were afraid she would not stand the trip, but we were fortunate in being able to rest over night in Louisville, and also at Chattanooga. She stood the trip nicely, and seems to be doing quite well.

We found a live little church here. They have a good Sunday-school. Bro. Neher has his hands full with his business, and the large territory he has charge of at present. He has no help in the store nor in the ministry, and he is not a strong man. In the ministry he seems to be the right kind of a brother for the place. A great deal depends on the life of the preacher, if the work on the outskirts of the Brotherhood is to be successful.

Bro. Neher and I went near Hawthorne to meeting last Sunday, where there was an appointment at which your humble servant spoke to an attentive audience at night. We had services in the Brethren's house at Keuka, where it again fell to my lot to address the people on the "Unification of the Church."

The oranges are beginning to ripen, and some are busy picking and packing their fruit. I have noticed several car-loads of oranges passing through this place for the Eastern market. The weather is very fine here, the coolest weather I have experienced since my arrival was about like the coolest of our midsummer weather in Kansas. The rest of the time it was as warm in the daytime as harvest weather in Kansas. I see people every day, dressed in thin cotton clothes and straw hats.

Quite a number of Brethren from the North expect to come here this winter to escape the cold of the Northern winter. There are some who spend their summers in the North, who own groves here and come south to spend the winter.

Nov. 3.

From Nocona, Texas.

Nov. 5, the writer, in company with Bro. Bailey, started for Marlow Grove, to attend their Love-feast. This church is seventy-five miles from Nocona, in the Indian Territory and Texas District. Bro. Moore is the elder and Bro. Enuis the minister, and they have a total membership of thirty-five, who are all working in love and union. Bro. Troxel, of Owen's Prairie was present, to help in the work, and about forty members surrounded the Table of the Lord. There was a large attendance at the meeting, with good attention. The Brethren made arrangements for the entertainment of all who desired to stop over Sunday. Breakfast was served to all, so that the people could ge acquainted. A storm on Sunday caused many to stay away. The meeting closed with one applicant for baptism. May more follow!

D. G. BERKMAN.

Nov. 24.

From the Mississinewa Church, Ind.

THE Brethren of this place held their love-feast Nov. 6. It was largely attended by members from surrounding churches. Brethren Hiram Branson, David Replogle, Abe Young and Lewis Kinsey were the ministers with us from a distance. Bro. Kinsey, of the Nettle Creek church, officiated at the Communion services. The house was well filled with spectators.

The meeting was continued over Sunday by the home brethren.

Bro. Geo. L Studebaker, whom we were glad to have at home with us again, talked to us on Sunday and Sunday evening from the interesting subjects: "The Christian Race," and "The Model Hearer."

The meeting closed on Sunday evening. We were seriously impressed with the reality of the religion of Jesus, and feel to press onward with renewed strength and vigor, toward the mark for the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus.

MATTIE S. SMITH.

To the Churches in Kansas Especially.

HAVING spent several days in soliciting for the Aged, Infirm and Orphan's Home in Kansas, I thought it might be encouraging to others to hear from us. We met with much encouragement in sentiment. Only one brother thought it might not be the best way of supporting the poor, but he neutralized his doubtful sentiment by his liberal donation.

We feel encouraged in the donations subscribed so far. It is true, about all have some apology to offer, because of some debts. Those with means have a place for their money, as a matter of business, which is generally paramount to the pocket book, but in every instance we received the name, or promise, or cash. Two or three sisters were satisfied with their husband's subscription. Some of the children, even those who were not members, subscribed. This is as it should be. Teach them to give, then give them an opportunity to earn their money. The Lord will be much better pleased than if the money is spent for tobacco and cigars, or having their pictures taken so often, etc.

It would be well to remember how the Lord has blessed our State (Kansas) with an abundance of all kinds of products. He knew we had this good work started, which will prove a benefit to his children, if properly conducted, and an honor to his name. He has also given us the means with which to do it. Supposing you give from three to five loads of corn out of the pile. That would not be the tenth, as under the law; but you might think that too much. Let us see. In this case you would be from three to five loads short, but supposing the Lord would have withheld rain as in former years, then you would have been ten or perhaps fifteen loads short. Now should we not give at least the half of the surplus to his cause? We will still be better off, financially, than before and an hundredfold better spiritually.

If it be true that the Good Lord has blessed us so greatly because we want to make provision for his poor (and I believe it is), and we withhold it, what can we reasonably expect next year? A severe drouth, and I fear we would deserve it, saying nothing about what would follow in the future.

I hope our solicitors will prosecute their work with diligence, and see that every member has opportunity to give, for we want no one to lose the blessing; and any contributions outside of the State will be thankfully received. Some wealthy Districts have no poor to keep; let them think of our burden.

ENOCH EBY.

Booth, Kans.

From the Shell Prairie Church, Minn.

ELD. J. F. EIKENBERRY and wife, of Greene, Iowa, came to us Sept. 3, and remained two months, in all, preaching part of the time while with us. We feel greatly built up in the cause of our Master.

We held a love-feast during our brother's stay among us, which occasion was certainly food for the soul. Our meeting was small, but the promise is, that where two or three gather together in the name of our Lord, there he is in the midst of them. We truly felt happy in our being permitted to partake of the Lord's Supper once more.

We, as a little band of members, separated far from churches of our own faith, have not the privileges many others have, of visiting from church to church. Through the kind aid of the Mission Board of Northern Iowa and Southern Minnesota, we are not forgotten, as they have sent a minister to us twice.

Our prayer-meetings are held every two weeks. We ask the church at large to remember us at a throne of grace, that we may hold out faithful in the service of the Lord.

Nov. 22.

From Broadfording, Md.

THE Broadfording congregation held its love-feast Oct. 20 and 21. It was truly a feast of love. Many members were present and partook of the sacred emblems. Our aged brother, David Long, officiated. The church felt the need of more help in the ministry and also in the deacon's office. Bro. Joseph Neibert was elected to the ministry and brethren Levi Bear and Hawes to the deaconship. May they ever prove faithful to their high calling! On the Sunday following, Bro. Henry Early commenced a series of meetings, preaching fifteen sermons. The attendance and order were excellent and our meeting was a grand success. Our brother had not preached long until the waters were troubled and three united with the church.

Bro. Early's preaching has done much good for the church and we hope that the dark cloud which has long hovered over this church has now been rent and that from henceforth we can work more earnestly and harmoniously.

ANNIE E HOLLINGER,

Broadfording, Md.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

Union City, Ind.—We had a pleasant little Thanksgiving meeting. Our beloved elder, W. K. Simmons, gave us a soul-stirring sermon on the evils of the intoxicating bowl. We think there is need of many more such talks in our churches all over the Brotherhood.—Henry Kunkle, Nov. 28.

Notice.—Will the ministering brethren to whom I have sent my book ("Babylon and Christ") to sell, please send pay for the same at once? Those that got them know the amount due, and will save me much writing by responding at once. Price of the book, paper cover, 15 cents; leatherette, 20 cents. I have only aimed to cover cost of printing, express charges, etc. Please do not delay!—Jas. R. Gish, Stuttgart, Ark.

Abbottstown, Pa.—The members of the Upper Conawago church, Pa., held a series of meetings in New Chester, beginning Nov. 8, and continuing until the evening of the 17th, holding twelve meetings in all. Bro. Albert Hollinger preached for us, laboring earnestly, while a marked interest in the audience showed that the labors were rewarded by a telling effect. Some expressed a desire to unite with the church, while others were almost persuaded. The full amount of good, resulting from such meetings, will be revealed only in eternity.—J. A. Long.

Little Traverse Church, Mich.—We have just enjoyed a very pleasant series of meetings, conducted by brethren Isaac Rairigh, of Ionia County, and Isaiah Rairigh, of Barry County. They continued the meetings for two weeks with fair attendance. As a result of their labors five precious souls were made willing to leave the ranks of Satan, and help fight the battles of King Emmanuel. We hope they will prove exemplary soldiers! Nov. 14 our dear brethren left for other fields of labor. May God ever bless them in their efforts to warn sinners to flee the wrath to come!—L. B. Wilcox, Nov. 22.

Cabool, Mo.—Nov. 13 the brethren and sisters of the Greenwood church, Texas Co., Mo., enjoyed a very pleasant love-feast. About eighty-four members communed. All that part of the house, not occupied by the members, was well filled with our neighbors and friends. We had good order. We had to our assistance in the ministry brethren Samuel Click, William Harvey, John Deleplain, and Daniel Lorah. All these brethren remained with us over Sunday and preached for us. They gave us much good council, which will long be remembered by those interested. After the feast the brethren divided their labors, part of them going about eight miles east to the Shady Grove school-house, where a number of Brethren are living.—J. J. Troxel.

Saline Valley, Kans.,—Our meetings commenced on the evening of Nov. 7, and continued till the evening of the 16th. One was baptized. The meeting was conducted by brethren Humbarger and L. W. Fitzwater. This church is in good working order. The members are scattered over three Counties. Bro. L. W. Fitzwater has the oversight of this church.—Martha Fitzwater, Nov. 20.

Sam's Creek, Md.—Bro. Joseph Long, of Abbottstown, Pa, came to us Nov. 8 and preached ten sermons. As a result, three precious souls came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. On Sunday, Nov. 15, Bro. Joseph laid the duty of man toward God before the minds of his hearers, with truth and power. We trust that his labors will be as bread cast upon the waters, that may return with more good. There was good attendance and good order at our meetings.—Ephraim Stouffer, Nov. 17.

Wakarusa, Ind.—The Yellow Creek church, Elkhart Co., Ind., commenced a series of meetings. Bro. I. J. Rosenberger is with us. So far the meeting was not so encouraging on account of the inclemency of the weather. We are having a rainy season just now. Bro. Rosenberger is truly an approved workman of God. He is busy day and night in preaching, visiting the sick, the aged, and those away from God. We pray that at least some souls will be induced to turn in with the people of God during his stay.—Hiram Roose, Nov. 23.

Red Bank, Pa.—According to previous arrangements, Bro. J. C. Johnson came to our church Oct. 8, and preached on the 9th in the evening. Oct. 10 we met in the morning after short services, and then a number of members and friends went to witness the baptism of a young sister. We had preaching at 2 P. M., and in the evening had our Communion, which, I think, all enjoyed. On Sunday morning we met at 10: 30 A. M. After the sermon a missionary collection was taken for the General Mission Work. After that our young brother McGinnis was anointed with oil. We had preaching in the evening, at which time our meeting closed.—J. A. Hetrick, Nov. 23.

A Correction.—In my article in No. 43, page 684, in giving a report of our Communion and the number of additions, I should have stated that brethren Jesse Studebaker and John Sherfey held a series of meetings the week previous to our Communion, about eight miles south of the church, beginning Oct. 6, and continuing up to the time of our Communion. A number of those who united with the church at the time of my last report, lived near, and attended those meetings, and more than likely good impressions were made at that time, and carried into effect at our Communion. Thus we see that one soweth, and another reapeth.—James T. Kinzie, Centropolis, Kans., Nov. 19.

Dego, Ind.—The Upper Deer Creek church, Cass County, Ind., has had a season of rejoicing. Bro. Galen B. Royer, of Mount Morris, Ill., met with us Nov. 7 and preached sixteen discourses. Through his influence sinners turned to the Lord. The members are all united in praises and thanksgiving to his holy name for those that came to us, but the burden of our trouble is that there are so many others who should have come. Our meeting should have continued two weeks longer. We think this mistake too common with our evangelists, but our brother's time was limited, so that our meetings had to close about Nov. 20, with good interest, despite the inclement weather. Bro. Royer has our love and best wishes. May the Lord bless him in other fields of labor.—Artemus Smith.

Harleysville, Pa.—Indian Creek church has just held a series of meetings, which commenced on Saturday, Nov. 7, and closed on Tuesday evening, Nov. 17. Eld. Hiram Gibble, from White Oak, Lancaster Co., Pa., was present, and took the lead. He preached in the German language. There were no immediate conversions, but good impressions were made, and the members were much encouraged.—Jas. Y. Heckler.

Marshalltown, Iowa.—According to previous arrangement, Bro. F. M. Wheeler and wife, and the writer met with the Brethren in Jasper County, and held four meetings. As an immediate result three came out on the Lord's side, and were baptized, we hope, to walk in newness of life. More were almost persuaded. The Brethren seem much encouraged. May the Lord richly bless them in their isolated condition!—John H. Cakerice, Nov. 26.

Adrian, Mo.—Nov. 26 we assembled to hold a Thanksgiving meeting. The time was well spent by various speakers in showing the importance of rendering unto God the gratitude of our hearts in all things, and doing this not only now and then, but at all times. A spirit of greater thankfulness, on the part of the believer, would cause him to trust more fully in the Lord, and to be resigned to the will of him who knoweth all things.—Diana Miller.

Wabash, Ind.—We expected to begin a series of meetings Nov. 7, but owing to a serious accident that befell our dear brother, D. Wysong, we were sadly disappointed. We had no services on Thanksgiving Day, but we tried to do a little good in remembering the poor and starving of Denmark and Sweden. Our brethren, sisters and friends, on whom we called, did nobly in giving of their means. I hope that, by God's blessing, what we send away will do some little good in supplying their natural wants.—C. C. Arnold.

Franklin Grove, Ill.—Nov. 17, Bro. J. C. Murray, of Nappanee, Ind., began a series of meetings in the Rock River, Ill., church, at the Emmert meeting-house, continuing until Nov. 29. The meetings are moved this evening to the Franklin Grove house (same congregation), to continue probably several weeks. Bro. Murray is laboring with earnest zeal. The inclement weather and bad roads hindered many from hearing his soul-stirring sermons. May the blessings be upon the Israel of God every-where.—C. H. Hawbecker, Nov. 30.

Barron, Wis.—Bro. D. M. Miller, of Illinois, came to us Oct. 28, and commenced a series of meetings, which he continued until Nov. 15 He preached, in all, twenty sermons. He also was with us in a council-meeting Nov. 11. At an election for a minister Bro. Oliver Perry was chosen to that important office. Bro. Miller faithfully discharged his duty in holding forth the Word of Life. Members were strengthened in the "one faith" and sinners were warned to forsake their ways. Two, —a husband and wife,—were added to our number by baptism.—Henry Woods, Nov. 22.

Bloomville, Ohio.—The members of the Seneca church, Seneca County, Ohio, held a "harvest meeting" Aug. 22. A number of members from adjoining churches were present, among whom were the following ministers: David Wise, J. B. Light, S. W. Loose, and L. H. Dickey. The exercises consisted of short talks upon the subjects of thankfulness and giving, in which all took a part. The sum of $23.80 was contributed for Mission and Tract Work. Our Communion meeting, Sept. 12, passed off pleasantly, and, we hope, profitably to all who were present. Brethren L. H. Dickey, J. B. Light, J. C. Whitmore, David Wise and S. B. Thomas were our ministerial force.—S. A. Walker.

Monmouth, Kans.—The Cherokee church, Kans., met in quarterly council Nov. 14. The church was found to be in love and union. One was received by letter. Three were dismissed by letter. Bro. Jacob Appleman and family will soon take their departure for Oklahoma. May success, both spiritual and temporal, go with them! The church elected Samuel Edgecomb, of McCune, as agent for GOSPEL MESSENGER.—Henry Shideler, Nov. 16.

Conway Springs, Kans.—I attended the love-feast at Sawyer, Pratt Co., Kans., on the evening of Nov. 14. Ministers present, were Enoch Eby, Samuel Bowser, and Jesse Shamberger from Barber County. The feast was held in a large schoolhouse, which was well filled in the evening, and also on Sunday. Bro. Eby left three appointments for Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday evenings. Good order and strict attention was paid during the meetings I enjoyed the meetings, and will be glad to see the members of Pratt and other places meet with us at our love-feast, which will be held at Conway Springs, Dec. 11, commencing at 2 P. M.—Samuel O. Frantz.

Ft. Defiance, Va.—The members of the Middle River church have had a refreshing series of meetings, beginning on the evening of Nov. 6, and conducted by Bro. Henry Frantz, of New Carlisle, Ohio. He preached each evening, and held several meetings. On Sunday of the following week there were six willing to leave the world and join in with us. On Tuesday four more were made willing, and on Wednesday two more,—a man and wife. A number of others, we think, are almost persuaded. Bro. Frantz labored faithfully for the Master, and for our good He pressed the Truth with all his power, in plain terms, so that all could understand. Bro. Henry left for other fields after the meeting yesterday.—J. M. Cline, Nov. 19.

Greatly Appreciated.—We hail the MESSENGER with great pleasure here in the Far West. Bro. Miller's letters are read with much interest, and sister Miller's letter, in a late issue, was very good. You do certainly speak our mind when you suggest that sister Miller write often during her travels. As far as we know, there are but four post-offices in Kiowa County, reached by the MESSENGER, and only one comes to each office, but that they are appreciated we know by those who get them, and more so from the fact that we have not often the privilege of meeting with God's people in worship We hope that if any of our members wish to move to a new country, they will come to see this part of the West before settling elsewhere.—Lizzie Shoemaker, Eads, Colo.

Washington, C. H., Ohio.—I have been here four days. Two were baptized Nov. 15, making five in all since the 1st inst. All of them were members of other churches. Many others,—both white and colored,—are very favorably impressed with the doctrine of the Brethren. A number have declared their willingness to come at our next day-meeting, but most of them are poor, and the day-time is the time they work for bread and coal, and we meet only at night and on Sundays. But I work in day-time, from "house to house," as did Paul, and use every means I can in reading, talking, and giving of tracts to the older ones who can read. Those who cannot read,—and they are many,—I have to instruct as best I can. I also give Sunday-school tickets to the little ones, for I feel that the day of the Psalmist has come, when "Ethiopia shall soon stretch out her hand to God." Psa. 68: 31. Were you here with me, you would surely say the day has come. Let all work and pray, "Thy kingdom come." Psa. 67.—Landon West, Nov. 19.

Deweyville, Ohio.—I have now made arrangements to spend the remainder of the winter in holding series of meetings for those who desire my weak efforts in that direction, and will write me at once. –Joseph Holder.

Longmont, Colo.—I have just returned from a visit to our much esteemed sister Underhill, where I was called to baptize her loving daughter, Effie. Sister Underhill is doing a good work and is alive to the cause. I hope the brethren will keep her well supplied with reading matter.—G. W. Fesler, Nov. 24.

North Manchester, Ind.—The members of the North Manchester church commenced a series of meetings Nov. 15, conducted by the home ministry. The weather was quite inclement when the meeting began, but the congregations are growing and the interest is increasing. We hope for good results. –Isaac Miller, Nov. 19.

Woodland, Mich.—By request of the Mission Board of the State of Michigan, Eld. Isaac Rairigh and I started to Northern Michigan Oct. 30, 1891, to hold some meetings in the bounds of the Little Traverse church. The congregations were mostly small, but very eager to hear the Word. I never saw better attention. As a visible result of the meetings five precious souls were added to the fold by baptism.—Isaiah Rairigh, Nov. 17.

La Place, Ill.—Nov. 7 Bro. Jeremiah Gump came to the Okaw church to conduct a series of meetings, but on account of much rain and the sickness of his son-in-law, he preached only eight sermons and returned home. The interest manifested was good and we all regret that he and his companion had to leave so soon. We hope they may come again some time, under more favorable circumstances. One dear young sister was added to the fold by baptism. Nov. 17 the members of the Okaw church met in council. Five letters of membership were given and one was received by letter. Our love-feast was appointed for Nov. 28, at 1 P. M.—E. F. Wolfe, Nov. 17.

Alfred, Kans.—Bro. Charles M. Yearout from Coffey County, Kans., came to the Washington Creek church, Nov. 4. He commenced preaching the same evening, and continued until Nov. 15. He preached in all fourteen sermons. He had a good attendance most of the time. Saints were much built up in their most holy faith, and sinners were warned to flee the wrath to come. As an immediate result of his labors eight united with the people of God, and others were almost persuaded. We think such brethren as Bro. Yearout should be kept in the field all the time. There are many, here in the West, starving for the Bread of Life, and there are but few to feed them. Bro. Yearout had his companion with him, and she rendered some good service in singing.—S. M. Miller.

Elkhart, Ind.—Bro. A. H. Puterbaugh, of Oswego, Ind., commenced preaching for the Elkhart Valley church Nov. 7 and continued till the 20th, when two were baptized. The weather was very inclement most of the time, but we were treated to a feast of good things during our brother's stay with us.—J. L. Puterbaugh, Nov. 20.

Oltobine, Va.—To-day was our monthly appointment at Montezuma, in the Beaver Creek congregation We agreed to continue the meetings every night for awhile. The home ministers will do the preaching. We had a large attendance to-day and quite an interest After preaching we went to the river and administered baptism to two young souls,—the son and daughter of brother and sister Christian Garber.—G. W. Wine, Nov. 15.

Westphalia, Kans.—Wife and I returned from the Washington Creek church, Douglas Co, Kans., Nov. 17. We had a very pleasant series of meetings during which eight were baptized and much interest manifested. No preventing Providence I expect to spend a good part of December in the mission field of South-eastern Kansas. In my notes from the field I stated that I stayed over night with Bro. Jonas Deeter, at Eldorado. I should have said Bro. Jonas Leedy. —Chas. M. Yearout.

Peyton, Colo.—Wife and I are living here in isolation. We have not heard the Brethren preach for two years until now. Bro. D. H. Weaver, of Longmont, came to us last Thursday and has been preaching ever since. He has created quite an interest. We think we have a good opening here for a mission point. Any of the Brethren, traveling over the Rock Island R. R. to Colorado Springs, will be met at Peyton, by dropping me a card as to time of arrival.—J. W. Barnhart, Nov. 18.

Jonathan's Creek, Ohio.—The work of the church is going on slowly. We have not had regular preaching here for over a year, but have an interesting Sunday-school, with good attendance. Bro. I. D. Parker has the oversight of this church, and his labors are appreciated very much. He is assisted by our young brother, Q. Leckrone, who has recently been called to the ministry and seems well qualified for the work. Now, since we may have more preaching, we hope that the blessings of heaven may rest upon him that many souls may be brought to Christ.—M. Dupler.

Sawyer, Kans.—The Mingona love-feast, which was held in Sawyer, Pratt Co., Nov. 14 and 15, will be long remembered, for it was surely a feast of love. About forty-five communicants surrounded the tables of the Lord. Bro. E. Eby officiated. Bro. S Bowser, from Kingman, was with us. Bro. Eby preached for us on Sunday evening to a very attentive congregation and we had the best of order during our meetings. Our sincere prayer is that the Lord will bless our dear brethren, that have labored for us, and we hope they will come again. We would be glad if some one would come and give us some meetings this winter.—J. H. Miller, Nov. 20.

Our brother was baptized Aug. 8, 1891, after a severe attack of sickness. At the water's edge we heard him admonish others, "Don't do as I have done,—put it off so long." LAPP.—Near Cherry Box, Mo., Nov. 3, 1891, sister Annie Lapp, aged 56 years and 4 months.

Deceased was born in the State of New York, June 3, 1835. In her early life she, with her parents, moved to Stephenson County, Ill, where, in 1857, she was united in marriage to Eld. Christian Lapp. Their union was blessed with nine children, two of whom preceded her to the spirit world.

In 1866 she moved, with her husband, on the farm near Cherry Box, Mo, where she lived until the day of her death.

Sister Lapp was a kind mother and a loving companion. She was a member of the Brethren church, to which she always proved faithful, never giving cause for offense to her brethren. She had been afflicted about six months. Just eight weeks before her death she called for the elders of the church and was anointed with oil in the name of the Lord. She bore her affliction with Christian fortitude until her spirit took its flight. She leaves a sorrowing husband and seven children. H. W. STRICKLER.

At the time of her decease she was living with her daughter,—sister Noah Snider. Funeral services conducted by the writer, assisted by Bro. George Mohler, from Amos 4: 12. A. S. ROSENBERGER.

SHELLABARGER.— In the Covington church, Miami Co., Ohio, Aug. 20, 1891, sister Hannah Shellabarger, aged 86 years and some months.

The deceased was one of the faithful sisters of this church. She was always at her place at the services. If not there, it was certain that something was wrong. She was a sister of Bro. Samuel Mohler, our esteemed elder, who died a few months ago. She was the last one of her father's family. During her long illness her desire was to depart and be with Christ. Funeral services by the writer, assisted by Bro. James M. Neff, from 2 Cor. 5: 1. A. S. ROSENBERGER.

FRITCHLE.—Near Olney, Ill., Margaret Fritchle, aged 66 years, 5 months and 22 days.

Deceased was born in Wildersweil, Switzerland, May 5, 1825. She was a very exemplary sister and was loved and respected by all who knew her. Her companion and six children preceded her to the spirit home. Three brothers, two sisters, two daughters and a number of grandchildren, distant relatives, and many friends are left, who deeply mourn their loss, but who have the bright hope that our loss is her great gain. Services by the writer from Rev. 14: 12, 13. GEO. W. EAVEY.

ZUCK.—In the Arnold's Grove church, Carroll Co, Ill, Nov. 15, 1891, sister Nancy Zuck, aged 75 years, 11 months and 20 days.

Sister Nancy Zuck (better known as mother McCune) was born in Washington County, Md., Nov. 25, 1815. Her husband, Bro. William McCune, died in 1862. She, with her family, came west in 1864, and at a later date she married Bro. Daniel Zuck, who died after one year's marriage. Her home then, to the time of her departure, was mainly with her son-in-law, Bro. J. A. Eshelman, where she died, surrounded by all her children but one, and other friends.

Mother McCune united with the church at the age of nineteen years and spent nearly fifty-seven years in self-sacrificing love for the cause of her Blessed Master, and in the care of her children and others. After a brief illness, and much patient suffering, she bade all farewell and gently fell asleep in Jesus, to await the trumpet sound at the glorious resurrection morn.

The remains of our mother in Israel were interred in the cemetery at Arnold's Grove, Carroll Co., Ill. Funeral services were conducted by Eld. Geo. D. Zollars, and others, from Rev. 14: 12, 13. J. J. EMMERT.

ULERY.—In the Turkey Creek congregation, Elkhart Co, Ind., Bro. Daniel Ulery, aged 77 years, 3 months and 19 days.

The subject of our notice was born July 28, 1814, and was united in marriage April 15, 1841, to Mary Davenport. To this union there were born nine children, eight of whom are still living (all married). Deceased united with the Brethren church in 1855, and was elected to the office of deacon Jan. 1, 1867, in which capacity he served up to the time of his death. He lived on the old homestead just fifty years lacking one day, and experienced the varied trials, incident to the early settlement of this County. Bro. Daniel was a faithful and exemplary member for thirty-six years, and leaves a kind and affectionate companion and eight children to mourn their loss. Funeral services by brethren I. J. Rosenberger and Peter Stuckman from Psalms 17: 15, to a large circle of relatives and friends.

CALEB FOGLE.

EARLY.—In Preble County, Ohio, Sept. 2, 1891, John W. Early, the second child and son of Jacob and Magdalena Early, aged 88 years, 8 months and 11 days.

Deceased was born in Rockingham County, Va, Jan. 18, 1803. He was married to Elizabeth Miller, daughter of Martin and Hester Miller, of Bowman's Mills, Va, in 1823 and was baptized by Eld. Daniel Garber in June, 1829. He came to Logan County, Ohio, in 1831, and from there to Montgomery and Preble Counties in 1856. There he remained until his death in 1891. He was the father of sixteen children, thirteen of whom are still living. The first wife died March 2, 1842. In 1850 he was again married to Mary Morell (a widow), the daughter of Adam and Catharine Schraffenberger, who still lives at the age of seventy-five years. His strength, both of mind and body, was good till failure of one eye in 1876. He continued in good health till September when, going on a visit to his daughter, sister Lucinda Foutz, in Preble County, he was taken sick. The funeral took place at the Sugar Hill church, near West Alexandria, Ohio, Oct. 1, and the many attendants, both of members and others, were addressed by elders Jacob Garber and John Bowman, from 1 Thess. 4: 13, 14.

In 1842 they emigrated to Jefferson County, Iowa. Their union was blessed with nine children, only one of whom preceded them to the spirit world. In September, 1860, they united with the church of the Brethren, and ever after lived a consistent, Christian life. Twenty-four hours before our brother passed away, he called for the elders of the church and was anointed with oil according to the instruction of the apostle James. Funeral services were conducted by brethren Abraham Wolf and James Glotfelty. ABRAHAM WOLF.

COLLINS.—In the Mt. Zion church, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio, Oct. 21, 1891, Bro. Joseph Collins, aged 57 years, 2 months and 2 days.

Comparatively few suffered as much as the dear brother during the last fifteen years of his life and while it is very pleasant to think that there is a clime where the afflicted and weary are at rest, yet these severe afflictions make our friends dearer to us. May the dear sister and fatherless children have grace to so live that they shall meet the loved ones in that country so free from all sorrow and care. A kind and sympathetic congregation gave respectful attention to the consideration of Psalms 39: 4. Services by the writer, assisted by W. L. Baldwin, of the Methodist church. E. LOOMIS.

SHIVELY.—In the Sandy church, Ohio, Oct 26, 1891, Bro. Daniel W. Shively, aged 72 years, 3 months and 22 days.

Death is styled an enemy and on this occasion he was very cruel to the lonely, bereft sister. For almost half a century they shared the sorrows and joys of life in that most intimate relation of husband and wife. In the absence of children and grandchildren how very desolate is the home rendered by the removal of one of its loved inmates. May the sorely-bereft sister be able to say, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord!" Services by the writer, assisted by Bro. Eli Stroup.

E. LOOMIS.

HOOVER.—In the Nettle Creek church, Ind., Oct. 24, 1891, Joseph Clinton, son of George M. and Josephine C. Hoover, aged 2 years, 6 months and 11 days.

This little boy was left without a mother when only about four hours old. His father being left with a large family of children, he gave him to the care of his brother John H., and sister Elizabeth Hoover, who cared for him as only kind parents could do. Clinty was quite intelligent and a pet in the family. May they be resigned to the will of the Lord. Funeral services by Eld. Daniel Bowman and the writer. ABRAHAM BOWMAN.

CRULL.—In the Nettle Creek church, Ind., Oct. 11, 1891, John Martin, son of Bro. George and sister Mary Crull, aged 10 years, 5 months and 28 days.

LIFE AND SERMONS

— OF —

ELD. JAMES QUINTER.

This is a neatly-printed and well-bound volume of 426 pages, containing a well-written biographical sketch of Eld. James Quinter and forty of his sermons.

The biographical part will be found quite interesting, instructive and impressive. No one can read an account of Bro. Quinter's life without feeling deeply and favorably impressed. The work shows how a poor orphan boy, by hard work, and faithfulness to his religious convictions, rose step by step, until he reached a field of usefulness and honor as broad as the Nation itself. Though dead, his good deeds and the impressive examples in piety, learning and simplicity will follow him for generations to come.

The Sermon Department contains many of his choice sermons, which will prove exceedingly interesting and profitable reading to all, and especially to onr ministers and isolated members. We feel that this book will fill a long-felt want in our Brotherhood. Price, post-paid, $1.25.

THE Claar church has built a very fine church-house, which is about completed and ready for occupancy. We are always glad to hear of new churches being erected. It shows that the good work is going forward.

WE are glad to say that Eld. J. W. Brumbaugh is still improving. He attended all the sessions of the ministerial meeting and we had the pleasure of enjoying the hospitality of his pleasant home during part of our stay there.

ELD. WM. HERTZLER, of Lancaster County, Pa., on his return from a visit in Morrison's Cove, called with us and remained over Sunday. He preached for us morning and evening to edification and general acceptance. This was Bro. Hertzler's first visit among us, and during his short stay he made many friends. Come again.

THERE may be a little persecution in these days in the United States, for the man who does just right, but not enough to hurt very seriously. Our observation has been that pure Christianity, coupled with culture and intelligence, is rather at a premium with the majority of people. We suffer more for our wrong doing than otherwise. We are living in an age of unprecedented peace and religious protection, and unless we are very careful we are more liable to be led astray by the enticing things of this world than we are to be persecuted for right doing. Temptation is to be more dreaded than persecution.

WE are informed that Eld. Jacob Koontz, of the Snake Spring church, is quite low with fever, and fears are entertained that he will not recover.

TO H. C. H.—Foreman and leader, as named on page 15 of "Brethren's Manual," are two different persons. The foreman has charge of all the meetings during the time of his appointment, and it is his duty to appoint the leader for each meeting. A new and revised edition of the "Brethren's Manual" will be published and ready for distribution by Jan. 1, 1892. Price, post-paid, 30 cents.

A NUMBER of series of meetings are arranged for in our surrounding churches and we hope that the fondest expectations of the churches holding them may be realized. It is generally thought that when there are no additions in membership, the meetings are a failure. This is not necessarily so, as it sometimes happens that the membership need conversion as badly as those who have never professed religion. In the parable of the ten virgins it is said five were wise and five were foolish. Is it not to be feared that the proportion of the foolish in some of our churches may be still greater than this? The great deception of to-day is that church membership means salvation, and that it is a place where people huddle into that they may be hid from the wiles of Satan, and have a good time generally. Not long since, a young lady, who was not a church member, said that she felt it would be more respectable to be a church member, and asked a friend of hers what church she had better join and which one would afford her the greatest possibilities for enjoyment. We note this to show what loose opinions many have concerning religion and church membership. It is a sad thought indeed to learn the extent of the deception in the world, and what an indifferent thing it is in the minds of many to be a disciple of Jesus. Entering the church is not the work, but it is placing ourselves where the work is to be done. Let us all see to it well that we do not represent the foolish virgins and be among those against whom the door will be shut. It is not our entering the church or our profession that will save us, but what we do when the profession is made and we are in the church. Pure and undefiled religion does not consist so much in what we say as what we do.

MINISTERIAL MEETING.

ON Tuesday evening, at 6:30, we left our home to attend the ministerial meeting that was announced to convene at Clover Creek, Pa., on Wednesday morning, Nov. 24. With us were eight other ministers on their way to the same meeting. Our nearest railroad point was "Cove Station," which will, no doubt, be remembered as the place for embarking when attending the Annual Meeting, held at Clover Creek in the spring of 1862. The prospects of crossing the bleak mountains that cold and stormy night was not over inviting, as we had no assurance that there would be any conveyances to meet us. It is true, we had informed our good brethren of the other side that we expected to come at that time and, at least, hinted that it would be acceptable on our part if we were met at that place and time, adding very significantly that there would be some aged brethren with us,—we rather expected. On our arrival we found accommodations beyond our expectations, as our company was larger than we reported. With lanterns underneath and spans of good horses in front we soon scaled the rugged heights and pleasantly descended down, down, until at last we reached the bed of Morrison's Cove, where our Brethren seem to hold the fort and the farms too.

Our company was then divided into twos and fours, received and kindly entertained for the night. After all it is a nice thing for "birds of a feather" to meet together. There is such a home-like feeling about it that it cannot be otherwise than enjoyable. There is a certain kind of enjoyment that is born of contrast. But there is another kind, and a very good kind too, that comes from the "alike," and this is the kind that we enjoyed during this meeting. The fact that the meeting was held showed that there was considerable of the "alike" among us. Then, the object of this meeting was to promote this condition.

While it is a fact that a great deal of our labor and preaching is done to promote this ever-desirable condition of things, we sometimes feel that there is a big waste in our manner or mode of accomplishing our end.

We remember of once having a man to make fence for us, and in preparing the palings he measured the first one with a foot rule and got it the exact length. Instead of using this as his pattern or standard for length he always used the last one cut, and as a result he had no two palings of the same length, and yet his desire and intention was to have them all alike. Instead of measuring them all by the sample, he measured them one by another. So we are inclined to do when laboring for the desired likeness among us, as members of the same body. We have given us the true measure,—the perfect standard, but, instead of using this, we do as did our man in cutting the palings,—we measure too much by each other and among each other. This whole system of measuring is wrong and will never bring the desired result. We must all measure by the one, the same, and the perfect standard, as we have it in the life and precepts of the Christ, the embodiment of unification. All of us, when measuring our lives by this standard, are tending towards Christian likeness.

Pardon us for this digression. After our separation and a good night's rest, we all, with many others, at 9 o'clock, met in the Brethren's spacious church-house as a ministerial meeting. After a season of devotion, the first thing to do was to organize and adopt rules and regulations. We some-

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

IS IT WORTH WHILE?

Is it worth while that we jostle a brother,
Bearing his load on the rough road of life?
Is it worth while that we jeer at each other,
In blackness of heart, that we war to the knife?
God pity us all in our pitiful strife.

God pity us all as we jostle each other,
God pardon us all for the triumphs we feel,
When a fellow goes down 'neath his load on the heather,
Pierced to the heart; words are keener than steel,
And mightier far for woe than for weal.

Were it not well, in this brief little journey,
On over the isthmus, down into the tide,
We give him a fish instead of a serpent,
Ere folding the hands to be and abide
Forever; and aye, in dust at his side?

Look at the roses saluting each other;
Look at the herds all in peace on the plains;
Man, and man only, makes war on his brother,
And laughs in his heart at his peril and pain,
Shamed by the beasts that go down by the plains.

Is it worth while that we battle to humble
Some poor fellow-being down into the dust?
God pity us all. Time too soon will tumble
All of us together, like leaves in a gust,
Humbled, indeed, down into the dust.

AN OLD INSTITUTION.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To Bro. Samuel H. Hertzler, of Elizabethtown, Lancaster Co., Pa.:—

At your children's meeting on Nov. 15, I overheard a conversation that prompts me to pen a few lines on the nature and mission of Sunday-schools. Many of our dear brethren cherish such feelings towards this venerable institution, that they would summarily wipe it out of existence if they had the power. Too late for that. As well try to annihilate the Sabbath itself, or the family, or the ministry.

Robert Raikes is by no means the founder of this movement. He only revived a blessed ministry of Providence and grace which flourished as a glorious, national institution in the days of Christ, and for centuries before His time. The Sabbath services of the synagogue were, in all essential particulars, like our modern Sabbath-school exercises. Special portions of Scripture were selected for recitation, in which the little child and the hoary-headed octogenarian participated. The lessons were conducted in an interlocutory manner, just as they are to-day, with the exception that the pupils asked the teacher as many questions as the teacher asked the pupils.

To neglect these religious schools was regarded as a mark of gross impiety, of criminal disrespect to Jehovah and His people. It was then as heinous a sin not to attend Sunday-school, as some of our brethren now consider it to attend. A minister who would then breathe a syllable against the Sabbath-school, would be branded as boldly and irrationally heterodox. Thanks be to God for the revival of so necessary and beneficent an institution. It is an incalculable blessing both to the family and the church, and the community in general.

In this institution Christ received His Biblical training along with the other children of Nazareth, and this He patronized when He became a public teacher. The synagogue was a favorite resort for the promulgation of His new lessons on the character of God and the destiny of humanity. What proficiency He made as a Sunday-school scholar is shown by His interlocutory contact with the doctors in the temple when he was twelve years of age. He stands in the Sacred Page as a model Sunday-school boy. "In the midst of the doctors, BOTH HEARING THEM, AND ASKING THEM QUESTIONS." There is a Sunday-school text for all the Christian centuries. If we can turn out such scholars, and place before the world such juvenile examples of Biblical knowledge, we will show our allegiance to Jesus infinitely better than by branding the Sabbath-school as a worldly innovation.

I wish to correct some wrong impressions I left on the mind of the audience, in the illustrations I employed. In speaking of the little five-year-old boy who came to the pastor's door with a little wheel-barrow on which were four bricks, which he found under his father's porch, as a contribution toward erecting a new church, I did not mean myself. In making the self-application, I was speaking figuratively. I wanted for the time to be a little child again, shoving my little monocycle, offering my four bricks for the upreaving of the great temple of Jehovah. 1 Pet. 2: 5.

The same interpretation must be given to the contemplation of the sublime spectacle of the annular eclipse through the telescope. My vision was of the Sun of Righteousness under eclipse on the cross, through the telescope of a Holy Ghost-prismed faith. My knowledge of the natural sun, when eclipsed, was second-hand. One look cost ten cents. But my glimpse of God in the agony of dissolution for the sins of the world was personal, and cost me my life. If this world were one solid diamond, it were insufficient to purchase even a momentary look at the ineffable Emmanuel. But the child-eye can gaze and gaze with ever-increasing rapture and serenity and assimilation, "without money and without price."

THE BOOK OF NATURE.

BY JAMES A. SELL.

Number One.

To him who in the love of Nature holds
Communion with her visible forms, she speaks
A various language; for his gayer hours
She has a voice of gladness, and a smile
And eloquence of beauty, and she glides
Into his darker musings, with a mild
And healing sympathy, that steals away
Their sharpness, ere he is aware.—Bryant.

"The invisible things of him from (since) the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead: so that they are without excuse"—Paul.

God has revealed himself in the book of Nature, as well as in the Book of Grace, and we do well to heed its teachings. The laws of Nature are not written; they are somewhat intricate and obscure, and hard to interpret. But passing by the laws that govern and by which the whole machinery of Nature is controlled, and looking at the immensity, vastness, sublimity, beauty and utility of all that is spread around us every-where, we feel impressed with the truthfulness of the quotations heading this paper.

David speaks of "inquiring in his (the Lord's) temple." This will be the desire of every devout soul. God is to be seen in all his works, and his works show him forth. "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork." Men should go forth into the temple of his works to enquire of him, as well as in the written book and public sanctuary.

Oct. 23 a little company of us stole away from the din and bustle of busy life to spend a day on the summit of the mountain. Selecting a place which afforded the most extensive view, and which was accessible by rail, we started on the journey. We saw much on the way to interest and instruct us, but the mountain was our objective point. The railroad wound around ravines and up along the spurs, which seemed to be almost impracticable. At times we were clinging to the end of heights which seemed fearful, but our trusty iron steed dashed fearlessly forward, and in due time landed us safely and without weariness upon the summit, twenty-seven hundred feet above sea-level. As we approached the heights, no heart can conceive, tongue declare, or pen describe the awe-inspiring scenery that met our gaze and filled our hearts with rapture. One of our company retired to a place apart to pray,—impressed with the Savior's example in seeking the seclusion of the mountain fastness. Others adored in wondering silence, with eyes suffused in tears. The Lord seemed to meet us and open a page of his book of Nature. Everything seemed to be so pure.

"And we wandered away and away
Into regions yet untrod,
And read what is still unread
In the manuscripts of God."

The Alleghany Mountain, as seen from the East, is a series of peaks nearly the same in height, but irregular in shape and size. Looking to our right and left almost as far as we could see, this range of hills appeared to view.

"You should have seen that long hill range
With gaps of brightness riven,—
How through each pass and hollow streamed
The purpling lights of heaven,—
Rivers of gold-mist flowing down
From far celestial fountains,—
The great sun flaming through the rifts
Beyond the wall of mountains!"

In front of us was spread out what seemed, from our elevated position, to be a valley, but it was composed of hills, mountains, valleys and ravines. For miles and miles this broken and irregular scenery continued. The endless variety of undulations afforded a continual feast, so that there was no sense of monotony. The beauty and grandeur of this splendid landscape was enhanced by the distant mountain which belted it, and rose to meet the blue arch above, which formed the background of this romantic picture. The trees had exchanged their vernal robe for autumn's coat of many colors. A look over this vast field, clothed in all the richness of mingled colors, at this interesting season, appeals to the heart. "O Lord, how manifold are thy works! In wisdom hast thou made them all. The earth is full of thy riches."

As we looked down the slope of the mountain, it was so grand, so beautiful, so sublime that we felt that we were standing on holy ground. We thought of Moses on Mt. Nebo, and of our home in the better land. If it is so pleasant to roam, hand in hand with those we love, in the temple of God's works here, what must it be where, in the perfection of unsullied bliss, we shall roam over all the holy mountains, vine-clad hills and verdant fields, in the beautiful valley of Eden restored! If the Lord, in his goodness, led us up here, to inspire us with this feeling, we feel repaid for coming. His name be praised!

"Beautiful valley of Eden!
Sweet is thy noontide calm;
Over the hearts of the weary,
Breathing thy waves of balm.

"Over the heart of the mourner
Shineth thy golden day,
Wafting the songs of the angels
Down from the far away.

"There is the home of my Savior;
There with the blood-washed throng,
Over the highlands of glory
Rolleth the great new song."

There were flying clouds in the heavens and the sunshine and shadows were chasing each other on our fine panoramic view. This we much admired, as it added variety and beauty to the already interesting and superb picture before us. While musing we thought how much like earth this is after all. Here we have the sunshine of joyful meetings, which soon is followed by the cloud of sad partings. Our health is followed by the cloud of sickness, and at last overshadowed by the dark cloud of death. We enjoy the sunshine of spiritual pleasures, followed by the clouds of despondency. So on, through the whole range of Christian experience, sunshine and shadow follow each other. As the clouds added beauty to our scenery, they doubtless do also in the moral world. Trials, difficulties and temptations strengthen faith and develop Christian character. In the great chain of God's providences every reverse has its use, and "all things work together for good." We pass through the "fiery trials" only to be purified. The clouds are followed by sunshine.

"The clouds that shadow the earth,
And the lurid storms that rise,
Are lined with a golden light,
And serve but to paint the skies."

Cheer up, thou tempted and desponding soul!

"O, fear not in a world like this,
And thou shalt know ere long,
Know how sublime a thing it is
To suffer and be strong."

We doubtless need the sorrows and disappointments that are our common lot.

"Then in life's goblet freely press
The leaves that give it bitterness,
Nor prize the colored waters less,
For in thy darkness and distress,
New light and strength they give."

There is, at this season of the year, a haze among the mountains which often obscures the vision, so that objects, at any distance, cannot be seen. There was a little of this, but it did not at all interfere with our views, excepting points far in the distance. It, too, was both impressive and expressive. As in the book of Nature, so in the Book of Grace, God allows us to see and know just so much, and beyond that we get into a mist and fog in which, if we attempt to explore it, we are sure to get bewildered, if not wholly lost. There is an outer limit to all man's knowledge and attainments, and to pry into things which are not revealed ends in skepticism and atheism. In duty and knowledge God wants us to be most interested in what is nearest to us, and that is mostly made plain and interesting. Here let us learn that noble grace,—humility. At our best our views are very circumscribed indeed. Then, too, our pride, prejudice and bigotry often create a fog which prevents us from seeing much which might otherwise be seen. In the better time to come our vision shall be clear. "Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face. Now we see but in part and know but in part, but then we shall know even as we are known."

"Here the dark vale of flesh and sense
My captive soul surround;
Mysterious deeps of providence
My inward thoughts confound.

"As through a glass I dimly see
The wonders of thy love;
How little do I know of thee,
Or of thy joys above!

"Though but in part I know thy will,
I bless thee for the sight;
When will thy grace the whole reveal
In glory's clearer light?

"In rapture shall I then survey
Thy providence and grace,
And spend an everlasting day
In wonder, love and praise."

We descended the declivity of the knob a short distance to avoid the cool north wind, and enjoy the warm sunshine. Here we found a large boulder, over which a neighboring tree extended a branch, which answered for a hand-railing. Here we reclined for a time to admire what was before us, and to help us more fully appreciate, and enter into, the spirit of this lovely spectacle we read from the works of the poets. We felt it to be a great help to us. The moistened eyes and half-concealed emotions showed plainly that others could not only describe what we felt, but produce feelings which we, without their aid, would not have experienced. This is a part of our literature we too much neglect.

"Poetry is indeed a thing of God,
He made his prophets poets;
And the more we feel of poesies,
The more do we become like God in love and power."

This is literally true. David was a poet, and as he was, by his occupation, brought in contact with the book of Nature, his soul often overflowed and he has touched about all Christian experiences in a beautiful and sublime style. His poems (Psalms) should be read and studied more by Christians than they usually are. They not only awaken devotional feelings, but help to express what we already feel. In reading the poems of uninspired men, we should carefully discriminate and read only those which are good. There are gems which glow and sparkle and burn and inspire, and those who have no soul to be swelled and thrilled by feelings which surge up, and urge them forward, have certainly lost much of which they may not be aware. While all may not have the same appreciation of poetry, all could doubtless create a taste for it.

"The world is full of poetry—the air
Is living with its spirit; and the waves
Dance to the music of its melodies,
And sparkle in its brightness. Earth is veil'd
And mantled with its beauty; and the walls,
That close the universe with crystal in,
Are eloquent with voices that proclaim
The unseen glories of immensity,
In harmonies too perfect and too high
For aught but beings of celestial mould,
And speak to man in one eternal hymn,
Unfading beauty and unyielding power."

SHOULD INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC BE ASSOCIATED WITH RELIGIOUS WORSHIP?

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER.

THE above query has been a source of much controversy in the religious world. It has likewise reached our Annual Meeting. The leading plea ventured was, to allow its use in the Sunday-school, that "the children wanted it for their encouragement." This is a similar plea to that offered by King Saul for his fatal disobedience. He claimed that the people wanted to spare the best of the sheep and oxen to sacrifice to their Lord.

A further plea is that David praised God with musical instruments, hence we should do so. If we take David as testimony, we should take David's whole list. We will then have trumpets, psalteries, harps, cymbals, high sounding cymbals, stringed instruments and organs, and we will also get the dance, for it is in the Psalmist's list. As to the number employed, the record says, "Four thousand praised the Lord with the instruments which I made," said David, "to praise therewith." Let us call up the comment of the prophet Amos on this part of David's life. "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion. . . . That lie upon beds of ivory, and stretch themselves upon their couches. . . . That chant to the sound of the viol, and invent to themselves instruments of music, like David." Amos 6: 1–5.

We have another instance of instrumental music being associated with religious worship in Babylon, at the dedication of the great image, set up by Nebuchadnezzar, in the plains of Dura. There were gathered the princes, governors, captains, counsellors, and all the mighty men of his realm. The royal mandate was, "At what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, dulcimer, and all kinds of music, ye fall down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king hath set up." Dan. 3: 1–5.

The sacred historian further narrates the final overthrow of ancient Babylon with all her musical instruments. The seer upon Patmos, in his apocalyptic vision, beheld the overthrow of mystic Babylon, the apostate church. Mystic Babylon is the history of ancient Babylon repeating itself. The literal and the mystic go together,—are similar. The sad prophetic history of the fall of mystic Babylon, as given by the seer, is as follows: "Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen. . . Thus with violence shall the great City of Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all. And the voice of harps and of musicians and of pipers and trumpeters shall be heard no more at all in there." Here is most vivid testimony, the history of the final overthrow of both ancient and mystic Babylon, whose practice was to associate instrumental music with their worship. The corruption in their music in each is distinctly named.

Job's testimony concerning the wicked is: "They send forth their little ones like a flock, and their children dance. They take the timbrel and harp and rejoice at the sound of the organ." Job 21: 11, 12. It is certainly apparent that the practice of instrumental music, associated with religious worship, fails to have commendable precedents.

Instrumental music is used in theaters, drinking dens and halls of vice, to collect the crowds, with the sole aim of entertaining instead of edifying. "Let all things be done to edification," is a divine command.

Singing is authorized in the Scriptures as follows: "Teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord." Col. 3: 16. "I will sing with the spirit, and I will sing with the understanding also." 1 Cor. 14: 15. We are fully instructed to sing, and how to sing, but we are nowhere told how to play on the organ.

In line of our subject the apostle gives the following, "And even things without life giving sound, whether pipe or harp, except they give a distinction in the sounds, how shall it be known what is piped or harped? . . . So likewise ye, except ye utter by the tongue words easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken?" 1 Cor. 14: 7–9.

While the apostle in this chapter is condemning speaking in an unknown tongue, yet his reasoning is a clear enunciation against the use of musical instruments in worship. An instrument utters no sentiment; as such is unintelligent. Its sounds may be harmonious, and as such may entertain, but cannot edify. With the voice we utter words that are understood, and as such can edify. When Christ set up his religion he introduced singing, but entirely left out the use of musical instruments, then so prevalent in Jewish and Pagan worship.

If musical instruments are such an important auxiliary in religious worship, would not a phonograph be an equal, or even a greater auxiliary? Congregations then could be supplied by buying their music in the sheet, and their sermons by the volume, and each machine could play its part in the holy exercise.

Sometime ago, when Dr. Talmage was inviting aid for his new house of worship, as encouragement he assured the Baptists that his new house would contain a baptistry. He assured the Episcopalians that a part of the liturgy would be read at their Communion service. To the Roman Catholics he said, he thought a cross would be in the tower. He also gave some point of encouragement to the Methodists. I recently noticed that he also remembered Buddhism, for he has a Chinese gong in his choir. It looks as if the chief aim to-day is, to make religion attractive to the world, rendering it a species of amusement or entertainment, rather than instructive.

It is very common for persons to enjoy music, vocal or instrumental. We love it for its varied tones, its sweet strains, its melodies. There are many things in life which we enjoy, in which we take delight, but would not think for a moment of associating them with, or use them in, worship. Caligula, a Roman emperor, had a celebrated horse which he kept in a palace stable, built of ivory. He fed him out of an ivory manger, offered him golden oats, and made the horse consul. The emperor's sudden death alone hindered this horse from being made a member of his Royal Legion. For the emperor to be attached to his horse and take good care of him was no harm, for "a righteous man hath mercy on his beast," but the unintelligent and illegitimate use the emperor sought to make of his horse deserves censure.

The idea of using a machine, made by men's hands, hence dumb, and possessed of no soul, with which to worship God, is not only entirely without divine sanction, but is repugnant to reason. As to its origin, it dates back to Paganism and the corruptions of Judaism. We therefore aver it to be the duty of Annual Meeting to use such measures as will keep our church houses, as well as our worship, free from this both ancient and modern corruption.

CHIPS FROM THE WORK-HOUSE.

BY DANIEL VANIMAN.

RECENTLY I received a request for some chips, covering the qualifications of church officers. I begin with 1 Tim. 3, "If any man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work." This neither recommends nor condemns the desire to possess the largest scope of usefulness, possible; it only declares that if any man desire it, he desires a good work. The desire in itself, where it exists, should therefore be an incentive to labor and strive for the following qualifications:

1. Blamelessness, for he continues, "A bishop then must be blameless," that is he must be a man who will so deport himself that no one can have just cause for blaming him. Should he be habitually neglectful of duty, or fail to treat justly, honestly and kindly, all with whom he associates, he could justly be blamed, and therefore would not be blameless.

2. "The husband of one wife." This qualification means that he must not have more than one wife at a time. We do not now have any brethren in the church, who have more than one wife at a time. When Paul wrote these instructions to Timothy, there were some in the church who had more than one wife. A plurality of wives having been permitted under the Mosaic Dispensation, some who had more than one wife came into the Christian church, bringing their wives with them. It would have been unfair, even cruel, under the then existing social relations, to require them to put away all but one; and hence they were allowed to live on with them, but such as had more than one wife could neither be bishops nor deacons, as the teaching now prevailed that from the beginning it was not so, and must not be so now; and such as had more than one wife would not be in favorable position to so teach, if chosen for ministers or deacons.

3. He must be vigilant. This comprises watchfulness. One who is careless, indifferent, or unconcerned, is not fit for a bishop. He must be one who is habitually on the alert, and feels a concern for the welfare of the church, alive to her interests, disposed to keep out innovations, and to encourage only that which will edify, build up and keep the flock together.

4. "He must be sober," that is, he must be one who habitually exercises cool, dispassionate reason and self-control, serious in his demeanor and habits, not frivolous, giddy, or light-minded in his conversation or general deportment.

5. "Of good behavior." He must be one whose behavior is habitually decent, orderly and becoming, so that his behavior will be attractive and helpful to others.

6. "Given to hospitality." He must not be one who would turn either the moneyless out into the cold, or neglect the hungry and destitute. He should be disposed to entertain all who would come to him, free of charge, where it is necessary to do so.

7. "Apt to teach." This does not necessarily mean that he must be a good and eloquent preacher or proclaimer of the Word and doctrine from the public stand. There are some excellent teachers who cannot preach well. He must be apt to teach, and if he also has the ability to preach and expound the Gospel publicly, with great eloquence and power, so much the better for that.

8. "He must not be given to wine." One who gives himself to wine, gives himself to a hard master. He would not do for a bishop, because his wine habit would be damaging to himself and would also influence others in a wrong direction.

9. "He must be no striker." A striker is one who strikes, gives sudden blows, to hurt some one. This he might do by using words or blows designed to hurt, or even by quitting his work and inducing others to quit in order to hurt some one, and thus forcing or compelling things to go in the direction of his own notion. He must not be one who would strike in either of the above ways, because the principle in all of them is wrong. The original meaning seems to be that he must not be a quarrelsome person.

10. "He must not be greedy of filthy lucre," which here means money. If he be greedy for money, he will neglect the church and spend his time and energies to accumulate wealth, which would be bad both for him and the church.

11. "He must be patient,"—that is, he must have that disposition of heart, which will enable him to bear quietly any evil that may befall him or the flock, and that will enable him, like the good husbandman, to wait hopefully and cheerfully for the reward of his labor.

12. "He must not be a brawler,"—that is, he must not be one who brawls or boasts, but one who goes on the principle that, when we have done all we are commanded to do, we have only done our duty, and have nothing to boast of.

13. "He must be one who rules his own house well," having his children in subjection with all gravity. A failure here indicates a weakness that would disqualify him to properly care for the church, which is, in many respects, similar to one's own family.

14. "He must not be a novice," which means a beginner, and here means a beginner in the Christian life. He should be a man of some experience in the work of the church, and have a general knowledge of the necessities and requirements of the church.

15. "He must have a good report of them that are without, lest he fall into reproach and the snare of the devil."

16. In addition to the above we have in Titus 1: 7, that "a bishop must not be self-willed, not soon angry." It is hard to tell what one, who is self-willed and soon angry, is fit for in the church, certainly not for a bishop. "The servant of the Lord must not strive, but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient." 2 Tim. 2: 24. "Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak and slow to wrath." James 1: 19.

17. Of the ministers' and deacons' wives it is said in 1 Tim. 3: 2, "Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things." How noble, beautiful and heavenly are the qualifications set forth by the Holy Spirit for ministers, deacons and their wives. Remember that the language is not that they may or may not have them, but that they must have them, and this is not to be wondered at, for they are specially called upon to be ensamples for the flock. How advantageous it would be, if every brother and sister could become inspired with a holy desire to possess in a high degree all the qualifications of a true bishop, for there is not a single qualification mentioned that would not be proper, desirable and helpful, if possessed in a high degree by every brother and sister in the church. May we all strive for higher and nobler attainments, in order that we may be able to do more for our Master!

WORSHIP.

BY FANNY MORROW.

THERE has ever been an inclination on the part of the human race to worship some object or being, which the mind had conceived to be endowed with superior or supernatural power. God, in his infinite goodness and mercy, has never left the children of men in darkness as to who was the proper object of worship, but has always given plain direction as to the time, place and manner of divine worship.

How exceedingly kind is this information, for well he knows that the soul of man can never be satisfied with anything less than communion and sacred fellowship with himself! He also knows that the enemy of all true happiness will strive diligently to turn the channel of true worship out of its course, so as to lead the soul away from God, and finally into his fiendish den of misery and woe. Notice, in the early ages, how very particular the directions were in regard to the kind of sacrifices which were to be offered upon the altar of devotion! No blemish, no carelessness, no half-sacrifice was acceptable. Each time when the order of service and worship was faithfully obeyed, the promised rewards and blessings were bestowed upon the people.

Some may say that under the present dispensation there is not much said about worship. Let us see. What did Christ mean when, speaking of the hypocritical Pharisees, he said, quoting the language of Isaiah: "This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and knoweth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. But in vain do they worship me." Does not this teach us plainly that our affections, our hearts, must be deeply engaged? The one who ushered in this dispensation tells us, "God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." What could be more emphatic, or plainer than this? Let us consider this carefully, —"must worship him in spirit,"—not in dead formality, but with life and spirit "and in truth." What is truth? "Thy word is truth." So, if we want to worship God, let us study the "Word" carefully and we will find on every page some directions that, if lived out, will help us to render acceptable worship, not only on the Lord's Day, but on every day, so that in our work or in our rest, or whatever we do, we carry out the spirit of adoration and of worship. We learn, too, that praise and prayer are essential elements in true worship. Some one might say, "Well, I can pray at home, and I feel like praising God every day, so I can sing songs of adoration while about my work." If we look into the Word a little farther, we will see that is good as far as it goes, but not enough, for we read, "Forget not the assembling of yourselves together." There is no certain place named for this assembling, but there is an important object named, and a precious promise given,—"Where two or three are gathered together in my NAME, there am I in their midst."

O, let us consider well those three important words, small yet weighty words, "In my name." Thus the object of our meeting will be obvious, and none need think of Christ as a man who lived and died centuries ago, or as of one far away in the heavens above us, but all may realize fully his real, living, precious presence in our midst, when we meet in his name. Thousands of Christians meet on the Lord's Day, who would be insulted if told they had not met in the name of Christ, and yet their general appearance and conduct tell plainly they have met in some other name, and if Christ were there, he would surely say, "In vain is your worship, for ye worship me not according to my word." Solemn thought! If Christ should again appear in his earthly courts, with a whip of small cords, to drive out all who did not make his father's house a house of prayer, how many empty seats would echo to his receding footsteps? O, for more power and demonstration of the Spirit in our worship! May the Lord save his people from worldly, wandering thoughts, when they assemble in his name! May their hearts be fixed upon Christ, the Living Centre, in whose name they meet! May it nevermore be said, "In vain do they worship me."

FROM MY NOTE-BOOK.

BY M. M. SHERRICK.

THERE is a limit to God's endurance with that people which he led out of Egypt, out of bondage, out of night. They have rebelled so often against his providences, and in spite of his forbearance, they are determined to have their own way. "You shall not possess the land which I promised you," says the much-tried Father. "But we will possess it. We will go in from the south, and, by force, wrest our promised inheritance from the heathen." But mark! God had set a limit to the lives of those two million souls when he declared that not one of those rebellious ones should enter the Land. Defeat and disgrace before them, they have but to turn their faces backward. "Go back," says a voice like the thunder tone of doom, "go back into the wilderness and wander, disheartened, God-forsaken, among the burning sands and desolate foot-hills of Paran. Seek rest where no rest can be found; seek refreshment where there is no shade and where no sparkling fountains moisten the sun-browned sands, and, like cattle, unsheltered, die within the next thirty-eight years!" How terrible the judgment of God, visited upon continued and willful disobedience!

Such a condition the man and woman will experience, who continually strives with the Spirit of Grace.

The moments are witnesses which take note of our opportunities, our watchings and our offerings. In the great day, at the awful hour of reckoning, they will stand there, and as the sot, the spendthrift, the idler, is called before the Judge and stands trembling, as the recording angel looks up the unsettled accounts,—the wasted day, the squandered year, those moments will say, "We are witnesses." That wealthy churchman, who has a faculty for hoarding, also has an account to settle. One after another the items are read off, all against him. The pitiful appeal of the poor unheard, the wants of the dying unsupplied, no Bread of Heaven broken to starving souls, through his instrumentality,—to all of this the moments say, "We are witnesses."

That poor widow, who, in her humble, self-sacrificing spirit, feels her unworthiness as she approaches the Judge of the world, is overcome with joyful emotion to know that out of the scarcity of her possessions and the overflowings of a grateful heart, she has pleased her Lord. Of her unselfish devotion, her Christian sympathy for others, her offerings of prayer and praise, those same moments say, "We are witnesses."

What a glorious temple the converted man and woman may build for the indwelling presence of the Holy Trinity! Such a grand possibility is in the province of every child of God.

I would have that temple built of solid masonry on all sides, the fundamental principles and doctrines of Christ forming the walls. Against this, the vanities of the world,—pride, idolatry, atheism, fanaticism, surge in vain. Let the dome be of sky-blue faith, opening to the glory world beyond, that we may not lose sight of the throne, the crystal sea and gates of pearl. Let the doors swing open on the hinges of hope to the ever-patient footsteps of the lowly Nazarene, who comes to us in his humiliation. I would have the tapestries and curtains woven of the delicate threads of immortal love,—a part of the same fabric that reflected such a glory on the earth over eighteen hundred years ago. The music within this temple should proceed from the chords vibrated by the Spirit bearing "witness with our spirits that we are the children of God."

Last, but not least, the chandelier, pendant from the dome of this vast and glorious edifice, with its radiant and gloom-dispelling rays, must be the glorified Christ,—"the light that lighteth every man coming into the world."

Mt Morris, Ill.

"A SORROW'S crown of sorrow is remembering happier things." We suffer for what we have enjoyed. We pine because we have loved. The prick of the thorn is deep because our grasp of the flower has been so tight. Not in the first shock of parting is our suffering keenest. But as we move on over the solitary way, each sight, each sound, calls up a fresh memory that saddens the new sadness, even while the sadness sweetens the old sweetness. The hat on the rack, the high-chair at the table, the broken toy, the ragged book,—everything becomes now a strange mingling of pleasure and pain. So closely do joy and sorrow walk together, that one gains new strength from the other. They are two lives in one. Who that sits in the school of sorrow would forget the keenness of past joys, that he might avert the keenness of present sorrows? Who is not grateful for the memory through which his greatest suffering comes? The sweetness of sadness is a sweetness not to be tasted out of sadness. And the memory of the "happier things" is one of God's peculiar gifts that can come only to him upon whose head memory lays "sorrow's crown of sorrow."—Sel.

MINISTERIAL MEETING.

(Concluded from first page.)

times are disposed to cry out against rules and regulations on the "Gospel alone" theory, but it won't work,—never did, never will. Every organization down to a Brethren's ministerial meeting must have some kind of rules and regulations and so we had, even to five-minute speeches of from ten to fifteen minutes in length. Though the rules were sometimes slightly stretched, they were necessary all the same, as they afforded the possibility of calling a halt when the flashes zigzagged or struck in the wrong direction. Even ministers sometimes fail to hit the point, and thunder when there is not much rain. It is amusing to see a man gesticulate with his head and hands,—fume, and stamp his feet, without saying anything. But there are times when we all place ourselves just so.

After the Moderator, secretary and scribe were duly set apart by ballot, the meeting was declared to be in session and the program was begun, and, after seven consecutive sessions, was completed, we believe, to the satisfaction of all. As intimated, we had rules by which the deliberations of the meeting were governed. Two brethren were assigned to each subject. The first one had fifteen minutes and the second ten. After these were done, five-minute speeches were allowed until the subject was thought to be sufficiently discussed. This was left to the discretion of the Moderator, or, in some cases, closed by motion. The subjects, as a rule, were ably discussed and the spirit of the meeting was Christian in the best sense. Not a single unkind word was spoken during all the sessions. Indeed, a more lovely, Christian band of workers we never saw together. To be helpful to each other seemed to be the desire on the part of all present, and we feel sure that if we all labor to carry out, in our home charges, the good things we there heard and learned, much good will grow out of this meeting of Christian workers, and we will all be made to say that it was good for us to be there.

A few observations were made during the meeting as follows:

1. We name the apparent earnestness and zeal manifested in the work of the ministry, as conducted by our people,—not for filthy lucre's sake, because this we do not get, but that the blessed cause may be promoted and souls saved.

2. The greeting at meeting and parting. We were made sensible of the often-quoted saying: "See how these Christians love each other!" It was a scene meet for angels to behold. Though we have our imperfections, yet, give us a world of such Christians and we have a taste of heaven and can feel that the prayer, "Thy kingdom come," is measurably answered.

3. The mingling and commingling of the old and the young, as well as the respect and reverence on the part of the young, and the concern and tenderness on the part of the aged. It was a most loving meeting of the beginning and the ending,—the rising and the setting. Yes, farewell, brethren! Before another meeting there will, doubtless, be some of the greetings made on the other side. Grasp your armor, ye young and strong ones, the battle ne'er give over till the victory is won. To the aged ones, Peace, yea, may the peace of God mantle you about as your sun sinks slowly down. Farewell, farewell, till we all meet again on the other shore!

HINTS ON GIVING.

BY WM. M. LYON.

FIRST I will call attention to an error that is very common among us, and perhaps one that many have not yet detected. I doubt not but that most of us have frequently heard the expression. It generally occurs when the party solicited hesitates or refuses to give. In such cases the solicitor, as a last resort, has often said, "Well, can't you give as much as the poor widow?" Mark 12: 44; Luke 21: 4.

Right here I will say, notwithstanding the mistake, the remark in most cases is followed by a tightly-squeezed little offering on the part of the donor, who now feels that "he hath done what he could," in a most worthy manner too, while the poor solicitor feels greatly relieved in having done so well(?). Of course if I were the solicitor I would rather get the "two mites" than nothing, but I could not possibly bear the idea of leaving the donor under the impression that he had followed the example of that good woman who received the hearty approbation of her Divine Master. It should ever be borne in mind that those two mites, cast in by the widow, constituted her entire living, and if we wish to follow her most praiseworthy example, we will be compelled to cast in all our living. I am sorry to say that we don't find many followers of the poor widow these days.

The second thought we wish to drop is this: Did we ever notice in reading the sacred narrative of those who presented their gifts in the temple that it says they "cast" their gifts into the treasury? Let us think about the meaning that that little word carries along with it. Do we cast our gifts into the Lord's treasury, or does the solicitor have to draw it from us by a kind of "coax and tease" process? Which is it?

Our third hint with reference to giving is, do we realize the sacred character of the duty? Did we ever think about that? Do we not believe that giving is a part of our salvation? Certainly we do, and a great factor it is, too. Now to the point as to its sacredness. "And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men." Col. 3: 23.

Does not this include the duty of giving? Apply this text and you have a sacred work. Other references might be given but let this suffice.

Now to the application: When members are solicited, many are in the habit of laughing over the matter, making a kind of a joke of it as though it were a very light something.

Sometimes it falls to the lot of the preacher to do some soliciting and perhaps he is met with something like this: "Around begging again, are you? Can't you give us a little rest?" Such remarks are calculated to make a minister feel as though his efforts were being made for his own personal interest. In the event of giving, they would also indicate that it may not be done "heartily, as to the Lord." Let us be careful that we do not give so as to not realize the blessing.

I once heard of a member who upon being asked to give, replied, "It seems like it's just give, GIVE, GIVE, all the time." That person expressed not what is, but what ought to be. Was not our blessed Savior's life spent in giving? He was rich, but for our sakes became poor—gave all that He had—even His own life, that we, through His poverty, might be rich,—heirs of all things. Will we, then, refuse to follow the example of Him who hath said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive"?

OUR MINISTERIAL MEETINGS.

BY L W. TEETER.

QUITE an interest is being taken in ministerial meetings, in a number of State Districts, and we are much pleased to hear that good is being done by them. We feel assured that great good may be accomplished by them, with proper management.

There is no means in existence, that can be nearly so beneficial, to persons engaged in any business, science, or profession, than the simple meeting together of different persons, with different experiences, having different intellectual powers, yet all of them engaged in the same business. It is, in fact, the first means employed by men, pursuant to any interest or object whatever. They meet (1) in a "caucus," i. e., to consider the advisability of a measure, and agree on some principles of organization, etc. They meet (2) for organization. They meet (3) in a permanent meeting.

Ministerial meetings are to the minister, what the County and township institutes are to the teacher. All who have ever had any experience in such institutes, have realized the great advantage they are to the teacher in his school-work.

The meeting together of ministers affords at least three advantages: 1. Every minister present may partake of the best methods, ways, and means, used by any and every other minister present, in their ministerial work, and adopt them, in a measure, as his own.

2. Many ministers may learn at those meetings that they have been employing improper methods, ways, and means in their ministerial work, who will then, gladly and profitably, change to the better.

Those meetings will tend strongly to unify the minds of the ministers in a State District on doctrine, the principles of church government, and general church work. The latter advantage is rather the result of the first two, for if every minister would adopt the best methods, ways and means in the execution of church work, they would really adopt the same methods, ways and means.

Then it follows that if the ministry of a State District will be made uniform in their work, their uniform work will soon make a uniform ministry, and a uniform ministry, doing uniform work, will make uniform churches as certainly as like causes produce like effects, under similar circumstances, and a continued effort will go far to bring about uniformity in circumstances, that may now be a little various.

Because of the various conditions and situations of our ministers in general, financially and otherwise, the term of holding our ministerial meetings will necessarily be short, therefore the kind of work done in them should be of the most general character, to do the greatest good to the greatest number, and, so far as particular matters are concerned, that is matters or questions which cannot be made applicable and beneficial to all, such questions should not be in the program, for special consideration and discussion. Such questions might, however, receive some attention, as miscellaneous matter, in some session of the meeting.

Let the great object be to devote all the time and energy to the equipment of the minister, that his labors may be the most effectual, especially in his own church, and if he will be an effectual worker in his own church, he will have gained an essential qualification to do good work in other churches.

TO MAKE MINISTERIAL MEETINGS A SUCCESS.

Individual churches should not fail to also be interested in them. By this we mean, churches should see that their ministers attend, because, if those meetings will be beneficial to the minister, they will be indirectly, beneficial also to those who are under his ministry, not only to church members, but more effective to the outside. If ministers are not financially able to go, the churches should at least bear their expenses, which will never be very much, to attend a State District Ministerial Meeting. We would also encourage the attendance of any other members, deacons and private members, both brethren and sisters. We feel certain that all would be greatly benefited, for the character of the exercises, discussions, etc., would go far to change the estimate, that is generally made of the minister and his preaching, especially by private members.

At those meetings, many of the obstacles, against which the minister must battle, would be made prominent, which will enable all to see, at least partly, what it takes to make a preacher, as a workman that need not be ashamed,—one that is able to rightly divide the Word of Truth. All would be made to see the injustice of a church electing a brother to the ministry, and receiving him at the installation, and in less than six months, many turn against him, giving him all possible signs of their disapproval of his best efforts, in preaching, when he had no hand in his own election, thus making his office like a burdensome, galling yoke.

THE LIMITS OF MINISTERIAL MEETINGS.

In any of the departments of work done in ministerial meetings, care must be taken to keep within the bounds of their respective District Conferences, and of the General Conference.

A ministerial meeting may not therefore, adopt any rule, method, or means, that is not in strict harmony with decisions of its own District Conference, and of the General Conference.

If, however, a discovery should be made, during the discussions, looking into ministerial church-work, of a change or an amendment, or the adoption of a new rule, method, or means, by which the Gospel might be more fully followed in the execution of the minister's office, than is now done, any such question as above named, might be discussed, a query formulated, and be brought up to, and through, the superior conferences, (a) through any local congregation in such

District; (b) the District Conference; (c) the General Conference, in the regular way. If adopted by District, or General Conferences, accordingly, it should be accepted by all, but if not adopted by said Conferences, it should not be practiced by any. Even a local congregation in a State District is superior in authority to a State District Ministerial Meeting, in that it may decline forwarding a query to District Conference, even if such a query had the unanimous approval of a ministerial meeting.

THE SUBJECT OF CHURCH GOVERNMENT

Should not fail to be considered at all ministerial meetings. We insist on this, because experience in church work and observations in visiting many churches, have shown clearly that we are very tardy in church government. More difficulties arise out of improper management of the affairs of the church than from any other source.

This comes not only from the first mistake made in a congregation, but it comes also because of mistakes made by us when we go into those congregations, to correct their mistakes, and the last are worse than the first, but if it had not been for the first, the second could not have been. All, therefore, is the result of the first mistake, which came through misgovernment.

We regret that, necessarily, but little time can be given at our ministerial meetings to so great and important a subject. However, if but the general principles can be, to some degree, developed, it will be quite a help in the adjustment of church work.

In conclusion we hope that all ministers, who can do so, will attend those meetings, not only that they might be benefited, but that they might benefit others. We feel also that it would be well for ministers to attend ministerial meetings in other districts, besides their own, for mutual benefit.

Lesson VI.

THE ROSETTA STONE.—A great deal of the ancient records of Egypt is written in hieroglyphics. For many years no one could read these inscriptions which were found on rocks, tombs, obelisks, monuments, etc. In 1799 there was discovered a stone near a place in Egypt called Rosetta. It is a large black slab, now called the Rosetta Stone. It had inscriptions in three different languages, Greek, demotic, and hieratic. The Greek was easily read and study proved that the inscriptions were transcriptions of the Greek. This, then, became the key for determining the alphabet, by which means these inscriptions can now be read. The principal point of interest to the Bible student in these inscriptions of ancient Egypt is the corroboration of the statements of the Bible. The more they are studied, and the more extended the research, the more is the Bible proven to be true.

Continuing our subj ct, Simon II, last mentioned, was succeeded by his son Onias III, 198 B. C. During his term of office there was a man named Simon, who was treasurer of the temple and was opposed to Onias. Each having his adherents, there arose two parties,—the Jewish party, with the High-priest at the head: the other, the Greek or Syrian party with Simon at the head. This party introduced Grecian, heathenish customs. Simon's brother Joshua (Jesus), by a bribe, obtained from the king the high-priesthood and Onias was deposed 175 B. C. Joshua took the Greek name of Jason. He built a gymnasium where Jewish youths practiced the Greek athletic exercises, some even obliterating the mark of circumcision. Jason who obtained his office by bribery held it only three years, when he was undermined by Menelaus 172 B. C. He was sent to Antioch with the tribute, and, by flattery and a greater bribe, obtained the high-priesthood. Not being able to raise the money he had promised, he sold some of the vessels of the temple.

During his rule a great tumult arose at Jerusalem on account of the sacrileges committed by Lysimachus, the brother and deputy of Menelaus. Lysimachus was killed and Menelaus was accused before the king Antiochus but escaped through bribery, and his accusers were punished for the insurrection.

This insurrection was only among the first of a number that brought terrible results to the Jews of Palestine. At one time it was reported that the king Antiochus, who had deposed Jason and given the office to Menelaus, was dead. Jason, at the head of 1,000 men, attacked Jerusalem, drove Menelaus into the citadel, practiced great cruelties upon the citizens, but was compelled to flee to the land of Ammon.

This led the king, who had been reported dead, to think Judea had revolted. He returned, took Jerusalem by storm, slew old and young, male and female. Forty thousand were slain and as many more sold into slavery. Guided by Menelaus, the king entered the temple, sacrificed swine on the altar, sprinkled swine broth over the sanctuary and polluted the Holy of Holies with filth. He carried off the sacred vessels to the amount of 1800 talents. Two years later the king sent a man by the name of Appolonius, an enemy of the Jews, to Jerusalem at the head of 22,000 men, with orders to slay the male adults and seize all the women and children. Pretending that his mission was friendly he waited until the Sabbath and then fell upon the unresisting people.

DID ALEX. MACK RECEIVE HIS RELIGIOUS IDEAS FROM OTHERS?

BY JOHN HECKMAN.

IN compliance with the request of Bro. Moore, I send the following gleanings, obtained from brother and sister Mleynek, of Irving, Marshall Co., Kans., who are Bohemians by birth and education, and were born in the country that knew the noted John Huss and his terrible suffering.

We found a number of old books in Bro. Mleynek's possession; the most important and interesting of which are the four following described:

1. A harmony and history of the four Gospels, giving the most prominent facts in the life of Christ and of his teachings; but minutely from the raising of Lazarus to the ascension of Christ. It explains the types of the Old Testament in the light of the antetypes of the New; also explains the meaning of the ordinances found in the four Gospels, how they should be observed, and the lessons they teach,—more particularly the institution of the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, the ordinance of feet-washing and baptism by trine immersion. The Supper, it says, should be a full meal, eaten in the evening, after feet-washing has been observed. All the members of the body of Christ should engage in these ordinances, even if they do not understand them at first. After having observed them, they will receive new light. The author of the book also claims that only believers should partake of the Supper.

Previous to the Supper, believers should converse with each other upon these profound subjects, and confess their faults one to another, and pray that they might have their sins pardoned. This would involve a preparation,—in fact a self-examination.

This book was written by Jan Komensky in 1631, reprinted in 1663, and again in 1757. Bro. Mleynek says this book is identical in teaching with Bro. R. H. Miller's "The Doctrines of the Brethren Defended."

2. This work is a book of sermons written in 1586 and re-issued in 1615. It contains probably 800 pages, bound in board, covered with cloth and half leather, with good print and large, plain type.

At the time this book was printed, the Brethren church (for such it was called at that time by themselves) was persecuted by the Roman Catholics and the members desired that the teachings of the ministers might be preserved to them in a book; but to get up such a book was a hazardous undertaking. These books were all printed in Berlin, Germany, and brought to Bohemia without the king's knowledge. The penalty for possessing such books was death. Many of these Brethren were put to death in various ways and their books burned.

Upon the front and back leaves of this book are written the prayers of Bro. Mleynek's father, who was born in 1778 and died in the spring of 1874, at the advanced age of nearly ninety-six years. He was a very plainly-dressed man, wearing such clothes as our brethren wear, with the exception of the knee pantaloons. This is a very singular fact when it is considered that he lived and died in Bohemia and never heard of the Brethren's church in America. He prized these books very highly because they contained the teachings of the Scriptures as he understood them, and he gave them to his son Joseph upon leaving for America, nearly thirty years ago, as a lasting memorial of his own integrity.

3. This is a history of the persecution, and was printed in 1648. Upon the front leaves are the pictures of Jan Huss and Jan Amos Komesky, the author of the first book described.

Bro. Mleynek translated for us a few lines, describing the persecution of a family by the name of Maleg Machek. Being driven from Bohemia Sept. 21, 1480, they went to Holland. The name, he says, is Michael Mach in English. He was a minister.

This is an interesting item, as the last-named person may have been the ancestor of Alexander Mack,—the more so as he held the same religious views as we afterwards find in Alexander Mack.

4. This is a New Testament with psalms and hymns set to music It is very slow music; all half and whole notes and only one part sung. Bro. Mleynek sang one for us.

Sabetha, Kans., Nov. 21.

THE disciple of Jesus moves through this world always a stranger, nowhere tolerated, nowhere at home; and even should he be settled anywhere, it is uncertain how long the world and his foes would allow him to remain. In such a case, comfort comes from Christ.—Gossner.

THE Brethren in California will hold their District Meeting in Lordsburg on Monday, Feb. 14.

AMOS MOOMAW may now be addressed at Pleasantville, Marion Co., Iowa, instead of Red Rock, as heretofore.

FOUR Quaker delegates are now in Russia for the purpose of visiting and examining the famine-stricken district.

IT is good to have ample means laid by for the winter of life, but above all things see to it that you have an inheritance among them that are sanctified.

THE General Mission Board will meet at Mount Morris, Jan. 5. Those having business with the Board will communicate the same to Bro. Galen B. Royer by the first of the month.

SUNDAY morning, Nov. 29, John Hall, the great New York preacher, had for his text, "Prepare to meet thy God." In the afternoon of the same day he was shot at three times by a crazy man.

GOOD reports are coming in from many of the Thanksgiving meetings. Franklin Grove, Ill., raised $140.00 for various charitable purposes that day, and other churches are also making encouraging reports.

ONE of our hard-working ministers, who is too modest to permit his name to go before the public, has donated $200.00 for the comfort of the poor in Denmark. Surely this brother will receive his reward openly.

BRO. JOHN ZUCK, of Clarence, Iowa, gave us a brief, but pleasant call last week. He came for the purpose of placing his son in school here. While with us he preached once at Silver Creek and also once in the Chapel.

BRO. ARCHIE VANDYKE has changed his address from Beatrice, Nebr., to Sabetha, Kans.

BRO. GEO. L. STUDEBAKER, of Indiana, writes that he expects to be with us during the Bible Term in January.

INSTEAD of saying, in No. 47, that C. N. Brown had changed his address to Mound City, Mo., we should have said C. H. Brown.

BRO. JACOB APPLEMAN has changed his location from Star Valley, Kans., to Clarkson, Oklahoma. His correspondents will please address him accordingly.

WE have just published a new edition of the Brethren's Missionary Hymn Book for the Brethren's Tract Work at Dayton, Ohio. Price, ten cents per copy; or, twelve copies, $1.00. We can also fill orders for the same at this office.

OUR Sunday-school Quarterlies for the first quarter of next year will be ready for mailing by the time this reaches our readers. Send in your orders at once. For prices see notice on last page of this issue. We trust that all of our schools will use our Sunday-school literature.

ON another page of this issue will be found the line of study, blocked out by the committee for the New Testament class, during the Special Bible Term in January next. There will also be several other classes during the term, so as to give those in attendance all the work they feel like doing.

OUR ministerial meeting last week had for consideration, "How Ministers ought to Conduct Themselves in Meeting." A number of good, practical suggestions were offered, and after spending one hour thus to good advantage the question was carried over till the next meeting in January, at which time we expect a number of ministers present.

LAST week a sister, greatly troubled with heart disease, and not knowing just when the Master might call her away, requested the elders in Mt. Morris to anoint her. The services took place in the Bible room at the College, in the presence of a number of the young members and others, this being the first time many of them had ever witnessed the performing of this sacred rite.

THOSE who have been carefully reading our reports from the churches, certainly have noticed, with pleasure, the encouraging reports from many parts of the East. We are glad to learn that our Brethren in the East are entering into the work so earnestly, and are meeting with such commendable success. Nearly every issue of late tells of the people coming to the church by the score. We trust that the good work may continue, and we further hope that every congregation in the Brotherhood will hold one or more series of meetings during the winter.

WE are in receipt of the Christian Sunday-school Lesson Commentary for 1892, a neatly-bound volume, containing well-prepared notes on the lessons for the entire year, by B. W. Johnson, and published by the Christian Publishing Company, St. Louis, Mo. Price, $1.00. To those of our Brethren who feel the need of the lessons in a bound volume, we recommend this work, as the comments and explanations are generally more in keeping with our views of the Scriptures than the books put out by the more popular churches. The book may be ordered from our office. Teachers will find it quite a help, used in connection with our Quarterlies.

BRO. GALEN B. ROYER informs us that he has already received nearly $800.00 for the poor in Denmark.

THAT was indeed a commendable act upon the part of sister Leah Berger to build a meeting-house in Salemville, Bedford Co., Pa., for the use of the Brethren. The Lord has certainly blessed the work, for recently sixteen united with the church as the result of a series of meetings in the house.

BUNYAN'S "Pilgrim's Progress" is perhaps the most widely-read book, aside from the Bible, in any language. It will continue to prove interesting for generations to come. We have the book, neatly printed and well bound, which we can send post-paid for fifty cents per copy. Send for a copy for your children.

BRO. J. M. SNYDER, of McPherson, Kans., is getting out a missionary number of the Brüder-bote for general circulation among German readers, and he should receive some encouragement in the way of donations to help defray expenses. Those who feel to render some assistance may in this way help the cause at large. One and two-cent postage stamps will be thankfully received. Our readers might also assist Bro. Snyder in getting his paper more widely circulated among those who read the German language. Send for samples and do what you can for our German paper.

THE enormous amount of money expended for intoxicating drinks may, in a measure, be realized when the following proposition is considered. It is clipped from the Boston Traveler, and comes from a man who knew what he was writing:

> I will undertake to give bond for the fulfillment of a contract that if the City of Philadelphia will stop selling liquor and will give me as much money as was expended for liquor last year to run the city next year, I will pay all the city expenses. No one shall pay taxes, and there shall be no insurance on property, and a good suit of clothes shall be given to every poor man, woman or child, and a barrel of flour to every needy and worthy person, and then I shall make a half million dollars by the operation. P. T. BARNUM.

WE regret to learn that Bro. S. Z. Sharp met with a very painful accident at Newton, Kans., Saturday, Nov. 28. The McPherson Republican says that Bro. Sharp started from the Santa Fe depot at Newton in a great hurry, thinking he was late and might miss the train. A long freight train on the Santa Fe was standing between him and the depot, and, thinking he would not have time to go around it, he undertook to cross over between the cars. He jumped on the end of a flat car, taking hold of the brake. Just as he did this his foot slipped into the coupling link and at that instant the bumpers came together, catching his foot, mashing it almost to a jelly. A train man, coming along and seeing his condition, motioned to the engineer to pull up and relieve him of his perilous condition. Bro. Sharp is now at home, but it is not known whether the foot can be saved.

HOME AND DISTRICT MISSION WORK.

IN our last article we intimated the necessity of elders in every congregation. Paul, one of the most successful organizers the world ever had, not only laid the foundation of Christianity in many cities, but he also did some building thereon and placed the churches in working condition by installing such officers as were necessary for successful church work and church government. In his letter to Titus (1: 5) he says: "For this cause I left thee in Crete, that thou mightest set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I had appointed them." We judge Titus to have been, by the appointment of Paul, an evangelist in a certain line of work of which we shall say more further on. But it is certain that Paul had elders ordained in every city to take the oversight of the churches in those cities. This is, at least, a precedent worthy of our highest possible regard.

It should, therefore, be the aim of our Brotherhood to have elders residing in all of our congregations, both large and small. Nature and experience will teach us the necessity of this. The elder is a shepherd, watching over the flock of which the Holy Ghost has made him overseer. Naturally speaking, we all know what would be the result if a flock of sheep were left without the personal care of a shepherd going in and out among them. The sheep would scatter and be destroyed, and the flock cease to have an existence. Experience has repeatedly taught us the same lesson in regard to the spiritual flock. There is to-day as much need of elders being ordained in every church as there was when Paul sent Titus into Crete.

We would like to say more on this point but cannot spare the space to do so in this issue. We however add that every congregation ought to be made a working congregation, and this cannot well be done without the personal attention of an earnest and faithful overseer. Meetings are to be looked after, Sunday-schools need attention, the erring require spiritual help, the poor must not be neglected, the church in various ways must be kept in proper order, and ought also to be encouraged in raising the needed funds for carrying on the Lord's work. All of these things need the personal attention of one who can be with the flock and give the work his personal attention. But we cannot linger longer on this part of the question. We pass to another of great importance.

If all of our congregations could enter into active work, in the manner suggested in former articles, there is no telling what would be the result. Our ministers could probably do twice as much as they are accomplishing at the present time, and that, too, without additional expense. But that would not reach the isolated points, where labor is much needed. On this point we have a very important suggestion to make, in perfect harmony with our general plan of missionary work. The Mission Board of each State District ought to have a good evangelist to take charge of all these isolated points and devote all his time to the work year after year. This thing of selecting a number of missionaries, who spend only a few weeks at these isolated points during the year, is certainly not the best method of building up and maintaining churches at new points. We have had years of experience in that and not very much has been accomplished. But place all of these points in the hands of one good, faithful worker, and make him responsible for the work, and we may look for something to be accomplished and maintained.

This brother should be selected by the District Mission Board on account of his fitness for the work. He must be an evangelist; one who knows how to do the work of an evangelist. Above all things he must be a faithful worker and in full sympathy with the order, work and practice of the church. There is no use wasting money in the mission field, on a preacher who is not in full sympathy with the order and practice of the church. We have our rules and church regulations and we want evangelists in these new fields who will both practice and maintain them. While we may, to some extent, tolerate in our home congregations a few ministers who are slow about coming into the order of the church, we ought never to think of placing such men in charge of mission fields, for they will build up congregations more like those in popular churches than our own, and our people have no money to spare for building up in new fields the very things we are opposing at home. Hence the importance of selecting a man sound in the faith and in full sympathy with the church. Ability is important, but faithfulness comes first. Peter was a strong man, but the Lord told him, "When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren."

Of course an evangelist must be an ordained elder, fully empowered to do the kind of work entrusted to Titus, as mentioned in the forepart of this article. Entering upon his work for a year in the mission field, he can probably work up about four stations, preaching at each once a month, often on Saturday and Sunday nights, and at favorable times hold series of meetings. He visits from family to family, distributes tracts, works our church paper into families, gets Sunday-schools under headway, and in that manner finds constant work the entire year. When he gets a number of members at one of his stations he organizes them, has a deacon or two elected, starts them to work in a social meeting, and in course of time he has them to select from their number a brother for the ministry. All this may be done in strict harmony with the rules and practice of the general Brotherhood. By giving special attention to the training of this newly-elected minister he may soon be able to preach occasionally, and thus the congregations would have more meetings. The evangelists may be doing equally as well at the other stations, and have other young ministers at work. As they prove themselves worthy they may be advanced to the second degree of the ministry, and finally to the eldership in course of time. As the evangelist gets the congregations in good shape, able to care for themselves, as regular, organized churches, he turns his attention to other stations, and thus he is continually at work, building up new churches, placing them in good working condition, and then turns them over to the State District or sister churches.

There is no telling how much good a man of this kind might accomplish. He not only sows the Gospel seed in the hearts of the people, but he carefully cultivates it. And when members come into the church he cares for them as a shepherd would look after his sheep He is not concerned about the work in other fields; his entire time and attention is taken up with the particular work assigned him, and he certainly can make a success of it and accomplish vastly more than when the work is left to a number who give it only a small amount of attention. This practice of sowing much good seed in new fields and then not properly cultivating it is certainly a very unwise policy. We not only want to cultivate the seed sown, but we should take the best of care of the new members until we can get them properly organized and in a shape to care for themselves.

We have now presented a line of thought concerning both home and District mission work, which is not only in perfect harmony with our well-established principles, but, if heeded, may possibly enable us to accomplish much in the way of spreading the Gospel in our immediate localities and in the building up of churches at many isolated points. EDITORIAL WANDERINGS IN THE OLD WORLD.

BY D. L. MILLER.

Number Thirteen.

ONE among the most instructive of the many interesting things in the Egyptian collection is a remarkable book of papyrus, containing nineteen pages of ten lines of very fine hieratic writing, dating at least B. C. 1400, and is therefore nearly thirty-three hundred years old. It was at one time in possession of King Seti II, of the XIX dynasty of the kings of Egypt, who reigned B. C. 1266. It is entitled "The Story of the Younger Brother," and contains the essential parts of the Bible account of Joseph. An Egyptian writer who was familiar with the story of Joseph used it as the ground work for a similar story into which is woven the intervention of the gods of Egypt, with many marvelous occurrences, but the principal part of it is taken from the Bible. The following are the points of agreement or similarity which we found in reading the translation of the story.

1. Joseph was the younger brother.

2 The scene in the house of Potiphar where Joseph's virtue was tested.

3. The banishment of the younger brother to a foreign land.

4. His final triumph as ruler over all Egypt. In the Egyptian version before us the same test of virtue is made, and the younger brother, like Joseph, resists the temptation. He is banished to a distant country, as was Joseph. His elder brother seeks and finds him, and he finally becomes ruler over Egypt. This was without doubt copied from the Bible, and is valuable evidence as it shows conclusively that as early as fourteen hundred years before Christ the Bible history of Joseph was known to the Egyptians, and that it entered into their literature.

Not many years ago unbelievers were asserting that the story of Joseph and the bondage of the children of Israel in Egypt was a myth, but these recent discoveries have closed the mouths of this class of critics. There is growing up now another form of unbelief, known as the higher criticism, which asserts that in some essential points the history of the Bible is in error. Among this school of critics are men who profess to believe in some parts of the Book. One of these days the spade and pickax of the Egyptian and Palestine Exploration Societies will uncover some new testimony that will make these critics hide their faces in shame. It is getting to be decidedly unsafe in these days for men to risk too much against the Bible; the buried records show their errors.

Turning to the records again we find an inscription taken from the ancient temple at Karnac, which sets forth the triumph of Shishak, king of Egypt, in which he names the kingdom of Judah as part of the territory which he conquered. It is interesting to read 2 Chron. 12th chapter in connection with this inscription, "And it came to pass, that in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, Shishak king of Egypt, came up against Jerusalem, because they had transgressed against the Lord." Those who are interested in the study of the Bible will carefully read the entire chapter, as the inscription verifies the account so fully and clearly that it seems almost wonderful.

We also examined carefully the Rosetta stone which unlocked to modern scholars the hieroglyphics of Egypt, and enabled them to translate the inscriptions on the tombs, and the hieratic writing on papyrus into English. This stone contains the decree of the priests of Memphis, conferring divine honor on Ptolomy V. Epiphanus, king of Egypt, B. C. 195. The inscription is in three forms:

1. Egyptian language in hieroglyphics or writing of the priests.

2. In the same language in demotic or the writing of the people.

3. In the Greek language and characters.

From this inscription was first obtained the key to the decipherment of the hieroglyphics and the interpretation of the ancient language of Egypt. The names of the kings are inclosed within oblong rings or cartouches, giving the clue to the identification of the letters of the Egyptian alphabet. The stone was found 1798 among the ruins of Fort St. Julian, near the Rosetta mouth of the Nile. It passed into the hands of the British by the treaty of Alexandria, and was deposited in the British Museum, in the year 1802. The inscription is finely cut, and the three different languages can be plainly and distinctly seen. It has an immense value, as may be seen from the fact that it was made a subject of treaty between England and France.

So we might go on, giving examples from this interesting collection, but we must close with a reference to Manetho, an ancient Egyptian writer, who, in a book written centuries before Christ, gives an account of the exodus of the Jews from Egypt. This, like the story of the younger brother, has much Egyptian tradition, and superstition thrown about it, but the essential points of the Bible account are given, and as Mr. Rawlinson, the eminent Egyptian scholar, says, there can be no doubt, but that the sketch was taken in part from the Bible. It should be borne in mind that the story of the younger brother, and the historical sketch by Manetho were both written some time after the date of the Bible record.

THE ASSYRIAN AND BABYLONIAN COLLECTIONS.

Leaving the Egyptian department we enter the gateway of the palace of Sennacherib, and the arrangement of the sculptures, brought from Nineveh is such that we can almost imagine that the shadow has gone back on the dial, and that we are in the bloody city of Assyria, 700 years before Christ. The entrance is guarded on either side by two colossal statues of men-headed, winged bulls. These were excavated by Mr. Layard, and brought at great expense to the British Museum, and set up in the same relative position in which they stood in Nineveh. Two immense lions, winged and men-headed, stand back of these, showing the great gateway to the palace. These pieces of statuary once looked down on Assyrian's kings and warriors as they returned from their war-like expeditions. They saw Sargon, Sennacherib, and Essar-hadden, whose history is so closely connected with the Bible, as they returned in triumph from Palestine.

The records of Egypt unfortunately were for the most part written on perishable papyrus, and only a few of these have escaped destruction, but the records of Assyria and Babylon were engraved on imperishable stone, or written on clay tablets which were then burned, and so became practically the same as stone. As a result we have a great profusion of records, dating back to eight hundred years before Christ. These old records touch the Bible history at many points, and are therefore not only interesting on account of their great age, but because they give such abundant evidence of the truth of the Book of God.

What to notice, that will properly come within the limit of these wanderings, is a question somewhat difficult to decide. Already nearly enough letters have been written to run through the current year. To give all that our note book contains on the Assyrian and Babylonian collections would carry them far into the New Year. We can, therefore, only give part of what we have gathered, and we do this, hoping that some time, in the not distant future, this abundant evidence of the truth of the Bible may be gathered together, and given in such a plain, simple form, that the masses, who do not now have access to them, may read as they run. Such a work we have had in contemplation for some years, and have already put considerable labor upon it. Our hope is that it may come within the reach of all classes of readers, and that it may serve to strengthen faith in the Book of books! From the mass of material in hand we give the following, from the records of Pul, or Tiglath-Pileser, Sargon, Sennacherib, and Essar-Haddon.

We have first an important record inscribed on a marble slab, and remarkably well preserved. The characters are clearly cut, and easy to be distinguished. It contains in bas-relief a representation of the surrender of a city. The inscription sets forth that Pul or Tiglath-Pileser conquered Palestine, and that Menahem, king of Israel paid tribute to him, and that this sculpture was made by order of, and for, the Assyrian king. Turn to 2 Kings 15: 19 and read the Bible account of this incident. "And Pul, the king of Assyria, came against the land: and Menahem gave Pul a thousand talents of silver, that his hand might be with him to confirm the kingdom in his hand." We read further how the money was raised and paid over to the king of Assyria and how, after this, that he "turned back and stayed not there in the land."

The same king further records his conquest of Judea, and that Ahaz paid tribute to him; a full account of this record may be read in 2 Kings 16: 5, 9.

We examine next the records of Sargon who reigned B. C. 721. The only place that this king's name is mentioned in the Bible is in the prophecy of Isaiah 20: 1: "In the year that Tartan came unto Ashdod, (when Sargon the king of Assyria sent him,) and fought against Ashdod, and took it." Many Bible critics found fault with this isolated statement, and announced that it was an historical error, but here is an inscription that quiets forever this criticism. It is found in the annals of Sargon, and sets forth the fact that he made war against Ashdod and took it. The same king finally took Samaria, and carried away the children of Israel into captivity, distributing them among the cities of Assyria, and filled their homes with Assyrians. The record of this event is found in the annals of Sargon, and the following translation is by Dr. Sayce: "The city of Samaria I besieged, and captured, 27,290 people dwelling in it, I carried captive. Fifty chariots in the midst of them I arranged, and the rest of them I took possession of. My general over them I appointed, and the taxes paid by the former king I fixed upon them. The Tamudi, Ibadidi, Hayapa, remote Arabians dwelling in Bari, whom Akker and Sapria knew not of in the service of Asser my Lord. I destroyed them, and the rest of them I removed, and in the city of Samaria I placed." In connection with this translation of the inscription of Sargon, found in Nineveh a few years ago, and now in the Assyrian collection here, read 2 Kings 17, fifth verse, and you will find how the records agree, as well as the origin of the Samaritans. Of course, in reading allowance must be made for the difference in the Hebrew and Assyrian, in the matter of the names of the cities referred to.

We have space left for translations from the clay cylinder of Sennacherib, which was found in the old library at Nineveh, and is now in the Assyrian collection at this place. We had the privilege of examining it. It is six-sided in form, and each side is covered with the inscription in the cuneiform Assyrian characters, and sets forth the history of the campaigns of Sennacherib, king of Nineveh. The first lines are laudatory of the Old King himself who was by no means modest in sounding his own praise. Hear the great boaster: "Sennacherib, the great king, the powerful king, the king of Assyria, the king unrivaled, the pious monarch, the worshiper of the great gods, the protector of the just; the lover of the righteous, the noble warrior, the valiant hero, the first of all kings."

After reciting other campaigns he gives an account of the third,—"In my third campaign to the land of Syria I went," then follows the account of the subjugation of Tubal, Sidon, Sarepta, Ashdod, Edom Beth Ammen, Ascalon, Joppa, and finally the siege of Jerusalem. The record continues, "And Hezekiah, king of Judah, who had not bowed down at my feet. . . He himself, like a bird in a cage, inside Jerusalem, his royal city, I shut him up: siege towers against him I constructed. . . I diminished his kingdom. . . He himself, Hezekiah the fearful splendor of my majesty had overwhelmed him. The workmen, soldiers, and builders whom for the fortification of Jerusalem, his royal city he had collected within it, now carried tribute, and with thirty talents of gold, 800 talents of silver . . . unto Nineveh, my royal city, after me he sent; and to pay tribute and do homage he sent his envoy." In connection read 2 Kings 18: 13–16, and making due allowance for the boasting record and the tendency to exaggerate, on the part of the Assyrian, we have a remarkable agreement of the inscription with the Bible account.

These records of the past, written on stone, have never been tampered with. They were placed in the library at Nineveh, and five hundred years before Christ the city was destroyed, and so complete was its destruction that Alexander the Great fought a battle over its ruins, three hundred years later, without knowing that the city of Nineveh once stood at that place. After twenty-three centuries had gone by, the ruined city was excavated, and the buried library gave up its treasure. Over twenty thousand tablets, cylinders and pieces of sculpture have been taken from the ruins. These are now undergoing careful study and are being translated so that we can read them. Others still lie hidden away at Nineveh, and will, in due time, be recovered, and we may expect more evidence of the truth of the Bible, as the buried cities give up their records. May not this be God's way of refuting the tide of infidelity that has been sweeping over the land? Every honest man will carefully examine the evidences, and a careful and unprejudiced examination of them will convince the skeptical, if they are honest, that the Bible is GOD'S BOOK, and that it is THE TRUTH.

Echoes from the Highway.

Our quarterly council at Tropico occurred Nov. 14. Everything passed off in the spirit of love and union. Eld. P. S Myers became associate elder in the congregation, having joined our number by letter. Our rule is here, as in many other places, especially on the Pacific Coast States, Colorado, etc., that all elders, coming in and handing in their letters, stand equal with all other elders that may belong to the congregation then, or may come in after. Why one ordained elder should stand in any way superior to another in the same office we cannot see reason or Gospel for. As a result envyings or trouble that might arise by any method different from ours, are kept out. The church, by that method, is clearly taught that Christ only is the Head of the church, and we are all members thereof, that the Gospel is the ruling power, and elders are only servants of servants, and that each one only stands as a numeral, having only one yes, or one no, the same as any other of the members of the body of Christ.

The mission in Los Angeles seems to be getting a footing. The brethren and sisters that have it in charge seem to be earnest in their work. We just learned of a minister of the Congregational church who was led, by reading a Brethren's tract, found in one of the public parks, to the place of meeting, and now wants to unite with the church. Yes, the Tract Work is like flashing lightning,—no telling where it will strike Go on, brethren, push the work and let the spirit of prayer go with every tract sent out.

Church work here is going on in the even tenor of the way. Members are still coming in and settling down.

My attention has just been called, by some of the railroad men, to an imposition on the generosity of railroad officials by a certain man of Chicago, or late of that place (once a brother), who is claiming to belong to the German Baptist church, and is now operating in a land scheme in Arizona. Look out, brethren! Don't be too credulous of everything you hear these days. Investigate! Be sure you are right, then go ahead!

I neglected to mention in the proper place that brethren John Magie and Aaron Wolfe were elected as our delegates to represent the Tropico congregation at our District Meeting, to be held at Lordsburg. J. S. Flory.

From the Bethel Church, Holt Co., Mo.

Some of our members have moved away during the past few months; among them several of our ministers. Bro. C. H. Brown, of Brewster, Kans., came to us about Aug. 15, and held a series of meetings which seemed to greatly revive the church. We then decided to locate Bro. Brown here to preach for us.

We held our quarterly council Sept. 4, which was well attended. Eld. Samuel Shirkey, of Ray Co., Mo., was with us and preached two evenings. The second evening one was made willing to take upon himself the yoke, and requested, if practicable, to be baptized that night yet.

On the day following, Sept. 26, we held our love-feast, which was well attended, both from home and abroad. Ministers from abroad were brethren S. Shirkey, D. D. Sell, B. F. Flory and J. H. Miller. The church is in union, and we know of none present who did not participate in the ordinances. We pray it may continue so, and that the light of the Bethel church may be seen by all around us.

On Sunday we held an election for a minister and also for four deacons. The lot for minister fell upon our beloved brother, David Hildebrand, an exemplary member, full of zeal for the Master's cause. For deacons, brethren —— Sheets, John Andes, John A. Miller and M. J. Bennett were chosen.

Our elder, S. Shirkey, of Ray County, being near us at the time, called a council for Nov. 19, at which peace and union seemed to be the prevailing sentiment. It is gratifying to know that we are again on the way to prosperity. We ask an interest in the prayers of the Brotherhood.

Bro. Brown arrived about Nov. 1, and began a series of meetings on the evening of Nov. 19. The meetings are still in progress at present, and much interest is manifested in them.

Love-feasts and Election Meeting.

Brick Church, Floyd, Va.—Oct. 3, 1891, at 4 P. M., the members met in a love-feast capacity, upon which occasion 274 members surrounded the tables. Bro. W. B. Naff officiated. The order among the outsiders was not so good as it might have been, yet the members enjoyed the feast very much.

Mt. Nebo, Carroll, Va.—Oct. 10 the writer and C. D. Hylton met at 4 P. M. with the isolated members of Mt. Nebo to hold a love-feast with them, at which time twenty-two members communed. Bro. C. D. Hylton officiated. We had good order in the house, and, surely, it was a feast indeed for those members in their isolated condition.

Pleasant Valley, Floyd, Va.—Oct. 17 the brethren and sisters met at 4 P. M. to hold their love-feast, at which 148 members communed. Bro. Harvey Weddle officiated. The order in the house was the best that I ever saw at that church, but outside whiskey caused the death of one man.

Smith's River, Patrick, Va.—Oct. 24, at 4 P. M., the members of that place met for love-feast exercises, and sixty-two members were seated around the tables. The writer officiated. The order was as good as could have been wished for, both inside and out, with a single exception. On Sunday, at the close of the meeting, we sang the hymn, "Jesus Grant us all a Blessing." The brethren and sisters, as well as the congregation, certainly did appreciate the meeting.

Union Burk's Forks, Floyd, Va.—Nov. 14 was set apart to hold an election for a minister and a deacon. The election resulted in the choice of Joseph Hylton for minister, and Francis M. Weddle for deacon. They and their wives were duly installed. This congregation was taken from the old Brick church, and left with one elder and a minister. May the grace of God help them to let their light shine before the world!

There has been quite an ingathering into the church this fall, and the interest is still good for more to come. I am still laboring in the field.

From Lancaster, Pa.

It is, perhaps, not known to all, that the brethren, here in the city, have formed themselves into a church, to be known as the "Lancaster church." Bro. S. R. Zug, of Mastersonville, was (at an appointed council-meeting, by our former elder), chosen as our present elder.

At a later council, Bro. S. R. Zug being present, brethren John H. Bushong, Benj. Evans, and J. G. Kline, were chosen Trustees; J. H. Bushong, Treasurer; and A. J. Evans, Clerk.

We are few in number, but strong in faith. What we need is a resident minister. We are in hopes that the Lord will soon supply us with one. By a present arrangement with neighboring Districts we will have preaching every two weeks. It should be every week. Our city is large, and there is a great field for the Master. Remember us in your prayers, and that the work may be prospered, and God be glorified. A. J. Evans.

Nov. 23.

From Rushville, Va.

We commenced a series of meetings Nov. 12, at the Montezuma school-house, and continued until the night of Nov. 25. The meetings were conducted by our home brethren. Eld. Jacob Thomas and J. W. Click did the preaching. We had good congregations, and the best of order. Good attention was given to the Word preached. Our heart was made glad to see so many come out on the Lord's side and join in with the people of God. Fourteen precious souls were buried with Christ in baptism. To-day, Nov. 26, we held our thanksgiving meeting at Beaver Creek. We were ably addressed by our elder, Jacob Thomas. After meeting at the church, we repaired to the water-side where baptism was attended to. Those baptized were all young in years. May God, in his mercy, keep them from the evil of this world. Others were near the kingdom, and we hope they may come soon! William T. Eavey.

Visit to the Frederick City Love-feast.

Husband and I left home on the evening of Nov. 18 to attend the feast at Frederick, where we arrived at 5: 45 P. M., just as the brethren and sisters commenced the ordinances of feet-washing. Through the kindness of Bro. Fahrney we were seated at the tables of the Lord, in the side-room, where two tables had been prepared, as the tables were full in the main room. I noticed the familiar faces of Eld. E. W. Stoner and Bro. Price, of Waynesborough. This being my first visit at Frederick, I must say I was well pleased. Quite a number of members communed. Eld. E. W. Stoner officiated. One thing commendable was this, that the work did not fall on a few, but the members took an active part. The Brethren have a very comfortable church, arranged conveniently for those services. Through the kindness of Dr. Fahrney we enjoyed a very comfortable night's rest. Next morning a number of members went to the church, where we had short services, and then breakfast. We had services at 9 A. M., to accommodate those taking the different trains. Bro. H. C. Early spoke from John 11: 25. He spoke in a touching way and we cannot help but believe, that the word will be as "bread cast upon the waters." We arrived home on the evening of Nov. 21. Leah T. Miller.

Thanksgiving Offering.

The western part of the Pine Creek church, Ind., met on Thanksgiving Day for preaching. The congregation was small, there having been preaching at another point in the district on the same day. Although the congregation was small, we can say it was well for us to be there. Our elder, Amos Peters, preached for us, taking his text from 1 Chron. 29: 10–14. He preached with power, making us all feel that it is more blessed to give than to receive. Being richly fed with the good things of God, and having read Bro. D. L. Miller's articles in the Messenger, telling of the many poor, starving souls in Denmark and Sweden, made all present feel like giving a little Thanksgiving offering. At the close of the meeting a call was made, resulting in the collection of $18. Both old and and young, and even those who are not members, gave something. Since God has so bountifully blessed us with plenty and to spare, truly it should make us feel like giving something to the poor, starving souls in Denmark, both for their spiritual, as well as their temporal welfare. God will bless the cheerful giver! J. M. CRIPE.

Walkerton, Ind., Nov. 27.

From Peyton, Colo.

BY request of brother and sister Barnhart, of Peyton, Colo., we began a series of meetings on the night of Nov. 12, and continued until the 19th, holding nine meetings in all. We would have continued longer, but were called away by a letter from home. Peyton is a small station on the Rock Island Railroad, thirty-five miles east of Colorado Springs. None of our Brethren ever preached there before, and there are some living there who never before heard of such a people. The congregations were small, but very attentive. One man and wife, who had never before heard of the Brethren, said to me they believed we had the Truth, and would give the matter their serious consideration. Several expressed a desire to unite with us, if they could be received on their baptism, having been baptized by immersion. All expressed a desire that we should return. Bro. Barnhart and family are quite anxious to have regular appointments once a month, but as they are in limited circumstances they do not feel able to pay the expense of a minister from so great a distance. (We are over one hundred miles distant.) They would like to have a minister locate there, and we believe that here is an opening where good may be done. They have a good country, free from the hot winds, so prevalent and destructive in Eastern Colorado. Any one, looking for a location where land is cheap, may profit to his advantage to see that country. Any Brethren (especially ministers) passing over the Rock Island Railroad to or from Colorado Springs, are invited to stop off and, by addressing Jacob Barnhart, Peyton, Colo., they will be met at station, and receive a warm welcome from brother and sister Barnhart, who have the cause at heart. D. H. WEAVER.

Longmont, Colo.

From Huntingdon, Pa.

As there was important business to be attended to in connection with the Communion services, the committee on ordination was called on. The meeting was interesting, impressive and characterized by a good working spirit from the beginning to the end. At 2 o'clock a goodly number of brethren and sisters assembled at the house of Bro. H. B. Brumbaugh, and five applicants presented themselves for baptism. We next proceeded to the "Blue Juniata" where the rite of baptism was administered in that historic stream. We then repaired to the Chapel for examination services, after which the necessary explanations were given, and we then proceeded to some very important work. Bro. W. J. Swigart was ordained to the eldership; J. B. Brumbaugh and Frank Holsopple were advanced to the second degree of the ministry; Bro. M. G. Brumbaugh was elected to the ministry; and Otis Brumbaugh, Joseph Saylor and David Swayne to the deaconship.

The brethren advanced were held in such esteem by the church that there was not a dissenting voice, and among those elected there was a remarkable unanimity, especially the ministers. The brethren and sisters who were thus set forward to these places of trust and usefulness in the church, appreciate their responsibilities in their new relation and accepted their offices with due solemnity. It was at once both interesting and impressive to see these brethren and sisters, ten in number (one being absent), young in years, bright in intellect, pious and devoted to the cause, receiving, or taking upon themselves, all the different offices of the church. If they are watchful, careful, humble and prayerful, they will become a power for good, and our fathers and mothers in Israel can go to rest in the confidence that their mantle falls upon those who are able to wage the battle on to victory.

After the installation, the tables were served and we proceeded with the services, which bring to the devout the dearest and sweetest of all experiences. The meeting was said to be the largest of the kind ever held in the Chapel.

There are a number of members among the students, also a number of visitors. The members of Huntingdon know how to entertain strangers and make meetings interesting.

The school never was in a more prosperous condition than at present. The Winter Term is the largest in the history of the school. Parents, send your children here to school!

Field Notes.

Nov. 1, by request, I began a series of meetings at the Pleasant Valley church, Floyd Co., Va. I preached at 11 A. M. and 6 P. M, for eight days, to large, attentive congregations. Nov. 6 I went about four miles and preached at 11 A. M., and after services we repaired to the water-side and witnessed the baptism of five. I returned to the church for services at 6 P. M. Next day twenty-seven were baptized and again next day five more were buried by baptism. On account of hoarseness, and other matters that must be attended to by some one, I was compelled to close in the midst of a growing interest, with twenty other applicants for membership, eight of whom had once been members of the church.

I never witnessed a more general revival among the members, and perhaps this accounts for the abundant increase from the Lord. The members, with a few exceptions, forsook their secular matters and filled their places at church. By their presence, attention and prayers they held up the hands of the speaker. When the church gets warm and alive to duty, sinners come flocking home without so much preaching, and in fact preachers become inspired and can really accomplish more than they can in a blizzard.

Nov. 14 I left home for the Fraternity church, in Forsythe County, N. C. I stopped with the Brethren at St. Paul, Va., and remained till Nov. 18, and held four meetings. Then, in company with Bro. Wm. Low, I continued my journey Southward, over the C. F. & Y. V. R. R, to Walnut Cove, N. C., thence over the Roanoke & Southern to Salem, where we were met by Eld. Jerry Barnhart.

We met a small congregation at 7 P. M., at the Fraternity church, where we tried to preach on the faith that pleases God. We preached here nine times, at 11 A. M. and 7 P. M. On Monday, Nov. 23, we baptized five young ladies, after which we engaged in a love-feast, which was very much enjoyed by us. The church here, for the first time, washed feet by the single mode and seemed well pleased with it.

This church is under the care of Eld. Jerry Barnhart, who, on account of ill health, expects soon to move back to Virginia. The Brethren regret very much to give him up, as they have many foes to encounter. Brethren J. F. Robertson and Rufus Faw are ministers in the second degree.

Nov. 24 I started for home and arrived at Mt. Airy, the terminus of the railroad, just at dark, and not having any conveyance I walked ten miles that night, in order to get to my buggy, so as to reach home next day.

During the month of November I have traveled over 200 miles and preached twenty-eight times. I feel to praise God for his wonderful kindness towards me. C. D. HYLTON.

The Aged Persons, Infirm and Orphans' Home of the State of Kansas.

I WISH to call the attention of the churches of North-eastern Kansas to the fact that the Trustees of the Aged Persons, Infirm and Orphans' Home, at their last meeting decided to again solicit all the churches in Kansas, in order to raise the necessary funds to build suitable buildings for the Home. It is my duty to inform the churches of the North-eastern District of Kansas, that they may look for one of the brethren, appointed for that purpose, namely, George Wise, I. H. Crist and T. G. Wine, to call on them. They will kindly ask you to help, and we hope and trust that all of our brethren and sisters will do something in this good work.

We would advise our members to be ready when the brethren come. Receive them kindly and give them as the Lord has prospered you and we know you will receive your reward. It is a free-will offering, and no one is compelled to do anything.

I have received a letter from Bro. Enoch Eby who has solicited a part of the South-western District of Kansas. The members in that District have donated liberally to this good work. We hope that our brethren and sisters will do likewise in the North-eastern District of Kansas.

Bridgewater College Notes.

THANKSGIVING Day was observed by public worship, in the afternoon, in the College Chapel. Bro. S. F. Sanger delivered an able discourse from the words, "He hath not dealt so with any nation." Ps. 147: 20.

Many are looking forward with anxiety to the first special Bible Term of Bridgewater College.

The fine autumn weather has been very favorable for continued meetings, and our surrounding congregations have been taking advantage of the same. "Good meetings," and "meetings, productive of good results," we hear from the different congregations. May Zion continue to prosper!

Nov. 27, 1891.

From the English River Congregation, Keokuk County, Iowa.

Nov. 8 we closed our series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Wm. Hipes, in North English. While there were no immediate accessions to the church, we believe the members were much strengthened and built up in the most holy faith. The attendance and attention were generally good throughout.

Nov. 22 was our regular quarterly council at the South church. All business was disposed of in a Christian spirit. Among other important work, was the appointing for one year, of a brother and sister, as solicitors for General Mission Work, and likewise two others for the Tract Work. Arrangements were also made by which the poor will be provided for this winter. We granted a certificate of membership to Bro. G. S. Wine and wife, who moved to Missouri a few days previous. We felt loth to part with them, as they united with the church here, and labored among us, and for some years in the ministry, but our loss will be others' gain. PETER BROWER.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

Frontier, Mich.—The brethren and sisters of the Silver Creek church, Williams Co., Ohio, are in the midst of a series of meetings at the Hickory Grove meeting-house. The services are conducted by Bro. Wm. Dessenberg, of Ashland, Ohio. May he be the means of bringing some poor souls to Christ! The meeting will continue two weeks, after which, if the Lord will, we will hold some meetings in the west end of the church. —Noah Long, Nov. 22.

Peabody, Kans.—Nov. 17 Bro. A. Hutchison came to us and began a series of meetings. He remained with us until Nov. 28, preaching, in all, nineteen sermons, which were very much appreciated. As an immediate result one precious soul came out on the Lord's side. We hope he may adorn the profession he has made, that others, seeing his good works, may be constrained to turn in with the offered terms of mercy and be saved. We hope the Lord may bless Bro. Hutchison in the administration of the Word wherever he may go!—Katie Yost, Nov. 17.

Smith River, Va.—Our new meeting-house is a substantial building, put up in a workman-like manner. The situation is a pleasant one, located as it is in a well-to-do neighborhood, and near a river. The General Mission Board donated $200 toward building this house, and the money was well used. Bro. Harvey Weddle was the contractor, and he certainly did his work well.—J. H. Slusher.

Live Oak, Tex.—Dec. 6 we expect Bro. Henry Brubaker to be with us to hold a series of meetings. A few days ago Bro. Snyder and family left for Oklahoma, with the intention of settling there. We regretted to give them up, but trust they may be useful in another part of God's vineyard. We are having very dry weather at present. We have had no rain for over two months. We are all in our usual health, for which we thank the Lord.—J. S. Buckley, Nov. 30.

Jeffersonville, Ill.—The love-feast in the Martin's Creek church, Wayne County, Ill., was held Nov. 14, and was a feast indeed. The attendance was not so large, but good order prevailed. The meeting commenced Nov. 8. Our esteemed brother, J. E. Frederick, from Warren County, Ind., was with us, and held forth the words of Truth to a dying audience with power. There were no accessions to the church, but sinners were warned of the danger to come, and no doubt felt the need of the Lord.—B. F. Stephens.

Hollowtown, Ohio.—The home ministers opened a series of meetings on the evening of Oct. 22. The meetings were largely attended. Many good and lasting impressions were made. On the evening of Oct. 28 four souls came forward and expressed a desire to unite with the children of God, and others seemed almost persuaded to make the noble confession. On the evening of Nov. 1 our meetings closed. The church feels much encouraged, and the desire of the brethren and sisters is that the seed sown may at some time bring forth an abundant harvest.—A. Q. Landess, Nov. 16.

Pigeon Creek, Pa.—The series of meetings at this place (lasting nearly two weeks) closed on Saturday evening, Nov. 21. Bro. G. W. Lowry, from Scullton, Pa, was with us and preached during the entire meeting. Bro. Lowry is not afraid to preach the Whole Truth, and did so in such a way that both saint and sinner were edified and set to thinking. Although none were ready to forsake sin, and follow Jesus, yet we trust that many may reconsider the dangerous road they are traveling, and retrace their steps ere it is too late. May the Lord help us to live as he has commanded us!—Mrs. S. W. Bail.

Shideler, Ind.—We closed our meetings in the Four Mile church, Union Co, on the evening of Nov. 22. During our meetings at this place the weather was very inclement, which militated somewhat against our meeting. We had the pleasure of leading one soul into the liquid stream and burying her in baptism. We closed our meeting at this place sooner than we had intended. On account of sickness in the family at home I returned home Nov. 23. I found my wife, who had been sick, improving. I attended Thanksgiving services in the home church, Nov. 26 The mission cause was remembered, and the sum of $9.84 donated for that purpose. Nov. 28 I started to Hamilton County, Ind., Stony Creek church, to conduct a series of meetings. We arrived the next day, Sunday, in time to be at the forenoon services. At present we are trying, in our weakness, to hold up the banner of our Lord in this part of his vineyard. May the Lord bless his faithful ones every-where!—Geo. L. Studebaker, Dec. 2.

Slate Creek, Kans.—Three were baptized here in November. Good crops have changed men's faces from discontent to brightness. Many see that God is good, some taste that God is good.—I. W. Leatherman, Conway Springs, Kans.

Excursion to California.—Please announce in your paper just going to press that M. M. Eshelman will bring an excursion party over the Santa Fe road to California, leaving Chicago and St. Louis Dec. 29, and Kansas City the morning of Dec. 30. —S. B. Hynes, Los Angeles, Cal.

Girard, Ill.—The West Otter Creek church, Ill., met in council Nov. 28. Considerable business came before the meeting, which was disposed of satisfactorily. An election was held for a minister. Bro. S. B. Miller was chosen by the church. May the Lord bless him in his labors!—Charles Gibson, Nov. 30.

McVeytown, Pa.—On Thanksgiving Day we had preaching in Spring Run church, Mifflin Co., Pa. I think we can do nothing better than to praise God, and when our Rulers ask so reasonable a thing, should we not do it? Then we should not only feel thankful one day, because we are called upon, but every day because it is our duty.—Emma Bollinger.

Nappanee, Ind.—I will say to my friends through the MESSENGER, that the doctor thinks my broken hip is healing or knitting. He thinks that by the Holidays I can be up. I desire the prayers of the brethren and sisters in my behalf. I had intended to spend the winter, laboring for the Master, but was only permitted to hold one series of meetings with the Blue River church. As a result of the meetings eight were baptized.—D. Wysong, Dec. 3.

Naperville, Ill.—Nov. 26 we were permitted to again meet with the brethren and sisters of the Naperville church, Ill. After a few general remarks by the ministers present, some of the members spoke of the fact that we had been bountifully blessed in the season just passed. A general feeling prevailed that something should be done for those not so fortunate,—our Brethren in Denmark and Sweden. A collection was taken, which, in the amount received, compared with the number present, manifested a cheerful giver. For the liberal, God has a blessing!—E. R. Yundt, Mt. Morris, Ill.

Gardner, Kans.—Since my labors in Anderson County, and our feast at home, I held ten meetings near Ottawa. The weather was unfavorable, and dark nights caused small congregations. One was baptized, and several more seemed almost persuaded. We promised to return in February, when, we hope, more will come. There are twenty-five members at that place, without a minister. They are in Eld. Geo. Myers' charge. My next place of labor will be at two outposts in Rice County. During the last two months we have seen thirty buried in baptism. To the Lord be all the praise!—I. H. Crist.

Little Hickory, I. T.—We, as a colony, are en route for Texas. Our number is forty-two, having been re-inforced at Oklahoma City by sister Hay, and her husband and family. This Lord's Day we baptized Mr. Hay in Little Hickory Creek, Chickasaw Nation. We are encamped in a grove of oak timber, and enjoyed preaching to-day at 11 A. M., from 1 Cor. 10: 1-4. A number of the settlers were present at the services. Our camp consists of nine tents and fourteen covered wagons. Nineteen of our company are members of the church. Two large camp-fires furnish warmth, as well as light, for the singing-exercises, with which we while away the hours of the evening.—W. H. Leaman, Nov. 29.

Walnut, Ind.—Nov. 13 the Walnut congregation, Ind., held her Communion, which was most agreeable and inspiring to new zeal and action. On the morning of Nov. 14 the church advanced brethren George Swihart and Edmund Beckner to the second degree of the ministry, and Bro. Aaron Swihart was ordained to the eldership Our refreshing meeting, we hope, will inspire us with fresh vigor and double diligence. Elders J. H. Sellers and Daniel Bock continued meetings for us over Sunday.—A. J. Mow.

Cerro Gordo, Ill.—"In the midst of life we are in death." We were reminded of this fact on our way to Sunday-school Nov. 22. A friend called to us that our brother, Isaac Barnhart, had just crossed over the river of death. Deceased, after eating a hearty breakfast, sat down to read his paper, and passed away without a moment's warning. The funeral services were conducted Nov. 24 by Bro. M. J. McClure. His age was sixty years. To-day we held our Thanksgiving meeting. A collection was taken for the missionary work, which amounted to $16.69. We have an interesting Sunday-school, and also a social meeting. Our teachers' meeting assembles once each week.—E. A. Shively, Nov. 26.

New Haven, Mich.—Oct. 31 the members of the New Haven church met for a love-feast, upon which occasion a goodly number of members from adjoining churches met with us. Bro. J. Felthouse, of Indiana, began a series of meetings on the evening preceding the feast. Many words of refreshment were delivered to us during this meeting. The church felt the need of more help in the office of deacon and Bro. Reuben Yutsey was elected to that work, and properly installed. Our desire and prayer to God is that brother and sister Yutsey may prove a blessing to God and the church in this very important office Bro. Felthouse remained with us until Nov. 16, and did excellent work while among us.—L. D. Bosserman, Nov. 15.

South Beatrice, Nebr.—On Friday evening, Oct. 16, we surrounded the tables of the Lord. About 120 sisters, and about half that number of brethren communed. Some of the dear ones were not at the table, which made us feel sad. Let us so live that we may always be worthy to partake of those life-giving emblems! Ministers present were brethren David Frantz, Aaron Berkeybile, and Archy VanDyke. Bro. Frantz officiated. He is one of our good old brethren who has gone through cold and heat, working for the Master. On Saturday he spoke from John 13: 18, to a large crowd of people. Two young men were baptized. We have quite a number of young members here. May the Lord help us to keep them in the narrow path!—Lydia Dell.

Monmouth, Kans.—The Cherokee church, Kans., held Thanksgiving services at Mount Olive. Services were conducted by brethren Leonard Wolf and Samuel Edgecomb. There was a goodly number in attendance, and the meeting was interesting. The sum of $1.80 was collected for the missionary cause. The members are in love and union —H. Shideler.

River, Ind.—Bro. Galen B. Royer has been preaching for us in the Salimony church nearly one week. Most of the time the weather was quite unfavorable and the nights very dark, but the attendance was very good. The few last evenings our large house was well filled. Last night one came out on the Lord's side. Yesterday was our Thanksgiving meeting; we had a large congregation. A collection was taken up for the poor in Denmark. The sum of $18.50 was raised. Meetings may continue another week. At this writing, 7 A. M., it is snowing quite freely.—Samuel Murray, Nov. 27.

NEDROW.—In the Indian Creek congregation, Westmoreland Co., Pa, Oct. 24, 1891, Bro. Daniel Nedrow, aged 76 years, 4 months and 24 days.

His wife preceded him to the spirit world about eight years ago. He was the father of twelve children, seven sons and five daughters, six of whom preceded him. Those living are all members of the Brethren church. Of the forty four grandchildren eight have passed on before. He was a member of the Brethren church for about forty years. He was a kind and loving father, and leaves four sisters to mourn their loss, but we hope that our loss is his eternal gain.

REYNOLDS—In the same church, Oct. 25, 1891, Anna, wife of James Reynolds, aged 83 years, 1 month and 9 days.

Grandmother Reynolds was a member of the Baptist church for many years. The writer visited her at different times in her lonely hours of extreme suffering, but she was willing to bear all for Christ. Funeral services by the writer in the Lutheran church at Chill.

BOWEN.—In the same church, Oct. 26, 1891, Catharine, wife of friend John Bowen, aged 59 years and 28 days.

Deceased was a member of the German Reformed church, and died very suddenly. Five weeks prior to her death the writer was called upon to solemnize the marriage of her daughter Rosa, when mother, with her children, was happy and in good spirits. Only five weeks later she was laid in a burglar-proof vault, a large crowd witnessing the scene. Many hearts sympathized to see mother Bowen laid away in so short a time. Funeral services by Rev. Noll and the writer to a large concourse of people.
M. H. SHUTT.

SELLERS.—In the Green Spring congregation, July 9, 1891, of diphtheria, Bessie Blain Sellers, daughter of Bro. David and sister Caroline Sellers, aged 5 years and 8 days.

SELLERS.—In the same church, July 28, 1891, Willis Edgar, only son of the same parents, aged 1 year, 8 months and 19 days.

MARY E. MILLER.

BARNHART.—In Cerro Gordo, Ill., Nov. 22, 1891, Bro. Isaac Barnhart, aged 60 years, 5 months and 24 days.

Deceased was born near Camden, Preble County, Ohio, May 28, 1831. He was married to Susley Bond, at the home of her mother, Emily Bond, in Randolph County, Indiana, Aug. 14, 1859. Soon after their marriage they moved to Brown County, Illinois, and in 1869 to Piatt County where they have since resided, the greater part of the time in Cerro Gordo. Unto them were born six children.

In 1854 he united with the Brethren church, of which he has since been a faithful member. The associations, thus afforded, were, to him, the source of highest joy and his dearest wish while living, was for the welfare of the church to which he belonged. When he arose in the morning, he appeared as well as usual, took breakfast with his family, after which he took up a paper and began to read. About fifteen minutes later his son, Joseph, came into the room and noticed something unusual in his appearance. His head was resting on the back of his chair, his face just showing signs of the last struggle. The family was called and medical aid summoned, but ere it came his spirit had taken its flight. The cause of his death was pronounced to be heart trouble.

Funeral services conducted by Eld. M. J. McClure from Rev. 21: 4. * * *

GIOWER.—In Vinton, Benton Co., Iowa, Nov. 19, 1891, our aged sister, Anne Giower, aged 81 years and 12 days.

PETER FORNEY.

MILLER.—In the Manor congregation, Washington Co., Md, Bro. Jacob F. Miller, aged 85 years, 1 month and 7 days.

Bro. Miller was a very faithful and consistent member of the Brethren church, a man of marked ability, a great reader, an easy and pleasing conversationalist, possessed of a good memory, and very familiar with the Holy Scriptures. His Testament showed evidence of frequent use. From it he gathered the True Manna. Services by Bro. David Long and the writer. DANIEL WOLF.

SHAFFER.—In the bounds of the Lower Cumberland church, near Churchtown, Pa., James Addison Shaffer, aged 36 years, 7 months and 16 days.

Deceased leaves a wife and five children to mourn their loss. He was the oldest son of Bro. Ephraim Shaffer, who preceded him to the spirit world a few years ago. Sister Shaffer, his mother, appears to bear up under the sore affliction with Christian fortitude. One brother and four sisters survive him. Deceased died at his home in Lebanon, Pa., where he was employed in the iron mills.

His remains were brought to the home of his mother Nov. 17, and interred at the Churchtown cemetery. Services at the house by Eld. David Neisley and the writer from Ecc. 9: 10. HENRY BRELMAN.

FLORY.—In the Cook's Creek congregation, Rockingham Co., Va, Nov. 6, 1891, Bro. John Flory, aged 59 years, 8 months and 3 days.

Bro. Flory was well known to the Brotherhood. He devoted much of his time to ministerial work both at home and abroad. His pathetic style of preaching peculiarly adapted him to the holding of series of meetings of which he did much during the last few years. In his affliction he was fully resigned to the will of Providence, realizing that his work was ended. Funeral services by the writer and Eld. Jacob Thomas from the words, "For me to live is Christ and to die is gain." S. W. GARBER.

BURKHOLDER.— In Latimore, Adams Co., Pa, March 1, 1891, sister Annie (Knop) Burkholder, aged 83 years, 9 months and 8 days.

C. K. BURKHOLDER.

THOMAS.—In the Marble Furnace church, Adams Co., Ohio, Nov. 23, 1891, Bro. Wm. H. Thomas, aged 59 years, 11 months and 29 days.

He was born in Fayette County, Pa., Nov. 24, 1831. A widow, three sons, and five daughters are left to mourn their loss. He moved to Ohio in 1863, and at that time united with the German Baptist church. He remained a faithful member until his death, holding the office of deacon for eight years. His afflictions were long and severe but he bore all with Christian fortitude, and his last words of consciousness were of his trust in his Savior. Funeral services by the writer from Heb. 11: 10 ALBERT P. REED.

MAST.—At Holmeville, Nebr., Nov. 17, 1891, of paralysis, Bro. Samuel Mast, aged 70 years, 1 month and 3 days.

Bro. Samuel was born near Meyerstown, Pa, Oct. 14, 1821, and was married to Barbara Apple, in Montgomery County, Ohio, Jan. 20, 1853. Five children were born to them,—three sons and two daughters All of them were present at the funeral.

Bro. Mast was stricken with paralysis while riding his horse on the streets of our little village. One of our Brethren chanced to see him fall and hastened to his assistance. He survived the stroke only about twelve hours, and apparently retained consciousness until the last, but was unable to speak after he was stricken.

Sister Mast, the bereaved widow, has been suffering for some time with an injured limb,—the effects of a fall about two months ago, which caused her a great deal of suffering. Under these circumstances the shock of her late affliction was almost more than she could bear. She is in need of the prayers and sympathy of the faithful.

Bro. Mast was noted for integrity and fair dealing, and in his death the church loses an influential member. Funeral services by the Brethren at his late residence. Discourse from Heb. 13: 14. M. L. SPIRE.

LYON.—In the bounds of the May Hill church, Adams Co., Ohio, July 7, 1891, William S. Lyon, aged 67 years, 11 months and 23 days.

Deceased was the son of Eld. Michael Lyon and only brother of Thomas D. Lyon, of Hudson, Ill. He was born in Hardy County, Va., and united with the Brethren church early in life. We trust he died in the triumphs of a living faith. On Sunday, July 5, he attended church three times during the day, and in the evening retired early. In about an hour he was found unconscious. He lived until the morning of July 7, when his spirit was released from suffering and borne to heaven, to meet the dear ones gone before.

Almost seven years ago, in the quiet of a winter evening, just as the western sun was sinking out of sight, mother bade us meet her in heaven and quietly passed "over the river." Father entered the Golden City in the morning, to join that innumerable throng, that have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Two brothers and two sisters are left. My sincere prayer is that we may all meet and form an unbroken family in our Heavenly Father's kingdom. CYRINUS A. GUSTIN.

Deceased was born April 22, 1877. Sister Anna was an innocent, God-fearing young Christian, loved and respected by a large circle of relatives and friends. Though taken in the bloom of youth she has left impressions that will long be remembered and cherished. A BUSY TIME AT MT. MORRIS.

The students in attendance during the Fall Term remained, and 89 new ones entered at the beginning of the Winter Term. Others will enter Jan. 1, some to remain three months and return to the farm; others to remain six months. Add to this number the ministers and Sunday-school workers who are coming (Jan. 1), and you may know there will be considerable stir in our little town.

Young people living on the farm cannot do much during the winter. By spending three months in our Commercial Department, such may secure what may be worth thousands to them in after life. We are more particularly gratified, however, to know that so many ministers are coming, some of whom are sent by their churches. This is a step in the right direction. We are certain that no church can send a faithful minister here to attend our Bible Term one month without reaping many times the amount invested within the next year. We hope other churches will avail themselves of this opportunity to help their ministers and members. The Lord direct all to his glory and the purity and prosperity of the church. Write us

—: OF :—
ELD. JAMES QUINTER.

THIS is a neatly-printed and well-bound volume of 426 pages, containing a well-written biographical sketch of Eld. James Quinter and forty of his sermons.

The biographical part will be found quite interesting, instructive and impressive. No one can read an account of Bro. Quinter's life without feeling deeply and favorably impressed. The work shows how a poor orphan boy, by hard work, and faithfulness to his religious convictions, rose step by step, until he reached a field of usefulness and honor as broad as the Nation itself. Though dead, his good deeds and the impressive examples in piety, learning and simplicity will follow him for generations to come.

The Sermon Department contains many of his choice sermons, which will prove exceedingly interesting and profitable reading to all, and especially to our ministers and isolated members. We feel that this book will fill a long-felt want in our Brotherhood. Price, post-paid, $1.25.

Don't forget the Bible session, to be held in the Normal College during February. All are invited. Make your preparations now. We will try and make it pleasant and profitable for all who may come.

IN distributing your Christmas gifts, don't forget the poor. Make your sunshine in the clouded hearts and the blessings of the poor will fall upon you. If you give only to those from whom you expect the same back again, you have not given at all. The sun does not shine on the earth that its light and heat may be reflected back to itself again, but it shines to make the cold warm and the dark light. Let us do a little of this kind of shining on the coming Christmas, and we are sure that many cold hearts can be made warm and many dark places be made light.

THE EBB AND FLOW.

THAT time is passing and with it we are tending onward, is known to us all. But while this is so, we do not all seem to realize it, unless some special events and circumstances impress it upon us. With the every-day affairs of life we become so accustomed that we do not notice the passing of time. There are some things that especially remind us that we are mortal and that our days for the life we now live are growing shorter.

Kind reader, have you ever stood on the ocean beach and watched the ebb and flow of the tide? If you did, were you not impressed as you never were before? Did it not, somehow, make you feel your mortality, and that, like the ebbing tide, your life was passing, passing away?

There are seasons when everything about us seems to say, 'Flow on, flow on!" With us it is now the flow,—the incoming tide. Wave after wave over-measures itself and step after step we recede to give room. We are filled with the fullness of things and are made to feel, though we forget, that there is an end of this fullness. Thus we move on until, at last, a point is reached where, like Joshua's sun, there is a stand-still. We hear the voice, "Thus far shalt thou go and no further." It is our time of silence. We stop, we think, and as we do this the receding commences. The flowing is over and we now feel the ebbing. We before had been counting from the beginning, but now we look at the other end and count the other way. Instead of the number growing greater it is now growing less, and the thought forces itself upon us, "How many more?"

When the year 1891 was ushered in, it was all fullness. Every-where were seen evidences of youthful gladness. It was the "flow" of the year. Even the aged pilgrim, as he leaned upon his staff, imagined the flow of youthful blood, because it was New Year and everything seemed new. The tide of days continued to flow and the number to increase until the summit was reached. Then the backward look as a review, perhaps a long and sad sigh at what was seen, and the forward look only to see that the tide was at a stand and ready to ebb.

First were the icy fetters of winter loosened, followed by the resurrection of springtime's beauties. Then came the harvest, in blessings so abundant that room was not found for them all, and from many grateful hearts went up the glad-some expression of appreciation, "My cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life." It is so much easier to say this when the tide is full and the sun of prosperity is shining from a cloudless sky, than when it is ebbing towards the mist of evening.

Yet, it is a beautiful thought that in the ebbing comes the time of gathering, storing away and enjoying, and in this season we now are, and though the ebbing is well-nigh done, there is light in the evening. The Good Father has most graciously thrown in Christmas-time, with all its joyful and hope-brightening attendants, to tide us over the last ebbing into the flow of the New Year.

Fellow-pilgrim, we have been with you in the flowing fullness. We have stood by your side on the summit and, with you, taken the backward and the forward look. At the ebbing of the tide with you, we turned our faces eveningward, and as Christmas morn shall break in upon this ebb-tiding world, with you we shall unite in praising God and saying, "Peace on earth and good will to men." Yes, with all our heart we say, "The peace of God be with you."

But as is the flow and ebb of the year, so is it with life. With many of us the flow is past. We have stood on the meridian height and are now ebbing out the ever-shortening side. How is it with us? What has been our time of fullness and what shall the end of our ebbing be? Is there a Christmas tide in it to spur us onward to the crown that can only be found and enjoyed when the flowing and ebbing is over? Will it be light in the evening, and the coming morning to us be glorious? It may be, yea, it must be! We ought not, —we must not,—miss the unsearchable riches, purchased for us by the Son of God. Like our fathers of old, let us have respect to the reward.

A few more thoughts as a closing, and we are done. As intimated before, the year has been one of blessings from beginning to ending. With physical blessings our barns and store-houses have been filled to fullness. In our land, from every-where comes the gladsome news, "Enough and to spare."

The "spare" just now impresses us. What are we doing with it? With this, at least, will we be liberal? The Lord's cause needs it, and "the poor," the Master has said, "will always be with you," and you can do them good when you will. Both of these fields, and many others, will be means of grace to us if we properly use them. If the widow, out of her living, gave all she had, surely we, of our abundance, should give liberally.

And as to spiritual blessings, we surely have not been forgotten. To the church, the now ebbing year has been one of peace and reasonable prosperity, and whatever lack there may have been in bringing souls to Christ, has not been from any shortness on the part of God, but the fault has been ours as our possibilities have been great,—nothing to hinder, but much to encourage. As the year closes, it will be well for us to ask ourselves if we have done what we could. Have we been faithful stewards and used well that which has been entrusted to us? If we have, the ebbing out of the old year and the flowing in of the new, will be a most happy one from the evening to the morning. During the year we have tried to feel the heavy responsibilities resting upon us, and through the pen have endeavored to say only such things as would be be edifying and for the upbuilding of the cause which we love and for which the greater part of our life has been spent. We are now conscious that our tide is on the ebb and that what is yet to be done must be done with our might. So, Lord, help us to do, that, when the Christmas of our life may come, it may be a time of rejoicing, in anticipation of the blessed new year, that will dawn on the other shore. Wishing all of you, dear patrons, a happy Christmas and a prosperous New Year, we now say, "Farewell," till we meet again.

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

THE OLD YEAR DYING.

Good Night.

Good night, to all on earth below,
My time is up, and I must go,
In silent shades forever dwell,
While rolling years their cycle tell.

A stranger here twelve months ago,
To every one on earth below,
With rapid wings I daily ran,
To every home, in every land.

The darkness I have chased away,
Which made me friends from day to day,
Each rising sun has made you glad,
This makes my parting loth, and sad.

Before I go I want to tell
Some things, that to the race befell,
As I surveyed the earth around,
All o'er its wide extended bound.

I've seen the race on every side
Of life, that flows from human tide,
The high, the low, the rich, the poor,
From hovel, to the mansion's door.

I've seen the rich in royal state,
With sumptuous fare, they daily ate,
Pass by the poor, in lofty pride,
When for their daily bread they cried.

I've seen while here on earth below
Millions fall, both high, and low,
And millions more are suffering now,
Who soon at death's cold shrine must bow.

I've seen the young and tender wife,
Struck down with death, in bloom of life,
The husband too, so fond and dear,
Torn from his wife and children here

I've seen the sweet and tender rose
In mother's lap, in sweet repose,
Or prattling soft with angel breath,
Laid low with pale and cruel death.

I've seen the proud, the rich, the gay
Brought low, as cold in death they lay,
And laid away in pomp, and pride:
The poor were borne to Father's side

I'll leave you now, and go my way,
I've more to tell some future day,
Of wicked deeds, though covered o'er,
Will then appear as ne'er before.

Of deeds of love, and mercy too,
The world thereof had never knew;
God bless the pure, who walk in light,
Once more to all, we say, Good Night.

SALMAGUNDI.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

In the Philadelphia mint there is a contrivance on the floor for the gathering of the gold dust that floats off during the working of the metal. In this way $80,000 is annually saved. So fragments gathered from many sources, gold-filings from the wealth of great and holy minds, is a rich accession to our intellectual and spiritual store. I have often wished some one had the leisure and ability to give us a weekly column of this kind in the Messenger, or let a score of contributors send in what they find of golden thought, so that the editor has a pile of gold dust to select from.

In my epistle to Elder David Long and family, in No. 37, Page 579, first column, 3rd line from bottom, for moved read MOWED. In 2nd column, 26th line from top, for antepart read ANTEPAST. In 3rd column, 20th line from bottom, for in read us. "Little foxes spoil the vines," and little erratæ lead into large misapprehensions — sometimes.

In No. 39, page 610, Elder Moore has a foot-note regarding sacraments. Webster is a good lexicographer, but is sometimes more theological than critical. His definition, however, of a sacrament, taken in all its bearings, is comprehensive and fair. Elder Moore quotes the following: "A solemn religious ordinance, enjoined by Christ, the Head of the Christian church, to be observed by His followers." Webster adds: "By which their special relation to Him is created." It is in this sense that I said there are two sacraments. I moreover qualified the statement by the words, "strictly counting." There is no impropriety in calling each of the different parts of the Lord's Supper a sacrament, and yet no necessity of severing what Christ has joined together. These two ordinances, Baptism and the Lord's Supper, fully represent "our special relations to God." The holy kiss and anointing with oil, are symbolic of sublime spiritual verities, and are in a sense sacramental, but express nothing that is not included in the two great ordinances that cover all that is in both Christ and the Christian. Oh that we knew what it is to be buried and risen with Christ, and to eat and drink His flesh and blood! Then would we know how to kiss, how to anoint, how to pray, and how to marry, and live the very life of God in the flesh.

THE BOOK OF NATURE.

BY JAMES A. SELL.

Number Two.

(Concluded from last Week.)

From our elevated position the City of Altoona could be dimly seen. The turreted volume of smoke from its industries, and the church spires rising in splendor, and towering far above surrounding objects, awaken interesting thoughts. The toiling masses who labor in these extensive shops, when the busy week is ended, repair to the churches for spiritual enjoyment, and if they properly use their God-given privilege, how happy they can be! So with us all. This world is one of toil. All we are, or can be costs us labor. Those who are looked up to as having brilliant minds, and have made great achievements were the hardest workers.

"The height by great men reached and kept,
Was not attained by sudden flight,
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night."

But when our toil and labor is ended on earth, we can go into the sanctuary—the upper and better one,—and those who "inquire the most into God's temple" here, will doubtless have the greater capacity, and the greater enjoyment there.

As we could see the city dimly, it suggested what we see through faith, symbols and emblems. "Faith is the substance of things hoped for; the evidence of things not seen."

"The want of sight she well supplies,
She makes the pearly gates appear,
Far into distant world she pries
And brings eternal glories near."

When the Savior would institute a rite which is to endure through all time, and keep alive in the hearts of the coming generations the great triumph of the cross, he gave the bread and cup,—sacred emblems,—through which may be dimly, yet truly, seen that Savior "who has borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows."

Symbols are so rich and expressive because they contain so much meaning. When we can look upon trees, plants, flowers, hills and mountains as emblems and poems, they will be clothed in greater beauty, and become more interesting. We read Ps. 48, "Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth is Mount Zion." We were especially impressed with the declaration, "We have thought of thy loving-kindness in the midst of thy temple." We also read Rev. 14. The new song was our leading thought. That new song is the old, old story:

"'Tis sung by the snowy-clad millions who roam
The fields of God's uppermost air,
'Tis lisped by the child in the sunlight of home,
Knelt down by its mother in prayer."

It is new in heaven because all obscurity of the plan of salvation is removed, the song becomes triumphant, commemorative, and all can sing and understand it.

There are scattered over the mountain dwarf pine trees, whose bristly foliage made music sad, yet sweet, as the winds played upon them in sweeping up the forest aisles. Nature is full of unwritten music. All we have to do is place ourselves in proper relation to the elements and they make music, sweet or sad, as our feelings may be. The wind as it plays among the mountains, and roams over land and sea, makes music of "wonderful melodies." Job tells us that when the foundations of the world were laid, the "morning stars sang together." They sing yet.

"In reason's ear they all rejoice,
And utter forth a glorious voice;
Forever singing as they shine,
The hand that made us is divine."

We need not wish ourselves back to the primeval morning to experience the joy and inspiration of this music, for;

"The harp at Nature's advent strung
Has never ceased to play;
The song the stars of morning sung
Has never died away.

The green earth sends her incense up,
From many a mountain shrine;
From folded leaf and dewy cup
She pours her sacred wine.

The mists above the morning rills
Rise white as wings of prayer;
The altar curtains of the hills
Are sunset's purple air.

The winds with hymns of praise are loud,
Or low with sobs of pain,—
The thunder-organ of the cloud
The dropping tears of rain.

With drooping head and branches crossed
The twilight forest grieves,
Or speaks with tongues of Pentecost
From all its sunlit leaves.

The blue sky is the temple's arch,
Its transept earth and air,
The music of its starry march
The chorus of a prayer.

So Nature keeps the reverent frame
With which her years began,
And all her signs and voices shame
The prayerless heart of man."

The road from the depot to the observatory was carpeted on either side with the most beautiful moss, exquisitely wrought. This fine, velvet-like, living carpet, was bestrewn with the falling crimson and golden maple leaves, that mingled their rich colors with the deep evergreen of the moss. It was enticing, and yet we trod upon it, feeling that it was too pure and sacred to be pressed by sinful feet. We attempted several times to pluck it, but it never looked in our hands as it did in its native state. When we would wrest it from its native state we mar its beauty. Just so with the Blessed Book. It is an unfailing, unfading plant, and entices us into the way of purity and virtue, and strews life's rugged way with the radiance of heavenly beauty. "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace." The Bible is truly "a light unto our feet, and a lamp unto our path." But as soon as we begin to pluck or remove any part from its own order, or system, we soil its beauty, and it withers in our hands.

Beauty is a divine element, and we should cultivate it. We find it written on every page in the book of Nature. With a master hand it is painted on earth, sea and sky.

"Why search the wide world every-where
For Eden's unknown ground?—
That garden of the primal pair
May nevermore be found.

But, blest by thee, our patient toil
May right the ancient wrong,
And give to every clime and soil
The beauty lost so long.

Our homestead flowers and fruited trees
May Eden's orchard shame;
We taste the tempting sweets of these
Like Eve without her blame.

And North and South, and East and West,
The pride of every zone,
The fairest, rarest, and the best
May all be made our own.

Its earliest shrines the young world sought
In hill, groves, and in bowers,
The fittest offerings thither brought
Were thy own fruits and flowers.

And still with reverent hands we cull
Thy gifts each year renewed;
The good is always beautiful,
The beautiful is good."

As our train did not leave the summit until late in the evening, we enjoyed a sunset and twilight scene on the mountain top. The sun sank behind a forest which hid its beauty, and we were content to watch its lingering rays as they gilded the slopes. This was the most impressive experience of the day. We have no words that will adequately express our feelings:

"I love thee, twilight! As thy shadows roll,
The calm of evening steals upon my soul,
Sublimely tender, solemnly serene,
Still as the hour, enchanting as the scene.
I love thee, twilight! for thy gleams impart
Their dear, their dying influence to my heart,
When o'er the harp of thought thy passing wind
Awakens all the music of the mind,
And joy and sorrow, as the spirit burns
And hope and memory sweep the chords by turns,
While contemplation on seraphic wings,
Mounts with the flame of sacrifice, and sings.
Twilight! I love thee; let thy glooms increase
Till every feeling, every pulse is peace."

As the rays of the sun withdrew, the neighboring hills and dells were clad in a dusky robe, which deepened into the somber hues of darkness, and a starry curtain was hung over all. Here the curtain falls, and the beauties which afforded us the day's pleasure are seen no more.

"So fades the vision of the sky,
The golden water pales
And over all the valley land
A gray-winged vapor sails.
I go the common way of all;
The sunset fires will burn
The flowers will blow, the river flow
When I no more return;
No whisper from the mountain pine
Nor lapping stream shall tell
The stranger, treading where I tread
Of him who loved them well.
But beauty seen is never lost
God's colors all are fast;
The glory of the sunset heaven
Into my soul has passed,—
A sense of gladness unconfined
To mortal date or clime;
As the soul liveth it shall live
Beyond the years of time.
Beside the mystic asphodels
Shall bloom the home-born flowers,
And new horizons flush and glow
With sunset hues of ours."

So is our life. We come forth in the morning, joyous and happy, and mount up to the highest point, and then the shadows begin to lengthen, and soon the closing scenes of mortality come. O, that we may all so live that our departure will be as peaceful, unruffled and beautiful as this autumn sunset, and in the great eternity stand with those on the glassy sea who are crowned with the bright laurels of glory, and, amidst the glory of ten thousand sunsets, admire and enjoy the brighter fields and lovelier landscapes in the home of peace and song.

"And sometime when the daylight is ended
And the duties he gave me are done
I shall watch at life's western windows
The gleam of its setting sun.
I shall, asleep in the twilight,
As I never have slept before
To dream of the beautiful city
Till I waken to sleep no more.
There shall fall on my restless spirit
A hush, O, so wondrously sweet,
And I shall cross over the river
To rest at the Master's feet!"

CHIPS FROM THE WOKK-HOUSE.

BY DANIEL VANIMAN.

"For I mean not that other men be eased, and ye burdened: but by an equality, that now at this time, your abundance may be a supply for their want, that their abundance also may be a supply for your want; that there may be equality."—2 Cor. 8: 13, 14.

REASON, common sense, and the principles of justice, as well as the Gospel, all teach that, so much as possible, the Lord's work should be carried forward on the principle of equality, and not by easing some and burdening others, as is so clearly set forth in the above Scriptures. In former days much inequality existed among good, honest people, simply because they were not taught the principles of equality. Without stopping to think or reason over the subject, honest, kind-hearted brethren have thoughtlessly eased some, and burdened others, without ever thinking or reasoning over the situation at all.

Upward of thirty years ago, when the writer was quite young in the church he had occasion, while away in another State, in company with an old brother, who owned many thousands of dollars worth of property, to make a business trip where staying over night somewhere was necessary. The old brother, being somewhat acquainted in that part of the State, suggested that we start in time to reach the home of an old preacher with whom he had become somewhat acquainted. By traveling some out of our way we reached the home of the preacher in time to put up for the night. We found the old sister nearly blind, with a large family to care for, and visible marks of poverty and hardships were to be seen all around. After our company of three, and a team, had been cared for, as best they could, we left next morning without leaving anything to make things equal,—did not even think that far, because we had not been taught to think on that line, yet this was a clear case of easing us and burdening others. The old minister and wife have long since gone to their reward, and the author of these Chips often thinks of the occasion with remorse and shame for his own thoughtlessness.

I know of a church, whose members owned more than one hundred thousand dollars worth of property, sending for a minister in limited circumstances, who had a family to support, and debts to pay, urging him to come and hold a series of meetings for said church. The minister left his family and work and preached for them about ten days. By his labors they were much encouraged and built up. They received an abundance of spiritual food, dealt out by him, without giving him so much as one nickel to make things equal, simply because they had not been taught to think on that line, and hence did not think. Ten days time away from his family, and work at the low estimate of one dollar per day, equals ten dollars, taken away from that family to edify and build up those in more favored circumstances,—this is another case of easing some, and burdening others.

Cases are not rare where in new countries one elder had charge of a number of congregations, and traveled over much territory and became acquainted with many families, and was entertained by them while out on the Lord's work. Now many of these, when occasion favored, would consider it but fair as well as convenient, even when out on business of their own, to turn in with the preacher, and be cared for by his family, never stopping to think what this item alone would amount to in a course of years by the many, with whom he had become acquainted, thus centering to one place.

Another case of easing some and burdening others, because people are not tanght to make things equal, and hence not thinking, is found in the following: A church elects one of her number to the ministry, because he is a good brother and has the qualifications for a preacher. He is properly installed into office and instructed to go and preach the Gospel, preach funerals, etc., when called upon to do so. He is now expected to "study to show himself approved unto God, a workman that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth." For this he needs books and time for reading and study, but no provision is made to get him books, nor is he paid for the time he must now give to reading and filling the various calls, for preaching funerals, holding meetings, etc., which, after he has become efficient in the ministry, will amount to say, one-third of his time,—one hundred and four days in a year,—worth, at the rate of one dollar per day, $104 per year, taken from this family and appropriated to forwarding the work of the church which does not belong to him more than to others, to say nothing about the wear of clothing, or loss caused by absence from his own business, which often amounts to much to the family, and in many cases the use of team and conveyance is added to his own time, amounting to nearly as much more, all of which expense is borne by the minister and his family. Common sense teaches that, where there are one hundred members in about equal circumstances, it would be nearer right and equal for each member to give, say two dollars to make things equal, than to allow the minister and family to give it all. Now who is responsible for this unequal state of affairs? These "Chips" say, "Largely the teachers who will not teach their brethren and sisters to think properly and scripturally on this line," for it is a fact that people are largely as they are taught.

It is also a fact that most ministers know that such inequality exists, but, like unfaithful teachers, they refuse or neglect to teach their people the principles of equality, and thus do an injustice to themselves, to their families, and to the entire flock for whom they, in some degree, become responsible when they accept the position of teacher.

One good time to teach churches their duty toward their minister is at the time of election. After a minister has been elected and installed into office, let the elders present teach the church the duty she now owes to those who have been, in a special sense, made servants of the church. Let them teach the members to think on the line of how they can make things equal, instead of easing some and burdening others. Let all the elders remember that it is a fact that people are largely as they are taught, and that it is our business to teach them to think soberly and scripturally on the line of making things equal, as well as on other lines of thought.

PREACH THE WORD.

BY J. H. MILLER.

"Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine."—2 Tim. 4: 2.

PAUL'S charge to Timothy was timely and instructive. Jesus referred to that, when he said, "The Lord hath anointed me to preach the Gospel to the poor." In preaching the Gospel we publish or proclaim God's Word. Paul was careful in giving this charge. He wished Timothy to be instant in season (at regular times of public worship), out of season (at occasional seasons when opportunity serves). The ministers of to-day stand in the same relation to the church as Timothy did.

Then, how can we, as ministers, make our work more effectual, and what are the hindrances? Effectual work is done only when we, like Paul, forsake all for Christ. A Gospel minister, who will be an efficient worker, must have much of the Holy Spirit dwelling in his heart; his love for the church must be strong; he must be willing to go into all the world and preach the Gospel. He must not lay on his oars and wait until a call is made, but should go, as commanded by the Savior. If he cannot in season, then he should preach when out of season.

A minister who will do good service must expect to do some aggressive work, at the same time marching on a line of defense. "Holding the fort," is a part of the work assigned him. A minister can make his work more effectual by daily consecrating his heart to the Lord. His mind must be fixed upon the Bible, and he should make it a daily study, 2 Tim. 2: 15. Effectual work means to be diligent, 2 Pet. 1: 10.

What are the hindrances in preaching the Word?

1. Some lack self-confidence, and imagine that they cannot preach, therefore are not willing to try. I remember, in my early school-life, that I had no taste for the school-room. The reason was, I was taught the German language at home, and had no knowledge of English until I was ten years old. I could not converse with the teacher, but had first to learn to speak the English. It was with much difficulty that I could have my mind fixed upon my studies, but, by the earnest entreaty of my parents, I applied myself to the work, and soon had a strong desire for my books.

In my ministerial work I met with the same difficulty. A good brother, who has crossed the river, felt an interest in my ministerial labors, and greatly helped me by saying, "Your work heretofore has been on the exhortation line. That will wear out. Now fix your mind on a subject and divide that up in sections, by explaining a few points, and making an application. By doing so, your mind will develop, and your work will be more effectual." I found this advice to be good.

2. Often there are too many ministers at one meeting to make themselves useful, and, not understanding who is to do the preaching, none of them come properly prepared. The Bible teaches that we should prefer each other; but not to the extent that it becomes a hindrance to the cause.

3. Too many preliminaries are often offered. Some of us will tell our congregation that we are not prepared to preach, and only intend to speak a few minutes, while the congregation is surprised to hear us speak one hour or more. Such habits we run into, and unless some one has that love for us that we should have for each other, to tell us, we may be a great hindrance to the cause. The proper way in preaching the Word is, to preach until we are through with the subject, and then to close.

4. A lazy preacher often makes a lazy congregation. If the minister comes in at a late hour, he may expect his congregation to be late. This is another great hindrance.

5. Long sermons, as a rule, will tire out a congregation, especially if we have one routine of sermons. From thirty to forty minutes, as a rule, will make a good sermon. Better leave the people hungry; then we can expect them to return.

6. Unbecoming habits are very unpleasant, and, when fixed, become second nature and hard to break. I remember an old brother, now in eternity, who had formed a habit of using the word "ah" at the end of a sentence, but no one had the courage to speak to him in his early days. When nearly eighty years old, a good brother spoke to him about it. He had no knowledge of it. "How long did you notice this on me?" said the old brother. The reply was, "Nearly all of your ministerial life." Yet no one loved him enough to tell him his errors. Why should we be so afraid of each other?

I remember that, in my early ministerial life, I formed the habit of mispronouncing a word. A school-teacher had me read part of a chapter to see whether I was forming a habit. I pronounced the word correctly in my reading, but in preaching I had formed the erroneous habit. That was a hindrance to my work. That habit was so deeply rooted that telling would not break me of it. I had the teacher seated in front of me, near the stand, and whenever I used that word wrongly, the hand was moved across the teacher's face. This called my attention to it, and it soon broke me of that unpleasant habit. I know a brother who had so much trouble with his watch-key, twisting it while he was preaching, that he found it the best to have no chain or guard on his watch.

7. Many other habits may prevail among us. If some good brother, in the beginning, would break us of such unpleasant habits, how much better for our work! Some talk too loud, and strain their voice until they lose their power. I speak of this from experience. Again, we may demonstrate too strongly, until our hands fall too heavily on the desk, or our feet may make too much noise while we are standing behind the sacred desk.

8. Preach the Word, but let us be careful not to throw any clubs, for little good can be done in that way. Better build a better house by the side of some other faith, and then invite the people over. In my early life I was fond of fishing with hook and line, but I never could catch fish by throwing clubs near the hook. Too much loud noise would frighten the fish, so they would run away and hide. How careful should we be that we bait the Gospel hook with the love of God! That will have a tendency to draw sinners to God.

9. While in the stand, our sermons may be well seasoned with the grace of God's Word, the appeal to the sinner strong and effective, but when off the stand, and when we go home with some one, we may be unguarded in our conversation by too much jesting and light talking, and sometimes unkind or unguarded expressions are made. A minister should be lively and courteous, and cultivate winning ways to make himself useful; yet he must guard the extreme.

10. All ministers should, as much as possible, be good singers. This is a great help to the ministry. Some have not the talent for music, hence are excusable, but how necessary that we learn the art of music! In this particular we are in the rear. There is nothing that will infuse more life into an audience than good singing. Singing schools should be held for the benefit of our young. Ministers every-where should encourage singing in the churches. That will make our work more effectual.

11. Sociability should be cultivated. Some ministers have many friends among the children and the outside world. The reason is, they are all very sociable. A clerk in a store must cultivate this principle, or he will not make a good salesman, and so must the ministers have much of this noble gift, in order to win souls to Christ.

ELD. JESSE CROSSWHITE.

BY J. B. PENCE.

IT is a sad duty to record the sudden taking away of Eld. Jesse Crosswhite, by an accident, a few days since.

He was assisting his neighbors, Emory Allen and son, to roll a heavy log on a wagon. Being on a hillside, Bro. Crosswhite went below to pry up the log, but it came with such speed and force that it caught his hand, well-nigh cutting it off, and, pressing him against the opposite wheel, severely crushed and bruised his head and breast, capsizing the wagon, and rolling some distance down the hill. The alarm being given, sister Crosswhite was quickly at his side, but only to realize that he was beyond the available ministrations of love or of skill. He expired in a few moments.

As there are "joys unspeakable," so there are sorrows too great for utterance, and only those who have passed through similar occurrences, may faintly realize the weight of distress this bereavement has brought upon sister Crosswhite and her fatherless children. They have the deepest sympathies of the church and of a large circle of relatives and friends.

Eld. Jesse Crosswhite was born May 18, 1826, and died Nov. 5, 1891. Much might be written of his life and labors, but we must content ourselves with a few brief notes.

His early years were spent in Johnson County, whose sparkling waters imparted cheerfulness and vivacity, and whose majestic mountains inspired him with noble and generous impulses.

He was friendly and sociable in disposition, and had a pleasant smile and a kind word for every one. Among his neighbors he was agreeable and charitable, ever ready to visit the afflicted, to cheer and encourage the sorrowing, and to succor the needy. Though not favored with an extensive education, he nevertheless acquired a rich fund of useful and practical knowledge by attentive reading and observation, and gave to his children the best educational training the facilities at command could supply.

His natural gifts, aided by culture, gave him eminence in vocal music, and many of us can recall the beautiful songs which we used to join with him in singing, with so much pleasure and profit. He infused a life and pathos which seemed to comply with the Scriptural injunction to "sing with the spirit and with the understanding." Few could hear him render that fine old hymn:

"I love thy kingdom, Lord,
The house of thine abode,"

Without experiencing the enkindling of that fervor that breathed in his words and glowed in his heart; also that precious gem of devotion:

"Sweet hour of prayer, sweet hour of prayer,"

Or that inspiring melody:

"We speak of the realms of the blest,
That country so bright and so fair,"

With numerous other songs of Zion, whose harmonies are still lingering in memory's corridors, and still leave a lingering sweetness there.

Bro. Crosswhite was an able, self-sacrificing and efficient minister. Natural oratorical powers, logical reasoning, forcible diction and fervent zeal, combined to impress his arguments and to convince the judgment of his audience.

Having married and settled in Washington County, he still remembered his former associates, and, with great labor and sacrifice, unaided save by the Divine Helper, with a beautiful spirit of devotion and love, he bore the messages of peace to his father's house, and preached the unsearchable riches of Christ to the friends of his youth. He continued these labors until a goodly number were brought into the fold, including the dear ones at home, one of whom, his brother, J. M. Crosswhite, was installed as their pastor.

Many more instances of his zeal and efficiency might be named, but we only add that seven of his eight surviving children are members of the church, his oldest son, A. G. Crosswhite, being a worthy and acceptable minister.

His last work as elder and minister was at District Conference, in Mitchell County, N. C., one week before his decease, when he appeared in fine health and spirits.

Life is uncertain. Our brother is gone, but he goes not empty-handed. He rests from his labors, but his works survive in their influences, the fruits whereof shall be gathered many days hence. We mourn, but not as those who have no hope. Let us rather strive, by the grace of God, to attain to that hope which comforted King David in his bereavement:

> "It is the hope, the blissful hope,
> Which Jesus' grace has given,—
> The hope, when days and years are past,
> We all shall meet in heaven."

Notes by the Way.

My last was penned at New Hope, Va. Nov. 11 the meetings closed at Middle River, Va. Nov. 18, at 11 A. M., we had a very pleasant and, we hope, a very profitable meeting. These were the first meetings I ever held in Virginia. During my stay one was reclaimed and twelve baptized. Two more were baptized a few days after I left. I arrived at home Nov. 19.

After remaining at home but three hours, wife and I, in company with sixteen others, started for the Ministerial Meeting at Pittsburgh, Ohio. We had a very pleasant meeting. I was glad to see our old, well-established brethren take such an interest in the work. I feel sure that we can all profit by the Meeting if we will, as it surely will get the ministers to work more unitedly. After the close of the meeting, wife and I set out for Pyrmont, Carroll Co., Ind., where I commenced a series of meetings on the evening of Nov. 21. The meetings seemed to be interesting throughout. We had a number of rainy days and nights, yet the attendance was good. I held a series of meetings here last March, and it was very pleasant to renew our acquaintance. I remained with this church till day before yesterday, Dec. 7, at 11 A. M., when I closed my labors with regrets, as it was here like in Virginia, and many other places,—when we had to close and go, we ought to have remained. Nine precious souls asked for admittance into the church and were baptized.

I am now at Georgetown, Ohio, where I was to have commenced a series of meetings last night, but the train being late, I did not arrive till 8 P. M., when I found a fair congregation but no minister. The people had been engaged in song services for an hour and a half. I made a few remarks, had a season of prayer and dismissed till to-night. May the Lord bless the work here and every-where, is my prayer! HENRY FRANTZ.

IV. A course of sermons on Church Government.

V. A series of sermons on Doctrinal Subjects

The daily class work will be in charge of S. Z. Sharp. Bro. A. W. Vaniman has made the "Evidences of Christianity" a study for years and will have charge of that subject. Eld. Enoch Eby will deliver a series of sermons on Faith, Repentance, the Holy Kiss, Non-Conformity, etc. Eld. John Forney will speak on the Lord's Supper and other subjects, to which he has given special attention. Eld. Chas. Yearout will treat on the Prayer-covering, while to Eld. Daniel Vaniman has been assigned the entire subject of Church Government. With such provision we feel that no one can stay away who can possibly afford to come. Tuition is free to all. All are invited.

THE members of the Walnut congregation held their love-feast Nov. 13 The weather being favorable, a goodly number assembled, both of spectators and members. Good order and attention prevailed during the services, and the meeting throughout was a pleasant one indeed, and the ministerial help abundant, for which we feel very thankful. Bro. Daniel Shively, of Peru, Ind., officiated. Next day Bro. Aaron Swihart was ordained to the full ministry, and brethren Edwin Beckner and Geo. Swihart forwarded to the second degree of the ministry. Our brethren and sisters have been very much built up and strengthened in the most holy faith. Certainly the good Lord has abundantly blessed us!

THE aboved-named church met in quarterly council Dec. 3. Four were received by letter. This church was organized in 1880, with fifteen members; we now number eighty-one. The house was built the next year, and is situated two miles south of Warrensburgh. In 1890 an addition was built to it, making a very satisfactory building.

The church has had a checkered experience of peace, prosperity, adversity, and internal troubles, but for the past two years its peace and harmony have been almost perfect, with growing love and Christian zeal, recording many happy occasions of solemn devotion in the sanctuary.

Arrangements have been made for holding regular meetings in the City of Warrensburgh, besides continuing a number of other appointments.

Our Sunday-school prospered until its close. A Bible Meeting for the winter has been organized.

This fall, Bro. Witmore, of Centre View, Mo., preached a week for us. His sermons were excellent and were enjoyed by all. H. H. ROOP.

Dec. 12.

From Belington, Barbour Co., W. Va.

Nov. 15, 1891, I commenced a series of meetings at the Beaver Run church and continued until the 26th. The meetings were well attended and the interest was good. As an immediate result ten precious souls were added by baptism, and the brethren and sisters seemed very much revived. The members here are fully alive to the work of saving souls, and seemed to labor to that end.

I returned home Nov. 27 and found my family prostrated with scarlatina. After watching over them several days and nights, the writer was attacked by a severe form of quinsy, and is still confined to his room. I had arranged to hold some meetings with the Brethren at Sand Run, Upshur Co, W. Va., but on account of the affliction of self and family I am not able to attend. I hope, however, that the Lord was with them and that they had a good meeting. Brethren, sisters and friends will please accept our thanks for their kindness to me. Pray for us that the Lord may restore us to health again! W. A. GAUNT.

ON the morning of Dec. 5, sister Sarah Anderson, of Sweden, came to Huntingdon. She came from her home entirely alone, and though she had a rough sea voyage and was an entire stranger when she landed on the American shore, and not able to speak any language except her own, yet she met with no accidents or mishaps of any kind. On her arrival here she was met by Bro. Andrew Westergren, with whom she had some acquaintance before he came to this country, and we can well suppose the meeting was a pleasant one. She was kindly received by the church here, but, on account of her not being able to understand our language, it could not be made as pleasant as it would otherwise have been. On the following Monday she, in company with Bro. Westergren, went to Baltimore, where they expect to remain with Bro. Quinlan awhile and then return again. She brought with her the greetings of the brethren and sisters in Denmark and Sweden, which were kindly received. We hope that her new home may be both pleasant and profitable to her and that, wherever she goes, she may learn to enjoy the associations of those of a like precious faith.

MINISTERIAL TRAINING OF THE APOSTLES.

BY B. C. MOOMAW.

IT is true that the apostles, at the time of their selection by Jesus, were unlettered men; that is to say, they were not versed in polite literature, they knew very little of the sciences and arts (except the art of fishing), they were entirely ignorant of poetry and rhetoric, had never, perhaps, seen the inside of the great Rabbinical schools; but they were not ignoramuses by any means, or destitute of ability or natural good sense. Any of them had sufficient natural vigor of mind to make powerful preachers, with proper training, and that training the Lord took care to supply. He did not take them directly from their worldly occupations and put them into the pulpit, without any previous and suitable training, but he gave them three years' instruction, such as no other set of preachers, before or since, ever enjoyed.

We have a brief outline of those three years in the Gospels, but they contain a very small fraction of what our Lord said and did during that time. John said that if everything had been written, the world itself could hardly have contained the books.

The actual amount of time taken in the discourses and transactions narrated in the Gospels, would probably not exceed a month. The whole narrative can be read, without haste, in a day, so that we see clearly that, as John intimates, the great bulk of his sayings and labors, filling up three years of an exceedingly busy life, were not recorded at all.

If all these things had been necessary to the world, of course they would have been published, but they were only necessary to the disciples, as a preparation for their apostleship.

Considering the resources and ability of the teacher, and the time and pains he took, that preparation must have been a very elaborate one. This is corroborated by the great abilities displayed by the apostles whenever they undertook to preach. In every emergency they displayed not only ability, but consummate tact and judgment, adapting their discourses to the circumstances of time, place, and occasion, and observing the most perfect theological accuracy in the order of doctrinal presentation. From the very start, at Pentecost, they displayed the most unmistakable evidences of long and skillful training in the art of preaching, which they could have received from no other than the Master himself. For years they constantly heard, saw, studied, and copied this perfect model of the preacher. To them he devoted the greater part of his time, and who can tell the amount of private instruction, suitable to their future calling, which they received directly from him!

The same care was taken by the first churches, founded by the apostles, to carefully train their young men, intended for the ministry, before allowing them to undertake the responsible duties of pastor, or evangelist. This preparation consisted in just the kind and amount of classic and Scriptural training as was necessary to make them "able ministers of the Word, rightly dividing unto each his portion in due season." As a matter of course, a genuine conversion, and a minute and practical knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, was always regarded as the essential foundation work of all true ministerial preparation.

Now, this is not written to discourage any struggling minister who has never had the advantages enumerated above. Any one may improve himself immensely by systematic and persistent application, and become a far better preacher than he is to-day. That being the case, what must we say of him if, through indolence or indifference, he fails to do it, seeing the nature and importance of the work in which he is engaged. What will the Lord say of a slothful and careless servant, when souls are going to ruin all around him!

But beyond the ordinary opportunities for application to study, which our ministers can snatch from the exacting demands of secular labor, we cannot reasonably expect a large degree of proficiency. It is to our young men we must appeal. It is the rising talent of the church we must encourage to diligent and thorough preparation for a calling which taxes every energy and every resource, human and divine. If the Bible is intended at all as a guide, we can turn with comfort to the example of our Savior, as set forth above, and see how much he deemed it necessary to put a keen edge on the sword before sending it forth to the battle.

OUR BIBLE CLASS.

BY A. W. VANIMAN.

Practical Questions on Lesson VI.

1. DESCRIBE the Rosetta Stone. Where is it now?
2. What two parties arose among the Jews?
3. Who succeeded Onias III? How?
4. Who succeeded Jason? How?
5. State something that Menelaus did.
6. Describe King Antiochus' attack upon Jerusalem.

Lesson VII.

Our last lesson closed with the attack on the inhabitants of Jerusalem on the Sabbath. A frightful massacre took place. The city was pillaged and set on fire. Following this occurred one of the severest religious persecutions ever known. Antiochus, king of Syria, issued an edict, requiring uniformity of worship throughout his dominions. The favorite test put to the Jews was to show their conformity to the heathenish worship by eating swine's flesh. Many suffered martyrdom, as did the Christians, centuries later. It would be well for those who censure Christianity for all the religious persecutions, to read fully this page of heathen superstition and bigotry. While Christianity has never instituted a persecution, some have been instituted in the name of Christianity, which are only a fulfillment of Christ's prophetic words.

It is a fact, worthy of note, that, with few exceptions, those kings and nations who have persecuted the Jews, have, by some means, severely suffered. It will not be surprising if Russia pays the penalty some time. The king who instituted the persecution, referred to, died in a raving frenzy 164 B. C. His end was considered by Greeks and Jews a judgment for his sacrilegious crimes, and he has left to history a name as odious as that of Nero, whom he resembled much in points of character.

We have now briefly covered the first two periods in the gap between the Old and New Testaments, and we have reached the year 168 B. C.

FIRST PERIOD.—The Persian Supremacy to 331 B. C. Then the Grecian follows and continues to the year 168 B. C., when begins a very notable part of Jewish history, known as the Maccabean Independence. However, before proceeding with the same, we will, in brief, recapitulate what has been covered.

HIGH-PRIESTS after Nehemiah:

1. Eliashib.
2. Jehoiada.
3. Jochanan, who slew his brother, Joshua. For this the king of Egypt placed a tax of fifty shekels on each lamb, slain in a sacrifice.
4. Jaddua, 359–330 B. C., went out to meet Alexander.
5. Onias I, 330–300 B. C.
6. Simon I, The Just, considered by the Jews as the best of all the High-priests of this period.
7. Eleazar. The Septuagint came into existence.
8. Manasseh.
9. Onias II, 240–226 B. C, endangered the friendship of Egypt by neglecting to pay the tribute. An open rupture was averted by Joseph, his nephew, taking a contract to farm the tribute.
10. Simon II, 226–198 B. C.
11. Onias III, 198–175 B. C.
12. Jason, 175–172 B. C., obtained the office by bribery. He introduced Greek customs.
13. Menelaus, 172–168 B. C., having been sent by Jason to Antioch with the tribute, by means of flattery and a greater bribe obtained the High-priesthood. He sold vessels out of the temple to pay his bribe. Terrible persecution of the Jews during his reign.

The Maccabean Independence, above referred to, lasted sixty-two years, reaching to 106 B. C. The foundation for a great deal of the history of the Maccabees is found in the two books of Maccabees, found in the Apocrypha. Any one who has never read these two books would do well to read them. They are not canonical (inspired), but contain some valuable history of the Jews, although not all that is found in them is considered fully reliable. The following are the principal points, as attested by Josephus: "The persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes called forth some resistance and in the end resulted in Judea becoming free and independent. An aged priest, by the name of Mattathias had escaped from Jerusalem at the beginning of the persecution, and returned to his own city, Modin, about fifteen miles from Jerusalem, toward the Mediterranean Sea." He had five sons, John, Simon, Judas, Eleazar and Jonathan, whose history will be followed in next lesson.

THE MISSIONARY CAUSE.

BY JOHN L. KLINE.

THE preaching of the Gospel to all the world seems to be agitating the minds of quite a number of our zealous members, and why should it not? When we read the Acts of the Apostles and the epistolary writings, we see that the missionary work was thought to be of the greatest importance.

There have been a good many suggestions made as to how the work might be carried on most successfully, and some of these are very good ones, but, at the same time, I think it will do no harm to make still a few more, or enlarge upon some of those that have been made.

I believe that the Annual Meeting has done the best she can do, as far as this matter is concerned. All that the local churches need to do is to carry her decisions into effect; but it appears the present wants are, more means and also more laborers of the right kind. As far as the latter is concerned I say again, If the local churches heed the decisions of the Annual Meeting, we will have them in a few years, and the means, in my opinion, could be on hand before the men.

I believe the most effective way to do this is to take the Gospel way. It is needless for me to cite you to the Scripture, as we ought to be acquainted with it. Each elder ought to have enough of the missionary spirit to make this a special business at each quarterly council-meeting. He should give the members liberty to talk this matter over, and I am confident that in this way we would do a great work. Let this matter be mentioned at each quarterly meeting, and next year, by this time, we will see that the Mission Board has no need of keeping faithful brethren out of the field, simply because the means are not at hand to support them.

At our regular quarterly meetings we all know that generally a little money is needed and most of the members, if not all, are prepared for the call. This renders collections for mission work, at that time, comparatively easy. A single trial would suffice to show how the treasury of the Lord may be filled to overflowing in a short time.

OUR TRIP TO ARKANSAS AND SOUTH-EASTERN MISSOURI.

BY S. CLICK.

Oct. 12 I attended the feast in the Dry Fork church, Jasper Co., Mo., which proved to be a very enjoyable season. Oct. 14 I left Carthage for Eureka Springs, by rail. From there I took the hack for Berryville, the County-seat of Carroll County, Ark., where I met Bro. M. V. Price, at Bro. G. W. Harmon's. He and his wife are the only members we know of in Carroll County. Bro. Price had made arrangements to meet me here and convey me to Boone County,—a distance of thirty miles Brother and sister Harmon went along, this being their first opportunity to attend a love-feast, though they have been members for over sixteen years. You may be sure they enjoyed it. They seem to have as much love for the church, as if they had just been received. This proves that when the true love of God gets into the heart, it is hard to eradicate. The feast was held at Bro. Price's, five miles south-west of Harrison, the County-seat. Fourteen members communed. There are sixteen members in this little organization. Bro. Price is the only minister. One deacon was elected,—Bro. Samuel Anderson. May God bless him and his dear companion, as well as the little flock! Bro. Price is laboring faithfully to hold up the cause, and, being a good pedestrian, walks eight and ten miles to his appointments. The corn crop here is really better than in many places in Missouri. Considerable cotton is also raised in this part of the State.

After the feast I commenced preaching at the Walnut Grove school-house and continued five nights. Then I moved the meetings to the Bain school-house, where I had three meetings. I next went to the Christian church in Harrison, then ten miles farther on, to a school-house near Carrollton, where I had five meetings. At Carrollton I took the stage for Berryville. I had sent a lot of tracts to Bro. Harmon for distribution. When I got to Carrollton, the people insisted that I should preach that night, as the stage would not arrive until midnight. I told them if they would go to the schools and make the announcement, and make other needed arrangements, I would talk to the people. The house was crowded and the most marked attention was given to the Word preached. Several ministers were present, who seemed very sociable. The contrast was all the greater when I got in the stage, and found that three deists were my traveling companions. Had I known their sentiments beforehand, I would have put my grip in the hands of the driver and walked. If old Satan himself had been in that hack, the language could not have been tinctured more fully with the fumes of the pit.

I had pleasant meetings for one week at the Hill school-house, near Berryville, and one meeting in the Presbyterian church in town, at the solicitation of the presiding minister. The circuit rider of the Methodist church, who also preaches in this church, was present. Out of Christian courtesy, I asked him to take part in the meeting. After I had spoken about one hour, he got up, as I supposed, to close the meeting After speaking for some time, and contending that there was but one commandment that amounted to anything,—viz, love to God,—he went through the congregation, saying, "Now all that love the Lord, give us your hand," but he did not meet with much response.

From here I went to the Greenwood church, in Texas County, Mo., to attend their love-feast, which passed off pleasantly. About one hundred communed. Here I staid over Sunday, and on Monday morning, in company with Bro. John Deleplain, I started for the Waynesville church, in Pulaski County, a distance of sixty miles. Facing the north wind all the way, made traveling very disagreeable. Here I preached over one week and also attended a love-feast. The meetings generally had a regular, though small attendance, but good attention was given to the Word preached. The people in this rough country are generally in limited circumstances, but very benevolent.

Any minister, traveling through Boone or Carroll Counties, Ark., should stop and preach for them. Address Bro. M. V. Price, Harrison, Boone Co., or G. W. Harmon, Berryville, Carroll Co., Ark.

Doctrinal preaching was generally called for, hence but few immediate results, in the way of additions, were manifest, as it takes some time for the people to make up their minds. If the work could be followed up and the seed sown, watered and cultivated, much good might result. I preached at seven different places, where the Brethren never preached. One young man made the good confession.

OUR THREE FAMILIES.

BY CORNELIUS KESSLER.

Quite recently I read an account of a very benevolent man, who wished to do an act of kindness to a number of poor people.

In order to carry out his act, he took a different plan from that generally taken by men when they want to do an act of kindness to the poor and needy. He told the Mayor of the city to furnish him a list of fifty families that were too poor to buy apples, and he would drive around to each one's door and furnish them with a bushel of his choice apples from his own orchard. There was but one consideration to be imposed,—they were to be people that did not waste what little means they had, and the proof of their thrift was to be that they must neither drink, use tobacco, nor keep a dog. The Mayor reported three families, who, according the farmer's conditions, were worthy of his benevolence. Since the publishers of the Gospel Messenger offer the paper to the poor and needy at less than the regular price, I have wondered whether it would do to apply the test in that case. I consider the Gospel Messenger cheap at $1.50. Brother and sister Miller's letters of their travels are worth half of it, and Bro. B. F. Moomaw's Biographical Sketch is worth the other half. Besides that, we have the church news from all over the beloved Brotherhood. It is as food, delivered to the hungry. Long may it live, and visit many that are battling for a better home.

NOTICE TO THE MEMBERS IN NEBRASKA.

BY J. L SNAVELY.

The District Mission Board of Nebraska desires to say through these columns, for the benefit of weak churches and isolated members, or any that are not members, desiring preaching in the District of Nebraska, that, if they will make their wants known, their case will be attended to. All members, when not too much isolated, and as far as practicable, should always try to arrange to send their requests for preaching "by order of the church." The Board is composed of three brethren, namely, Moses Keefer, Greenwood, Nebr., Chairman; M. L. Spire, Holmesville, Nebr., Treasurer; J. L. Snavely, Ashland, Nebr., Secretary. While it may be possible that all are not pleased, yet we feel to say to all: Our aim and desire is to labor that we may all receive some benefit, and that many be saved, and learn how to get on the "narrow way."

Those desiring to confer with the Mission Board, will please address the Secretary of the Board, and their requests will have the proper attention.

Ashland, Nebr.

YOUR WILL.

The following, which we clip from the Free Methodist, is worthy of attention: "In the will of the late Samuel J. Tilden, he sought to create a trust for charitable purposes; but the New York Court of Appeals has decided that the will is void and the estate must be distributed among the Tilden heirs. This case affords a striking instance of the unwisdom of postponing charitable gifts until after death. Mr. Tilden evidently desired to be a benefactor to his fellow-men, but his desire has been frustrated by the technicalities of law. He was an able lawyer. He sought to guard every part of his will so as to make it proof against all attacks. But he signally failed. The frequent occurrence of similar instances should teach those who have property that they wish to dispose of for charitable purposes, to be their own executors, instead of leaving their estate to become the prey of unprincipled lawyers and dissatisfied heirs."

"There is none made so great but he may both need the help and service, and stand in fear of the power and unkindness, even of the meanest of mortals."

BRO. ENOCH EBY was with the Brethren at State Center, Iowa, Dec. 10.

BRO. LEVI TROSTLE has moved to Franklin Grove, Ill., where he may now be addressed.

WHEN last heard from, Bro. Daniel Vaniman was holding a series of meetings at Ramona, Kans.

BRO. ANDREW HUTCHISON is now in Southern California. It seems that he stood the trip quite well.

FIFTEEN recently united with the church, as the result of a series of meetings, held at Montezuma, Virginia.

BRO. ISAAC GIBBLE, of Sangamon County, Illinois, may, for the present, be addressed at San Jacinto, Cal.

BRO. STEPHEN YODER, of Iowa, accompanied by his wife, is spending the winter visiting and preaching in Ohio.

BRO. HENRY FRANTZ reports twenty-three additions to the church during two series of meetings recently held by him.

THE Old Order Brethren have arranged to hold their next Annual Meeting near Mill Brook Station, Franklin Co., Pa.

BRO. SILAS HOOVER writes that he is engaged in a series of meetings in the Manor church, Washington County, Md.

BRO. R. H. MILLER has promised to be with us during the Bible Term in January, for the purpose of delivering a series of doctrinal sermons.

BRO. S. S. MOHLER writes that he is unable to discover any improvement in his condition, yet his physician seems to think that he is gaining.

OUR custom is to print fifty papers a year, dropping out one issue during the Annual Meeting and the other at the close of the year. This completes the number fifty for this year, hence the next issue will be No. 1 of next volume, which will reach our readers about Jan. 1.

SISTER SADIE B. NOFFSINGER writes us from Johnstown, Pa, where she is sojourning at present. She may be addressed at 53 Adams Street.

BRO. JAMES M. NEFF writes that Bro. W. Q. Calvert is engaged in a series of meetings at Covington, Ohio, with good attendance and interest.

WE have on the hook a series of articles from Mattie A. Lear, on the "Two Witnesses" of Revelation. The first article will appear in next issue.

WE have on the hook a letter from Bro. D. L. Miller for next issue. We are glad to learn that the letters are interesting to all of our readers.

BRO. D. E. BRUBAKER returned from the Canada mission a few days ago, having been absent seven weeks. He reports good meetings and a pleasant trip.

WE are glad to learn that Bro. S. Z. Sharp is rapidly recovering from the accident that befell him a few weeks ago. It was not found necessary to amputate his foot.

BRO. W. R. DEETER seems to be doing a good deal of preaching this winter. He has just closed an interesting series of meetings at Monticello, Ind., with five additions.

BRO. W. A. GAUNT closed a very successful series of meetings at Beaver Run, W. Va, Nov. 26, with ten additions. We regret to learn that he is detained at home on account of sickness.

BRO. D. E. PRICE was with the Pigeon Creek church part of last week. In the absence of Bro. Holsinger, who is preaching in the West, that church is without the needed ministerial help.

To add to the great sufferings of the already famine-stricken people of Russia, the small-pox has broken out among them and many are dying of the disease. The outlook is a gloomy one indeed.

BRO. MICHAEL KELLER writes that the Walnut Valley church, Kans, took up a collection on Thanksgiving for the purpose of sending the MESSENGER to the poor. He also reports two baptized.

AN unprecedented gale, which passed over Southern California Dec 12, caused extensive damage to property and some loss of life. Heavy storms in these mild climates are very unusual, but they will come now and then.

WHILE we wish to encourage Sunday-schools on every hand, we cannot, at this season of the year, find room to publish the many reports sent us. Those whose reports do not appear in print, will please accept this explanation.

BRO. SIMON E. YUNDT, of this place, was with the Hickory Grove church several days week before last, and reports some interesting meetings. Bro. D. B. Eby was to have commenced a series of meetings there the day Bro. Yundt left.

WE advise our readers, when sending money through the mail, to always use money orders when it is practicable to do so. This method is absolutely safe. The Registered Letter System is also quite safe, but Postal Notes are not

BRO. JOHN Y. DRISKELL, who moved from Hancock County, Ill, to Texas one year ago, writes that soon after settling in that State he had the misfortune to lose his wife. Still he will remain and would like to have other members settle around him. He lives twelve miles west of Snyder, Scurry County, where he may be addressed. He can also make good use of papers and tracts by distributing them among his neighbors.

THE Committee of Arrangements for the Annual Meeting, held at Hagerstown, has sent to Bro. Galen B. Royer $3,000.00, with more to follow, as net proceeds from the Meeting, etc. Our Brethren are certainly to be commended for the wisdom displayed in the management of that Meeting.

BRO. NOAH B. SHERFY, writing from the Pleasant Hill church, Tenn, says that Eld. Henry Garst, who has been in feeble health since last fall, is now slowly improving. He also writes of their fine weather, wishing that some of our people in the North could come to that beautiful land and enjoy their mild climate.

WHENEVER we can possibly spare an hour from our business, we prefer to spend it in the College Bible class, which meets every school day in the week. The class is certainly doing a grand work. We only wish it could be more largely attended by our young ministers. Those now in attendance are certainly being greatly benefited.

BRO. GALEN B. ROYER has on hand a few hundred copies of the missionary number of the MESSENGER, which he will send to those who will distribute them where they will do good. As the demand at isolated points seems to be well supplied, the remainder may now be used among the churches to good advantage. Send in your orders at once.

OUR readers will certainly sympathize with Bro. M. J. McClure in his afflictions. We have the following from him: "I am now nursing the only daughter I have at home any more. She is down with the typhoid fever, now in the third week. My son, Edgar, died Nov. 6, lacking a few days of being twenty-seven years old. Our affliction is heavy, and I crave an interest in your prayers."

WAS Peter, the apostle, a pope? He may possibly have felt a little that way when he boasted about himself, saying, "Though all forsake thee yet will not I," or when he, in the garden, undertook to defend his religion with the sword, but after he was converted we see no more such demonstrations, for he spent the remainder of his life strengthening his brethren. Certainly he was no pope.

WE are going to make a special effort next year to get the MESSENGER into every family in the Brotherhood, and we know of no better way to accomplish this than to have our agents send us a list, containing the names and address of every family of members that do not take the paper, and we will see that they get a sample copy of the MESSENGER. If our agents will do this, they will confer a great favor on us, and perhaps be the means of doing good in the families who do not read the paper.

THE way of the rich man is so frequently uncertain that but little dependence is to be placed in riches, especially in the hands of rich men's sons. This fact is forcibly illustrated in the financial downfall of Cyrus W. Field, of Wall Street renown, one of the most successful financiers in the world. He counted his wealth by the million; was honored on every hand. He helped his son into business, placing at his disposal many million dollars, but the young man suffered himself to be led into the popular gambling habits to such an extent as to completely wreck this great fortune that had required years of skill to accumulate. The young spendthrift is now insane and kept in confinement, while the aged and sick father declares himself to be as poor as when he came into the world. The second generation of the rich is seldom any better off in this world than the poor.

We are glad to learn that our readers appreciate our efforts to give them so many reports from the churches from all parts of the Brotherhood. Last week we gave thirty-four reports, but in numbers 47 and 48 we had over fifty reports in each issue. This can be accomplished only by boiling down the reports, and we trust that those who send in these reports will keep this fact in mind and make their reports as short as possible.

We commend the following to the serious consideration of all our readers, especially to our ministers: "The apostles, to make their ministry successful, had to give themselves continually to prayer and to the ministry of the Word. They put prayer first, and gave themselves to it fully. Their time, strength, their all were expended in praying and preaching. If the apostles, inspired and commissioned by Christ personally, could not succeed without putting prayer first and continually, neither can we."

These cold waves freeze the ground and chill the body. But sometimes a cold wave strikes the church, rendering everything from the sermon to the Christian greeting cold and formal. It takes the grace of God in the heart to warm up such a church. In this condition we imagine that all those we meet are cold and indifferent. Perhaps we are equally cold ourselves. A few warm, earnest hearts may warm up a whole congregation. Open up the heart and permit the Sun of Righteousness to enter and there will not be so much of that coldness and formality.

If others can find work to do why cannot our readers? After reading the following, look around and see if you cannot find a person, family or neighborhood where you can do some effectual work with the Bible, tracts, or papers, seasoned with chaste conversation and earnest prayer: "In another instance, a French Testament was given to a little girl of Romanist parents, who was for four months at the Grande Ligne School. She went home still a Romanist. Her father asked her if she had a Bible. She said she had. 'You must give it to me or put it away, never to take it out.' She put it in the bottom of her trunk, and the treasure remained hidden for ten or twelve years. Then she was married and had more liberty. She began to read the Testament in the family; she and her husband were converted. Their zeal led them to labor for one of her brothers who was at her father's house. After many months of labor and prayer, the brother was converted. The three united in labor for a sister. She was led to Christ and so on until the whole family of sixteen children, besides the parents, were converted. A brother wrote in 1886: 'Through that little Testament, given to Julia at Grande Ligne thirty-five years ago, and in answer to the prayers of Madame Feller that followed it, our families, numbering eighty-five souls, are all in the light.'"

THE MILK AND FRUIT.

In a former series of articles we urged the necessity of a greater effort in home mission work, as well as a better and a more earnest way of looking after the interest at isolated points. We now wish to urge another point which deserves grave consideration, especially upon the part of those who have the oversight of congregations. Our General Brotherhood in council has wisely endorsed the missionary efforts which our people are putting forth, and has also appointed a committee to superintend the same. Another committee has been appointed to establish and maintain a tract department. To sustain these commendable departments money is required. Men must be placed in the mission fields and they must have, at the very least, their expenses paid.

As a general thing the churches are responding liberally towards the support of these enterprises, but we have hundreds of churches that never contribute anything in support of missionary work, and some of them are in possession of a great deal of wealth. For this neglect some one is responsible, and it is our impression that the responsibility rests largely with the shepherds of the flocks. It is certainly in their place to see that at least one collection be taken up each year to help in spreading the Gospel. However poor or small a congregation may be, it ought to have an opportunity to make a free-will offering. And if elders do not give their respective congregations this opportunity, it becomes a grave question whether they are not responsible to the Lord for keeping out of the Lord's treasury that which belongs to the church.

Paul says, "Who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock?" 1 Cor. 9: 7. This clearly indicates that the fruit of the vineyard and the milk of the flock are intended for the Lord's use, and, furthermore, it is the duty of all housekeepers to see that the milk and fruit are collected and turned over to the support of the Lord's cause. This is the Lord's part and those who fail to attend to it are certainly neglecting a very important duty. The Lord cannot afford to have prosperous vineyards and flocks all over this land and get nothing from them.

Every elder ought to bear in mind that his flock should be properly taught on this subject, so the members will understand their duty, and if properly taught they will respond freely after a few years of training. Giving the Lord's part never makes a congregation poor. It never injures the flock or vine to take the milk or fruit therefrom but rather increases the ability to yield more. This truth can well be applied to congregations. The more they give in faith, the more the Lord blesses them. We know one congregation, of less than 200 members, that has raised for charitable purposes, during the last year, nearly $2,000 00. The Lord is blessing the members and they are prospering. Perhaps we have other congregations that are doing as well, and possibly some that are doing better, but it is all the result of proper teaching.

We here repeat what has often been said before and clearly demonstrated by practice, that, if the people are properly taught to give of the milk of the flock and the fruit of the vineyard, as the Lord has prospered them, there will be no trouble in the least about raising all the money needed to carry on the Lord's work. THE CLOSE.

This issue closes the present volume of the Gospel Messenger, thus adding one more book of 800 pages to the large list of books already published. The volume contains nearly 5,000 separate articles and items, written by hundreds of writers, scattered from the Pacific on the West to Europe on the East. Of its contents it may well be said, "What is written, is written." Eternity alone must tell the story of the good or evil that has resulted from the ten million pages of the Messenger that have gone forth on their mission during the year. Any one who will consider for one moment the power there is, for good or evil, in a work of this kind, must certainly understand the great importance of placing before the Brotherhood and the world only that which is calculated to advance the interest of the cause for which we are so earnestly contending. This we have now done to the very best of our ability, and must leave the results in the hands of the great God whom we profess to serve.

Temporally, the past year has been a prosperous one, with our people as well as the nation at large. We have been blessed with good crops and fair wages, while the angel of peace has smiled upon us. God has so abundantly blessed us that we have no reason whatever to complain.

Religiously, it has been a year of marked peace in the General Brotherhood. A few local disturbances, however, have made it unpleasant for a few churches. It has also been a year of ingathering, for many have united with the church during the last twelve months, with indications that many more will help to swell our ranks. We feel that the Brotherhood is growing, not in numbers only, but also in wisdom and real earnestness. Our schools, which have wisely been placed under the care of the Annual Meeting, are greatly increasing in prosperity and usefulness, and will shortly wield an influence second to none in the church. The more thoroughly they can be enlisted in support of our distinctive features, the greater will be the blessing that the church may derive from them. The Bible departments, conducted by these schools, are destined to make a far-reaching impression upon the present as well as upon future generations, hence the importance of giving these departments the proper guidance as well as the necessary support and encouragements.

The last few years show a marked increase in the Sunday-school work among our people, and we may look for a still greater increase in the future. This is really a Sunday-school age, and these schools have come to stay. It therefore behooves us to make them subservient to the work of the church, for next to our colleges they are quietly wielding an influence that must necessarily shape the future of the Brotherhood.

And while we have many things for which to be thankful and to encourage us in the Christian warfare, we nevertheless have reasons to believe that worldly-mindedness, pride and general indifference are making inroads upon us sufficiently to demand earnest and prompt efforts upon the part of the faithful, in order that such evil tendencies may be counteracted. In this line our housekeepers and ministers have an important duty before them, a work which has, perhaps, been too greatly neglected, and it does certainly behoove them to consecrate themselves anew to the work over which the Holy Ghost has appointed them. We need more genuine Christianity in our hearts, in our families and about our dealings with the world. We need more of the apostolic earnestness about our preaching, and certainly we need to give more attention to careful housekeeping as well as to the spreading of the pure Gospel.

With these reflections we close the present volume, feeling that while we may greatly profit by the experience of the past, we still have a grand work before us, requiring the best of energies and judgment. And now, thanking you for your patronage in the past, as well as for your prayers and assistance, we invite you to continue your efforts in our behalf, in order that much good may be accomplished in the name of our Master. COMMENTS ON FEET-WASHING.

It would be curious reading indeed to have all the comments, offered on the Sunday-school lesson for Oct. 18, at which time John 13: 1–17 was the lesson assigned the thousands of schools using the International series. Most of these comments are so many excuses for not obeying one of the plainest commands in the New Testament. But the comments given by the editor of the Sunday-school Times are certainly ingenious:

Every kingdom has its symbols, its sacraments,—outer signs of its invisible realities by which we are kept in touch with its life through our senses. What are the authentic symbols of Christ's kingdom? With a very few exceptions, Christians are agreed upon two: Baptism and the Lord's Supper. The Roman Catholic Church adds five others to these. Some of the smaller bodies of Protestants think that our Lord added a third when he washed his disciples' feet, and said to them, "If I, the Lord and the Master, have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet." There is evidence that in the early ages of Christianity foot-washing was observed as a public rite. To this day, the pope and the emperor of Austria-Hungary wash the feet of a number of beggars in the week preceding the observance of Easter. In our own country, the Mennonites, the River Brethren (or Dunkards), and the Church of God (or Winebrennarians) have taken the ground that this is a permanent order of the church; and at times the question has been raised among the Baptists.

Those who take the opposite view argue that the Apostolic church did not treat feet-washing as a church ordinance, while baptism and the Lord's Supper were observed as such by the churches; as the only allusion to feet-washing is in 1 Tim. 5: 10, where a widow is praised "if she hath used hospitality to strangers, if she hath washed the saints' feet." On this ground they contend that the act was treated as a social courtesy befitting a Christian, and not as a transaction of public worship.

It also is argued the two sacraments are based on universal needs of human life: the cleansing of the body, and its nourishment by food and drink; but that such washing as our Lord condescended to was an outgrowth of the custom of wearing sandals, and not shoes, and therefore would be meaningless in other countries than the East.

Whichever view we take, we cannot fail to see that Christ's act has a perpetual significance. It is an acted, not a spoken, parable. There is the great cleansing,—the "bath" of the Revised Version,—which only God can bestow. But even he that is thus bathed may get his feet dusty and defiled in the ways of the world. Then the duty of his brethren in Christ is to seek to cleanse him of such faults,—to wash his feet. To do so we must come to the task in the spirit of Christ's humility, stooping to render this service. Throughout all our Lord's intercourse with the twelve he was washing their feet in this sense. They now were—or they soon were to be—sufficiently advanced in the Christian life to do this for one another. As he had been washing their feet through those years of humble service, they now should serve one another. This is the law of Christian fellowship in the church of Christ. Not criticism, but foot-washing; humility in service towards one another.

We merely notice that the editor greatly errs in confounding us with the River Brethren, who are a distinct body of people. The admission that "there is evidence that in the early ages of Christianity foot-washing was observed as a public rite," is a very important one. To admit that in the early ages of Christianity, feet-washing was observed as a public rite, is also to admit that there has been a general departure from the ancient practice; our people and a few others preferring to follow the practice of the early ages. These early Christians did not think "that such washing as our Lord condescended to was an outgrowth of the custom of wearing sandals, . . and therefore would be meaningless in other countries than the East."

It would be just as reasonable to dispense with baptism on the ground that it is an outgrowth of bathing, or the Communion, on the ground that it is the outgrowth of eating and drinking.

The feet-washing the editor favors is all mental. But he is careful not to say that the feet-washing, mentioned in John 13, is merely mental. If we can, with propriety, take the feet-washing which Jesus observed and taught literally, and obey it mentally, why not also observe baptism and the Communion mentally? Why not, with equal consistency, feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and visit the sick mentally? At the judgment scene, mentioned in Matt 25, were those who had done many wonderful works, but were denied the joys of heaven because they had not literally fed the hungry, clothed the naked, visited the sick, etc.

If "throughout all our Lord's intercourse with the twelve he was washing their feet in this sense," i. e., mentally, why not also credit the widow (1 Tim. 5: 10) with washing feet in the same sense, and thus pave the way for lodging strangers and diligently following every good work mentally?

This late custom of departing from the divinely-authorized practices of the Christian church of the early ages, and attempting to obey the commands mentally, is the very thing that is emptying the church of those rites that are fit symbols of loyalty. The absence of these gives us an empty and meaningless form that can serve no other purpose than the keeping up of a mere shadow of the religion of which Jesus is the founder.

From the Brooklyn Church, Poweshiek Co., Iowa.

On Tuesday, Nov. 10, Bro. William and sister Hipes, of Greene, Butler Co., Iowa, came to us to hold a series of meetings. He continued until Nov. 30, and preached in all twenty-four sermons. Our congregations were small, owing to the busy season and the inclemency of the weather. Bro. Hipes' whole soul is in the good work. He preached an excellent sermon on Thanksgiving Day, after which the members and friends donated for the starving ones in Denmark and Sweden. We hope that many more will think of those needy ones. There were no immediate results to the meetings, but we pray that the labors of Bro. Hipes will not be in vain. We believe that the members were much encouraged, and that sinners were almost persuaded to follow Christ. Brother and sister Hipes have now gone to Mahaska County, Iowa, to hold a series of meetings. They have our best wishes for their success.

Ministerial Meeting.

The ministerial meeting of the Southern District of Ohio was held in the Painter Creek church Nov. 20. The meeting was opened in the usual manner. A committee of three brethren was appointed to select officers for the meeting. The following were named and accepted by the meeting: Eld. Henry Frantz, Moderator; Bennet Trout, Reading Clerk; and Jonas Horning, Writing Clerk. After reading 2 Tim. 4, the rules that are to govern the meeting were read and accepted. The following topics were then discussed:

1. Object of Ministerial Meetings.
2. "How to Study the Bible to the Best Advantage."
3. "The Minister at Home and Abroad."
4. "How May our Ministers of Southern Ohio make Themselves more Active and Useful."
5. "Uniformity and Plan in Conducting Series of Meetings."
6. "Evils of Non-conformity by the Shepherd and his Flock."

The meeting was well attended, the large house being well filled. About twenty congregations were represented, and about forty-three ministers were present. The discussions were very pleasant. From eight to eleven speeches were made on each topic. The spirit of the meeting seemed to be the very best.

The fact that our old brethren took an active part in the discussion, made the meeting interesting and especially instructive to our young ministers.

A committee of five brethren was appointed to arrange time, place and program for the next meeting. At the close of the meeting the general sentiment of the meeting seemed to be, "It was good for us to be here." Thus closed the first Ministerial Meeting of the Southern District of Ohio.

District Meeting of Northern Iowa, Minnesota and South Dakota.

The District Meeting of the above-named portion of the United States was held Nov. 30 1891, in the Kingsley church, Woodbury Co., Iowa. The delegate attendance was not as large as desirable, owing partly to the severity of the weather and the location of the meeting. This was my first meeting with the dear brethren and sisters of our District, and I was made happy to behold their devotion to the cause of the Master. There are encouraging prospects for building up large and useful churches in North-western Iowa. More ministers are needed to work in the field. They have a good country.

The characteristic features of the Meeting were prompt transaction of business, and manifestations of love. An evening missionary meeting was also held which was indeed a glorious meeting. The exercises were opened by Bro. W. H. Lichty and participated in by nearly all present. I think it would be beneficial if we could have more such meetings. One thing beneficial to the ministry and church was taken into consideration, and plans matured to bring about an organized ministerial meeting of this District. Certainly this is a move in the proper direction.

I am now at Sheldon, Iowa, in company with brethren S. H. Miller, O. J. Beaver and Harvey Ikenberry, at the home of Eld. Tobias Myers. I expect to have some meetings here before returning to our home. May God's blessings attend all!

A Mother in Israel.

Eld. Thos D Lyon, of Hudson, Illinois, writes us that his wife has gone to her long home. We have known her personally for a number of years. She was one of the noblest of women, who spent a long, unassuming life, full of good deeds and faith. She raised nine children, all of whom save one are yet living. Concerning her we quote the following from a letter, just received from Bro. Lyon:

The deceased united with the church of the Brethren in early life. She was very strict to carry out what she believed to be right, yet she never had an enemy, and was an especial favorite among the poor and the sick. She administered freely to the needs of all, in the many ways that genius suggested to her. She never turned a hungry one from her door, and we still remember the time of the Rebellion, when we were forced by our surroundings, to economize closely, on account of the waste of the war, and yet her table was kept supplied for the hungry soldiers and refugees. For that and other good deeds many will rise up and call her blessed. She never courted notoriety, but delighted in pursuing the even tenor of her way. She was strong and active up to the last eleven years of her life, when she seemed to break down suddenly. She realized that her race was about run. For seven years she lingered between life and death. Though she seemed to gain physically, yet she became quite deranged mentally, and remained so to her death, a term of four years. When we look beyond the last eleven years of her life, we see in our wife, in our mother and sister, the characteristics of a noble, Christian lady. Well do I remember that frequently I was called to attend a funeral, or officiate in some other relation of my calling, and that I would say, "How can I go, when there is so much work on my hands at home?" She would say, "You must go; I and the children will do what we can of the work. YOU MUST GO." Perhaps some of my brethren can bear testimony, what an inspiration is imparted through such a "helpmeet," at such a time. Surely, "it is well with the righteous." Well, the old arm-chair, that is vacated, seems to signify by its uplifted arms, "Look up, look up," to a chair, not vacated, but possessed and enjoyed. No aching head now, no more pain, no more death!

From the Olathe Church, Johnson Co., Kans.

THE quarterly council in the Olathe church was held Oct. 30. All the business was transacted in a Christian-like manner. Two were received by letter, and one letter was given. Eld. John Forney commenced a series of meetings on the evenning of the council. He preached, in all, twelve discourses. Though Bro. Forney is getting quite old, yet his zeal for the work of the Master is strong. Bro. Isaac Crist continued the meetings for a few evenings after Bro. Forney left.

Our Communion meeting, Nov. 7, was largely attended by the adjoining churches. Many of the spectators could not get into the house. They seemed to be eagerly watching at the windows, and said, "Your house is not half large enough." About twenty brethren and sisters could not commune for want of room. Thirteen ministers were present, and good order prevailed during the entire meeting. A few years before the feast, two dear souls obeyed the Savior by being buried with him in baptism. Though they are young, yet the influence around them is good. One was baptized Nov. 16, and since our last report Bro. Wm. Holsinger baptized one at Kansas City. Our Sunday-schools have closed for the winter. The school at the church-house closed Nov. 8, with an address to the children by Eld. John Forney and T. G. Winey.

Our Brethren, in their prayers, often remember brother and sister D. L. Miller, and all the faithful in Europe. A. M. SHARP.

Rejoicing among the Saints and Angels.

ACCORDING to previous arrangements, Bro. D. H. Walker, of Lull, Somerset Co., Pa., came to us Nov. 7 and commenced a series of meetings in the Scalp Level meeting-house (Shade Creek congregation) the same evening. The attendance and attention were excellent. Many times the house was packed to its utmost, and several times a number could not find room inside. From the beginning the interest was good, and increased to the end of the meeting. The moonlight nights and the fair weather most of the time were much in our favor. Bro. Walker's appeals to the unconverted were earnest and impressive. Fathers and mothers wept for joy to see sons and daughters come home to God.

Nov. 11 a young sister was baptized, on the 15th a young brother, and on the 19th there were ten baptized. From that time on baptism was administered every night after services, until the 23rd. In all twenty-two young brethren and sisters came out on the Lord's side. The meetings lasted over three Sundays, and yet they closed too soon, as many more were almost ready to come. Oh, may they not put it off too long!

Of the above all but a few were members of our Sunday-school. This makes thirty-five additions in about seven weeks, and about forty for the year. To God be all the praise! May they all become bright and shining lights in the church! Bro. Walker preached twenty-one sermons, Bro. Rairigh one. Nov. 27 Eld. J. C. Johnson preached a sermon for us.

Formerly we closed our Sunday-school during October, but this year we have decided to continue till Christmas, at least, and, perhaps, during the entire winter.

In my last I neglected to state that Eld. Valentine Blough preached three sermons for us Sept 5 and 6. J. E. BLOUGH.

Scalp Level, Pa., Nov. 29.

From York, Pa.

BRETHREN J. F. Oller and Jacob Snyder came to us Nov. 21. Bro. Snyder remained with us till Nov. 24, when he left for home. Bro. Oller remained till Nov. 29 and preached for us. As an immediate result, five came out on the Lord's side, four of whom Bro. Oller baptized Nov. 28. One went home to another congregation, and was baptized Nov. 29. All of them were young sisters. One young man was baptized Nov. 15. Parents were made to rejoice to see their loved one come home to God. We believe there were more counting the cost, and we hope that the Lord may not let them rest satisfied until they apply the means that belong to a child of God. Brethren and sisters have been very much built up and strengthened in their most holy faith. Certainly the good Lord has abundantly blessed us. We have a prosperous Sunday-school, which is kept up all the year. ADAM NESS.

From Edgemont, Md.

SEVERAL weeks ago I went to Philadelphia to be with the Brethren there during their love-feast and the series of meetings to follow. The feast was a very pleasant one. During the meetings, continuing for three weeks, brethren J. T. and T. T. Myers did the preaching, with an immediate result of seven applicants for baptism.

I am again impressed with the fact that city mission work and country mission work are two things, and the ways and means for the one, may not suit the other; neither do the men successful in the one, always promise success in the other. The work in Philadelphia is encouraging. Bro. Myers says he has never preached straighter doctrine, and yet the congregations are growing steadily. The church is growing in sympathy with the General Brotherhood, and, I understand, has expressed a desire to be regularly represented in the deliberations of that body hereafter. The spirituality and sociability of the Philadelphia members are commendable.

I also had the pleasure of visiting the church in Germantown,—the mother church,—built in 1770 or before. In the well-kept little cemetery there, lie the remains of many of our forefathers. It is a sad thought, indeed, to see that first church in its stand-still condition. Take the cemetery away, and there is not much left! Yet if there is any place that ought not to be forgotten when we pray, it is those first churches. With it all, I believe the place could be built up again, but somebody must go there to stay, and then exercise untiring effort and patience. While the tide goes westward, God bless our eastern churches!

OUR love-feast was held Nov. 10, and it was truly a feast to the soul,—one that we shall not soon forget. Through the inclemency of the weather, many, who anticipated being with us, could not attend, but those who were able to brave the stormy weather, felt like exclaiming with one of old, that it was "good to be there." Our ministerial force was ample, and the good counsels and loving admonitions we received were so encouraging and soul-cheering, that we were inspired more valiantly to fight the battles of the Lord. Ministers present were brethren Silas Gilbert, Geo. Stump, Geo. Worst, Henry Garber, Lewis Oakes, Moses Cruea, F. Hummer; also our elder, S. Neher, of Wells County. Bro. Gilbert officiated. The house was well filled, considering the unpleasant weather. The order and attention were excellent. The deepest solemnity seemed to prevail, while the sacred emblems were being administered and partaken of. Bro. Gilbert was to remain a few days and hold some meetings, but the writer was not privileged to attend them, so cannot give results. I hope they were successful to the saving of souls. EMMA WATSON.

Dec. 3, 1891.

From Salemville, Bedford Co., Pa.

IN the above-named village, in the bounds of the Yellow Creek church, sister Leah Berger built a very neat and commodious house of worship, with a seating capacity of about five hundred people. Close by are three meeting-houses of different denominations, namely, the old Seventh Day Baptists, the English Seventh Day Baptists, and comparatively few Adventists. The church decided to have a series of meetings, which, according to previous arrangements, commenced on the evening of Nov. 7. Considering the opposition, the congregations were large, and the Word of God had its free course and was glorified. We closed the meetings on the evening of Nov. 26, with sixteen additions to the church by baptism. The meeting was a feast to our souls. The house was at times crowded, and where there is such a spirit of unity manifested as there is among the members in the Yellow Creek church, the cause of Christ cannot help but flourish. I had my home principally with Bro. Isaac Detwiler, which is indeed a home for the Brethren. May they all prove faithful unto the end and finally obtain the crown! Many thanks to the kind brethren and sisters for their kindness and Christian courtesy. SILAS HOOVER.

Notes from the Second District of West Virginia.

ACCORDING to previous arrangements I left home Nov. 5, to attend a love-feast in the Licking Creek congregation, Washington County, Md. Nov. 6, we held our feast, at which a goodly number of brethren and sisters were in attendance. Between fifty and sixty members surrounded the Lord's Table. The feast was a pleasant one, and several expressed themselves as being well pleased with the meeting, and the enjoyment of attending another Communion season. The ministerial force was strong, consisting of brethren John Bennett, Jacob Bricker, John Barnes, Z. Annon, from a distance; also Absalom Mallott, Daniel Lake, Calvin Girling, Jacob Weller and John A. Myers, the home brethren.

This church has seen its dark days, but the clouds are disappearing, and a better day is beginning to dawn. After the feast, by Sunday evening, we were left alone, as far as ministerial help was concerned, except brethren Weller and Myers, who continued the meetings until Nov. 22. Two sermons were also preached at another place, six or eight miles away, where Bro. John Hege lives. Bro. John is one of the earnest workers and a deacon in the church. His wife is a member of the old Baptist church, well versed in the Scriptures, and very kind to all. There were five additions during the meetings, and more were near the kingdom. May God help them to prepare for death!

The day before the close of the meeting, we had a children's meeting. A goodly number were present and the interest was beyond our expectation. We hope seed was sown in the tender hearts of the children, that will germinate and grow to the glory of God. Sister Nancy Beard, an old sister, was very low and her days surely were nearly numbered. She expressed a desire to be absent from the body and present with the Lord.

Nov. 23 we were taken to the station by Bro. Jacob Keller, and the next day found us at home with our family.

After being at home two days, I preached the funeral of Bro. Benjamin Mason. He was a member for about fifteen years, and belonged to our arm of the church. The cause of death was asthma. He leaves a wife and eight children to mourn their loss. Z. ANNON.

Mt. Morris Bible Term -Jan. 4-29, 1892.

THE third annual term of Special Bible Work promises to supersede former terms in several respects.

First, the prospects indicate that the attendance will be much larger. Secondly, the large rooms in the new building, set apart for Bible work, will afford ample accommodation for all, and lastly, Bro. E. S. Young is with us this year to take direct charge of the work in the class-room. We feel safe in saying that all who may come will find sufficient work to employ all their time advantageously.

THE OLD TESTAMENT CLASS

Will study "The Law of Moses," as the foundation upon which rest all the remainder of the Old Testament,—as the part of the Bible the prophets had and used,—as a part of the Bible Jesus and the apostles had,—as the "school-master" to bring us unto Christ.

THE NEW TESTAMENT CLASS

Will study the "Harmony of the Gospels," as pertaining to the "Life of Christ," -the most important part of all Bible, as well as of all human history. His life will be studied by periods, and his journeys carefully traced on the maps. Bible geography will receive special attention.

THE VOCATION OF THE MINISTER

Will constitute the work of another class. He will be viewed not simply as an expounder of the Word, but as a shepherd, and pastor. Pastoral visitation will receive special attention. The work done in this class will be interesting to all.

BIBLE AND HYMN READING

Will constitute the work of another class, and

MORAL SCIENCE

That of another. Besides our regular class work, there will be discussions on the topics, named by committee in last week's MESSENGER.

The evenings will be occupied by sermons on Evidences of Christianity, Church Government, Church Doctrine, and Scripture Interpretation, by elders R. H. Miller, J. H. Moore, I. D. Parker and others

Tuition free. Board, room, etc., $3.00 per week. Write us; address: J. G. ROYER.

From the Mt. Vernon Church, Augusta Co, Va.

OUR Communions are all in the past, -four in number. The first one occurred Oct. 3, at New Concord, Rockbridge Co., Va; the second, Oct. 10, at Mt. Vernon, Augusta Co., Va; the third, Oct. 17, at Oronoco, Amherst Co., Va; the fourth, Oct. 31, at Arbor Hill, near Coinbreaks, Amherst Co., Va. All were well attended; good order and attention prevailed.

There were two more points at which we intended to hold Communion meetings, but, on account of sickness and lateness of the season, we concluded to postpone them until next spring. One place was near Amherst C. H., at which point we have but eight members. All recently united with the Brethren church The other was a Montabella, Nelson Co., Va. We have about eighteen members there. We had two weeks' meeting at Mt. Vernon, commencing Nov. 7. The home ministers did the preaching. Then Bro. I. N. H Beahm, of Daleville, came to our assistance. We had good attendance and attention throughout. As an immediate result eight came out on the Lord's side and three of them had been members of another church. Bro. Beahm preached the Word with power. May the good Lord give him many sheaves for his labor!

LOST CHILD.

A child of Bro E. M. Powell was lost Nov. 9. He was five years old He, with two others, went from the school-house to gather some wood, at recess, and when the older ones returned, they found he was not with them. They went in search of him, but, up to Nov. 24, nothing has been heard of him. The whole County has been out in search of him. Brother and sister Powell request the prayers of the church in their behalf.

Working for the Master.

THE latter part of October and forepart of November we held a short series of meetings in our home church (Bethel), assisted in the ministry one night by Bro. Davis Younce, and one day and night by my co-laborer, Bro. W. B. Neff. One was received by baptism. The interest manifested clearly indicated that a good work, by way of additions, would have been accomplished, could the meetings have continued.

We closed this series of meetings to go to the Monticello church, White Co., Ind, where we were to have begun a series of meetings Nov. 9, but, owing to the continuous rainfall, we did not begin until the evening of Nov. 11, and closed Nov. 29, preaching, in all, twenty-four sermons. The weather was much against us. On the evening of Nov. 13 we had a love-feast which was well attended and seemed to be enjoyed by all. A number of ministers were present from adjoining churches. Next morning after the feast we held an election for a minister. The lot fell on Bro. Geo. Dilling, -a young brother of promise. A number of our ministers, who are not now living in the Monticello church, were chosen to the ministry in this congregation, among them are elders John Snowberger, J. G. Royer and Joseph Amick. Bro. Frank Fisher, of Mexico, Ind., was also called to the ministry here. They now have five resident ministers, viz., Eld. Andrew Culp and brethren Joel Weaver, David Dilling, Bert Bridge and Geo. Dilling. Their territory being large they all have plenty to do. The church is in very good working order and everything indicates that Eld. Culp, by the assistance of his co-laborers, rules with wisdom and prudence. The immediate results of the series of meetings were (1) the members seemed to be much encouraged; (2) there were five additions by baptism.

The Lord permitting we will begin a series of meetings near South Bend, Nov. 10. May God bless every legal effort that is put forth for the advancement of his kingdom! W. R. DEETER.

From Maple Grove, Ohio.

BRO. J. M. Mohler, of Lewistown, Pa., came to us Nov. 18 and commenced his series of meetings Nov. 19, which he continued until the evening of Dec. 4. He preached in all twenty-four sermons. At the commencement of the meeting the weather was inclement and the evenings dark; consequently the congregations were small at first, but as the weather became fairer, the attendance increased, until, at last, the meetings were largely attended, with great interest. Deep impressions were made on many minds. The brethren were aroused to a sense of duty, never felt before. All the members seemed to get new zeal. As an immediate result of our meetings one precious soul decided to start for heaven, on the last evening of our meetings. Bro. J. M. Mohler is an able expounder of the Scriptures. May the Lord bless him in other fields of labor.

Thanksgiving.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in a far-off Land:—

TO-DAY is the day set apart by the Government for a general thanksgiving, and I am glad, through the mercies of God, that I am permitted to address you by means of a silent communication. We are not housed in flesh, but one in the Spirit of Jesus.

Through the call made by Bro. D. L. Miller in GOSPEL MESSENGER, my heart was moved in your behalf for a financial gift. I herein send you a little gift from the donations of the "Children's Mission." I truly feel that the Lord is blessing us far above our deservings, and am willing to give help to those that need it far more than we. We feel that God is good and is blessing us on every hand. We think we have trials that are hard to bear, but when we come to ourselves we see and know it is sweet to suffer for Jesus' sake, for he first suffered for our sake. There is no trial, sorrow, grief, or affliction of any kind, with which he is not in full sympathy. He is continually watching with his all-seeing eye, listening with his ever-open ear, willing to receive us into his loving care, and accept our love in return, if we love and trust him as his obedient and faithful children. In my wonderings I am with you sometimes, but, I must confess, not as often as I should be. I am glad Bro. Miller and wife were made willing to sacrifice and endure hardships for a season for your sake, and our dear Jesus. The Lord will truly bless them through the edification of your souls. They are well able and willing to build you up in the most holy faith.

I will close by asking the Lord's blessings upon you, that you may be useful instruments in his hands both to will and to do at his own good pleasure. Give my love to the children there, and accept the same for yourselves.

MARY M. GIBSON.

Virden, Ill., Nov. 26.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

Nappanee, Ind.—Since my last report of Sept. 12, five more have been received by baptism,—one, Oct. 4; two, Nov. 15, and two more, Nov. 29,—all at our regular meetings. All are young in years, and, with God's blessings, will be a power for good.—J. R. Miller, Dec. 2.

Salem, Pa. — Bro. Silas Hoover, of Somerset County, came to us Nov. 7, and preached nearly three weeks, with a good attendance, and with his usual zeal and energy. We are glad to know that sixteen dear souls were added to the church. May God help them to so live as to be a glory to God, and ornaments to the church!—Albert Guyer, Loysburg, Pa., Dec. 2.

Ozawkie, Kans.—Thanksgiving Day was a pleasant one, and at the appointed hour a goodly number of our dear brethren and sisters met for services. All seemed to realize that the Lord is good. The meeting was an exceedingly interesting one. A collection was taken up in behalf of the poor, resulting in raising the sum of $11. All felt the better for having been at the meeting.—J. A Root.

Springfield, Ohio.—Wife and I started from Harlan, Shelby County, Iowa, Nov. 16, for Wayne County, Ohio, and arrived at Wooster next day. We remained here six days; then met with the Brethren at the Ministerial Meeting in the Wooster church. After that I held meetings at different places in Wayne County. Dec. 9 we started for Summit County, and I am now with the Brethren in the Springfield church. Being favored with good weather and good attendance, I do not yet know how long I may continue the meetings. We propose to visit among the brethren and friends, the Lord willing, until about March 1, 1892.—Stephen Yoder.

Ottobine, Va.—It was not my privilege to attend our series of meetings at Montezuma, but I learn they had a very interesting meeting. Brethren J. Thomas and J. W. Click did the principal part of the preaching. The meetings commenced Nov. 15, and closed on the night of the 25th, with fourteen applicants, who were baptized on Thanksgiving Day at Beaver Creek. One more was baptized last Sunday. We also had meeting in the same congregation, at Sangerville, on Thanksgiving Day. We tried to impress the members with the importance of devoting a portion of their means for the promotion of the good cause. A collection was then taken, amounting to $8.00. It will be used in sending the GOSPEL MESSENGER to poor members and others. Your correspondent is now holding a series of meetings at the Franklin church,—another of the outposts in the Beaver Creek congregation.—G. W. Wine, Dec. 9.

Lyons, Kans. The members of the Kansas Center congregation, have just enjoyed an interesting series of meetings Bro. Daniel Vaniman came to us Nov. 1, and remained until the 8th. During that time he preached eleven sermons, which we greatly enjoyed. We expect Bro. I. H. Crist among us soon. Sadie J. Dresher.

Eglon, W. Va. – We met on Thanksgiving Day at the church. We remembered the poor in Denmark and Sweden, and collected for that purpose $22.07. May it cheer many a one, and may God bless them! Dec 5 we met in council. There was not much business before the meeting. We intend to begin a series of meetings on Christmas. —Rachel Weimer.

Fairview, Iowa.—Our esteemed old sister, Peggy Zook, wife of Eld. Daniel Zook, is, at this time, sorely afflicted. Dec. 4 she had a stroke of paralysis. Yesterday, Dec. 8, she called for the elders, and was anointed. She now desires me to request the brethren and sisters throughout the Brotherhood to remember her in their prayers. She is indeed a mother in Israel, and we hope the Lord will leave her with us a while longer.—J. W. Hawn, Dec. 9.

English River, Iowa.—This congregation held regular services on Thanksgiving Day at 11 A. M., which were well attended, considering the busy season. The poor members in Denmark were remembered, and the members and friends gave of their plenty for their support in their time of great need. On Sunday, Nov. 29, the funeral of little Earl, son of brother and sister H. C. Coffman, was preached by our home ministers, to a sympathizing audience from 2 Sam. 12: 23.—Peter Brower.

Williamsport, Ind. — Bro. Solomon Blickenstaff came here Nov. 26 and held Thanksgiving services at 11 A. M; also preached seven sermons. Assisted by Eld. Jacob Frederick, we held a council-meeting, preparatory to a Communion, but decided to postpone it until spring. There were no additions to the church during Bro. Blickenstaff's labors among us, but there seemed to be quite an awakening among the people, and we hope to have him with us again at some future time.—Geo. W. McKinney, Dec 10.

Round Mountain, Ark. A few weeks ago we added another soul by baptism to the church. Thus we have reason to rejoice and take fresh courage to press onward. We are now holding a series of meetings, but have to do the preaching ourselves. We would much prefer to have help, in order to make the meetings more profitable, but we will try to build up God's kingdom. We have received, through Eld. Wm. George, of the Knobley church, W. Va., $3.00 for our meeting-house, and tender our thanks for the same. The weather, so far, is fine; no snow yet. Health is good.—Samuel Weimer.

Wade, Kans.—The members of the west end of the Wade church have just closed an interesting series of meetings, conducted by Bro. I. H. Crist, who came to us Nov. 20 and remained until Nov. 27. He preached each evening, and also on Sunday forenoon. On Monday, by request, he gave the inmates of the County-house a pleasant talk. On Thanksgiving Day we met for services and baptism. One young brother came out on the Lord's side and was buried with Christ in baptism. Bro. Crist preached in all ten sermons, by which all were greatly encouraged and built up. On Sunday, Nov. 21, we met in quarterly council. Our elder, George Myers, conducted the business of the meeting, which was satisfactory to all. Among the business transacted was the taking up of a collection for Missionary and Tract Work.—Minnie Kinzie.

Glensted, Mo. –Since our last report, made by Bro. Holsopple, the Prairie View church has received two more by baptism, — a husband and wife. They were almost persuaded during our series of meetings, and were baptized about two weeks afterwards. This makes nine, in all, received by baptism. —David Bowman, Dec. 7.

Broadfording, Md.—In my report of our series of meetings, at the Broadfording church, I said there were three received by baptism. I should have said there were five. Two dear sisters, who were almost persuaded during the meeting, have been enabled since to throw off the fetters that bound them, and, in accordance with their desire, they were immersed in the flowing stream. May the good seed sown bring forth much fruit.—Annie E. Hollinger, Dec. 9.

Mansfield, Mo.—Oct. 3 Bro. Dove, from Tennessee, came to Douglas Co., Mo., and preached two weeks. The church was much built up, and sinners were made to say, "What must I do to be saved?" Nineteen dear souls left the ranks of Satan to follow Jesus. They were all young in years, except three. Eleven of them had not yet attained the age of fifteen years. Among the number was our fourth child. We believe the angels in heaven rejoiced to see the tender lambs start to follow their Redeemer. Brethren, pray that the lambs may be fed on heavenly food! –Nannie Harman.

New Oxford, Pa. –Our series of meetings began at New Chester, Nov. 7, and closed Nov. 17. Bro. Albert Hollinger, of Huntsdale, Cumberland County, conducted the meetings. The attendance was good, with the exception of a few evenings, when the inclemency of the weather interfered. Some good impressions were made on the people. Two souls came out on the Lord's side, to be buried with Christ in baptism. We feel sure that many more are counting the cost, and we hope that they will yield ere it is forever too late. Our brother, though physically weak, labored earnestly and ably for us and made many friends. May God reward him for his labor of love among us —Jacob Trimmer.

Pyrmont, Ind.—Eld. Henry Frantz, of New Carlisle, Ohio, has been holding a series of meetings for the Brethren of the North Fork church, for a little over two weeks He has been laboring for the Master, and the salvation of precious souls, and we are glad to say he has made a success. As the result of his faithful work, nine dear souls came out on the side of the Lord, and were baptized, and arose to walk in newness of life. Bro. Frantz was also accompanied by his wife, who, we believe, discharges her duty faithfully in assisting her husband in his high calling. Dec. 7 brother and sister Frantz left us for a new field of labor. May the Lord abundantly bless them in their noble work for the Master and his cause.—J. W. Vetter, Dec. 8.

Clay Hill, Pa.—I have just arrived home, after an extended trip over four Counties, during which I enjoyed the associations of the Brethren very much. At Doylesburgh I had the pleasure of meeting Bro. Book, of Perry County, who was holding a number of meetings in this mission field. I had the pleasure of attending one of his meetings, and found him to be earnestly holding forth the Word of Life to a dying world. There is plenty of room throughout this County for the spreading of our beloved doctrine. More missionary work ought to be done in these parts. May God arouse us to the fact that we must give freely that which we have so freely received. Our opportunities are vast. I enjoyed myself very much while with the Brethren at Huntingdon, and hope to be with them during part of their Bible session.—Jacob Kurtz, Dec. 4.

Keuka, Fla.—I take this method of informing our many friends that we are at Keuka, enjoying ourselves among the brethren and sisters. My wife's health is improving rapidly. All are well here. The weather is very fine.—W. H. H. Sawyer, Dec. 5.

Gravel Point, Iowa.—The little band of members at this place belongs to the Indian Creek church, Iowa. Bro. Moses Dierdorff, of Guthrie County, Iowa, came to us Nov. 15, to hold a two weeks' series of meetings. He labored faithfully, and, in spite of the bad weather and the busy season, the congregations were good. The aged father of the writer was added to the church by baptism. —L. D. Minear.

Waynesborough, Pa.—We are happy to report that our quarterly council, Nov. 21, was one of the most pleasant meetings of the kind we have had for quite a while. Three most precious and dear ones have entered the fold since I last wrote, or since our love-feast. All are heads of families, two fathers and one mother. We trust they will prove faithful to their baptismal covenant. The same day the writer and Bro. Snider went to York, Pa., to hold a series of meetings which the Brethren then will report.—J. F. Oller.

Denver, Colo.—I am now on my way to the San Luis Valley, with my son, Andrew, to attend their love-feast Dec. 12, and continue the meetings till after Dec. 20, if the Lord will. Then I expect to go on to Sherman and Cheyenne Counties, Kans., to hold some meetings and see to some church work. Then I expect to go to Wray, Colo., to hold a series of meetings. I intend to reach home about the middle of January. Then, if the Lord will, I shall go west to Colorado, on mission work, also to Sidney, Nebr. Thus my time will be occupied in the mission field most of the time for three or four months, if health and weather will permit.—John S. Snowberger.

Elizabethtown, Pa. The Brethren of this place held their love-feast Nov. 10 and 11. About 400 members communed. The sermons were excellent. On the following Sunday, the Sunday-school held "children's meeting." Bro. S. Zug stated the object of the meeting, after which Bro. J. Witmer spoke on Ps. 34: 11. Bro. Longanecker spoke on "Waste," Bro. C. H. Balsbaugh on "Nothing Wasted," Bro. S. Zug on "Little Things." The meeting was opened and closed with singing and prayer. There were also recitations and singing between the addresses. Quite a number were present and were well pleased with the interesting exercises. The exercises were conducted by Bro. Samuel H. Hertzler. Bro. Frantz, of Ohio, visited Elizabethtown on his mission. He succeeded fairly well, and preached eight sermons, which were well received by large audiences.—Jesse B. Asper, Dec. 5.

Eel River, Ind. — Bro. Lewis W. Teeter, from Hagerstown, Ind, came to us and began a series of meetings Nov. 20, and closed Dec. 6. During the time of these meetings we had much rain and some snow, so that traveling was rendered very unpleasant, yet we had a fair congregation, sometimes very large. Two were received by baptism, and others are counting the cost. The members were much encouraged and built up, and sinners were pointed to the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world. — S. Leckrone, North Manchester, Ind.

A Correction.—In the obituary of Bro. John Bowman, in No. 47, the place should have been given as being near Fairfield, Rockbridge Co., Va., instead of at Stuart's Draft (I suppose I made the mistake). Bro. Bowman at one time was a great hunter, but after his conversion all this gave way to a desire to have souls saved. He had a great concern for his near friends, who, according to the Scriptures, were not on safe ground. It was his desire to spend his whole time in the ministry, for he delighted in the work of the Lord, but the Lord saw fit to call him home. He leaves one daughter —J. A. Cline.

East Chippewa, Ohio.— On the evening of Nov. 7 Bro. I. D. Parker, of the Ashland church, began a series of interesting meetings. The attendance was quite good. Bro. Parker preached with his usual earnestness, and, although there were no additions, we are glad to know that good impressions were made, and that some are counting the cost. Our quarterly council occurred on Saturday, Nov. 14 Bro. Parker was appointed Moderator. Considerable business came before the meeting, but everything passed off in a spirit that was commendable. On the evening of Nov. 18 our meetings closed. Two were received by letter at our council. –M. C. Lichtenwalter, Nov. 24

From S. S. Mohler.—Yours to me, published in the GOSPEL MESSENGER, is far more than worth a reply. If I could always appreciate the condition of the child of God, by faith in Christ, I would often rejoice amidst my suffering. When the first severe pain struck me, about five years ago, there was associated with it much despondency, which has attended it more or less since. For a season I was indeed blessed with a strong conscious love of God, with a clear and satisfactory view of the atoning work of Jesus the Christ. For a time I am, again, more depressed. Man is a wonderful being, and his creation is an astounding problem, which involves facts and principles, far wider in their range than merely to form this body. On this topic I would love to write, but because of weakness cannot now. You and all who have written me have my sincere thanks.—Warrensburgh, Mo., Dec. 7.

River, Ind.— Our protracted meeting, in the Salamony church, Ind., closed with five additions to the church by baptism, and good interest. The preaching was done by our dear young brother, Galen B. Royer. The weather was bad, and the nights dark during the meetings, yet our brother had very large congregations. May God's blessings go with him wherever he goes!—Samuel Murray, Dec. 6.

Solomon's Creek, Ind.—Oct. 19, brethren H. Forney and Henry Wertzler, home ministers of the above congregation, began a series of meetings. There was a good attendance and a deep and serious interest manifested. Two souls united with the church. Dec. 5 was our quarterly council in the Solomon's Creek church. Considerable business came before the meeting, but all was disposed of in union and harmony, with Eld. D. Shively as Moderator. The officers of the Sunday-school at the Big church were chosen at the above council. Bro George Lingafelter was selected as Superintendent.—L. A. Neff.

La Place, Ill.—According to previous appointment, brethren S. Bucklew and H Lilligh came to the Okaw church on Saturday, Nov. 28, and, by the decision of the church, ordained Bro. Daniel Mohler to the office of elder. Our Communion occurred the same day. The attendance was not so large as usual, on account of bad weather, but we had a very good meeting and a feast for the soul. The Okaw church met in quarterly council Dec. 3. Not much business was before the meeting, but one letter of membership was given. Bro. Jacob Wine was appointed solicitor for the home mission work. Our financial matters were settled and a balance left in the treasury. A committee was appointed to arrange for a series of meetings in 1892.—E. F. Wolfe, Dec. 3.

Of late years he became too feeble to perform his official duties, yet he manifested a great zeal in the promotion of Zion. In his sickness he bore his afflictions with patience and Christian fortitude. Death came, which renders the home lonely, but we hope the bereft children will be consoled with the idea that he, whom they loved, is now at rest. Funeral services by brethren T. B. Maddocks and G. The deceased was snatched from her fond parents very unexpectedly. On Tuesday noon, while eating chestnuts, her elder sister said something which caused Ada to laugh, and, while laughing, part of a chestnut flew into her wind pipe which caused the little one to suffer intensely. A physician was called, who administered emetics, but of no avail. She lingered till Wednesday afternoon, when her spirit took its flight to the spirit world, where pains and aches are unknown. Her last words to her mother were, "Oh, mama, mama!" How hard it is to give up our children while they are in the full vigor of health! Funeral services by brethren G. W. Brumbaugh and T. B. Maddocks from Matt. 18: 1-4. J. B. BRUMBAUGH.

LIFE AND SERMONS

—: OF :—

ELD. JAMES QUINTER

This is a neatly-printed and well-bound volume of 426 pages, containing a well-written biographical sketch of Eld. James Quinter and forty of his sermons.

The biographical part will be found quite interesting, instructive and impressive. No one can read an account of Bro. Quinter's life without feeling deeply and favorably impressed. The work shows how a poor orphan boy, by hard work, and faithfulness to his religious convictions, rose step by step, until he reached a field of usefulness and honor as broad as the Nation itself. Though dead, his good deeds and the impressive examples in piety, learning and simplicity will follow him for generations to come.

The Sermon Department contains many of his choice sermons, which will prove exceedingly interesting and profitable reading to all, and especially to our ministers and isolated members. We feel that this book will fill a long-felt want in our Brotherhood. Price, post-paid, $1.25.
